

MWR Mayport Gives Parents A Little Break

By MC1 Michael Wiss

Military families are subject to unique stressors associated with military life including deployment, remote tours of duty and extended working hours. Sometimes a parent needs a "time-out." The Child and Youth Programs at Naval Station Mayport understands and are willing to lend a helping hand.

The Give Parents a Break (GPAB) program is designed to give family members a short break from parenting (respite care) in order to help them deal with these types of stressful situations. According to Naval Station Mayport Community Activities Director Lisa Wolfe, this is a program to help relieve the great strain of being a military family.

"The Give a parents a Break (GPAB) program is a two-fold program designed to give family members a short break from parenting to deal with stressful situations or just to allow them a break to go shopping or dinner without the kids," she said. "The goal of the program is to ease some of the strain put on Navy families by job related obligations."

The GPAB is broken up into two types of care, respite and recreational. Anyone needing respite care (relief or rest) can receive free childcare any time the Centers are open (dependent on space availability) for drop-in service (up to 16 hours per month). However, they must provide a Referral Certificate from either a CO, XO, CMC, Medical doctors, FFSC, Chaplain and Installation CYP Manager. The Referral Certificate is really used for a family in crisis and really needs a break from the children. It is not to be recommended or approved flippantly.

Remembering Dora

From Staff

Just after midnight on Sept. 10, 1964, the residents of Naval Station Mayport and the city of Jacksonville "battered down the hatches" and waited for the storm to pass as Hurricane Dora let loose her rage on northeast Florida, the only hurricane to have hit the area in the weather bureau's recorded history.

Fifty years later, Dora is still the only hurricane to have hit Jacksonville, although Tropical Storm Beryl in 2012 would give the base and city a small taste of what residents had experienced in 1964.

The Mirror newspaper had to delay its normal distribution due to Dora's hurricane and included a special wrap up of the aftereffects of the Category One's move over the area. The following is a recount of that wrap up edition.

Prompt Action Prevents Major Damage to Station

Heavy battering of the sea walls of the basin and the uprooting of over 100 large trees represented most of the damage to Mayport Naval Station as a result of the savage Hurricane Dora.

Prompt action by hard-working military and civilian personnel prior to the violent hurricane kept the station from a much more staggering blow.

Capt. Charles H. Turner, C.O., credited this preparedness to the relatively small dollar loss.

"I am confident that our most costly damage will prove to be to the sea walls in the basin," he said.

Sixteen Mayport-based vessels headed out to sea on September 8, taking an evasive course away from Hurricane Dora. Needed repairs, however, kept four destroyers, the Nos. Turner, Bailey, and Meredith from leaving; however, they successfully rode out the storm in the basin.

Ships that left before the hurricane hit were the destroyers Aul,

The following message was received last Friday from ComFAIR JAX:

"Preliminary damage estimates Hurricane Dora shows so personnel casualties suffered, and negligible impairment to operational capability and operational facilities. Area Schools Host Open House

KNOWING THE ROPES

Judy Cromartie
School Liaison Officer

Editor's Note: Schools that held their pen house events prior to the publication of this edition of The Mirror are not included in the Open House Dates list.

Most parents understand the importance of being actively involved in their children's education.

But as children get older, parents frequently become less and less involved in their schools. However, research indicates that children are more likely to have a successful school year if the parents are involved in their children's school. One way to ensure that is to make a connection with the school by attending Open House.

Area schools began their schedule of Open Houses as early as August 21st. (For local schools, see box.) And far from one more useless activity in an already over-scheduled life, Open House can actually provide a wealth of information for parents. This is a great opportunity for parents to meet their children's teachers, the school counselor, the principal, and other staff.

Whether your child has one teacher or several, it is an ideal opportunity to meet the teacher(s) in one fell swoop. In middle and high schools you'll follow your children's schedule by actually going to all of their classes.

In all grade levels you'll find out important dates, including field trips and major class assignments; homework and test schedules; and most importantly how to contact the teacher.

Open House IS NOT the time to try to have a private conference with your child's teacher. How could it be private with several parents in line behind you also wanting a chance to say a few words about their children to the teacher? As someone who taught 27 years, let me assure you that what parents share with the teacher on Open House night other than a quick "Hello" or "I'm Sarah's mom" rarely "sticks" in the teacher's mind. A high school teacher, for example, may have over 100 parents in attendance and, that is, if they teach the core. Pity the poor physical education teachers who teach many more students than that.

