Boat company ships ammo, saves Army more than $200k

by Sgt. Lori Davis
USARSO Public Affairs Office

MINDI PIER - The 193rd Support Battalion saved the Army more than $200,000 by moving ammunition back to the states themselves.

Soldier-sailors from the 1097th Boat Company recently shipped 60,000 pounds of ammunition from Mindi Pier to Sunny Point, N.C., in the Landing Craft, Utility Five Forks, said SSgt. Shawn Trescott, transportation noncommissioned officer for the 193rd Spt. Bn.

The mission was an opportunity lift, which is shipping cargo on an empty vessel heading in the same direction, he said.

The Army usually pays private contractors to ship ammunition, but the LCUs have done the job much cheaper, he said. A study of the first LCU ammunition shipment in June showed a savings of more than $700,000.

Finding affordable ways to ship materials back to the states is an important part of supporting the Treaty Implementation Plan, 1st Lt. Philip Patterson, planning and transportation officer for the 193rd Spt. Bn., said.

"Reducing the amount of ammunition in Panama expedites the closure of the Ammunition Transfer Point at Fort Espinar," Patterson said. "It also reduces the amount of ammunition stored at the Rodman Ammunition Supply Point and the number of people needed to operate and guard it."

Air Force ball delights hundreds

by SSgt. Rian Clawson
24th Wing Public Affairs

HOWARD AFB - Nearly 300 people attended the annual Air Force Ball Saturday. Brig. Gen. David A. Sawyer was host for the evening, and joined other event officials who lauded the turnout and proclaimed the ball a "great success."

Army Maj. Gen. George A. Crocker, U.S. Army South commander, Joint Task Force Panama, was the special guest of the evening. Other distinguished guests included Brig. Gen. John Smith, U.S. Southern Command J-2 director and CSM James C. Williams, SOUTHCOM command sergeant major. Col. Craig A. Bernhard, vice wing commander, was master of ceremonies.

The 79th Army Band's show band, a 14-piece segment of the larger group, provided the evening's entertainment, a mixture of 50s and 60s rock 'n' roll and current salsa hits.

"The band was great, especially the horn and keyboard sections," said SMSgt. Mark C. Stevenson, who was in charge of the entertainment.

An evening highlight was when Sawyer led a 100-troop conga chain through the grand hall while the band played "Heard it Through the Grape Vine."

"Only the sour grapes remained in their seats," Stevenson added.

"We had a great turnout and everyone seemed to be having a good time," said MSgt. Dave Bright, another member of the A.F. Ball committee who attended the event. "I heard a lot of people saying they were really looking forward to next year's bash."

Air Force schedules mandatory flu shots

HOWARD AFB (24th Wing PA) - Mandatory flu shots for active duty Air Force members will be given at the theater here 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Oct. 4-8.

Shot records are not required to receive the vaccination.

Flu shots will be offered to family members in high risk categories depending on the vaccine's availability. This includes people age 65 or older and adults and children with chronic disorders of the pulmonary (including children with asthma) or cardiovascular systems.

Following is the schedule for unit vaccinations:

◆Oct. 4 - 24th Civil Engineering Squadron, 24th Logistics Squadron, 24th Air Postal Squadron, Phoenix Oak, and the Air Force Element of Southern Command.

◆Oct. 5 - 24th Security Police Squadron, 24th Wing, 24th Communications Group, and Air Rescue and Recovery.

◆Oct. 6 - 24th Morale, Welfare, Recreation and Services Squadron, 24th Mission Support Squadron, 24th Transportation Squadron, 310th Airlift Squadron, and 24th Contracting Squadron.

◆Oct. 7 - 24th Operations Support Squadron, 24th Air Intelligence Squadron, 24th Comptroller Squadron, and 24th Weather Squadron.

◆Oct. 8 - 617th Airlift Support Squadron and all units not named. This is also the makeup day for Air Force members who have not received a shot.

DEH to flush water at Quarry Heights

FORT CLAYTON (USARSO PAO) - The Directorate of Engineering and Housing will flush water mains 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday through Oct. 3, on Quarry Heights.

Water pressure will be low for no longer than one hour, DEH officials said.

Howard legal office starts unit program

HOWARD AFB (24th Wing PA) - The Howard AFB Legal Office is initiating a squadron lawyer program for the benefit of all units here and at Albrook AFS.

