The cause of the incident is currently under investigation. At this time, the Sailor is in the ship's Medical department for evaluation and observation and is being treated for minor injuries.

New York, Jason Dunham and Vicksburg are currently operating off the coast of South Carolina as part of an Amphibious Readiness Group exercise.

The Helicopter Maritime Strike Squadron (HSM-46) helicopter located the Sailor who was recovered by their SAR swimmer shortly after 11 p.m.

Hispanic Heritage Month Celebrates Cultural Diversity In U.S. Military

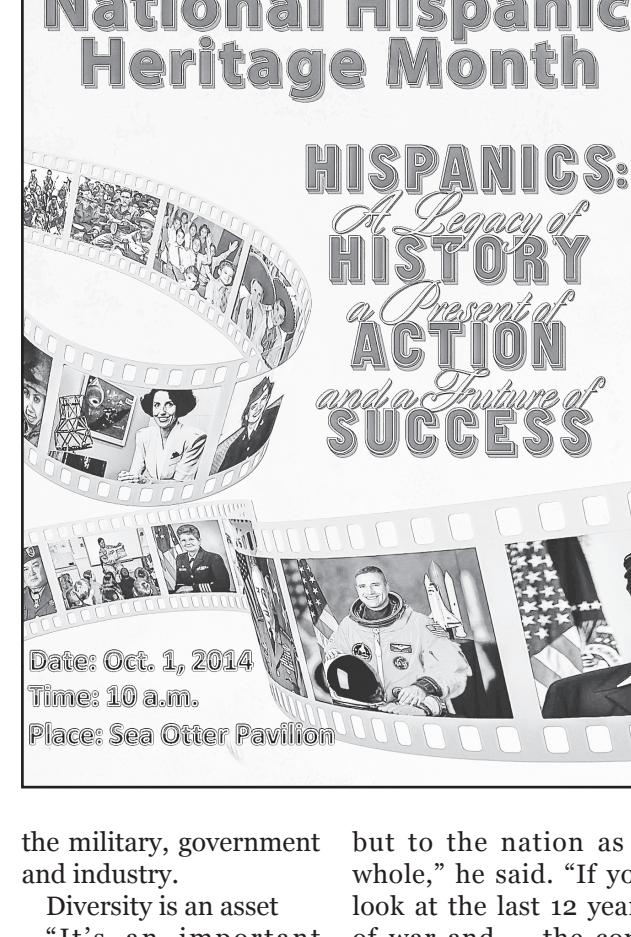

By Amaani Lyle

DoD News, Defense Media Activity

Since 1968, when President Lyndon B. Johnson was in office, America has observed National Hispanic Heritage Month from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 to celebrate the contributions and culture of citizens of Latin American descent.

Today's start of National Hispanic Heritage Month also marks the anniversary of independence for Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua, while independence days for Mexico and Chile are observed, respectively, Sept. 16 and Sept. 18.

In an interview with The Pentagon Channel, Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Juan G. Ayala, Marine Corps Installations Command facilities service division commander, noted history shows Hispanics have made an impact in all walks of the military, government and industry.

Diversity is an asset

"It's an important time of the year to highlight the contributions Hispanics have made not only to the military but to the nation as a whole," he said. "If you look at the last 12 years of war and ... the contributions of Hispanics, you'll see they've participated in every operation and they've done so with distinction ... with honor and they'll continue to do so."

Ayala emphasized the importance of diversity within the Marine Corps and beyond not only as a reflection of the country, but as an impetus to increase military efficiency and readiness.

"Only 1 percent of the population of the United States is in the military," Ayala said. "We're not different because we're Hispanics, we are Americans and we reflect what this country is about and what the founding fathers wanted it to be."

The eldest of nine children, Ayala recounted his own journey to the Marine Corps, noting that his late parents were immigrants who had little grasp of the English language.

"I remember seeing my neighbors go into the Marine Corps and they were completely different people when they came back ... I was very impressed," the general said. "I thought I could really give back by joining ... and ever since I was in the fifth grade I knew I wanted to become a United States Marine."

Important values

Values such as selflessness, hard work, dignity, and respect for all mirror the Marine Corps' core values, Ayala said.

"After 35 years, I still had that good baggage from my family and that work ethic; it's just a reflection of who we are," said Ayala, adding the same principles apply in battle.

