Phishing alert: The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) has received reports of fraudulent emails (phishing) referencing a CDC-sponsored "State Vaccination Program."

The messages say that users must create a personal H1N1 (swine flu) "Vaccination Profile" on the cdc.gov Web site. The message then states that anyone that has reached the age of 18 has to have his/her personal vaccination profile on the cdc.gov site.

The CDC has not implemented a state vaccination program requiring registration on www.cdc.gov. Users that click on the email are at risk of having malicious code installed on their system. CDC reminds users to take the following steps to reduce the risk of being a victim of a phishing attack:

Do not follow unsolicited links and do not open or respond to unsolicited email messages;

Use caution when visiting un-trusted Web sites;

Use caution when entering personal information online.

NASP community center opens at Lighthouse Terrace

By Mike O'Connor
Gosport Associate Editor

Residents of base housing now have a new place to get together, have fun and build a sense of community.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony and open house was held Dec. 3 for NAS Pensacola's new community center, located at 1 Lighthouse Terrace. The facility is open to all residents of family housing and features a game room, three meeting rooms, a fitness center and a computer lab/business area.

"We're celebrating the grand opening of the community center for NAS Pensacola," said Ted Lipham, Balfour Beatty Communities project director, Navy Region Southeast. Part of a two-year housing renovation and new construction project onboard NASP, the center also has a game room with Wii, Xbox and other video games. "There's also a kitchen and out back, a playground and 'sprayground' (water park) for kids to play in," Lipham said. "It's for all the residents of NAS Pensacola, but (Lighthouse Terrace) was a good place to put it."

Pearl Harbor survivors lauded as heroes and more at remembrance

More than 200 guests listened as a group of Pearl Harbor survivors were cited for their bravery during the annual Pearl Harbor Remembrance ceremony at the National Museum of Naval Aviation, at Naval Air Station Pensacola Dec. 7.

Rear Adm. Joseph Kilkenny, commander Naval Education and Training Command (NETC), addressed the audience, saying the survivors were heroes, and much more.

"The Pearl Harbor survivors are part of the fabric of our great nation," Kilkenny said. "I remember seeing a poster once, designed by artist Allen Sandburg for the Office of War Information in 1942. On the poster there is a corner of blue sky, which is almost blotted out by a great billow of black smoke and the glow of scorching flames. But there is also a flag pole, bearing an American flag at half-mast. The flag is battle-scarred and torn — but it was still waving as if blown by a stiff trade wind. The poster recalls the words of Abraham Lincoln as he gave his address at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. '...we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain...'"

According to Kilkenny, while the poster was made in 1942 to stir national pride and support for the military and the war effort, he is sure the sentiment behind the words were already ringing in the hearts of people throughout America when they heard the news of the attack in 1941.

During his comments, Kilkenny described several events occurring on ships and at shore facilities during the attack, including a Japanese airplane which launched a torpedo at the battleship USS Arizona (BB 39), and then strafed the fantail of the battleship USS Nevada (BB 36) as the crew was preparing for morning colors.

"The rear gunner sprayed the men standing at attention, but he must have been a poor shot. He missed the entire band and Marine guard, lined up in two neat rows," Kilkenny said.

"A massive explosion rocked USS Arizona and hundreds of our shipmates were lost in an instant. A bomb blasting through the roof of the mess hall at

Chaplains, local churches providing Christmas for NASP military

By Anne Thrower
Gosport Staff Writer

Chaplains onboard Naval Air Station Pensacola and area ministers are making sure military stationed here will be in the Christmas spirit by the time they leave for home or if they plan to stay here for the holidays.

The events include caroling with the McGuire's band and a large Christmas potluck at the Mega building in addition to the traditional Christmas services during the holidays.

Started several years ago, the caroling through the Naval Air Technical Training Center's barracks with the McGuire's Pipe Band has become a tradition on base. Organized by the NASP chapel communities, a group will leave the J.B. McKamey Center at 6 p.m. on Dec. 16 and grow from there.

Cmdr. David Gibson, NASP's chaplain, said the tradition started as a way for the chaplain's office to "reach out to the students before they go home."

The free trees were part of the Trees For Troops program that gives trees to active-duty military. The 250 trees that were delivered to NASP by FedEx, a co-sponsor of the program, were gone in less than three hours. "I can't tell you how many I turned around still wanting trees," said ACC James Werner who volunteered to help get the trees off a FedEx truck. Photo by Anne Thrower

"This is all about the families," NASP Commanding Officer Capt. Bill Reavey said at the dedication. "This is just one way of taking care of our service members who are putting their lives on the line in the war against terror. My hat's off to everybody who helped develop this."

Lighthouse Terrace residents MM3 Larry Dupree and Kristin Dupree helped cut the ribbon to officially dedicate the building. "They have a fitness center, and we can put our boys in the other room to play the games," Kristin Dupree said. "We can pick up the kids after school and put them over there," Larry Dupree added, "after they do their homework."