Under the plan, every squadron and tenant unit attached to the 24th Wing will have the opportunity to have a judge advocate assigned to their particular unit.

Maj. Margaret McCord, staff judge advocate, will match each of the other judge advocates on her staff with those units that logically fall within each lawyer's area of expertise.

The objective of the program is for the legal professionals to become sufficiently well recognized on base so that every customer will feel comfortable coming in for legal assistance. To accomplish this, lawyers will make themselves available for briefings at commanders calls and visits to their units.

The squadron lawyer will also become a resource so each unit has a point of contact in the legal office for any mission-related issue which might arise.

Commanders of the various squadrons and tenant units here and at Albrook interested in the program should sign their units up by calling the legal office, 284-4002.

New mobile Airman Leadership School premiers at Howard AFB

HOWARD AFB - Professional Military Education Instructors from four different state-side bases recently traveled here to do something that's never been done before in Air Combat Command. Their six-week temporary duty assignment was to teach a "mobile" Airman Leadership School to 36 members of the Howard community.

The motivation behind this novel approach to ALS was primarily financial, said MSgt. Clint Camac, commandant.

"It takes a lot less money for the Air Force to bring four military members here than it would to send 36 members back to the states."

ALS students were selected from all units here, with first priority going to staff sergeant selectees who had no PME.

"Changes in Air Force regulations now require staff sergeant selectees to graduate from ALS prior to sewing on their fourth stripe," said CMSgt. Ernest DalleMolle, manpower office chief. "That's why we gave them priority for attending this class."

"Our admission requirements were the same as any 'normal' ALS," Camac said. "Attendees must meet Air Force weight standards and must have a 5-skill level — if it's available in their Air Force Specialty Code."

ALS students also must not be on a control roster, under investigation or charged with an offense under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The ALS instructors' goal is to teach students to accept the greater responsibilities that come with being supervisors and raters. The curriculum demonstrates how enlisted members support and contribute to the fulfillment of the Air Force mission.

"We have classes on effective writing, public speaking, counseling, drill and ceremony, military citizenship and more," explained TSgt. Deb Barker Galaxy Flight instructor. "We focus on standards, discipline, policies and programs."

Another part of the ALS curriculum is physical conditioning. The class practices several days a week honing their volleyball (and teamwork) skills, in preparation for an Oct. 13 challenge match with the first sergeants and chiefs groups at the Big Tree Bohio.

Preparing for the mobile ALS was not a simple task, DalleMolle said. "A lot of people put a great deal of time and effort into this project," he said, "especially our ALS liaison, Tech Sergeant Annette Henry."

Henry was responsible for coordinating the base support, setting up the school facilities, smoothing out any last minute details, and greeting the ALS team upon its arrival, the chief explained.

"For nearly a year, Henry was the entire staff of Howard's former NCO preparatory course," he added. "Her in-depth knowledge of PME and the unique needs of an ALS made her the logical choice for the job."

The ALS class graduation is scheduled for Oct. 14 at the Albrook Club. The guest speaker will be CMSgt. Tommy Roberts, ACC senior enlisted advisor.

During the night's activities ALS officials will recognize the graduates and announce the John Levitow award winner, as well as distinguished graduates and the winner of the military citizenship award.

"This is a great opportunity for us to set the standards for future traveling ALS teams," Camac said. "The success we have with this class will lay the groundwork for all future ALS teams ACC sends out."

American Indian heritage celebrated

FORT CLAYTON (USARSO PAO) - History tells of a mysterious and often misunderstood people who were the first to walk the mountains, plains, arctic tundras and rain forests of the Americas.

By the time the first Europeans set foot in the new world, the cultures, traditions and ways of life of the Native American Indians were strong with family values, religion and a deep-rooted respect for each other and the natural surroundings.

These values were a constant throughout North, Central and South American Indians as were many forms of art, dress and folklore.

These are only some of what the American Indian Heritage celebration will cover Monday-Oct. 1 at Valent Recreation Center, Fort Clayton, said Maria Rios, program coordinator.

"During the week-long observance, there will be many artifacts, displays and activities for visitors to learn the history of the Indian people," Rios said. "The center will have a museum-type atmosphere where learning will be the number one priority."

The museum will be broken down into North, Central and South American cultures, she said. The displays will include donated artifacts, informative displays, crafts and models of such things as a tipi, pyramid and other Indian dwellings and religious structures, Rios explained.

