'Semper Paratus' to make a splash

Story and photos by MC1 Robert Lamb, Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Coast Guard's motto is "Semper Paratus," meaning 'Always Ready,' and this motto was extremely appropriate last week as five of the world's most accomplished wakeboarders invaded Guantanamo Bay.

The five professional wakeboarders arrived at Guantanamo Bay with more than 40 pieces of luggage, boards, video cameras and an aspiration to showcase one of the world's fastest growing sports. But prior to getting on the water, they needed a very important piece of equipment — a very fast boat. And how does someone get a boat down to GTMO? They contact the Coast Guard of course.

Coastguardsman, Billy Marsh, attached to U.S. Coast Guard Port Security Unit 301 (PCU 301), based out of Cape Cod, Mass., along with MWR Director, Craig Basel, and MasterCraft boat company, collaborated in order to get a $95,000 speedboat on the barge and delivered to GTMO in time for the wakeboarders' exhibition.

Wakeboarding is a surface water sport which involves riding the wake of a speedboat on a single board. The faster the boat, the better the techniques. MWR rents boats at the Marina, but did not have the type of boat that two-time wakeboard champion Andrew Adkinson needed.

Adkinson, along with Pro Wakeboard Tour participants Keith Lyman, Zane Schwenk, Jack Blodgett and Mikey Marsh (younger brother to Coastguardsman Billy Marsh) gave five separate exhibitions throughout the week. MWR taxied large groups of spectators out to the old fuel pier, while others watched from the shore. For more than an hour each time, the riders flipped, swung and rolled their bodies,

Overseas assignments suitability results online

Story by MCC Teresa J. Frith, Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

Commands expecting incoming Sailors for overseas/remote duty assignments can now see suitability results in real time on BUPERS OnLine (BOL), effective April 9.

"Using BOL to report suitability takes about 15 seconds, which is far less than the time it takes to type and release a naval message," said Lynn Saarinen, Navy Personnel Command Overseas Screening coordinator. "The reliability of this system compared to the message system is a great benefit to the Navy."

Testing on the BOL application began in 2006 in selected geographic areas with a high volume of screenings conducted. Command career counselors (CCC) can access the application on BOL and fill in the pull-down menu items as appropriate. The move to online reporting makes it possible to update the database in 'real time,' according to Saarinen.

When a CCC records the information into BOL, gaining commands can immediately view the results. In addition, the primary officer and enlisted distribution systems are automatically updated informing the detailer of completion of screening.

According to Saarinen, feedback from the fleet on the new method is very positive. "The real-time display benefits the Sailor, the detailer and the gaining command," she said. "This makes it much easier to keep track of the Sailor's screening status."

Commands will still be required to provide personnel support detachments with the Report of Suitability for Overseas Assignment (NAVPERS 1300/16) signed by the medical facility and transferring command.

The current message reporting process will also remain an option for those commands without Internet access.

"It's important to note that reporting by Naval message is still active," said Saarinen. "Some ships suffer from non-existent or minimized connectivity. For those commands, reporting will be business as usual."

CAC card now a requirement to access PTS website

Story by MCC Teresa J. Frith, Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

Effective April 14, Sailors using the Perform to Serve (PTS) Web site will be required to log in using a Command Access Card (CAC) containing their Public Key Infrastructure (PKI) certificates.

The move was made as part of the Navy's ongoing fight against identity theft and to protect information contained in DoD Web sites and applications.

"The Navy is implementing this new security requirement in order to protect both the personal information of our Sailors and the integrity of our computer network resources," said Master Chief Navy Counselor (SW/AW) Jean Allie, Navy Personnel Command, PTS coordinator.

"This will strengthen the depth of Privacy Act and personal information protection in the PTS network."

The new security requirement restricts users from accessing the Web site from home unless they have a CAC reader installed on their home computers. PTS coordinators and the Navy's Customer Service Center are aware of the new condition and will work with users via email, as appropriate, to submit PTS applications.

Since its inception in 2003, PTS has helped balance Navy ratings, while giving first-term Sailors a solid career path before they can reenlist or negotiate transfer orders with their detailers.

"PTS allows Sailors the opportunity to convert from an overmanned rating to an undermanned rating or reenlist in their current undermanned rating," said Senior Chief Personnel Specialist (SW/AW) Ron Miller, Navy Personnel Command, PTS coordinator.

"Ultimately, this should increase advancement opportunities."

The new CAC login requirement will affect career counselors as well. "Career counselors are responsible for inputting their Sailors' information into PTS," added Miller.

"They should make sure they are holding regular career development boards, and getting their Sailors into PTS in a timely fashion (the time frame is 15 months prior to EAOS/12 months prior to PRD). They must update PTS monthly with any changes, and make sure their Sailors are qualified if applying for a conversion."