"We don't leave a Marine behind - it's all about your unit, your leadership and your Marine," he said.

Ayala said his role models come from various backgrounds.

"We don't get here by ourselves - it's on the backs and shoulders of a lot of great people," he said.

The general credited his father, as well as Marine Corps' commissioned and noncommissioned officers of all backgrounds, who mentored him and guided his career.

Prepare for the future

The general said his best advice to younger generations is to finish education in both high school and college to prepare for future leadership roles in the military and industry, each of which rely on diversity to increase their effectiveness.

"It's not about getting numbers for numbers' sake," Ayala said. "[Diversity] makes us more ready to fight and defend our nation."

Ayala also said he encourages service members to join celebrations at bases and installations and to reach out to Hispanics to learn about their stories.

Military Family Life Counselors Here To Help

KNOWING THE ROPES

Through a collaboration with The Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Military Community and Family Policy, Duval County Public Schools, and NS Mayport and NAS Jax, Military Family Life Counselors (MFLC's) have been provided to 14 Duval County Public Schools. The counselors provide extra support to students to assist with the unique challenges of military life.

The counselors do not assess, diagnose, or provide therapy. However, they can provide short-term non-medical counseling support in a variety of different ways: individual meetings with children, presentations about life skills issues, skill-building groups, and meetings with parents and families at the family's request for additional support.

And when they do encounter more in-depth issues, they work with the school's counselor to connect military families with other helping agencies available on the installation or out in the community. While meeting with children, MFLCs always remain in line of sight of a teacher, staff member, or a parent.

The counselors are licensed clinicians who have demonstrated expertise in working with children. Some of the common issues that MFLCs help with include the following:

- deployment and reintegration issues
- grief and loss reactions
- communication skills
- stress management and coping skills
- anger management/

conflict resolution

- feelings associated with separation and divorce

The 11 MFLC's now working in Duval Schools include the following:

- Chimney Lakes/Enterprise, Kimberly Cruise

- Finegan Elementary, Ruthanne Wing and Catherine Cashore

- First Coast High/Oceanway Middle, Sharon Barber

- Fletcher High, Eileen Trunell

- Jax Beach Elementary, Kathleen Piazza

- John Stockton/Venetia Elementary, Cheryl Alvarado

- Mayport Elementary, Susan Schanen

- Mayport Middle, Robyn Ashburn

- New Berlin Elementary, Shelley Rosen

- San Mateo/Sheffield Elementary, Willie Lott

These schools were selected based on the number of military dependents attending that school. The program is designed to provide an informal context in which children can access support in a non-threatening and supportive environment. MFLCs circulate throughout the school facility making themselves available in extended day

Build a Strong Foundation For Your Marriage

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Asking each other this simple question can nip many marital problems in the bud before they arise. Having a healthy understanding of each other's thoughts on marriage will identify any unspoken differences and promote deeper discussion into each other's views. Ask each other: What is marriage? What is the purpose of marriage? What does a healthy marriage look like? What roles does a husband fill? A wife? What responsibilities will each of you handle in the relationship?

2. Understanding Family. Having a thorough knowledge of each other's family of origin is important in understanding where you and your spouse come from, the type of environment in which you grew up, and may identify possible areas of conflict in your own relationship. I recommend filling out a genogram (a schematic of family relationships) on each family and discussing it with each other and a counselor. Your views on children and parenting are also very important. Do you want to have children? How many do you want to have? How will you discipline your children? How will you educate them?

3. Communication and Conflict Resolution.

It is well known that healthy communication is vital to a healthy marriage. In order to communicate well, you must understand how each of you communicates. Gary Chapman, author of The Five Love Languages, offers a very helpful online assessment that can help you determine your "love language." Visit it here: <http://www.5lovelanguages.com/>.

Equally important is how you work together to resolve the conflicts that will inevitably arise in marriage. Resolving conflict in a healthy and respectful manner will work wonders for your marriage. Learn each other's style of conflict resolution and you can improve on your own weakness and understand each other's strengths. Consider going to a professional counselor or to take a personality test such as the Myers-

Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) or Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI) or consider signing up for a Practical Relationship Enhancement Program (PREP) Course (<https://www.prepinc.com/>). These tools can help you better understand your communication and conflict resolution styles.