According to Kilkenny, hours later a Sailor waded ashore and he heard a bugle sound evening colors. He automatically stood at attention.

"Ensign Ed Jacoby would later say the sound reminded him that the country lived on... that it had survived blows in the past and would clearly do it this time," explained Kilkenny.

The admiral told the Pearl Harbor survivors that those serving in uniform today and those who are training to serve America tomorrow look to their courage, determination and commitment.

"You each paved the way for those of us who serve today. Our brave young men and women are performing as you did, in heroic fashion. We see it in Iraq, we see it in Afghanistan, and we see it in other places around the world. I see it in the eyes of the Sailors, Soldiers, Marines, Airmen and Coastguardsmen who train right here in Pensacola. And I can tell you that this generation of fighting men and women are up to the challenge."

The bagpipe players traditionally attract a lot of attention as they make their way through the barracks. And, in the past, the event has gathered 150-200 service members singing and having a good time as they make their way back to the McKamey Center for cookies.

The next day, Dec. 17, is the NATTC Partners in Ministry Holiday Potluck at the NATTC hangar. The home-cooked holiday meal typically feeds 2,500 to 3,000 Sailors and Marines. The potluck will take place in AS Hangar from 10:30 a.m.-noon.

About 20 churches and other organizations in the area participate in the event, bringing the food and providing fellowship with the Sailors and Marines and meeting their instructors and commanding officers.

For those staying in the Pensacola area there will be two events on Christmas Eve in the Naval Aviation Memorial Chapel onboard NASP. A Catholic children's Mass will take place at 4:30 p.m. and a Protestant candlelight service will take place at 6 p.m.

On Christmas Day there will be Christmas Masses at 8:30 a.m. at the Naval Aviation Memorial Chapel and 11 a.m. at the Cory Station Chapel.

The Protestant community will be having "Christmas at Home" in the J.B. McKamey Center at 3 p.m. for service members who are at the base. "It's an opportunity to get out of the barracks," Gibson said. The event will include food, games and football. The event traditionally attracts more than 100 military members.

Also planned is a New Year's Eve Mass at 4:30 p.m. at the Naval Aviation Memorial Chapel and a New Year's Day service at 8:30 a.m. at the same chapel.

Naval Leader Planning Guide now available

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (NNS) — The Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD) completed the 2010 edition of the Naval Leader Planning Guide (NLPG) and the Naval Leader Weekly Planner (NLWP).

Both planners are now available online, and commands can download the portable document format (PDF) version, free-of-charge from Navy Knowledge Online.

"CPPD is pleased to bring back the Naval Leader Weekly Planner for 2010, a decision we made based on the positive feedback we've received from our customers, the Sailors," said Capt. Jon Picker, CPPD's commanding officer.

"The NLPG's course listings and planning worksheets can help Sailors plan and organize their professional development opportunities, which is why I hope everyone will take the time to review and make use of this beneficial tool," said Picker.

The NLPG brings together myriad of information that is compact and portable. This year's edition includes a 15-month calendar (January 2010 to March 2011), a complete list of CPPD courses and services, Navy and Marine Corps Selection Board and Fitness Report/Evaluation schedules, and the Navy and Marine Corps Professional Reading Program lists.

The weekly version of this product contains a 13-month calendar, but all other sections contain the same resources as the standard guide, including the personal and professional development section. These sections include steps in the planning process, goal development assistance, planning worksheets, and a mentoring compass.

To download the 2010 NLPG, log on to www.nko.navy.mil and select the Leadership link. The guide can be downloaded as either a PDF file for printing or as an Excel file, which can be imported into Microsoft Outlook.

The Gosport nameplate features the T-6A Texan II aircraft, the newest joint services trainer. The T-6 has replaced the Navy's T-34C aircraft that for more than 40 years has served to provide primary flight training for student pilots, NFOs and navigators attached to the Naval Air Training Command. It will also replace the Air Force T-37.

Maintained by the United States Coast Guard since 1939, the Pensacola Lighthouse, aboard NAS Pensacola, originally began as the lightship Aurora Borealis in June 1823. Evolving through structural and location changes, the current facility was built in 1856 and at night still shines for Sailors 27 miles out at sea.

Established in 1921 as the Air Station News, the name Gosport was adopted in 1936. A gosport was a voice tube used by flight instructors in the early days of naval aviation to give instructions and directions to their students. The name "Gosport" was derived from Gosport, England (originally God's Port), where the voice tube was invented.

Looking back: My semester spent at NAS Pensacola

By Nikki Nash
NASP Public Affairs Intern

Editor's Note: Nikki Nash spent the fall semester as an intern in the Public Affairs Office onboard NASP. She is a senior at the University of West Florida majoring in communication arts with a specialization in public relations. UWF's intern program allows a public relations student to participate in the day-to-day operations of the public affairs at NASP.