Open House IS the night to listen to what the teacher wants to share with you about the structure of the curriculum, how the class will be organized, the texts which will be used, frequency of homework, test schedules, make-up policies, and, most importantly, how to get in touch with the teacher. Write this down!

Many teachers now have their own email account or Facebook page. Any way you can get the information will make it much easier to remind your child of an upcoming deadline or the need to study for those weekly spelling tests.

Now that you know the regimen, you'll be better prepared to talk privately with the teacher about your concerns about your child. And because you have the teacher's preferred method for contact, it will be much easier for you to set up a parent-teacher conference.

Active parenting takes time, but the time you spend at an Open House will help your children be personally and academically successful. Your positive involvement and time, your child's time, and your child's teachers' time are all directly related to helping your child become tomorrow's successful adult.

A partial listing of Duval County Public Schools' Open House dates is attached. For a complete listing of Duval dates/times, go to www.duvalschools.org. Search "Open House Schedule 2014."

St. Johns County Public Schools and Clay County Public Schools do not have a specific calendar with Open House dates/times. To find the date/time for your school, go to one of these links:

St. Johns: <http://www.stjohns.k12.fl.us>.

Clay: <http://www.clay.k12.fl.us/schools.htm>.

Then go to the individual school sites and look for announcement or calendars.

Over the last decade it seems that reality TV has become a major force in the television industry. The idea that we get to peel back the curtain and look into the unscripted lives of people in all kinds of life situations makes for interesting viewing, even better if their lives are train wrecks. To be sure, many of the reality shows that have lasted have had uplifting inspirational messages, like "The Biggest Loser" series where we watch individuals transform their lives by getting healthy and losing weight. But nothing makes for greater viewing pleasure than watching fellow human beings implode psychologically and even morally on national television.

Years ago there was a reality television series where one-half of a couple was sent to an island where their faithfulness was put to the test by a cast of attractive men and women. Thankfully, the series didn't last, but talk about raising some ethical and moral questions! I often wondered what depths of heart ache that show must have created for individuals that watched their loved ones betray them on prime time TV. How would that scar your psyche? What would that pain do to you? Would it seep into your identity and heart slowly poisoning you? Could you ever trust someone else again? Would you eventually be consumed with bitterness? Relationships in life are hard enough, much less setting them up with deliberate trip wires. Every one of us has faced rejection and turmoil in significant relationships in our lives at one point or another whether it is a spouse, mother, father, friend. Many of us carry seeds of bitterness and resentment daily, nourishing them like a poisonous flower. It is often easier just to be resentful than to take the time and effort to release the pain and hurt and seek reconciliation for whatever the conflict or issues may be.

I am reminded of a story I read in the news about six city-blocks having to be evacuated in the middle of a Russian city. Evidently water and power authorities had discovered a massive and corroded German bomb in the basement of an old woman's apartment. It was unexploded. When they questioned the elderly grandmother if she knew about it, with a little bit of petulance, she said she had been reaching out to the authorities for years, but never was able to break through the bureaucratic red tape and get anyone to come out and see for themselves. Eventually she repaired her roof where the bomb came through and her floor where it crashed through on its way to the basement. She had been living above an unexploded bomb in her home for decades.

For the reader who may still carry deep resentment and hurt directed at others, realize that you are living a life with a bomb in your basement. Some day it WILL go off and your life with come crashing down around you. Free yourself by engaging in forgiveness and reconciliation.

JEA Introduces Itself With Steel Beach

The newly formed Junior Enlisted Association (JEA) aboard the guided-missile cruiser USS Philippine Sea (CG 58) hosted a steel beach picnic for the crew, August 24, on the ship's flight deck.

The steel beach was the first ship-wide event sponsored by the JEA since the group officially formed in July.

"It was really exciting for us to come together as a team of junior Sailors and put together a successful event," said Personnel Specialist 2nd Class Ashleigh Adams, the JEA's president. "This was a great opportunity for us to give back to the chiefs, first classes and the rest of the crew."

Beyond the mountains of burgers, ribs, beans, potato salad and refreshments served; the JEA also hosted a corn hole tournament. JEA members took care of everything from setting up, manning the grill and serving the food to doing the dishes and taking out the trash.

