Columbia College, Guantnamo Bay, conferred 32 Associate and 10 Bachelor degrees on students at its annual commencement ceremony held at the Naval Station Chapel on Sunday, Feb. 25.

The ceremony was a joint commencement for Columbia College and Washington State University.

Commander, Joint Task Force-Guantnamo, RADM Harry Harris Jr., was the guest speaker for the event. He commended the graduates for making concerted efforts in achieving their goals.

MA2 James Isabella spoke on behalf of the graduating class.

"While we all have different stories about how we were able to finish our degrees," he said, "what we all have in common is that it was a journey filled with hard work, ...and the determination to finish what we have started."

Mike Randerson, Columbia College vice president for adult higher education, conferred the degrees.

"For more than 30 years Columbia College has helped working adults and military personnel pursue college degrees," he said. "We're proud of the accomplishments of our area graduates."

Columbia College continues to serve military students and working adults in the area since its establishment in 2004. It provides accredited, affordable degrees for working adults and military students, serving nearly 25,000 students at its 32 Nationwide Campuses, Online Campus, Graduate Studies Program and Day Campus.

"I'm both proud to have finished my degree, and am looking forward to being able to apply these lessons learned in my future endeavors, both here and afterwards," said Isabella.

Family pays last respects to fallen aviator

Story by Stacey Byington, NAVSTA Public Affairs Officer

Forty years ago, on Feb. 27, 1967, LTJG David C. Morehouse, 23, a radar intercept officer in an F4B Phantom jet off the USS Forrestal (CVA 59), lost his life in an aircraft accident off the end of the Leeward airfield. The plane crashed into the sea, near the western boundary line between the station and mainland Cuba. Neither LTJG Morehouse's body nor the plane wreckage has ever been recovered.

This week, members of the Morehouse family and his widow visited Guantanamo Bay to pay their final respects, and to have a wreath-laying ceremony in honor of their family member.

"We are so thankful to the Navy for allowing us to come here," said Jack Morehouse, brother of David. "Shortly after the accident, there was a memorial service in Norfolk (Va.) that we all attended, but it was too soon. This is something I have wanted to do for a long time, but never thought we could get permission to come here."

Jack Morehouse wrote a letter to the Department of the Navy in May 2006 requesting permission to visit the base for the purpose of "meeting with a Chaplain, and to lay a wreath in the bay" commemorating the 40th anniversary of the tragic death of his brother. He asked if his brother's widow and his two sisters could come to the station with him.

Permission was given at the highest levels, and after months of coordination, the four Morehouse family members arrived in GTMO on Feb. 24. They came from across the country — brother Jack from Colorado; Jack's twin sister,

Jill Lecakes, from New York; oldest sister Merry Chellas from Alberta, Canada; and David's widow, Lyle Morehouse, from New Orleans.

They toured the station, spent some time on Leeward's Chapman Beach, the closest they could get to the accident site, and shopped in the NEX.

"Everyone has been so nice to us," said Jill. "This has been so healing. We finally get some closure."

On Tuesday morning, almost exactly 40 years to the minute of LTJG Morehouse's death, in a simple memorial on an MWR pontoon boat at the mouth of bay, the four Morehouse family members paid their last respects to a family member who died in the service of his country. After a few brief remarks by Chaplain James Goebel, and the 23rd Psalm, the family members, as a single unit, tossed a memorial wreath into the bay.

"My brother, Dave, was one of those young men setting out to make their mark on the world in the early 1960s," said Jack. "He lived his short life with great enjoyment and anticipation of what the future held. He was a 'striver,' always reaching for the moon."

Jack said that Dave, or 'Skeeter' as he was known by his family, always wanted to be an aviator. He said the last time he saw his brother was at his brother's wedding. "I attended his wedding to Lyle in November 1966, and noticed a certain maturity of conviction. The last time I saw him was when the newlyweds drove away in his little green MG sports car. We were proud of him for what he accomplished in his 23 years."

David Morehouse died just 19 days before his 24th birthday. He and Lyle had been married less than three months.

"This has been so great," said Lyle, referring to the visit to GTMO. "I never thought the Navy would let us come here. David was so full of life. That's one of the things I remember most about him. He was so full of life."

Jack summed up the visit as the family tossed the wreath into the bay, "Today we honor him on the 40th anniversary of his tragic accident. May he rest in peace."

"We want to thank everyone who had a part in allowing us to come to Guantanamo Bay," said Merry. "This has been so wonderful. Thank you. It is something we will all remember for the rest of our lives."

AACO hosts annual Dinner-Dance

The annual African-American Cultural Organization (AACO) Dinner-Dance is traditionally a formal-attire event. It is an evening set aside to celebrate African-American heritage, and Black History Month.

RDML Harry Harris Jr., Commander Joint Task Force-Guantanamo, and Army Chaplain Maj. James Evans were the principal speakers. CDR Sylvester Moore, NAVSTA Executive Officer, welcomed everyone to the event on behalf of CAPT Leary, who was off station, and unable to attend. Approximately 200 people attended the event.

In addition to providing an opportunity for the GTMO community to honor history and African-American heritage, the annual dinner-dance is also a time to reflect on past lessons learned and project them on future endeavors. The message theme for this year's event was Chaplain James Evans is the keynote speaker at the annual AACO Dinner-Dance held at the Windjammer ballroom, Feb. 24.

Unity through Diversity; Strength through Community.'

RDML Harris spoke about the contributions of African-Americans to the nation's history, and the military.

Chaplain Evans was the keynote speaker. He noted the struggles of African-American throughout history and reflected on how those struggles impact America's social and economic stance in the global front.

"It seems that a unifying truth is our common experiences," said Evans. "Unity around struggle, but diversity for the solution, the answers are diverse and differ in each community. There is no one solution."

Evans encouraged African-Americans to harness the lessons learned through history and use them as tools of empowerment to strive harder.

He also challenged the GTMO community saying that concerted efforts are needed from all in order to steer the community into a better future.

On behalf of Evans and the AACO, Bernard Harris, organization president, made a monetary donation to Cancer Treatment of America.

"It's a celebration of the many significant accomplishments of African Americans to the United States and abroad," said Harris.

"The Dinner-Dance is a renewal of commitment," he continued. "It's a commitment to work together, to support each other and improve our community."

Peanut butter pulled from commissary shelves

Submitted by LT Jasmine Caines, U.S. Naval Hospital, Guantanamo Bay

The Commissary has pulled from its shelves affected jars of Peter Pan Peanut Butter after a Food and Drug Administration warning that the product may be contaminated with Salmonella.

Residents are strongly encouraged to discard all jars of Peter Pan Peanut Butter with product code beginning with 2111.

The recall affects all jars purchased since May 2006.

The health warning was issued based on a just-released study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention which links 288 cases of foodborne illnesses in 39 states to consumption of Peter Pan Peanut Butter.

Symptoms of foodborne illnesses caused by Salmonella include fever, diarrhea and abdominal cramps.

Residents experiencing these symptoms after consuming peanut butter from potentially contaminated jars should contact the Primary Care Clinic to schedule an appointment with a provider

Opened and unopened jars of Peter Pan Peanut Butter with product code ending in 2111 can be returned to the Commissary for a full refund.

For more information contract the Preventive Medicine Department at 72990.