Many folks approach marriage by following the advice of the familiar old school rhyme which says, "First comes love, then comes marriage." While love certainly ought to be a prerequisite to marriage, there are several other prerequisites which help to build a strong foundation for this most sacred of relationships. If you are considering marriage there are five important issues you should discuss with your significant other before "taking the plunge." Having a strong understanding of where each of you stand on these five issues will help lay the foundation for a fruitful, loving, and committed relationship. Take the time to talk through the following issues with each other over a quiet dinner, a peaceful walk, or a relaxing evening at home:

ple handles money is the source of a majority of the problems in a marriage. It is important, therefore, to sit down and discuss with each other how to manage the family income. One of your top priorities should be to sit down together and write out a family budget. There are many helpful tools available on writing family budgets. I find Dave Ramsey's books to be very helpful, particularly Financial Peace University and Total Money Makeover. Ask each other these questions: How much will we save each month? How much will we spend? How much will we give away? Where can we cut back? Where can we spend a little more?

5. Sex. Communicating about sex is central to maintaining an intimate relationship with your spouse. A helpful resource for married couples is Dr. Doug Rosenau's book A Celebration of Sex. He has also published versions for newlyweds and for couples over 50. Discuss these questions: What is the purpose of sex? What are your expectations? What is your sexual history? Knowing each other in such a profound and intimate way requires total transparency and trust. Communicating about sex before-hand will open the doors to true passion.

Discussing these five topics openly and honestly with each other will help each of you determine whether or not you are prepared for marriage. Having these discussions will also most likely result in a stronger bond between the two of you and a more unified front on where your relationship is headed. If you find it too daunting to tackle these issues alone visit a Chaplain or other clergy member, a Marriage and Family Therapist, or a Licensed Professional Counselor. These relationship professionals can help lead and guide your discussion on these important topics. Contact your Chaplain's Office, the local Fleet and Family Support Center, or visit www.militaryonesource.mil to find out how to get a hold of one of these professionals.

Marriage is a wonderful gift of God and our love for one another should be a reflection of His love for us. Openly communicating on these topics before-hand will help us to love each other as He loves us and will help prepare us for a healthy start to a beautiful relationship. Here's to a wonderfully committed marriage!

"As we celebrate the Pride we have as Chief Petty Officers, and the dedication we have to our service, we must also remember those who have gone before us. UNITAS Naval Exercise Kicks Off In Peru

From 4th Fleet Public Affairs

Naval forces from Chile, Colombia, Mexico, Peru and the United States kicked off UNITAS 2014, an annual multinational exercise, in Cartagena, Colombia, Sept. 12.

Personnel from Argentina, Brazil, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Italy, Panama, United Kingdom and New Zealand are also participating in the exercise.

This year's exercise is hosted by the Peruvian navy and will include 20 warships that will conduct operations in the Southern Pacific through Sept. 26.

UNITAS is intended to train participating forces in a variety of maritime scenarios to test command and control of forces at sea, while operating as a multinational force to provide the maximum opportunity to improve interoperability.

"UNITAS develops and sustains relationships that improve the capacity of both U.S. forces and partner nation maritime forces through complex and comprehensive multinational training at sea," said Rear Adm. George Ballance, commander, U.S. Naval Forces Southern Command, U.S. 4th Fleet.

The overall objectives of the intense training focus on developing coalition building, multi-lateral security cooperation, promoting tactical interoperability and promoting friendship, professionalism and mutual understanding among the participating partner nations.

