

CHIEF PETTY OFFICERS

Happy 118th Birthday

Navy Chiefs:

More than rank, a life-long brotherhood

MC3 Leona Mynes

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Public Affairs

Members of the Guantanamo Bay chief petty officer (CPO) community stood tall this morning as the CPO mess came together to honor the national ensign at morning colors.

Today is the 118th birthday of U.S. Navy CPOs.

Their time-honored camaraderie and mutual respect for each other also stood tall. All of these Sailors took separate paths to the same juncture; all chose to undergo the U.S. Navy's CPO induction period, separating them from junior enlisted and bringing them into a life-long brotherhood.

With pressed khakis and combination covers, the Navy's desert camouflage uniforms, or smartly pressed civilian clothes, Chiefs and Chief retirees stood tucked away from the rest of the base at the Goat Locker.

Nestled behind other buildings and only noted by a sign at the end of a narrow road that winds back toward it, the Goat Locker is the gathering point for all CPOs on Guantanamo Bay. Its flagpole was manned by a CPO flag detail. All awaited the start of "The National Anthem."

This is not a normal Friday routine. Chiefs usually train junior Sailors to con-

The Navy Exchange (NEX) on Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, celebrated 65 years of supporting service members and their families with a cake cutting ceremony April 1.

The NEX is also holding several sales, giveaways and drawings for prizes throughout the rest of the year to commemorate the NEX system's 65th year, said Don Mohlman, general manager of the NEX on Guantanamo Bay.

"It doesn't stop with Friday," said Mohlman. "We decided we would do a local sale starting [March 30] and later in the year we will follow with Navy Exchange Command (NEXCOM)'s sales and specials."

The NEX was officially established on April 1, 1946, with the opening of a central office for the Navy Ships Store Office in Brooklyn, N.Y. The store was later renamed NEXCOM and relocated to Virginia Beach, Va., in 1993.

Today, NEXCOM provides oversight for 102 NEX complexes with nearly 300 stores, as well as Navy Lodges, ship's stores and the Uniform Program Management Office. Worldwide, NEXCOM employees more than 14,000 associates, 27 percent of whom are military family members.

THE SOAPBOX

What being a CHIEF is all about

MCC(SW) Bill Mesta

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba Public Affairs

After reading a recent article in a popular military tabloid (it rhymes with “Wavy Limes”), I thought this would be the perfect time to explain to everyone just what is a Chief Petty Officer.

To break the Navy’s leadership down into basic fundamentals, commissioned officers make policy and junior Sailors (E-1 to E-6) carry the load of executing the policies. The Chief is like a funnel in the middle of officers and junior Sailors that makes the policies work.

Deckplate leadership is expected from a Chief Petty Officer both up and down the Navy’s rank structure. The phrase, “ask the Chief,” is much more than a t-shirt design or a cool challenge coin logo. A Chief has a wealth of knowledge because we have been around for awhile and have the experience needed to get the job done.

As Chief Petty Officers, we have cleaned the commodes, stripped and waxed the decks, and washed dishes in a scolding hot scullery. We have been separated from loved ones for long periods of time, suffered personal crisis and tragedy, and stared down the barrel of that big fat zero in our bank accounts three days before payday.

Here is the key: While we have been through all the challenges as our junior Sailors, a Chief has demonstrated the ability to overcome these challenges while still being able to excel professionally at a high level. This is why you “ask the Chief.”

One of the unique charges a Chief takes on when they accept the responsibilities that comes with wearing the anchors is to train the Navy’s junior officers and provide advice and counsel for our senior officers. I can almost hear the cackles bristling as some officers read this. “No way is an enlisted servicemember going to tell me what is what.”

If you are cackling and bristling right now, refer back to paragraph three where the Chief has been around for awhile. If an officer’s policy fails, the Sailors who have been charged with carrying the mission out are going to suffer. And if the Sailors are unsuccessful when carrying out the a mission, then it is the Chief who has failed.

With this in mind, Chiefs know their Sailors and the greatness of their capabilities. As such, Chiefs are in the unique position to advise officers to take the best policy-making avenue that will help them reach their goals and carry out the mission successfully.

So now, you might be saying to yourself, “yeah, yeah, the Chief knows a lot, but he doesn’t know everything.”

Well, here’s a tid bit from inside the Goat Locker.

The Chief may not have all the answers, but the Chief’s Mess as a whole does. Any day, time, and place, there are other Chiefs I can reach out to for information or assistance.

The Chief’s Mess is literally a global network that is unified under a common goal: to do whatever it takes to ensure a Sailor’s professional and personal success, and ultimately, to carry out the Navy’s mission effectively and with honor.

To the junior Sailors who will soon replace us as Chiefs, it is in our best interest to mold you into strong and capable leaders, as you will have 118 years or so of tradition and success to maintain.

Happy Birthday brothers and sisters.

CHAPLAIN’S COLUMN

Our children are our future

Lt. Douglas Holmes

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, deputy command chaplain

I recently saw an Armed Forces Network commercial about smoking. A father is smoking on his back porch, and his child, watching him from inside the house, picks up an unlit cigarette and pretends to smoke like his father.

I thought how very true it is that children, especially young children, will follow the patterns that their parents set.

In Proverbs 22:6, God commands that parents make good decisions for their for the sake of their children. He says, “Train up a child in the way they should go, and when they are old, they will not depart from it.”

