The Secretary of the Navy recognized Naval Air Station Key West's Environmental Division Thursday, announcing it had been selected as 2018 Secretary of the Navy Environmental Natural Resources Conservation - Small Installation Award Winner.

The annual environmental awards program recognizes

Navy and Marine Corps ships, installations and people for outstanding performance in promoting environmental stewardship. "Please join me in congratulating the following outstanding "best of the best" environmental stewards for receiving the 2018 SECNAV Environmental Awards," wrote RDML Bette Bolivar, Commander, Navy Region Southeast in a Bravo Zulu email.

In addition to NAS Key West, the Navy Vieques

Environmental Restoration Team, Puerto Rico, was recognized.

Awards are presented for accomplishments in natural resources conservation, cultural resources management, environmental quality, sustainability, environmental restoration, environmental excellence in weapon system acquisition, and environmental planning. By presenting the awards, SECNAV recognizes organizations and people who have made significant contributions in environmental areas.

NAS Key West is the Navy's premier East Coast pilot training facility for tactical aviation squadrons and also has a mission to support operational and readiness requirements for the DOD, Department of Homeland Security, National Guard units, federal agencies and Allied forces.

Focus groups hone climate survey results

BY MC3 ARNESIA MCINTYRE

Sailors and DOD employees assigned to NAS Key West recently completed a Defense Equal Opportunity Climate Survey.

"The survey paints a very clear picture to where our command climate is right at this moment," said HMCS Ocheltree, command climate specialist.

The Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute provides annual Organizational Climate Surveys that allow all Sailors and civilians to provide feedback on command issues.

The survey focuses mainly on three areas: Military equal opportunity, civilian equal employment opportunity and organizational effectiveness, Ocheltree said. Participants are able to characterize the command's readiness, formal and informal policies, practices and procedures that occur or are likely

Obey your conscience

The time has changed; the sun is now shining more. Well, we live in Key West, so it never really stopped shining. But you get the drift - spring has arrived.

We are deep into the season of Lent and I hope each and every one of you is growing in your faith as we approach the Easter holiday.

I have been thinking a lot lately about doing the right thing. There have been many times in my life that doing the wrong thing, or doing what someone else wanted, would have been much easier. It seems that this is a never ending process for me, and I assume it is with you as well.

I want to encourage you to listen to your instinct. When something does not seem right, it likely is not. Often this is going to be taking a stand that may not be popular.

If you do not take a stand it shows others your values.

The Coast Guard's core values are Honor, Respect and Devotion to Duty.

The Navy's core values are Honor, Courage and Commitment.

These values are both similar and they have themes in them, clearly honor is a theme.

In my last job I had a medical helicopter pilot tell me, as we were doing a check on something that had become redundant,

"Chaps, right is right 100 percent of the time."

I know this stemmed from the fact that one mistake could cause a mishap that could easily cause loss of life, including mine. What he said stuck with me and almost daily

I think about it. "Right is right." We know what we need to do, when we need to do it and how to properly execute what needs to be done.

When your integrity is challenged what are you doing? Are you doing what is right even when it hurts, even when you have to face a giant? When it may make you less popular?

You may lose friends who want you to stretch the truth, to look the other way, to go with the flow. But what are you sacrificing? Are lives in danger? Are you living up to the core values of the service in which you are serving?

If your faith is important to you, there are scriptures that offer guidance. When I think about what to do in a situation I compare and contrast to scripture. For me when I have to take a stand I think of James 4:17 says, "So whoever knows the right thing to do and fails to do it, for him it is sin."

Right is right. If you are facing a mountain that seems huge, no matter what it is, chaplains are here to help. We listen and can provide a confidential sounding board. If you are in need of chaplain care, please call your chaplains at 305-293-2318, Naval Air Station Key West, or 305-797-1211, Coast Guard Sector Key West. Visit our Facebook page - Truman Chapel NAS Key West - for upcoming events.

I want to encourage you to join us for Easter sunrise service at 7 a.m. on Truman Beach. A second Easter service is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. at the Sigsbee Park Community Center; it will be followed by a potluck and egg hunt for the children.