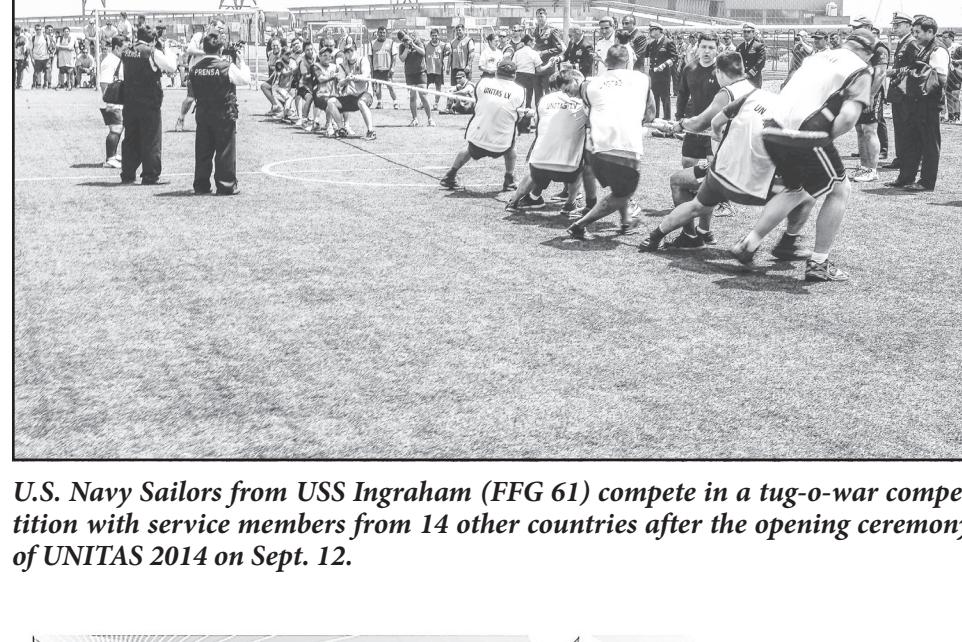

"While the overarching goal of the exercise is to develop and test command and control of forces at sea, training in this exercise will address the spectrum of maritime operations," Ballance said. "Specifically, there will be high end warfare scenarios addressing electronic warfare, anti-air warfare and air defense, anti-submarine warfare, anti-surface warfare and maritime interdiction operations."

UNITAS began in 1960. It is the U.S. Navy's longest running annual multinational maritime exercise. UNITAS, which means "unity" in Latin, is a demonstration of the U.S. commitment to the region and to the value of the strong relationships forged between our partner militaries.

The next UNITAS exercise is scheduled for spring 2015.

4th Fleet Remembers Victims of Suicide

By Lt. Cmdr. Tom Gordy
4th Fleet Public Affairs

Sailors and civilians of U.S. Fourth Fleet staff gathered to remember shipmates, family and friends who had fallen victim to suicide in a ceremony on Sept. 11.

"Since the beginning of the year, fifty of our shipmates have fallen to suicide. That is fifty too many," said Yeoman Chief Petty Officer Yvonne Rodriguez, the Command's Suicide Prevention Coordinator who organized the ceremony. "We all know someone who was a victim, so we must remember to act."

The ceremony included a moment of silence followed by a prayer offered by Surface Forces Atlantic Staff Chaplain Lt. Cmdr. Alan Cameron, and comments by 4th Fleet's Deputy Chief of Staff, Lt. Cmdr. John Liddle.

Liddle reflected on the significance of Sept. 11 for all citizens as well as the imperative everyone has to ACT (Ask, Care, Treat) if a shipmate is perceived to be enduring personal struggle or difficulty.

"We need to care enough to ask and we need to care enough get help for our shipmates," said Liddle. "Suicide shouldn't be a permanent solution for prob-

Naval Station Mayport Coalition of Sailors against Destructive Decisions (CSADD) team outlasted the Commander Navy Region Fourth Fleet CSADD team 42-21 to capture the second annual CSADD Flag-Football title Sept. 5th at the Mayport field.

CSADD is a peer-to-peer mentorship program used Navy-wide. The program is geared at Sailors 18 to 25 years old, to reinforce the culture of "Shipmates helping Shipmates". Not only is the program used to encourage positive decision making, it is also a great tool to help build leadership skills in young Sailors.

According to Naval Station Mayport CSADD President Yeoman 2nd Class Demario Smith, these activities can help bring Sailors together to have fun on liberty in a responsible way.

Sailors and leadership an opportunity to step away from the desk and just enjoy a few hours of fun and relaxation," he said.

"It doesn't matter if they're a Captain or a Seaman Recruit, 18 to 58, we just want commands base wide to understand that just as it is important to work hard it just as important to take a break and play a little hard," Smith added.

Now that the Flag Football Tournament is done CSADD has teamed up with Naval Station Mayport Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) for the "Zombie Run" which is scheduled for Oct 24, (Which will help raise awareness towards Domestic Violence) and The "Make a Difference Day," on Oct. 25.

David Tellez while it is good to have fun playing football or being chased by a flesh eating zombies, it is great to hold events that create CSADD awareness.

"I support CSADD 100 percent. Every Sailor should be involved," he said. "It is a great opportunity for young Sailors to interact with their peers, but most importantly coming together to send a message of Shipmates helping Shipmates."