New CFSs learn to help others with money

Money. Perhaps there's never been a more intimidating adversary. People kill over it, fight for it, and divorce over it. Yet, many never learn to respect its power.

Paul Walker, NAVSTA Guantanamo Bay's Fleet and Family Service Center's (FFSC) Command Financial Specialist, has seen its' victims many times over, and he aims to combat the misuse of money with the best weapon he has — education.

This past week, Walker has used education to arm a group of 18 servicemembers to become Command Financial Specialists (CFSs) for their junior members, in the hope they will pass on the financial tools they are given.

"The Command Financial Specialist course gives these guys the tools so they can put on GMTs, provide education and training, and financial counseling," said Walker. "Personal finance is a readiness issue. It's tied into everything. If you are not soundly managing your finances, it can impact your personal well-being and your career."

MA1 (SW) Robert Mueller looks over financial case histories during the Command Financial Specialist Course, April 16. The students learned how to offer financial counseling to other servicemembers.

The CFS course is offered twice a year in GTMO. Students must be E-6 or above, and are required to have a year left at the command they are attached to.

"This is a Navy-wide instruction and program, so anyone trained here can also take the information on to their next command," added Walker.

"There are 14 different areas that make up the course curriculum," he said, "ranging from saving and investing, developing a financial plan, home and car buying, the Thrift Savings Plan, and military pay issues."

The newly trained CFSs are anxious to pass their newly learned information on.

"I am going to take it upon

Local activities promote Alcohol Awareness Month in GMTO

Story contributed by AD1 Corelle Street

Alcohol Awareness Month, sponsored by the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence, Inc. (NCADD) since 1987, is observed by communities throughout the United States and is a national grassroots effort to support research, education, intervention and treatment for alcoholism and alcohol-related problems.

Alcohol Awareness Month offers community organizations concerned about young people and families an opportunity to work together to not only raise awareness and understanding about the negative consequences of underage drinking, but to highlight the need for local action and intervention.

This year's theme — Together, We Can Stop Underage Drinking! — emphasizes the need for comprehensive efforts that involve citizens, organizations, law enforcement, media, and others in preventing underage drinking.

This month the Substance Abuse Rehabilitation Program (SARP), in conjunction with MWR and the FCPOA, has planned several alcohol free activities throughout the month to educate and promote alternate activities without the use of alcohol.

Underage drinking contributed to more than half of the command referrals to SARP in the past year. Scheduled below are the activities planned: April 21: Family Skate night sponsored by FCPOA April 21: and a Barracks Bash at the Cuzco Barracks for all unaccompanied personnel, sponsored by MWR.

For more information or if you wish to participate, please contact AD1 Street, or LT Otto at 72650 or 72128.

Residents need to be aware of GMTO's traffic rules and regulations

Story by MC1 Robert Lamb, Public Affairs Office

When servicemembers or civilians get stationed overseas, it's a good idea to be familiar with the laws and restrictions of that particular area, especially those relating to motor vehicle and traffic regulations. Everyone in Guantanamo Bay who owns or operates a motor vehicle should be familiar with the station motor vehicle and traffic regulations - NAVSTAINST 11200.1.

Station instructions are updated frequently with new information, and the motor vehicle and traffic regulations instruction is no exception. The latest update implements Department of the Navy traffic safety policy and regulations, and is consistent with the special circumstances of GTMO.

Some of the changes that may affect motor vehicles operators can be safety issues, such as motorcycles are now required to have their headlights on at all times, and all drivers are to comply with NAVSTA police members acting in the execution of their duties.

Everyone should know about the station speed limit - 25 mph on most roads, but many may not know there is a 10 mph or less restriction on any parking lot, pier or flight line. The use of cellular phones by the operator of a moving vehicle is prohibited, but using a hands-free cellular phone device, such as a console-dash mounted, or otherwise secured cellular phone while driving, is permissible.

Parking around GTMO and especially at Windward Ferry Landing has always been a topic of uncertainty for many residents. Long term parking (LTP) in all areas is defined as more than 72 hours, but not normally more than 30 days. In order to park a vehicle that is considered 'long term' operators must obtain a serialized 'Long Term Parking' placard from the Vehicle Registration Office, authorizing a specific parking space and period of time. An emergency point of contact must be provided in the event the vehicle needs to be removed from LTP. The placard must be visible in the parked vehicle, and must be removed and returned to the Vehicle Registration Office prior to expiration.

All accidents or collisions involving a motor vehicle must be reported to NAVSTA Police immediately. No person can leave the scene or move their vehicle in an accident or collision which involves death of any personnel, damages to government property in excess of $10,000, or damage to private property that exceeds $5,000.