I have spent about three and a half months as an intern with the Naval Air Station Pensacola Public Affairs Office and in the time I have been here, I have learned so much about the base itself.

One of my first tasks was learning about the history of the base, dating back to 1824. This included gathering information and compiling it into several one-hour speeches for distinguished visitors to the base such as former shipmates from the USS McNair and visitors from UWF's Leisure Learning class. Writing the speeches not only allowed me to flex my writing abilities but more importantly to learn an extensive history of NASP.

I was also here to see the completion of the Historic Landscape Mitigation, which restored and commemorated the base's historical significance after much damage from Hurricane Ivan.

I never knew the vast history the base had. While learning dates, names and facts, I also discovered little anecdotes about different areas and buildings on base such as the hangars, specifically Bldg. 73 which was one of the first metal hangars in the Navy.

In my research, I found a building that I really like for its original, octagonal design. Bldg. 16 was used as a chapel in the Civil War and was one of the only buildings left standing when the Confederates burned the Navy Yard.

This knowledge is something that I will never forget and will continue to pass on to everyone I know. It is this history that makes NAS Pensacola such a unique and interesting place.

One of the most instantly rewarding experiences I had during my internship was writing articles for the base newspaper, Gosport.

This internship marked my passage into the publishing world and I can't express how exciting that was.

In addition to writing speeches and articles, I was also here to witness one of the biggest events for public affairs at NAS: the Blue Angels Homecoming Air Show.

I was thrilled to see the entire show twice by working both days of the annual event. This gave me a chance to see just how many people enjoy it year after year.

As a Pensacola native, I have seen the Blue's fly more than I can count on both hands, but they never fail to impress. The show was spectacular and truly made the entire internship experience so much more than I could have imagined.

Prior to the air show, I had the privilege of riding in a World War II-era combat training aircraft, the SNJ. It was amazing to see the mechanics of this 70-year-old plane and to have the opportunity to experience a short flight in it. The flight was both educational and sentimental for me. Joe Fagundes, my pilot for the ride and one of the civilian performers for the show, even gave me a call sign like most pilots have: Cutie. It was something I will never forget.

Before coming to NASP, I never realized that every branch of the military is represented on the base. It is truly amazing to see how many brave service members are trained at the air station every day.

One thing I couldn't help but notice about the surrounding area of the base is the beautiful scenery. Sometimes you have to just take a minute to stop and look around.

The landscape and wildlife of the installation is something special for everyone working on or visiting NASP. I was especially taken aback by the monuments on the base.

I had seen Barrancas National Cemetery a few times growing up, but I never knew just how large it was. The cemetery encompasses 94.9 acres and is the only national cemetery located on a military installation.

It really took my breath away to see the size of the cemetery and it was even more interesting to hear some of the stories about those buried there.

After Apache Indian Geronimo was taken captive, he was held at Fort Pickens on Santa Rosa Island. His wife was also in Pensacola and died here. She is buried at the cemetery.

I also visited a monument on the base that I never even knew existed. The Desert Storm Memorial is small but beautiful. Consisting of a commemorative plaque and distinctive landscaping, the memorial is undiscovered by many but a spot worthy of visiting.

The people I met during my internship will possibly be the most memorable part of the experience. In the time I have been here, I have met some truly outstanding individuals.

The people I met have helped me in more ways than they probably realize. From what I can tell, the people at NASP are some of the nicest, most hard-working individuals. They all welcomed me and helped me learn about public relations, journalism and sometimes just how to handle people and situations in general.

I was pleasantly surprised at the way business was approached. It was always professional but with a sense of humor, which is just my style. After everything has been said and done, I would not change my experience for the world.

I enjoyed every minute of my semester at NAS Pensacola and would continue on if I had the chance. The knowledge I have gathered and relationships I have made will be with me for years to come.

Finally, I would like to thank everyone who has made my intern experience possible. I would like to thank NASP Commanding Officer Capt. Bill Reavey and Public Affairs Officer Harry White for giving me the opportunity to have this wonderful internship experience.

I would also like to thank Eileen Perrigo at UWF for helping me arrange the internship and giving me assistance and advice along the way.

Thank you to everyone I have met at NASP for making this such a great experience.

Santa delivers at the NAS Pensacola

Selected Children's CHRISTMAS Party

By AEAA Brinn Hefron
Gosport Staff Writer

More than 100 students from four area elementary schools were special guests Dec. 8 at the MWR Youth Activity Center for the NASP Selected Children's Christmas party.

Once the children arrived, they were paired up with their "shadows," volunteer military service members who were in charge of ensuring the children were entertained, fed lunch and in line to meet Santa.

At approximately 10:45 a.m., Santa arrived on a Fire & Emergency Services Gulf Coast fire truck, along with NASP Commanding Officer Capt. Bill Reavey, Mrs. Clause and an elf.