"It's really motivating to see the Junior Enlisted Association eager to get involved with the command," said Command Master Chief Lewis Jackson, the ship's senior enlisted leader.

"They did a great job hosting the steel beach, everyone had a great time," he added. "It's one more thing Philippine Sea chiefs and officers can add to the long list of things to be grateful of our junior Sailors for."

Philippine Sea's JEA will give junior Sailors many benefits according to Navy Counselor 1st Class Eugenia Ortiz, a JEA senior advisor.

"JEA provides opportunities for junior Sailors to support, train, and learn from one another," said Ortiz. "It's a place they can show initiative, get involved with the command and build camaraderie."

The JEA is scheduled to meet weekly for the remainder of deployment to plan for future events, train, and motivate each other toward advancing and earning qualifications.

"This is just the beginning for the JEA, we take our futures as the next generation of leaders seriously," said Adams. "Our main goal is to mold young Sailors, implement responsibility and build morale. When we return to home port we are looking forward to working with the local Mayport community and representing Philippine Sea with pride."

5k Honors Heroes Of 9/11 And Its Wars

From Staff

It is a chance to honor all of the first responders and heroes of Sept. 11 and of the wars of Iraq and Afghanistan since that fateful day in 2001. It is also a chance for Lt. Maili Neverosky of COMUSNAVSO, her husband Lt. Cmdr. Daniel Neverosky of SERMC and Lt. Nick Rueda of NAS Jacksonville to honor their friend and classmate, First Lt. Travis Manion.

The three officers are organizing the Travis Manion Foundation 9/11 Heroes Run - Jacksonville on Sept. 11 starting with the 5k at the Sea Walk Pavilion beach entrance and kick off at 6:30 p.m., followed by a 1 Mile Fun Run at 6:35 p.m.

"Travis not only graduated from the Naval Academy with Nick, Daniel and me, but he graduated from LaSalle High School with Daniel," Lt. Neverosky said. "For obvious reasons, we have deep ties with the Travis Manion Foundation and it has been amazing to see the race spread to cities and bases around the world and more importantly witness the impact of their programs on the lives of service members, veterans and families of the fallen."

Manion died in 2007 in the Al Anbar province of Iraq after he and fellow Marine and Iraqi Army members were ambushed while searching a suspected insurgent house. Manion led the counterattack against the enemy forces and was fatally wounded by an enemy sniper while aiding and drawing fire away from his wounded comrades.

Entrance fee for the 5k is $25 and $15 for the fun run. Half of the money will go to Team Red White and Blue-Daytona/Jacksonville Chapter, Neverosky said.

"Team RWB will receive 50 percent of the race's net proceeds because their mission is simple and impactful: 'enrich the lives of America's veterans by connecting them to their community through physical and social activity,'" she said. "With over 30 events per month in the Daytona/JAX area, their motivated volunteer leadership has enriched their community by building strong bonds between the military and civilian sectors. The money donated to Team RWB will provide additional opportunities for the local community and make the program bigger and better!"

Stewards of the Sea: USS Gettysburg Partners With Marine Biologists

By Ensign Tommy Changaris
USS Gettysburg Public Affairs

A team of Navy-trained marine biologists embarked aboard guided-missile cruiser USS Gettysburg (CG 64) Aug 18-22.

The team of marine biologists trained Gettysburg's Sailors and assessed their ability to spot sensitive marine life in the ocean. The team stood underway watches on the bridge wings with binoculars and radios searching for and documenting marine mammals.

"Our effort here is designed to ensure the crew is well-trained and is a role model for Navy stewardship of the ocean" said Jen James, marine biologist. "Our presence and training will only strengthen the training and awareness of the crew."

Navy marine biologists are required to assess the effectiveness of Navy lookouts in a global effort to ensure ships train and operate to their fullest capabilities while remaining in compliance with environmental regulations.

Boatswain's Mate 3rd Class Davone Osbyward, was one of the lookouts who underwent training and observation and said the training he received inspired him to become a better steward of the environment.

"There is so much information out there about marine life and the easy steps we in the Navy can do to help protect it," said Osbyward. "It was a really eye-opening experience."

Despite their short time on board, the team was impressed by how quickly the crew rallied around them.

"The entire crew has been fully engaged and supportive of our presence from the beginning," said Andrew Dimatteo, marine biologist. "They really did everything they could to ensure our trip was a success."