Only NAVSTA Police are authorized to stop or detain persons suspected of violating traffic regulations, and issue citations, but what does the violator do with the ticket he or she has been issued?

They may be required to attend 'Traffic Review Board.'

Any member of the NAVSTA Police authorized by the Security Officer to issue traffic citations has the right to issue a DD Form 1408 (Armed Forces Traffic Ticket), upon reasonable belief of a traffic offense. A copy of the citation will be given to the driver or vehicle owner at the scene, or as soon as possible thereafter.

Upon receipt of a citation, the violator is advised of his or her right to an administrative hearing at the GTMO Traffic Review Board, and his or her right to plead 'no contest' and waive such a hearing. The violator shall also be advised of the number of points that will result from a "no contest" plea.

If the violator does not contest the citation and does not desire an administrative hearing, he or she shall write the words 'No contest' and sign the citation. If the violator does not enter a 'No contest' plea on the citation, the Security Officer will refer the citation to an administrative hearing. If the traffic violation is severe enough that a driver will or may lose his or her license, they will be advised that a mandatory appearance at the GTMO Traffic Review Board is required and the citation will be appropriately marked.

If points assessed put the driver over an individual limit of 12 points in 12 months, or 18 points in 24 months, there isn't any option to plead 'no contest.' They must attend Traffic Board. Points assessed to a driver's privileges can vary from 'Failure to initially register,' or 'Registration expired by 30 days' (3 Points), to 'Willful disobedience of NAVSTA Police during the performance of his official duties' (4 Points).

The Security Officer will revoke all driving privileges for a period of one year for any person who receives a liable finding from the Traffic Magistrate for the following offenses or violations:

- Manslaughter or negligent homicide resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle;
- Driving while intoxicated;
- Driving under the influence;
- Any felony in which a motor vehicle is used;
- Fleeing the scene or failure to report an accident resulting in the death or personal injury to any person;
- False statement to law enforcement or vehicle registration officials concerning — False statement to law enforcement or vehicle registration of

'Stash Your Cash' program offers savings

Story contributed by Navy Federal Credit Union

Navy Federal Credit Union's Guantanamo Bay branch office will participate in the fourth annual National Youth Saving Challenge with a goal of increasing youth's savings account balances during the week of April 22-28.

The theme of this year's challenge, 'Stash Your Cash,' encourages young credit union members to open savings accounts and/or make savings deposits during the week.

Young Navy Federal members who visit the branch office and make a $25 deposit into their savings account during the week will receive a 'Flexible Flyer.' Young members can also complete a 'Savings Challenge Pledge Card,' which will be displayed in the branch office.

The pledge card helps teach savings goals — kids state what they are saving for, how much they need to save, and when they plan to reach their savings goal.

Any member under the age of 18, who visits a Navy Federal branch office during Youth Saving Week, can fill out an entry form for a drawing to receive one of 25 $100 Easy Start Share Certificates.

The Youth Saving Challenge is intended to help credit unions such as Navy Federal build strong relationships with young members and their families. Educational materials are provided to help parents partner with Navy Federal in helping youth understand the importance of saving and how to best achieve their financial goals.

myself to give the information that I learn to junior sailors, so they feel comfortable with big purchases, and don't find themselves in a bind with indebtedness," said ET1 (SW/AW) Michael Schiltz, a student in the class. "We also have a financial spreadsheet that is geared toward military members. That's a useful tool to see where you are financially. I was looking forward to learning about that in particular."

"The Excel financial planning spreadsheet the Navy has developed is an important tool for the students to have," agreed Walker. "They are required to do one on themselves and then we sit down and review it. The idea is that they can sit down with someone and use the tool effectively."

Walker envisions his students leaving the course and operating as the first line of defense in educating junior personnel on any financial issue or answering any questions they might have concerning their finances.

"It's a collateral duty, but hopefully they will leave with the information they need to help the junior personnel," said Walker. "If it's a situation that requires a lot of their time and takes away from their mission, then they can refer their people out to me. We (FFSC) have many monthly classes about finances, and CFSs let them know what resources are available.

"The idea is the get people to take the initiative before they run into a problem," he added. "Oftentimes when people don't pay their debts, their commands get notified. We would like to see more people use the services, and be more proactive with their finances. They (the students) see in their daily lives with their own peers how important managing your finances is. A lot of people just don't know any better and they just need to learn how to make better choices."

"I am excited to take back what I learned to others, and having an impact by helping junior personnel make better choices with their money," said Schiltz, "Plan for the future. That's what we are aiming at."

Wakeboarders make a splash in GMTO ...

aspoline and not buzzing through the water at 40 plus mile per hour.