One passage in the Bible I take to heart is, “Honor your father and your mother, as the Lord, your God, has commanded you, so that you may live long and that it may go well with you.”

Thus, it is imperative that we lead our children well.

Parents, be proactive in your children’s lives. Lead them in three areas: First, make yourself the example they should aspire to become; second, find out who the child is and lead him or her based on what is best; third, create healthy, strong memories.

Memories are the best gift you can give a child. Memories cannot break or be discarded like material things. Memories will stay with a child throughout his or her life.

*Train up a
way they should go, and when they are old, they will not depart from it.*

Comedians of Chelsea Lately visit Guantanamo Bay

Comedians from E! Network's show, "Chelsea Lately," visited Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, on a tour sponsored by the United Services Organization (USO) and hosted locally by Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, March 25-27.

Chelsea Handler, Sarah Colonna, Josh Wolf, and Chris Franjola entertained troops at the Downtown Lyceum during a stand-up comedy show March 26.

"We heard that not many people come to Guantanamo Bay to entertain the troops," said Handler, who chose Guantanamo Bay as the location for her first USO tour. "I've always liked the underdog, so we came here."

More than 1,500 service members, Department of Defense civilians, contractors, and their family members attached to

of pace for Guantanamo residents, said Yeoman Seaman Richard Ledesma of NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba's commanding officer's administrative office.

"Everyone likes to laugh, so it was great to have four comedians come to Guantanamo Bay just for our enjoyment," said Ledesma. "Shows that come to Guantanamo Bay definitely boost our morale and gives us something new or different to do since this base is so isolated."

Handler said the service members on Guantanamo Bay were her priority for the visit.

"It's nice to come and show support to the troops and give them a break from what they are used to, especially when a lot of us aren't doing much of anything important in our own lives," said Handler.

Josh Wolf, a comedian who appears on Chelsea Lately, pauses during his stand-up routine to acknowledge someone in an ape suit who went on stage during his performance.

(1) Chris Franjola, a comedian who appears on Chelsea Lately, performs at the Downtown Lyceum.

(2) Sarah Colonna, a comedian who appears on Chelsea Lately, performs at the Downtown Lyceum.

Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and its tenant commands attended the event.

"Based on feedback I received over the last month, I knew many people were looking forward to the show and we expected a large turnout," said Amiee MacDonnell, the MWR community activities director. "[Handler] really showed appreciation to the troops by shaking hands, signing autographs, posing in photos, and finally, performing at the comedy show on Saturday night."

The USO contacted MWR Guantanamo Bay in November 2010 to book the show, said MacDonnell.

"We were excited to have the opportunity to host such a popular celebrity," said MacDonnell. "Prior to [their] arrival, MWR prepared by working with various departments across the base to set up interviews, meet-and-greets, tours, and the comedy show."

The show was a welcome change

What Guantanamo Sailors should know before applying for Early Career Transition Program

MC3 Leona Mynes

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba Public Affairs

The Navy's new Early Career Transition Program, announced in NAV-ADMIN 088/11, allows Sailors who meet eligibility requirements to transfer from active-duty service to the Navy Selective Reserves (SELRES).

"ECTP is a program other than the early separation program that allows you to transfer from active duty to the selective reserves," said Chief Navy Counselor Robert Pagtakhan, the command career counselor for NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Because Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, is a Department of Defense area tour, Sailors assigned here are not eligible for ECTP. Other disqualifying factors include Sailors who are under permanent change of station (PCS) orders, Sailors who have been selected to fill a global war on terror (GWOT) support assignment, or Sailors serving in a rating or holding a Navy Enlisted Classification listed in any enlistment bonus, selective re-enlistment bonus, or similar special and incentive pay program in effect at any time within the fiscal year of the request.

"I would recommend ECTP to people who have already completed the DoD tour," said Pagtakhan. "The bottom line, though, is that if your commanding officer can support your gapped billet, the bureau will most likely approve the transition."

Transferring to the SELRES provides Sailors with the same benefits and entitlements concerning use of the Navy Exchange and Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs, however, Sailors cannot receive medical care from the U.S. military unless in a "drilling" status – one weekend a month and two weeks per year, said Pagtakhan.

"Upon entering the SELRES, Sailors will keep their Post 9/11 or Montgomery G.I. Bill and gain another, but you need to enlist in SELRES for six years in that case," said Pagtakhan.

For more information on ECTP, visit www.npc.navy.mil, consult your chain of command, or call Pagtakhan at 4488.

USS Doyle makes final port visit, prepares for homecoming

MC3 Leona Mynes

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba Public Affairs

The guided-missile frigate USS Doyle (FFG 39) moored to wharf bravo on Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for a working port visit before returning to Mayport, Fla., March 28.

Doyle took on stores, and its crew cleaned and painted the ship, and made liberty calls while on Guantanamo Bay.

When Doyle returns to its homeport, it will have completed a six-month deployment to the Caribbean and eastern Pacific Ocean.

While deployed, Doyle conducted counter-narcoterrorism missions and made port visits to Guatemala, Costa Rica, Panama, and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, said Operations Specialist 2nd Class (SW) Nicholas Riggs, who was assigned to shore patrol during Doyle's port visit to Guantanamo.

NS Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, provided logistical support to Doyle. NS Guantanamo Bay's Port Operations personnel have assisted approximately 95 U.S. Navy, U.S. Coast Guard, and allied vessels in 2011.