A clown show featuring Big Billy Countryman entertained the students while they waited — patiently, in most cases — for Santa. After a turn on Santa's lap, the children received bags of gifts bought specifically for their wishes by service members and employees of NASP, along with a presents and cash from First Navy Bank.

Hallmark Elementary, Pleasant Grove, Navy Point Elementary and O.J. Semmes Elementary were the invited schools for the 2009 party. Lunch was an ever-popular choice for the age group: pizza and hot dogs.

Kim Teal, the Civilian Welfare Recreation Association liaison at MWR, was in charge of the party. Her favorite part? "The kindness of the people who pick the kids' names. They're the ones who go out and buy size-specific stuff for them. And the kids; just seeing their faces."

Electronic training jacket now available for afloat Reservists

By Ed Barker

Naval Education and Training Command Public Affairs

The November 2009 update for the Navy Training Management and Planning System (NTMPS) data warehouse and associated applications includes increased access for Reservists — including afloat access to their electronic training jackets (ETJs).

NTMPS is a comprehensive information management system that integrates numerous databases throughout the Navy into a data warehouse.

It provides a convenient, one-stop shopping alternative for Sailors and supervisors looking for information on manpower, personnel and training issues.

The ETJ is a Web-based tool within NTMPS that allows active-duty and reserve Sailors the ability to view and print documented information on their individual training, education and accomplishments from a single source.

This includes formal training and education accomplishments, advancement status, qualifications, certifications, history of assignments, awards data and more.

ETJs can be accessed from any computer equipped with a major commercial browser with 128-bit encryption security.

“This update provides more capability for reserve Sailors serving on afloat units,” said Julie Whitley, NTMPS program manager.

“Before this current update, reserve members could only access and review their ETJs from shore-based computers, which could be a significant concern for afloat Reservists preparing for advancement exams.”

“The ETJ is a comprehensive source for education and training information,” added Whitley. “It compiles data from a host of different sources and includes college degree and course data, service schools, College Level Entry Program (CLEP) exams, military courses (which may also provide American Council on Education or ACE credits), language skills, additional qualification designations (AQDs) and completed Corporate Enterprise and Training Activity Resource System (CeTARS) training information.”

Updating the ETJ to reflect current training and education information is facilitated through the “Problems with your data?” hyperlink in the lower portion of the screen on the ETJ Web site.

After clicking on the link, a pop-up screen appears listing the procedures and points of contact for updating information.

“I strongly encourage all Sailors to review their ETJ and personnel records thoroughly and on a regular basis,” said Navy Career Counselor Master Chief (SW/SCW/AW) Tod Shuls, Force Retention program manager for the Naval Education and Training Command.

“As a Sailor comes up for advancement, it’s extremely important to make sure all documentation is in the right place at the right time — finding out too late that your record’s missing necessary quals or courses can ruin your day.”

For more information or updates, the NTMPS ETJ Web application can be accessed at: <https://www.ntmpsetj.navy.mil>.

Access is controlled via Common Access Card and is available via the Internet through Navy Knowledge Online (NKO) at <https://www.nko.navy.mil> or at sea, via the Distance Support Sharepoint Portal home page by clicking on the Navy Career Tools hyperlink and then Navy Knowledge Online at Sea.

Navy chief training officer: flexibility required to meet needs

By Joy Samsel

Naval Education and Training Command Public Affairs

ORLANDO (NNS) — The commander of Naval Education and Training Command (NETC) spoke at the Interservice/Industry Training, Simulation and Education Conference (IITSEC) in Orlando, Dec. 1.

Rear Adm. Joseph Kilkeny cited the command’s flexibility to meet the needs of the fleet.

The address was part of the general/flag officer panel which offered participants an opportunity to talk about how their organizations support military missions, as reflected in the conference theme, “Train to Fight ... Fight to Win.”

“We must gain more proficiency and our students more expertise in less time to keep up with the rapidly evolving challenges throughout the world,” Kilkeny said.

“The technology on display throughout this conference is indeed impressive, but we all acknowledge that it is our people who enable our services to be combat-ready.”

“We all go to great lengths to select training instructors who can teach, and we select those best suited to learn and develop into the most combat ready Sailors, Soldiers, Marines, Coast Guardsmen and highly technical and challenging positions.

“This is also true whether you are a Fortune 500 company or a small independent contractor. And it is especially true of the United States Armed Forces.”

Kilkeny gave a brief overview of the Navy training domain, which includes more than 19,000 military and civilian staff who provide training at more than 230 subordinate activities around the world.

More than 35,000 students take part in Navy training on any given day, and NETC logged more than 615,000 graduations in fiscal year 2008, including students from the Navy, Marine Corps, Army, Air Force and Coast Guard.

Rear Adm. Joseph Kilkeny

The U.S. Navy also trains more than 12,000 international students from more than 150 countries annually.