USS New York Commemorates 9/11

By Lt. j.g.
Timothy Pietrack

Commander, Amphibious
Squadron 8, Public Affairs

The San Antonio-class amphibious transport dock USS New York (LPD 21) held a remembrance ceremony commemorating the 13th anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks. The New York is a floating memorial dedicated to the men and women who lost their lives that day and a steadfast symbol of American resolve.

The ship is underway preparing for an upcoming deployment, where she will bring seven-and-a-half tons of World Trade Center steel across the globe in support of national security.

The ceremony included three volleys, followed by taps and a moment of silence, remarks from the ship's Commanding Officer, and remarks from the 24th MEU's Commander of Troops. In conclusion, Chaplain Justin Bernard offered words of hope to all who suffered loss on 9/11. "This ship that we serve on today is a beacon of light, one that reminds our nation and the world that by God's grace we can and will rise."

"Today, once again, Sailors and Marines stand shoulder to shoulder on this great warship, to pay homage to the past and contemplate the challenges of the future. We are strengthened by a profound sense of duty, brought into sharp focus by the memory of those who have gone before us. It is our sacred duty to our nation, our sacred duty to our fellow countrymen, and our sacred duty to those who perished thirteen years ago," said Capt. Christopher Brunett, Commanding Officer of USS New York.

Nearly 1,100 Sailors and Marines currently call USS New York "home." A select few of those dedicated service members have the unique opportunity to serve on a ship dedicated to their hometown. "Being a native New Yorker and a part of this ship's crew, I feel I have come full circle in my 22 year career," said Aviation Boatswains Mate Fuels Chief Hector Respetto. "The feeling I get from being privileged enough to still be able to touch the steel of the Twin Towers like I did as a kid sends chills through me. I truly believe that I'm here for those families, including my own, that have suffered the loss of fallen heroes on 9/11." The Sailors and Marines on board have a profound sense of what this ship truly means to the citizens of New York City and the State of New York. Corporal Michael Scuderi, whose uncle was a dedicated NYPD officer and first responder on 9/11, said "As a native New Yorker it is an incredible honor to serve on this ship. From the nightly prayers dedicated to the fallen first responders, to the countless memorials spread throughout New York, there isn't a minute that passes where I don't find myself thinking about the selfless dedication of the fallen first responders."

The USS New York's motto "Strength Forged Through Sacrifice... Never Forget," coupled with the steadfast devotion displayed by the men and women who serve aboard New York, reaffirm that the heroes of that day will never be forgotten.

USS Fort McHenry Remembers 9/11

By MC1 Amy Kirk

Navy Public Affairs Support

Element East

Service members, civilians and first responders from New York and Baltimore gathered Sept. 11 at Fort McHenry for a ceremony in remembrance of the events of Sept. 11, 2001.

The event, held to commemorate the 13th anniversary of the terrorist attacks, included a wreath-laying ceremony, live music, and a display featuring the 9-11 Flag that was salvaged from the ruins of the World Trade Center. This is the first time the flag has been displayed at the birthplace of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"The Star-Spangled Banner is a true American icon that forever remains constant in our lives in the face of disaster," said Tina Cappetta, Fort McHenry National Park Service superintendent. "Where more appropriate than Fort McHenry to bring a tremendously powerful symbol of American resolve."

Park rangers and living historians also made remarks relating the Battle of Baltimore with the events of 9/11.

"When I began my career at Fort McHenry in 1999, it was a challenge to help visitors to understand and connect to the level of fear and anxiety Americans experienced in 1814 after the burning Washington and the bombardment of Fort McHenry and Baltimore," said Ranger Jim Bailey. "The War of 1812 was remote and disconnected from our modern life, but 2001 changed all of that. In an instant, we all can now understand how one moment can not only change our lives forever, but could wound deeply the heart and soul of our nation."

Bailey added that the patriotism experienced during the aftermath of the terrorist attacks could also be seen and felt 200 years ago when a different generation of men and women feared for the future of their nation in the face of adversity.

"When we are truly tested, our nation and our people stand together and stand strong," said Bailey. "This is the feeling that [Francis Scott] Key captured in our national anthem. The feeling he saw wrapped in the flag that morning was over these very ramparts. And it was his hope that it would always be so."

The ceremony ended with the playing of Taps and the reading of the Baltimore residents killed on 9/11 and during the 1814 defense of Baltimore.