Incoming victim advocates complete SAPR Training

BY DANIELLE MARTIN, SARC
Fleet & Family Support Center

Fifteen military members and two DOD civilians recently completed the 40 hour Sexual Assault Prevention and Response training class for victim advocates.

The training covered a wide range of SAPR related topics and input from several guest speakers, including Naval Air Station Key West Detective Lee Anderson and Judge Advocate General Lt. Sara Wooten.

The SAPR VA fills a vital role in the delivery of services to victims of sexual assault.

The advocate is a primary source of information such as victim rights, military and community resources, as well as restricted and unrestricted reporting options.

SAPR VAs also support sexual assault prevention and intervention strategies at their commands.

If you are interested in learning more about becoming a SAPR VA, please call Danielle Martin at 305-293-2408, email

danielle.c.martin@navy.mil

or stop by the FFSC at 804 Sigsbee Road, Building V-4058. The next SAPRVA training class is scheduled for June 18 -22 at the FFSC.

The training comes as the DOD prepares for Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month in April. This year's SAAPM theme is "Protecting Our People Protects Our Mission."

Eliminating sexual assault requires every service member to be a steadfast participant in creating an appropriate and respectful culture and upholding

Navy core values.

Check with your installation Sexual Assault Response Coordinator, located at the Fleet and Family Support Center, if you would like to volunteer or participate in SAAPM activities.

If you are a victim of sexual assault 24/7 assistance is available.

Call the DOD Safe Helpline at 877-995-5247, NAS Key West SAPR VA 305-797-1408, or NAS Key West SARC 786-383-7873. In case of emergency, please dial 911.

Traumatic brain injury: Recognize the signs

FROM NAVAL HOSPITAL JACKSONVILLE

National Brain Injury Awareness Month is a time to recognize the millions of Americans living with traumatic brain injury-related disabilities.

TBI is caused by a bump, blow or jolt to the head, or penetrating head injury that disrupts the normal function of the brain. However not all blows or jolts to the head result in a TBI. It's a major cause of death and disability in the U.S., contributing to about 30 percent of all injury deaths each year, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"Everyone is at risk for a TBI, especially children and older adults," said Cmdr. Duneley Rochino, Naval Branch Health Clinic Key West officer in charge. "Know the signs and symptoms of TBI and seek proper care."

Physical signs and symptoms of TBI include headache, fuzzy or blurry vision, nausea or vomiting (early on), dizziness, sensitivity to noise or light, balance problems, or feeling tired or having no energy.

Some symptoms might appear right away, while others might not be noticed for days or months after injury. Children with a brain injury can have the same symptoms as adults, but it's often harder for them to let others know.

According to the CDC, about 75 percent of TBIs that occur each year are concussions or other forms of mild TBI. Repeated mild TBIs occurring over an extended period of time can result in cumulative neurological and cognitive deficits. Repeated mild TBIs occurring within short periods of time (hours, days, or weeks) can be catastrophic or fatal.

Leading causes of TBI include falls, being hit by an object, and motor vehicle crashes.

According to the Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center, active duty and reservists are at increased risk of sustaining a TBI compared to their civilian peers, as a result of several factors - demographics (age), operational and training activities and deployment to areas that put service members at risk for experiencing blast exposures, such as improvised explosive devices, suicide bombers, and grenades.

TBI is a serious condition. Individuals with suspected brain injuries should seek medical care immediately by contacting their Medical Home Port team to schedule an urgent care appointment, or for emergencies going to the emergency room or calling 911.

NBHC Key West patients can be evaluated by Naval Hospital Jacksonville's TBI screening program after receiving a consultation or referral from their Medical Home Port team.

For more information, visit the CDC website at <https://www.cdc.gov>.

to occur, such as co-worker relationships, awards and recognition, sexual harassment and sex discrimination, differential command behavior toward minorities, positive equal opportunity behaviors, racist behaviors, and religious, age and disability discrimination. DEOMI tabulates the information for a report that shows statistical data for each of the topics and demographics, he added.