"The show the wakeboarders put on was a great one. It got better with every jump and trick they performed," said W.T. Sampson student, Joshua Blood. "They are truly professionals at what they do, and they showed that even when the water conditions weren't that good, they still did some pretty tight tricks."

In between practicing their techniques, putting on shows, and even teaching some servicemembers how to wakeboard, the athletes toured the base to meet other professionals who, too, at times, put their lives in compromising positions.

"One of the coolest things about being here in GTMO is the fact that we got to see the history, we got to see the sailors, soldiers and marines perform what they do on a daily basis," said Zane Schwenk, 2001 Wakeboard National Champion. "To see these sites and be here is incredible. Everyone we talked to said they loved being here. But there is some hard work going on here as well. It's really amazing what's going on here. I got goose-bumps when we heard the national anthem playing in the morning, and then to hear training going on at the firing range in the background. It's amazing what people are doing here."

The athletes reiterated time and again that they were honored and privileged to be in GTMO, but the sentiment was reciprocated by everyone who came out and witnessed the skills that the young men possess.

"It was great to see an impressive and fun sport being promoted by world class professionals here in GTMO," said Amy LeVault, who watch from the fuel pier, April 13. "The fact that they spent their off time in Cuba visiting the troopers at JTF, the Teen Center, and other residents of GTMO is truly a representation of the support for the military in America today. MWR offers an amazing variety of activities for us, one month a film festival, the next wake-boarders. Now that's a variety."

Years of practice have given these five professional wakeboarders opportunities to travel around the world and showcase their abilities to whomever wishes watch, but they also have a craving to teach others what they know.

"If we were fortunate enough to ever come back, we would like to take the time and bring people out on the water and teach them what we know," mentioned Schwenk. "Waterskiing, tubing, wakeboarding, I don't care, what ever we can do to come back, my schedule can be adjusted to come back here."

"It's unreal. I've been all over the world, and to see these people here and the support that they've shown us is great," said Jack Blodgett, professional wake-boarder and film producer. "If I could, I would come back in a heartbeat. It's our pleasure to come down here for the military."

ficials concerning ownership or operation of a motor vehicle;

— Unauthorized use of a motor vehicle belonging to another person, which does not amount to a felony; and

— Refusal to submit to 'implied consent' testing while driving while intoxicated, or driving while impaired by alcohol.

Because these five wakeboarders are on a professional tour that sends them around the world, it may be a while before they get back, but one person must stay behind and complete his military duties, Marsh, who was instrumental in getting these athletes here in the first place, will remain until June.

"These are the guys that I idolized when I was growing up, so it's awesome to have them down here sharing their knowledge and expertise with everyone," said Marsh.

Marsh is in GTMO performing his military obligations, but also takes time to participate in the sport he loves.

Many will find him out on the water practicing backrolls, boardslides and other techniques behind a rented MWR boat in the bay almost every weekend. He added that he follows the Coast Guards's motto "Semper Paratus," meaning "Always Ready," and is ready to teach what he knows about wakeboarding.

He says he is willing to spend some of his free time, and coordinate opportunities for service members and civilians to come out on the water and ride with him until his departure.

"I am very approachable and open to teaching and helping out anyone," said Marsh.

So if anyone wishes to pursue or attempt what they witnessed this past week, go for it!

(1) Girl Scout Leader's Day is April 22, 2007. Girl Scouts USA recently celebrated 95 years of leadership and service and the GTMO Girl Scout Committee is proud of the leaders who keep the program running strong. The Girl Scout leaders have volunteered countless hours to plan fun activities for the girls to develop strong, confident personalities. Thank you to our Sure Start Daisy Leaders — Heather Hartman and Kristen Swart, Kindergarten Daisy Leaders — Kathy Arlinghaus and Ronelle Givens; Brownie Leaders, — Teri Key and Jennifer Amaio; Junior Leaders — Anika Hickok, Susan Otto, Harriot Johnston and Gigi Miller; and our Cadette Leader — Cynthia Hardin. (1) Thank you to the GTMO Lifeguards for teaching the children to swim. To the Chapel and PWOC: Thank you for the blessing you have been on our family. To the GTMO School of Dance: we enjoyed our 2-½ years, thanks for the expertise and your devotion to the children. To the Hoofman family: The "big fish" got away, so we'll take a rain check on the fish-fry. Shout-out to the hard-working men and women of the BCO. To W.T. Sampson Elementary: Thanks for the dedication. To the Binning, Hausworth, Ivey, and Mueller families, and all our many GTMO friends: Thanks for all the great beach times and special memories. You all will be greatly missed. May God richly bless your families as you have blessed us. Till we meet again, Steven, Laura, Sarah, and Christopher Puchner.

(1) It sure doesn't feel like I've been here for three years, but it has. I'll miss my job. I have made a lot of friends and added to my extended family.