"The North American Indian section will cover as many of the different Indian nations as possible with items from the Sioux, Navaho, Apache and others," said SSgt. Jane Usero, volunteer for the North American portion.

"It is impossible to cover all of the nations throughout North, Central and South America, but our goal is to give the visitor a well-rounded idea of the rich culture of the American Indian and dispel many of the stereotypes," she added.

The program will also introduce visitors to some of the many things Native Americans have contributed to the modern society of the Americas, Rios said.

"Many things we have today have been handed down from the Native American Indian and we don't even realize it," she added. "Many of the fruits and vegetables we enjoy came to us from the Indian people. Some of these will be available during the opening night celebration."

The opening night celebration will also feature guest speakers John Mann and Col. William Reeder, Indian music and dance, foodtasting, games, souvenir giveaways and a special 7:30 p.m. showing of Last of the Mohicans.

Opening night activities begin 6 p.m. Monday and the museum will be open 2-8 p.m. Tuesday-Friday for visitors. Last of the Mohicans will be presented 7:30 p.m. Monday and 6:30 p.m. Tuesday-Thursday and Dances With Wolves 6:30 p.m. Friday in the center's Screening Room. For more information, call Valent Recreation Center at 287-6500.

Joint effort evaluates Chagres River Bridge

CHAGRES RIVER (USARSO PAO) - Joint government of Panama and U.S. Army South nation assistance projects involve more than Fierres Caminos and Cosecha Amistad.

The Ministry of Public Works engineers and U.S. Army South divers recently joined efforts for an underwater evaluation of the Chagres River Bridge supporting structures at Boyd-Roosevelt Highway.

"MOP does not have the specialized personnel and equipment necessary to conduct underwater operations," said Guillermo Oro, MOP Maintenance Division chief. "As with all previous requests for assistance, the 536th Engineer Battalion (Heavy Equipment), 7th Engineer Detachment (Diving Team) helped us to complete our task."

"Both the river and the bridge are of vital importance to the canal and the cities of Colon and Panama. The river is essential for canal and navigational operations of vessels transiting the canal," Oro said. "The bridge links the multi-million dollar Free Zone and the provinces of Colon and Panama."

"This particular bridge requires close monitoring for two reasons. The uncontrolled extractions of material from the river cause the river basin to reach dangerously low levels," Oro said. "It also may cause the bridge supporting structures to separate, resulting in the entire structure being lifted or shifted from its original position."

"Secondly, the dam prevents the river from renewing and filling its basin with gravel, sand and other sediments as rivers without damming operations normally renew their basins."

After several diving operations, the USARSO divers reported the structure safe, said SSgt. Gordon Alberti, noncommissioned officer in charge of the diving mission.

The supporting structures are not separated from one another and the entire structure is securely embedded into ground, he explained.

Infantry soldiers work, play hard during training

by Spec. Robin A. Mantikoski
 USARSO Public Affairs Office

FORT SHERMAN - Soldiers from Company B, 5th Battalion, 87th Infantry (Light), worked and played hard during a day of company training on Fort Sherman last week when they rappelled, constructed single-rope bridges and made poncho rafts for water crossings.

The soldiers did more than train however—they got to test their newly learned skills against each other in squad competitions.

"This type of training breaks up the typical battle drill training," said 1st Sgt. Billy Hines. "It builds esprit de corps, motivation and gives (the soldiers) the confidence that they can work together as a team. It was hooah training."

During the rope bridge competition, the soldiers were split into squads to learn how to build the bridge and to cross it.

"We do a lot of water survival training in Panama," Hines said. "Soldiers have to know how to build these bridges because it's quicker to cross a river than to walk."

The squads were timed from when the squad leader picked up the rope to when the last squad members was pulled across the lagoon on the end of the rope.

"(This training) teaches them how to encounter any obstacle they meet and how to work together as a team," said SFC Robert Zayas, rope bridge instructor. "This teaches them that they can't let any obstacle hold them down."

The seven members from 1st squad, 2nd platoon, won by setting a new rope-bridge building record: three minutes and 13 seconds.

In another competition, two soldiers had to wrap their ruck sacks, weapons and helmets in their ponchos and swim with it for about 75 meters.

PFC Lewis Drake and Pvt. 2 Skipper T. Bowles carry their raft.

"The poncho raft is the ultimate," said Hines. "You wouldn't imagine it would float, but it does."