Once the report comes back, the commanding officer, command climate specialist and the command resilience team analyze the reports and come up with questions to ask focus groups made up of the installation's Sailors and appeal to survey participants.

The team then attempts to determine, "Is this something valid or one or two people just complaining?" said Ocheltree

This year, the command had ten focus groups that discussed their concerns and made recommendations for improvements. There are suggested topics for the groups to cover, but no issue is off limits for discussion, Ocheltree noted.

During the focus group, command resilience team representative writes down anonymous statements and creates lists of what issues are troubling Sailors, as well as possible solutions. The list is then provided to CO for review.

The surveys are administered in different ways to

Last year, Ocheltree said NAS Key West was the first command in the DOD that offered multiple language surveys; they were in Spanish, Creole and English. In addition to last year's languages, surveys in French were introduced this year.

The Defense Equal Opportunity Climate Survey is designed to provide the CO with an anonymous way for Sailors and civilians to give input on various issues throughout the command. That input allows the command team to know what issues need addressing. Areas needing improvement are targeted with detailed recommendations.

Sailors take on OC spray as part of ASF training

BY MC3 ARNESIA MCINTYRE

A group of Sailors participated in the Security Department's infamous oleoresin capicum (OC) spray training course March 16.

The six are working toward becoming members of Naval Air Station Key West's Auxiliary Security Forces.

The three-week long Security Reaction Force - Basic course begins with familiarizing Sailors with the effects of OC, and what to do if they are exposed to it during an encounter.

The first week is made up of mechanical advantage control holds restraining techniques, the use of deadly force, proper use of the baton and the operation of OC spray. At the end of the week Sailors are sprayed and they complete obstacles, demonstrating verbal commands, take downs, baton strikes and defensive blocks.

The second week consists of training on the 9mm pistol and the M16 rifle. The last week is a combination of tactical communication, team movement and close-quarters combat.

ABE3 Joshua Jeffers, center, demonstrates proper striking techniques after being sprayed in the eyes with Oleoresin Capsicum spray during a Security Reaction Force-Basic course at Boca Chica baseball field.

in that it is enclaved within the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary and is located within two of the four regions of the state designated as an "Area of Critical State Concern" - Key West and Monroe County.

The Navy owns more than 12 distinct properties in the Florida Keys, occupying 6,400 acres, with over 20 miles of shoreline, according to NAS Key West Environmental Division Director Edward Barham. The largest property, Boca Chica Field, is more than 60 percent undeveloped wetlands, which supports a wide variety of native flora and fauna.

"NAS Key West is unique because we have requirements most other bases don't because we are in the middle of a marine sanctuary," Barham said.

"Our whole airfield is an endangered species habitat," he added.

The NAS Key West Integrated Natural

Resources Management Plan has identified 23 federally listed protected or endangered species on NAS Key West property, including 21 animals and two plants.

The critically endangered Lower Keys marsh rabbit, for example, is endemic to the Lower Florida Keys. NAS Key West is home to 15 percent population of the total marsh rabbit habitat, but hosts more than 60 percent of the total population.

"We've been applying for years. What made this package stand out was the airfield restoration project," said Barham.

The Boca Chica Field Clear Zones and Drainage System Restoration, which cost more than $50 million, was completed after nearly a decade of planning and construction,

The project opened up natural waterways that had been blocked decades earlier when runways were laid in preparation for WWII. The lagoons that formed supported the growth of mangroves.

The project included removing several hundred acres of mangroves. To offset that loss, about 100,000 plants were planted to mitigate the mangroves that were removed.

"This is the biggest wetland project the Florida Keys will ever see," Barham noted at the time of projects' completion in 2014.

Today, "we are seeing the results of mitigation, which takes a couple of years for vegetation to grow and survive," he said Thursday.

NAS Key West's Environmental Division consists of eight personnel who work to educate the public and base personnel on the installation's, mission to protect, preserve and conserve our nature environment through proper stewardship of natural resources.