“But we did not get where we are today, overnight,” Kilkeny said. “Nor are we a static organization.”

“We are constantly flexing to respond to the changing requirements of the fleet, our inter-service partners and our allies.”

The admiral also offered an overview of the changes which occurred within NETC over the last decade, including the Executive Review of Navy Training (ERNT) directed by then-Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Vern Clark, which led to the Navy’s “Revolution in Training.”

“What followed was a massive restructuring that enabled us to work closer with the fleet to understand their requirements for trained Sailors and to concurrently embrace a new approach in the methods used to train them,” Kilkeny explained.

“Training works collaboratively with the fleet to take a human performance approach to analyzing and solving performance gaps.

“We identify Sailors knowledge, skills and abilities required to be successful at a job, task or function and design training to respond to those requirements — as they are determined by the fleet.”

He explained that change to Navy training will continue because the missions of the Navy continue to change.

“In support of the expanded role for Sailors on the ground overseas contingency operations, our Center for Security Forces has adapted training to meet the demands for individual augmentees in Iraq and Afghanistan, and other parts of the world,” Kilkeny said.

“The understanding of foreign cultures, customs and languages is a direct joint force multiplier that enables service members to sustain our long-standing alliances and forge new relationships with emerging partners.

“For Sailors, the Navy achieves this understanding through training in language, regional expertise and culture at our Center for Information Dominance.”

Kilkeny explained the development of training begins with the weapons and platforms the Navy purchases.

“We must work closely with you in the defense development and construction arena to ensure when we buy a system, the training is developed in parallel and fully supports the Sailors and joint service partners in the mission required of the system delivered,” Kilkeny said.

Kilkeny also addressed the issue of technology in training, saying NETC has embraced technology to support training, in schools as well as to export training to the fleet.

“These endeavors resulted in the use of blended learning solutions that include instructor lead training, computer-based training, simulation and technical training equipment,” Kilkeny said.

He gave a few examples of training initiatives, including the Submarine Learning Center’s Submarine On Board Training (SOBT).

It provides Sailors with training developed by subject matter experts, which is then reviewed and approved by the fleet as meeting their requirements. Sailors can download and take the training with them on deployment.

Looking at the future, NETC is partnering with the Office of Naval Research and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) on a project called Digital Tutor.

This adaptive tutor project leverages off of Silicon Valley information technology experts to attempt to model how best to train the next generation of cyber warfare experts.

“As we move forward, technology will continue to play an important role in Navy training, but there are important parameters that must be maintained,” Kilkeny stressed.

“Our computer and software systems, including those for use in the electronic classrooms, must be compatible with NMCI. And just like any business, our computer systems must be secure.

“This means all computers and software must meet our information assurance criteria.”

While he cited the requirement for the best training possible, Kilkeny tempered his comments with the reality of fiscal constraints, and explained this is a challenge to both industry and the armed services.

“How can industry deliver highly technical, complex and secure solutions at a price that the Services can afford? This is a challenge for both of us,” Kilkeny said.

“As we have always done, NETC will continue to work closely with the fleet to determine the best training to support their needs.

“We have never, and will never, create our training in a vacuum,” Kilkeny said.

“The training we provide America’s Sailors and our joint service partners is outstanding — if it was not, we would not have more than 150 nations knocking at our door to send their military members through our courses.”

Extend global holiday greetings through stamps

WASHINGTON — This year's holiday stamps extend diverse greetings. The 44-cent first-class stamps include Christmas: Madonna and Sleeping Child by Sassoferrato, Hanukkah, Kwanzaa, Eid and Winter Holidays.

The stamps are available at the world's largest post office that never closes: www.usps.com/shop.

Customers can also purchase stamps by calling 1 (800) STAMP-24 or by visiting their local post office.

"We hope Americans will use these stamps to spread the joy of the holidays on cards and letters across the nation this holiday season," said David Failor, U.S. Postal Service executive director of stamp services.

Christmas: Madonna and Sleeping Child by Sassoferrato

Since 1978, the theme of each "traditional" Christmas stamp has been the Madonna and Child. The 2009 stamp features a painting by Italian artist Giovanni Battista Salvi (1609-1685), more commonly known as Sassoferrato. The painting is currently in the collection of Hearst Castle in California.

The painting depicts a blonde Madonna clothed in red and cradling the sleeping Christ child in purple cloth. From each of the two top corners, the childlike face of a cherub looks down from the clouds. All 600 million, 44-cent, first-class stamps are available in booklets of 20.

Hanukkah

The new 2009 Hanukkah design features a photograph of a menorah with nine lit candles. The menorah was designed by Lisa Regan of the Garden Deva Sculpture Company in Tulsa, Okla., and photographed by Ira Wexler of Braddock Heights, Md. Carl T. Herrman of North Las Vegas, Nev., was the art director. All 35 million stamps are available in sheets of 20.