Pvt. 2 Kevin Reeder and Spec. Lawrence Davis won by completing the event in 5:13.

The soldiers liked the training because it was a break from the day-to-day grind and though they had learned these skills before, it was fun, said Sgt. Benjamin Duiker, squad leader.

"It was a nice, relaxed atmosphere, and it wasn't so much learning (the skills), it was doing it."

Kunas achieve rare level of hierarchy, autonomy

ISLA TIGRE, Panama (Reuters) - Kuna headman Ramon Alvarado holds court from a ceremonial hammock at the center of his tiny island-kingdom in the Caribbean Sea.

Smoke rises from his pipe as hundreds of intense Indian faces watch and wait from the shadows of a tropical night.

A nod. A word. His ruling is given: alcohol may be drunk at an upcoming festival, but only until midnight. The people leave without a murmur.

Elected headman or "primer sahila" for his wisdom and seniority, Alvarado is the undisputed final authority for 1,000 Panamanian Kuna Indians living on Isla Tigre, Spanish for Tiger Island.

Such rigid hierarchy is repeated along hundreds of semi-autonomous islands off Panama's northeastern coast that are home to some 40,000 Kunas.

It is the backbone of their success in achieving a level of self-rule rare on a continent infamous for the mistreatment and marginalization of its native peoples.

"Despite having a tiny population compared with other groups, the Kunas are better organized and more truly autonomous than any other indigenous population in Latin America," said Jose Isaac Acosta, a Panamanian academic specializing in Indian issues.

The Kunas are easily recognizable by their high-boned, sculpted features, short black hair, stocky figures and bright costumes bedecked with "mola" weavings that depict legends and nature. Women wear gold rings in their noses and bead decorations bound to their limbs in childhood.

Their islands, bordered with bone-white sand and covered in palm trees, vary from densely packed, bamboo-hut villages to the tiniest plots.

The whole archipelago — known as San Blas in Spanish and Kuna Yala in their native language — is a self-governing region with minimal interference from Panama City authorities.

Exempt from paying taxes to the central government, the Kunas have their own laws and authorities, often with subtle and complicated variations from island to island.

This autonomy, enshrined in a 1953 law, was won after a long and bitter struggle with Panamanian authorities for the first half of the century. The Kunas regard a 1925 uprising in which 27 soldiers and Indians died as the "revolution" which secured their semi-independence.

They also fought off various incursions by the Spanish conquistadores after their migration from South America in the 16th century.

The Kunas' world is not, however, the unblemished paradise it may seem at first sight.

Drug abuse is on the rise thanks to the abundance of illegal shipments sent through San Blas from Colombia to Central America.

Crime has gone up in recent years as more Kunas spend time in Panama City, only to return with the capital's bad habits.

And malnutrition caused by a fixed, unbalanced diet of rice, coconuts and seafood affects 70 percent of schoolchildren, according to Acosta, while illiteracy is 50 percent

Kuna women carries a dinner crab on the beach. among men and almost 80 percent among women.

"We are happy here, but life is not perfect," said Kuna fisherman Alfonso Stocel.

The internal Kuna economy is a socialist model without the ideology.

Goods are swapped more often than purchased — a dozen coconuts for a reed basket, a lobster for a shark-tooth necklace. Some fertile islands are rotated among families on a monthly basis. Communal labor is obligatory in some villages.

Contact with the outside world is limited to a thriving business with Colombian merchants sailing through their waters and tourists allowed to visit a few more westernized islands.

The Kunas' existence as a state-within-a-state has been a catalyst for the growing activism this year of Panama's approximately 8 percent indigenous population.

Guaymi, Embera and other tribes have been pressing for similar autonomy to the Kunas with a protest campaign that has included closing the PanAmerican Highway and kidnapping a provincial governor.

The Kunas are also winning increased attention from other Latin American tribes striving for similar conditions and from international forums studying indigenous issues.

"We are a model for the continent," said Kuna activist Atencio Lopez on a brief stopover in Panama City between a U.N. conference in Vienna and a university forum in San Francisco.

International committee recommends building new Panama Canal locks

PANAMA CITY (Reuters) - An international committee has recommended building a new $7 billion set of locks at the Panama Canal to cope with more and bigger ships in the 21st century, Panama said Sept. 17.

Panamanian, Japanese and U.S. officials on the tripartite Panama Canal Alternative Study Commission chose the locks option over a rival plan for a second waterway 11 miles west of the existing canal.