Cmdr. Nathan Scherry, executive officer aboard USS Gettysburg, said the marine biologists were extremely excited to be onboard and perform their assigned task.

"This was such a positive experience for both parties involved" said Scherry. "We received valuable training emphasizing the importance of keeping our environment safe while still being able to fully conduct our mission at sea."

Sun Sets On New Chapter For NS Mayport

Ball Caps May Be Worn With NWUs

From Chief of Naval Personnel Public Affairs

Beginning Sept. 1, Sailors are authorized to wear the Navy and command ball caps in place of the eight-point cover with the Navy Working Uniform (NWU) Type I, II or III.

Based on feedback from the Fleet, Secretary of the Navy Ray Mabus and Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Jonathan Greenert made the decision back in July to expand the ball cap wear policy.

According to NAVADMIN 200/14, command ball caps are organizational clothing that may be purchased with appropriated funds. Sailors may purchase command ball caps with personal funds, just as they purchase command badges, patches, belt buckles and other permissible uniform items.

Additionally, wardrooms, chief petty officer messes, first class petty officer associations, junior enlisted associations, and other organizations may purchase command ball caps with their funds. Department of Defense guidance prohibits the use of morale, welfare and recreation's non-appropriated funds to purchase command ball caps.

The eight-point cover remains the basic uniform component cover for the NWUs and will be the only appropriate cover for personnel uniform inspections and special occasions to ensure a uniform appearance within the command.

The Navy and command ball cap will remain authorized, optional head gear worn with Navy flight suits, Navy blue coveralls, flame resistant coveralls, and the Navy physical training uniform.

The Sullivans History On Display

By Hal Burke

USS The Sullivans DD-537/DDG-68 Association

A group of active and retired Naval officers, Tin Can Sailors, the granddaughter of Albert Sullivan, and community leaders came together to commemorate the donation of Raymond A. Massey's original oil painting, "Convoy of the Cripples" to the Buffalo & Erie County Naval & Military Park in Buffalo, N.Y. on Aug. 23.

Donators Hort and Juli Spitzer travelled from their ranch in Wilson, WY, to attend the dedication. Also attending the dedication was Cmdr. Sam de Castro, commanding officer of USS The Sullivans (DDG 68), retired Capt. Gerard Roncolato, first commanding officer of USS The Sullivans as well as Kelly Sullivan Loughren, granddaughter of Albert Sullivan. Approximately 47 Tin Can Sailor volunteers were in attendance, which included five former USS The Sullivans DD-537 crew members.

On Oct. 16, 1944, USS The Sullivans (DD 537) was one of five destroyers operating east of the Philippines and 100 miles south of Formosa.

The Sullivans was assigned to a screening group to escort the battle-battered cruisers, USS Houston and USS Canberra, to Ulithi for repairs. Houston and Canberra had been torpedoed during the Battle of Formosa the day before. Canberra can be seen in the background of the painting being towed by Navy tug, USS Mansee.

Navigating The Sullivans was helmsman QM1 George Mendonsa, whom 10 months later would become known as "The Kissing Sailor," after being photographed by Life Magazine's Alfred Eisenstaedt as he kissed the nurse on V-J Day in NY Times Square.

Adm. Halsey used this "Convoy of the Cripples," (nicknamed CripDiv 1) as a decoy to lure enemy aircraft. Radar pickets detected a mass of Japanese aircraft and Halsey's aircraft decimated the incoming squadrons allowing only a few to penetrate the destroyer screen.

Artist Ray Massey's true-to-life painting "Convoy of the Cripples," accurately depicts The Sullivans coming to the aid of Houston after it was torpedoed by a Japanese "Betty," while it was being towed by Navy tug, USS Pawnee.

The painting illustrates the "Betty," being shot down by The Sullivans, which had eluded Halsey's aircraft and found the damaged cruisers being towed.

Hort Spitzer spent this youth on water in competitive sailing and served in the Navy (1955-57) as gunnery/ASW officer on destroyer escort USS Tabberer DE 418. In 1979, Hort met Ray while he was unloading his van for an art show in Connecticut. As Hort helped Ray unload his vehicle he noticed the painting "Convoy of the Cripples," and admired the authenticity and accuracy of the colors of the sea, the acrid gun smoke layered above The Sullivans and the wake pushing to starboard as the helmsman, George Mendonsa, gave it full port rudder and the 5 38's and 40 MM's set the hull to starboard.