The 2009 Hanukkah stamp is the third U.S. issuance to commemorate the holiday. In 1996, the Postal Service issued its first Hanukkah stamp, which featured a stylized illustration of a menorah. A design featuring an ornate dreidel followed in 2004.

Kwanzaa

A non-religious holiday taking place over seven days — Dec. 26 to Jan. 1 — Kwanzaa draws on African traditions and takes its name from the phrase for "first fruits" in Swahili, a widely spoken African language. Stamp artist Lloyd McNeill of New York City, under the direction of Carl T. Herrman, created this new, festive, symbolic design to celebrate the holiday.

The bold colors in the stamp art are complemented in the top right corner by the colors of the Kwanzaa flag — green for growth, red for blood, and black for the African people — the same colors as the Pan-African flag. The field of green around the borders symbolizes growth and a bountiful harvest. In the hoop that the girl holds in her hands, as well as in the family grouping of mother, father, and child, McNeill symbolized unity. This is the third stamp design the Postal Service has issued in celebration of Kwanzaa. The first was issued in 1997. Thirty million 44-cent first-class stamps are available in sheets of 20.

Eid

The Postal Service continues its annual reissuance of the Eid stamp in the original design that was first issued in 2001.

This stamp commemorates the two most important festivals — or eids — in the Islamic calendar: Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha, and features the Arabic phrase "Eid mubarak" in gold calligraphy on a blue background. Eid mubarak translates literally as "blessed festival," and can be paraphrased "May your religious holiday be blessed."

Employing traditional methods and instruments to create this design, calligrapher Mohamed Zakariya of Arlington, Va., working under the direction of Phil Jordan of Falls Church, Va., chose a script known in Arabic as "thuluth" and in Turkish as "sulus." Zakariya used homemade black ink in pens crafted from seasoned reeds from the Near East and Japanese bamboo from Hawaii. The paper was specially prepared with a coating of starch and three coats of alum and egg-white varnish, then burnished with an agate stone and aged for more than a year.

Zakariya's black-and-white design was then colorized by computer. The colors chosen for the stamp — gold script on a blue background — are reminiscent of great works of Islamic calligraphy. All 20 million stamps are available in sheets of 20.

Winter Holidays

A reindeer, snowman, gingerbread man and toy soldier highlight the 2009 Winter Holidays stamps. These popular figures are seen throughout the holidays, decorating homes, schools, and stores from Thanksgiving to New Year's. They also appear in gift wrap designs and are the subjects of several favorite songs and stories. As stamp art, they will add a festive touch to letters and cards sent to friends and family.

This is the first Postal Service stamp project for artist Joseph Cudd. His company, Brushworks Studio, in Greensboro, N.C., is primarily a gift wrap and print design firm. To create these stamps under the direction of Richard Sheaff of Scottsdale, Ariz., Cudd first sketched the designs by hand and then finished them on the computer using a graphics tablet. More than 1.5 billion 44-cent first-class stamps are available in booklets of 20 and ATM booklets of 18.

For more, visit the Postal Service's interactive holiday press room at www.usps.com/news.

'Tis also the season to play it safe ... with holiday lighting (NAPS)—Those decorative lights you haul out of storage every year to brighten up your home for the holidays can do more than promote holiday cheer. According to the National Fire Protection Association, each year, holiday decorations and Christmas trees account for almost 2,000 fires and cause more than $41 million in property damage.

Giving holiday lights special attention before, during and after the season's celebrations is key. These tips can help you keep holiday lights shining brightly—and safely — throughout the season:

Conduct a pre-season review.

"Before putting up the lights, inspect them for frayed wires, bare spots, insulation gaps, broken or cracked sockets and excessive kinking or wear," recommends QBE Regional Insurance Senior Vice President Charles Valinotti. Use only lights tested and approved by an independent agency, such as Underwriters Laboratories, which is noted on the packaging. Consider light-emitting diode (LED) lights that aren't combustible and are more energy efficient than other types.

Celebrate safely with holiday lights. Don't link more than three light strands together unless the directions say it's safe to do so. Connect light strings to an extension cord before plugging them into an outlet. These precautions will help you avoid what happened to one customer who decorated a holiday tree using 1,300 lights powered by five plugs inserted into a single strip on one circuit. The resulting fire caused nearly $300,000 in damage.

Wrap up the holiday lighting season. Before packing up decorations for the season, reinspect and discard broken or faulty lights. "To save you time next year, separate outdoor from indoor lights and label them," suggests Valinotti. "Always store lights and other decorations away from kids, pets and water," he adds.

If you're among those who keep holiday lights up year-round, especially outdoors, you should re-think this practice. Wires exposed to the elements all year long could pose a constant threat of electrical shock or fire. "Holiday decorations are intended to be used only for a short time," explains Valinotti. "Keeping them up for several months or all year long exceeds safety limits and shortens their life span."