The proposed new locks would take 10 years to build, create 14,000 jobs and accommodate boats up to 150,000 tons, Panama's chief representative on the commission, Guillermo Quijano, told a news conference.

The existing locks, which lift ships from the Atlantic and Pacific seas to a raised, fresh-water channel across Panama, cannot cope with boats over 65,000 tons.

The long-awaited recommendation by the commission, which has been studying the problem for 31/2 years, was outlined by Quijano ahead of a formal announcement by all three countries scheduled for Monday.

Quijano, who is also Panama's housing minister, said the locks option was chosen because it was more cost-effective and less damaging to the environment than a second canal.

The plan will remain on the drawing board, however, if funding cannot be found or it is not supported by the winners of Panama's May 1994 general election.

Quijano said the canal's biggest users — the United States and Japan — would have to provide most of the funding. Tariffs might be raised by up to 100 percent to defray costs, he said.

The locks would be built parallel to the existing locks at four points along the waterway.

Panama, which has never managed the canal since its opening, is due to take over control from the United States Dec. 31, 1999 under the 1977 Panama Canal Treaties.

Cargo passage is projected to grow 1.5 percent annually up to 2000, then 2 percent annually until 2010. About 12,500 ships pass through the canal every year.

Central American police step up drug trafficking war

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (Reuters) - Central American police chiefs agreed Sunday to step up regional cooperation in the fight against drug trafficking.

They said a regional commission would be set up and headed by top anti-narcotics officials from each country to map out a program to hit back at drug traffickers and improve the exchange of information between the area's police forces.

More than 300 tons of cocaine was pushed through Central America to the United States last year, according to official statistics. Most of it comes from Colombia and passes from Central America through Mexico.

"We are cooperating more and more because the systems used by the traffickers are in some cases very sophisticated," Col. Mario Hung, commander of Honduras' public security forces, told Reuters at the end of a three-day meeting of senior Central American police chiefs in Nicaragua.

The meeting also focused on how to tackle a growing trade in stolen cars.

It brought together officials from Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama. Delegates from Guatemala and Mexico were also invited but officials said bad weather canceled their flights into Nicaragua.

Exiled Aristide wants Haiti's violence stopped

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Haiti's exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide Tuesday said he wants the resumption of United Nations sanctions to force the "killers" who head the country's army and police to halt widespread violence.

Although stopping short of calling on the United Nations to resume a recent arms and trade embargo on Haiti, he said the U.N.-brokered Governors Island accords to return him to power Oct. 30 stipulate that sanctions should be restored if violence was not stopped.

"I respect the Governors Island accords and therefore I am in favor of resuming sanctions," he told a news conference.

"Cedras is a killer, Francois is a killer," he said of army chief Gen. Raoul Cedras and police chief Col. Michel Francois. "Remove the killers immediately."

Bullet-riddled corpses are turning up on a daily basis in Port-au-Prince, the capital of Haiti, in what human rights activists call the worst violence since the September 1991 coup that toppled Aristide.

Under the U.N. plan Aristide — now living in exile in Washington — is to be restored in the presidency and Cedras, one of the leaders of the coup, must step down.

Fujimori pushes for new constitution in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) - President Alberto Fujimori has set Oct. 31 as the date for a referendum on a new constitution that would authorize the death penalty for guerrilla leaders and allow presidents to seek consecutive terms.

Fujimori, speaking in a late-night television interview Sunday, said he would campaign for approval of the new constitution.

If approved, it would replace the 1979 constitution that Fujimori suspended in April 1992 when he closed Congress. Fujimori had alleged that corruption in Congress was blocking his efforts to fight terrorism and drug trafficking.

The old constitution limited the maximum prison terms for guerrillas and drug traffickers to 25 years, although the stiffest penalty was rarely imposed.

The 1979 constitution also would require Fujimori to sit out a five-year term before running for president again. Fujimori's term expires in 1995.

The proposed new constitution would allow life sentences for drug traffickers and the death penalty for guerrilla leaders.

It would also roll back protection for workers' job rights, and limit state involvement in the economy to providing such basic services as health, education and defense.

Senate approves closing, reduction list

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The Senate cleared the way Monday for the post-Cold War closing or reduction of 175 U.S. military installations at a cost of more than 150,000 jobs.

It rejected by an 83-12 vote, a proposed congressional veto of a presidential commission's plan to close 35 major military bases and 95 small ones, and scale back 45 others.

