By Mass Communication Specialist 3rd Class Leona Mynes

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba—In an effort to save lives and prevent injuries, the Naval Station's Safety Office invited base residents to attend the Summer Safety Standdown May 27 at the Windjammer Ballroom.

The Standdown officially kicks off the '101 Critical Days of Summer' campaign which runs from Memorial Day weekend to Labor Day weekend each year.

"The Safety Standdown is a requirement for the Navy," said Joe Perfetto, a Naval Station safety specialist. "We're doing the Summer Safety Standdown in conjunction with the beginning of the 101 Critical Days of Summer."

Summer is statistically when most mishaps occur involving military personnel.

"People are going on vacation, kids are getting out of school and when people go to the States, they're traveling at faster speeds

Navy releases advancement results Six advance at Naval Station

By Mass Communication Specialist 3rd Class Leona Mynes

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba—Six Naval Station Sailors were selected to advance to the next highest pay grade, according to the advancement exam results for the March cycle released May 27.

The Naval Station advanced 22 percent of test-passers. Approximately 15,000 Sailors advance from the March cycle Navy-wide.

"People 'staying Navy' puts more strain on the advancement opportunities for all Sailors in all pay grades," said Navy Career Counselor 1st Class Wayne

Saffle, the leading petty officer for the Naval Station Command Career Counselor Office. "For those that didn't advance this cycle, keep your heads up. The best advice I can give is to study for September's exam now."

For September's bibliography, profile sheet or quotas and percentages for advancement, visit <http://www.navyadvancement.com/> or <https://www.nko.navy.mil/>.

Sailor of the Week

“The American, by nature, is optimistic. He is experimental, an inventor and a builder who builds best when called upon to build greatly.” - President John F. Kennedy, Jr.

Ask the Chief

What do you look for during a personnel inspection?

When I do personnel inspections, I do them in a two stage process.

The first stage of the inspection is general; I do a quick inspection of the Sailor to ensure that there are not any obvious discrepancies that stand out.

In the second stage of the inspection, I look from head to toe checking for haircut, uniform neatness and accuracy of all items required for the uniform being inspected. I ensure that the uniform items are pressed and properly worn.

I also ensure that the boots or shoes the Sailor is wearing are at least blackened if not shined.

on the road,” said Perfetto. “We have a very good safety record at Guantanamo, and we want to maintain that.”

Several departments and divisions from Guantanamo attended the standdown to push their safety information to the community, including the dive locker, the veterinary clinic, the fire department, Public Works Department's self help workshop, the Naval Hospital, security, the Navy Exchange/Commissary and the American Red Cross. The departments handed out several flyers and information sheets with general safety information in various areas.

“This was a great training tool,” said Yeoman 2nd Class Candice Smith of the Naval Station administrative department. “It's important to learn about summer safety at Guantanamo because here, it's summer year-round.”

Distancing the Relationship

It is a proven fact that very few intimate relationships thrive when members of said relationships go into long periods of separation.

While many people can pick up the pieces when the separation is over, it seems that the relationship always holds scars for a long time.

God has made families and spouses for closeness and continual connectedness. Today, the central word is love; everyone is looking for love by other people. Many people think that the love of another person will essentially fulfill the missing components of being lonely or that it will be the answer for everything that is wrong in their life. It is a shock when their love goes off kilter.

When it does, so many people drop the relationship rather than try to work through it.

In Here and Now, a book by Henry Nouwen, it states: "The stronger our expectation that another human being will fulfill our deepest desires, the greater the pain is when we are confronted with the limitations of human relationships."

It is important that we go the distance to the highest degree possible and work through our limitations with those we love. God made men and women with imperfections. A solid relationship takes work and unconditional love by both partners, where each looks out for the other.

If either person holds selfishness in their heart, then in the areas where it is all about "me" and not about "we," you will find the most struggles.

Library turns on possibilities during TV turnoff week

By Mass Communication Specialist 3rd Class Leona Mynes

Guantanamo will celebrate TV Turnoff Week with three interactive events at the Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) Library June 1-3 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. each day.

The events are intended for all ages, and include board games, creating bookmarks and posters and decorating and planting flowers in a flower pot.