Keeping these hints in mind can help you have a happier holiday and a safer new year.

Stackhouse turns over command of NASWF's HT-28

By Jay Cope
NASWF PAO

Cmdr. Mathew Frost relieved Lt. Col. Clay Stackhouse as the commanding officer of Helicopter Training Squadron 28 (HT-28) Dec. 4 at 1 p.m. in the Naval Air Station Whiting Field (NASWF) Atrium building.

The change of command ceremony is a time-honored tradition that provides the assembled unit the opportunity to witness the transfer of authority from one officer to another. Passing the command from a Marine to a Navy officer is uncommon in military commands, but is the standard for HT-28; Frost turned over command to Lt. Col. Mark Thompson following his tour as commanding officer of the squadron.

During Stackhouse's 31-month tenure as executive officer and then commanding officer, the Hellions flew nearly 50,000 flight hours, more than 27,000 training evolutions and winged 321 Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and allied aviators. While he served as commanding officer of the squadron, the unit earned a grade of "outstanding" on two separate training inspections. He served as the squadron's first executive officer and second commanding officer and was instrumental in bringing the unit to full operational readiness.

Since graduating from the Naval Academy in 1990, Stackhouse completed basic and advanced flight training; served with Marine helicopter squadrons HMT-204 and HMM-261; and flew 24 missions with President Bill Clinton and three with President George W. Bush as a pilot with Marine 1. He also flew casualty evacuation missions in Iraq as the executive officer of Marine Wing Support Group 37. Stackhouse has accumulated more than 3,400 total flight hours and has flown nine different type/model/series of aircraft to include the CH-46E, CH-53E, UH-1N, AH-1W, VH-60N, and VH-3D.

Lt. Col. Clay Stackhouse

Frost takes command of the squadron after serving as the executive officer. This is his third term of duty at NAS Whiting Field having earned his wings at the base in 1993 and also serving as an instructor with Helicopter Training Squadron Eight where he earned the 2000 Instructor of the Year Award for Training Air Wing Five. He has also completed tours with Helicopter Combat Support Squadrons Three and 11 in California; served as the assistant air officer onboard USS Nassau (LHA 4), and been part of U.S. Central Command Headquarters in MacDill AFB in Tampa, Fla. Frost has flown more than 4,000 hours in various aircraft throughout his 18-year career.

Lt. Col. Mark Thompson will assume the duties as the new executive officer.

Col. Scott Walsh, Commander Training Air Wing Five, served as the guest speaker for the event.

Naval Hospital 2nd Class Petty Officers' Association packs holiday cheer for deployed shipmates

NHP PAO

Naval Hospital Pensacola's Second Class Petty Officers' Association (SCPOA), in conjunction with a Navy Medicine Pensacola spouses' organization, the Oak Leaf Club, and on behalf of the command and other volunteers, boxed-up "holiday care packages" for about 50 of their shipmates that are deployed anywhere in the world from Afghanistan and Iraq to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Some 30 volunteers from the Oak Leaf Club and the command — including their children boxed-up the care packages Dec. 5 in the hospital theater. The SCPOA

Lt. Cmdr. Tom Leach, officer in charge of the branch health clinic at Naval Air Technical Training Center, joined the SCPOA festivities and was among the 30 volunteers putting the final touches of the boxed holiday packages for mailing.

Navy corpsmen, HM1 Ronald Carasco (left) of Physical Therapy and HM1 Annal Eustaquio of Command Education, and her daughter, Maya, 15 months, were among some 30 volunteers last Saturday to participate in the boxing-up of "holiday care packages" to deployed personnel of the naval hospital. It's the second year the Second Class Petty Officers' Association has undertaken the effort.

has hosted care-packaging for colleagues for the last two years.

The SCPOA president, HM2 Toni Lee, took on the project because: "I know how important it is to have contact with people from home (while) deployed. It's stressful being away from your loved ones, especially for the holidays."

SCPOA is sending stockings, neck warmers, dried fruits/nuts, non-perishable food items, toiletries, movies and magazines ... "Anything that will bring comfort to them," said the respiratory therapist technician.

"We received donations from (the hospital) staff which has made this process possible and successful," says HM2 Lee.

Foodstuffs and canned food items are seen stockpiled for delivery to Warrington Emergency Aid Center.

Story, photo
by AZC (AW/SW) Owen Brown
NATTC PAO

Students and staff from Naval Air Technical Training Center (NATTC) continued their ever-present commitment to the community by donating canned food items assisting the Warrington Emergency Aid Center (WEAC).

A combined total of 6,630 lbs of canned food items were collected at various drop locations within NATTC during the last month. This surpasses last year's food drive weight of 2,700 pounds.

"The credit really goes out to the chiefs that organized and executed this food drive ... they ran with it and absolutely blew it out of the water. I am humbled by their achievement and hard work. This food will provide for hundreds that need a hand up," said John Semaan, the NATTC WEAC food drive coordinator.