The Senate vote completed Congress's action because the veto needed approval of both the House and Senate.

The vote will close three Air Force bases, one Army base and 30 Navy bases including the Charleston, S.C., and Mare Island, Calif., shipyards and naval training centers at San Diego, Calif., and Orlando, Fla.

The veto was proposed by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., who said the base cuts will cost 100,000 civilian jobs in California, 70,000 of them in the San Francisco bay area.

She told the Senate the cuts will cost California's economy $4 billion and said the commission makes such base cuts without regard to economic pain.

"It is almost like a doomsday machine," she said. "It goes on and on and on regardless of what happens."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said shutdown of both the Charleston naval shipyard and naval base will put 50,000 civilians out of work.

But Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the new cuts plus two earlier base commission plans to cut 250 bases will save an estimated $49 billion over 20 years.

If Congress refused to cut the bases because of hometown pain, he said, those savings would have to be cut out of military readiness.

The cuts were made by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission, subject to the president's and Congress's veto, because members of Congress had been unwilling to make base cuts hurting constituents.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin told a Senate subcommittee last week that another round of base cuts in 1995 will almost certainly be even deeper.

Aspin had proposed that 31 major bases be closed and 134 others be reduced this year but the commission recommended additional cuts or reductions on its own.

The Air Force will lose its Plattsburgh, N.Y., Newark, Ohio, and K.I. Sawyer, Mich., air bases.

The Army will lose its Vint Hill Farms intelligence base in Virginia.

In addition to the shipyards and training centers, the Navy will lose major air stations at Alameda, Calif., Cecil Field, Fla., Agana at Guam, and Midway Island and naval bases at Mobile, Ala., Staten Island, N.Y., New London, Conn., and Treasure Island at San Francisco.

The Marine Corps will lose its air station at El Toro, Calif.

Citadel, women claim court win

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - The Citadel has won a round in its fight to keep women out of its all-male day classes, but women who sued the state-supported military college see a partial victory in a judge's ruling.

U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck on Monday dismissed a lawsuit brought by three women Navy veterans. He said it was moot because the college had closed the program the women wanted to enter.

The state-supported military college had allowed male veterans to attend regular day classes with cadets, but it abolished that program when the women sued to attend those classes in June 1992.

The Citadel does allow women to attend its evening college program, but while it offers 17 majors during the day there are only three at night. And it also takes longer to earn an evening degree.

Houck did not order the day classes reopened to veterans, but he told The Citadel to help the women pursue degrees equivalent to its day-program degrees through the evening program and courses at other colleges.

The school will provide the same help it gave male veterans after the day program was closed to them, Citadel spokesman Rick Mill said Tuesday.