"We're encouraging people to do things other than watch TV," said Amy Webster, the MWR library director. "We're providing a place to get together and do that."

Webster said the event is intended for all-ages and can promote family togetherness and welfare, while introducing the library's collection to participants.

The library serves 350-400 personnel daily and has approximately 20,000 media resources, including fiction books, non-fiction books, young adult literature, children's books, DVD movies, DVD TV shows, documentaries and has the only public computer center on base.

For more information on TV turnoff week at the library, call 4700.

WIC Overseas Program offers new office hours

From Women, Infant and Children - Overseas Program

The Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) Overseas Program is a nutrition education and supplemental food program offered to members of the Armed Forces, civilian employees, contractors of the Department of Defense living overseas and their family members.

Pregnant and breast feeding women, infants up to one year and children up to 5 years of age may be eligible for benefits based on income and nutritional risk.

Women who are not breast feeding may be eligible for WIC up to six months after the baby is born. Other factors, such as family size and previous participation in a stateside WIC program, are also considered when determining eligibility.

The WIC Overseas program is designed to supplement the food you regularly buy with additional food items. Once you are in the program your nutrition counselor will customize diets to fit your family’s needs and lifestyle.

You receive an approved food list that specifies exactly which types and brands of food you can obtain that contributes to a healthy diet for you and your family.

WIC Overseas also provides nutritional screening and testing for your children. Research has shown the children benefiting from WIC in the U.S. eat more nutritious food and have reduced rates of iron deficiency anemia. In addition, better eating habits help children become better students.

If you have a question about WIC or think that you might be eligible for the program, please call Marty Bledsoe, a Registered Nurse, at 2186, or drop by the WIC office at Chapel Hill.

New office hours are Tuesday and Thursday, noon-4 p.m. and Wednesday, 4-6 p.m.

ET1 Michael Schiltz checks seismographic equipment at the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) site at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The equipment measures all plate movement in the Caribbean region, from small, unnoticed tremors to heavy earthquakes.

Seismic equipment measures what's shakin' in GTMO

By Chief Mass Communications Specialist (SW) Bill Mesta

Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba (GTMO) is home to a United States Geological Survey (USGS) broadband seismograph station.

The unmanned, satellite seismograph station is part of the Caribbean Early Warning Tsunami System for the Caribbean Basin and the Atlantic Region. The seismic equipment was installed at Guantanamo in 2007.

On Dec. 26, 2004 a 9.0-magnitude earthquake happened near the Sumatra-Andaman Islands in western Indonesia. This earthquake increased awareness of the destructive hazard posed by earthquakes and tsunamis. The United States government, working with international partners, responded with a real-time system that significantly improved global earthquake and tsunami monitoring along a major portion of the United States' coastal regions, the Caribbean Sea, the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean.

The seismograph station located at Guantanamo measures the activity in the Caribbean region.

The equipment is maintained solely by Electronics Technician 1st Class Michael Schiltz, who is assigned to the base's calibration lab.

"In the Caribbean, there are nine different locations that maintain seismograph stations," said Schiltz. "Because the base is located near a fault line in the Caribbean, the USGS decided to install one of the seismic stations here."

The equipment measures seismic activity near or at the base, which includes unnoticeable tremors to larger earthquakes, like the three earthquakes Guantanamo experienced March 20. The largest earthquake measured 5.6 on the Richter Magnitude Scale.

The seismic equipment transmitted that information to Boulder, Col., where the USGS analyzed the information.

A servicemember must be qualified to maintain the equipment because of the remote, isolated location in Guantanamo.

If the USGS is having problems receiving the seismic data from Guantanamo, they contact Schiltz and request assistance. Schiltz performs scheduled maintenance, repairs the equipment, adjusts the satellite antenna and replaces and calibrates the equipment's modem when needed.

"I was trained and certified to work on the equipment," said Schiltz. "I troubleshoot the equipment based on the USGS recommendations and use the parts provided to make necessary repairs."

Schiltz has been responsible for keeping the USGS seismograph station operating since it was installed in 2007.

For more information on earthquakes at Guantanamo and around the world, visit <http://www.usgs.gov> and click on the world map on the right side of the screen.