WEAC was established in 1976 by the Warrington United Methodist Church. WEAC provides comfort of life items (food, clothing, etc.) to families or individual's in need. Since 1976, eight other Warrington district churches have joined in to support this wonderful and much needed assistance center. The acting WEAC coordinator is retired Navy Capt. M.E. Husted.

ECUA: Grease could potentially damage the sewer system

Sewer system and residential pipes are more prone to clog in the winter months

By Jim Roberts
Emerald Coast Utility Authority PAO

The Emerald Coast Utilities Authority's (ECUA) sewer system has experienced rapid growth in the past few years, primarily due to significant residential expansion, and the addition of new restaurants and businesses in the local community. The wastewater generated from these facilities can result in significant oil and grease issues for the ECUA's lift stations, pumps, and wastewater treatment plants.

On a daily basis, the ECUA wages a war against fats, oils, and grease (FOG), trying to keep these cooking by-products from entering into the wastewater collection and treatment systems. Large amounts of FOG in the wastewater causes blockages and decreases pipe capacity, and therefore, is a major cause of sewage spills and sewage backups in homes and businesses.

As the winter temperatures get colder, grease entering into the sewer system congeals in the interior of the pipes, which causes clogs or chokes. The pipe wall becomes so cold it solidifies the grease particles, requiring removal of the blockage and even sections of pipe. From Jan. 1-Nov. 1, 2009, more than 100 grease chokes were reported in the ECUA sewer system, requiring costly maintenance repairs.

To reduce the amount of FOG that enters into the Cooking oil disposal stations are located throughout Escambia County for FOG dropoff. One is planned for NAS Pensacola but until it is installed, base personnel should use the cooking oil disposal station at the ECUA Bayou Marcus facility. It is located at the intersection of Blue Angel Parkway and 3050 Fayal Drive. Photo courtesy of ECUA sewage system, homeowners and businesses are asked to adhere to the following methods when disposing of fats, oils and grease:

- Never pour FOG down the drain, sink or garbage disposal.
- Pour FOG into jars, cans, and plastic tubs. Let contents cool and solidify. When the container is full, throw away with your trash.
- Mix cooking oil with an absorbent material such as cat litter or coffee grounds, place in a container (lid securely fastened) for disposal with your trash.
- For greasy pans, pour off the grease into a container, and use a paper towel to wipe out the remaining grease in the pan prior to washing.
- Store the container in the freezer, which will keep the grease solid, and pull it out whenever you have fats, oils and grease to dispose of. When it gets full, dump the whole container into the trash.

The ECUA is aggressively working toward improving its environmental impact. Local business and residential customers are being encouraged to create a clean and safe environment through the FOG Education Program.

To learn more about the ECUA's environmental program, and receive additional information, visit www.ecua.org.

Free holiday music at naval air museum

From EW Bullock Associates

Kick off the holiday season at the National Naval Aviation Museum where there will be merry, seasonal sounds with two free concerts featuring the Pace High School Band at 11 a.m. today (Dec. 11) and the Navy New Orleans Show Band at 6 p.m. on Dec. 17.

Nate the Magician will be there to entertain families before each concert.

The Pace High School Patriot Band has built a tradition of excellence in all aspects of a high school program.

One of the four largest bands in Northwest Florida, they have been recognized as one of the finest in Florida and the Southeast.

The band has performed for thousands of people throughout the state of Florida and will bring an outstanding performance and holiday cheer to the museum on Dec. 11.

Also, join in the spirit of the holidays by donating to those less fortunate. The museum will be collecting toy donations for the U.S. Marine Corps Toys for Tots drive at this concert.

The Navy Band New Orleans Show Band will combine its Dixieland, traditional swing, jazz and big band music of America with traditional Christmas tunes for one memorable Christmas concert on Dec. 17.

Keeping with its tradition of musical excellence, the 16-member group will provide the audience with a virtuous display of diverse styles, celebrating America's rich musical heritage combined with the Christmas season.

For a complete list of events, exhibits and discounts at the Museum, visit www.NavalAviationMuseum.org or call the Naval Aviation Museum Foundation at 453-2389 or (800) 327-5002.

Pensacola Junior College presents the works of landscape photographer Daniel Ewert through Dec. 14 at the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts Gallery.

A local attorney who first took up photography as a hobby, Ewert is an internationally recognized nature photographer whose work has won many awards.

The gallery is located in Bldg. 15 on the Pensacola campus, at the corner of Ninth Avenue and Airport Boulevard. Hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

For more information, call 484-2550.

NASP Christmas holiday hours

The following is a partial list of Christmas holiday hours for Naval Air Station Pensacola facilities.

The commissary will close at 3 p.m. Dec. 24. The store will be closed Dec. 25 and will reopen at the regular time, 8 a.m., on Dec. 26.

The commissary will be closed on New Year's Day.