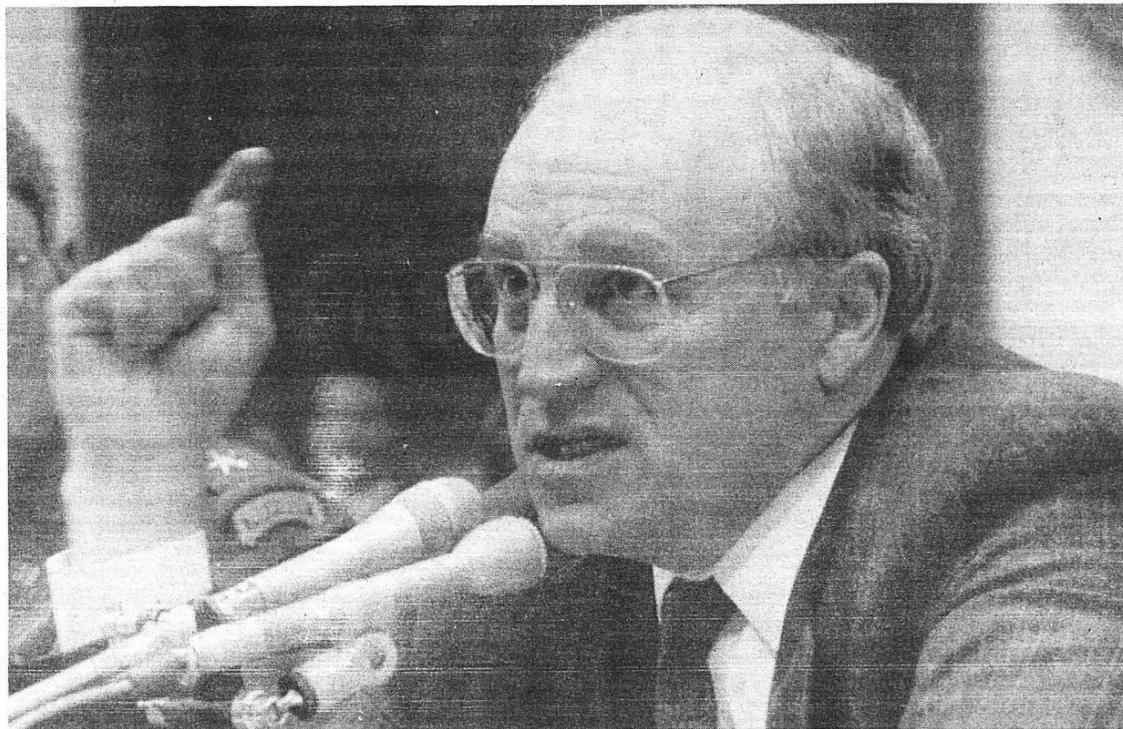

The school promised the men it would do "whatever was necessary" to make sure they could complete the coursework in the normal time expected for the day program. That included such things as making it easier to transfer credits from other area colleges, Mill said.

"If it meant even scheduling a professor one on one with a student to complete a course the student needs, we'd do that," Mill said.

Houck said he wanted to hear any complaints if the women weren't given help earning their degrees.

"Now we have the rights and benefits of attending the day classes," said one of the plaintiffs, Angela Chapman.

But Valerie Vojdick, an attorney for the plaintiffs, said an appeal was planned anyway. "We don't believe they can close the program to all veteran students for the purpose of not admitting women," she said.

Former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney will be testifying for the government in a $1.6 billion lawsuit by McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics, who blame the Navy for cost overruns in the A-12 program.

Cheney testifying in A-12 lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) The price tag on the Navy's A-12 attack jet soared and the delivery date kept slipping, but the $3 billion question remains: Why was the plane canceled?

McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics say that then-Defense Secretary Dick Cheney scrapped the A-12 program in 1991 to help the Bush administration deliver its touted peace dividend and that Cheney pressured the Navy rear admiral overseeing the program to find the companies in default.

But the government denies it, saying it canceled the program because the contractors couldn't deliver a good airplane.

Cost estimates had reached $14 billion — $9 billion above the contract price — by the time the plane was canceled, Justice Department lawyer Anthony Anikeeff said at the start of a trial in the U.S. Court of Claims.

The plane was too heavy and the program way behind schedule, Anikeeff added.

But the companies — who have sued the government for $1.6 billion — say the Navy was responsible for the delays and the price increases. The government says the companies must refund $1.4 billion because they defaulted on their contract.

The A-12, canceled Jan. 7, 1991, was to have been the centerpiece for the Navy's aircraft carriers through the turn of the century.

The Pentagon "mortgaged the future of Navy aviation on the A-12," but Cheney was under pressure to reduce the budget and canceling the A-12 would help solve the problem, said David Churchill, a lawyer representing McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics.

Cheney is among the scheduled witnesses in the case before Judge Robert Hodges.

BALBOA - The Balboa Red Machine jumped to an early lead and then held on during a bumpy second half edging the Kiwanis Kolts 15-6 Sept. 16 at Balboa Stadium.

The win was the first for the Red Machine who lost to the Cristobal Tigers in week one. A 38-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Chris Corrigan to Efrain Sanchez on the opening drive put the Red Machine up 6-0.

Corrigan drilled Sanchez on an inside post pattern. Sanchez fought off a defender, bobbled the ball, regained control and sprinted into the end zone for the score.

On the point after attempt, Chad Graham snatched up a mishandled snap and ran it in for a two-point conversion.

The next score came in the second quarter on an H.B. Twohy two-yard run. Mike Bleichwehl added the extra point to give the Red Machine a 15-0 lead.

A fumble and what Red Machine coach Rick Dahlstrom called "too many mental mistakes" turned the tide in the second half.

A game-ending injury to the game's leading rusher Joe Gutierrez (55 yards on 9 carries in the first half) didn't help either.

"We controlled the game in the first half," Dahlstrom said. "We missed opportunities and had touchdowns called back. It could've been 30-0 at the half. The Kolts dominated us in the second half, though."