Several museums and organizations requested the "Convoy of the Cripples," but Hort believed his painting belonged with The Sullivans to honor George Mendonsa and the crew that served on the ship.

The 2nd part is the recreational part where Child and Youth Program (CYP) are open extended hours for parents to enjoy "free" time without their children. This is a chance that they can go shopping, clean their house, go to dinner/lunch, etc. There is a cost associated with this at $4 per hour per child. However, if there is a sanctioned command function such as Family Readiness Group Meetings, Ombudsman Meetings, Deployments meetings, care may be authorized at no charge to parents. The GPAB program will begin Sept. 13. Hours are the last Monday and Tuesday evenings of each month from 6 p.m. -10 p.m. - except for federal holidays and the second Saturday of each month from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m... The Youth Center will be open the same hours on Saturday, but not the weekday evening hours. On Monday and Tuesday, all ages will attend the Child Development Center (CDC). On Saturdays, children 6 weeks - 5 years will attend the CDC and children 6-12 years will attend the Youth Center.

Ready For A Hurricane?

From Staff

To ensure readiness, Sailors, civilian employees, and their families should make hurricane preparations now and review those preparations periodically throughout the year. When a hurricane approaches, ships may be ordered to sortie and aircraft may evacuate. Any final hurricane preparations will fall onto family members who must be prepared to assume the burden of self-protection and survival in the absence their spouse. Waiting until a hurricane watch is posted could result in shortages in materials and supplies. Making preparations now, to include developing an evacuation plan and assembling a survival kit, is the best way to avoid problems and confusion associated with last minute storm preparations.

Actions to be taken before the storm:

Prepare an evacuation plan. Having a plan will allow for timely evacuation should local or military authorities order an evacuation.

Ensure you plan for multiple destinations as hotel/motels will likely become unavailable quickly. Plan multiple routes as traffic congestion is likely. If possible, travel with family, neighbors or friends. Ensure your vehicle is properly maintained and has a full tank of gas.

Have emergency supplies on hand and a survival kit ready, regardless of your evacuation decision. Some recommended items to have in your survival kit include, but are certainly not limited to: change of clothing, personal hygiene items, sleeping bags/blankets, first aid kit with essential prescription medications, battery operated radio, flashlights, extra batteries, phone chargers, eyeglasses, games or toys for children, important papers (put drivers license or other identification, cash [small bills and coins], insurance papers, birth certificates, shot records, property inventory, emergency contact phone numbers, etc in ziploc bags), bottled drinking water, canned food, can opener, and any other items needed to survive for several days with limited resources.

Make arrangements for pets. Most shelters and hotels will not allow pets. Ensure pets have identification tags, current license and shots are up to date.

For more information, contact the NS Mayport Emergency Management Office at 270-6968.

our most costly damage will prove to be the sea walls in the basin," he said.

Sixteen Mayport-based vessels headed out to sea on September 8, taking an evasive course away from Hurricane Dora. Needed repairs, however, kept four destroyers, the Noa, Turner, Bailey, and Meredith from leaving; however, they successfully rode out the storm in the basin.

Ships that left before the hurricane hit were the destroyers Ault, McCaffery, Forrest Royal, Sumner, Ware, Lawe, Harwood, English, Stribling, Goodrich, and Bigelow; the carrier Shangri-La; the guided missile frigate Luce; the destroyer tender Yellowstone; and the oiler Kaskaskia.

The west sea wall in the basin sustained considerable damage, while the adjacent street along one of the four destroyer piers was buckled by the pounding surf.

Other basin piers seemed to have come through in good shape. A great number of trees toppled during the storm, while others cracked in half like matchsticks. Many of the fallen trees blocked streets, but these were quickly removed.

Fortunately, none fell across Bennett Shores' homes, although the housing area was literally littered with downed trees. A small number of carparks were damaged, however.

Nearest point of beach erosion was 15 to 25 feet from the senior officers' quarters. General erosion of the beach was severe and this averaged over 40 feet. All of the sand pumped onto the station's beach last November and December was washed away.

Most activities were in operation the day after Hurricane Dora's devastation, even if on a limited scale.. Even the commissary operated on emergency power last Friday.

The dispensary and other key buildings also had essential electrical power via emergency generators.

General repairs and mop-up continues,, but the station is fast achieving normalcy.