One mistake was a fumble on a punt return by Sanchez. The Kolts took over deep in Red Machine territory. New quarterback Raul Ford got the Kolts down to the 15, but a fumble on fourth down turned over the ball early in the fourth quarter.

The Kolts made up for it midway through the quarter. Following a fumble by Corrigan, the Kolts got going.

Ford opened up the air assault with a 34-yard touchdown to Raul Chanis. Chanis beat the coverage and ran in the end zone nearly untouched.

The two-point conversion failed, leaving the Kolts down 15-6 with 6:43 left.

After stopping the Red Machine on the next possession, the Kolts drove again. Ford hit Ricardo Zarak on a 29-yarder to put the Kolts into Bulldog territory again.

The Red Machine defense stepped up.

Kiwanis Kolts' cheerleaders Ana Melissa Ramos and Anisabel Poveda cheer the team following Raul Chanis' touchdown in the fourth quarter.

On second down, Ford went deep just overthrowing Chanis in the end zone. The Kolts wouldn't get close to scoring again.

The Kolts impressed Dahlstrom.

"You have to give them of credit," Dahlstrom said. "They had a lot to prove tonight. they got beat badly in their first game and made it really hard on us."

In action Sept. 17, the Cristobal Tigers (2-0) beat the Curundu Cougars (0-2) 27-14. Running back Corey Townsend ran for two TDs for 170 yards on 22 carries. The Balboa Bulldogs (2-0) won a 7-0 battle over the Panama Canal Green Devils (1-1). Price broke up a scoreless battle on a 65-yard second-quarter touchdown.

Tonight the Tigers play host to the Green Devils at 5:30 p.m. The Cougars will be looking for win one against the Red Machine at 5:30 p.m. tonight at Balboa Stadium. The late game pits the Balboa Bulldogs against the Kolts at 7 p.m.

Competition fueling girls' hoops season

by Sgt. Richard Puckett
Tropic Times Sports Editor

BALBOA - Every week as the boys' football teams wage war on the gridiron, inside the gyms of Balboa, Curundu and Cristobal another battle is going on.

A battle for respect.

Wednesday night the battle began anew as the girls' basketball season tipped off.

And although the fans aren't packing the stands and the cheerleaders aren't motivating the stars, the games go on.

This season the games could be some of the most competitive in several years, say the coaches of the five girls' teams.

The coaches are giving early high marks to the Balboa Red Machine, Panama Canal Green Devils and the Curundu Cougars. But the defending champion Balboa Bulldogs and 1992 second place Cristobal Tigers aren't out of the running. There's a lot of basketball to be played.

The teams got a chance to test each other out Sept. 17 during the Jamboree. Although the games were just exhibition matchups, it gave the coaches a chance to evaluate strengths and weaknesses.

One of the things all the teams are lacking is veteran starters. The Green Devils may have an edge in that department. Three regulars will be returning for coach Paul Schulte. Audry Ernest, Michelle Womble and Camina Stephenson are expected to take a leadership role for the Devils, Schulte said.

"I expect to win the title," he said. "I'm optimistic. We have quite a few girls who haven't played before, but there is also a stable base with my top three."

The Green Devils will be starting the season with a controlled, slow-paced offense, but that could change, Schulte said.

"There are a couple teams that like to go at a fast pace," he said. "We have to control the boards to control the tempo of the game. I'm concerned about our lack of height. Hopefully, our experience and balance will be good enough to carry us through."

Another team with veteran players returning is the Cougars. Coach Dave Moffett is expecting good things from his three returners forward Abby Higgle and guards Jill Hauser and Jessica Penkoske.

"I was really happy with what I saw at the Jamboree," Moffett said. "They showed a lot of teamwork and hustle. We got a lot of second and third shots thanks to offensive boards."

Moffett said controlling the boards will be a big factor for his team.

"Our defense needs work, so our offense will have to be strong, especially on rebounding," he said. "We're strong down low and I think that will help out a lot."

The other big gun is the Red Machine. Coach Cecil Williams is expecting a successful season from his squad. The Red Machine lost to the Bulldogs in the season-ending tournament final in 1992. Williams is shooting for bigger things this time around.

Williams doesn't have a deep pool of talent, but thinks his team has the edge in competitiveness.

"We don't have a lot of height or one or two stars," Williams said. "We play well together and have a strong defense. That will be our best area."

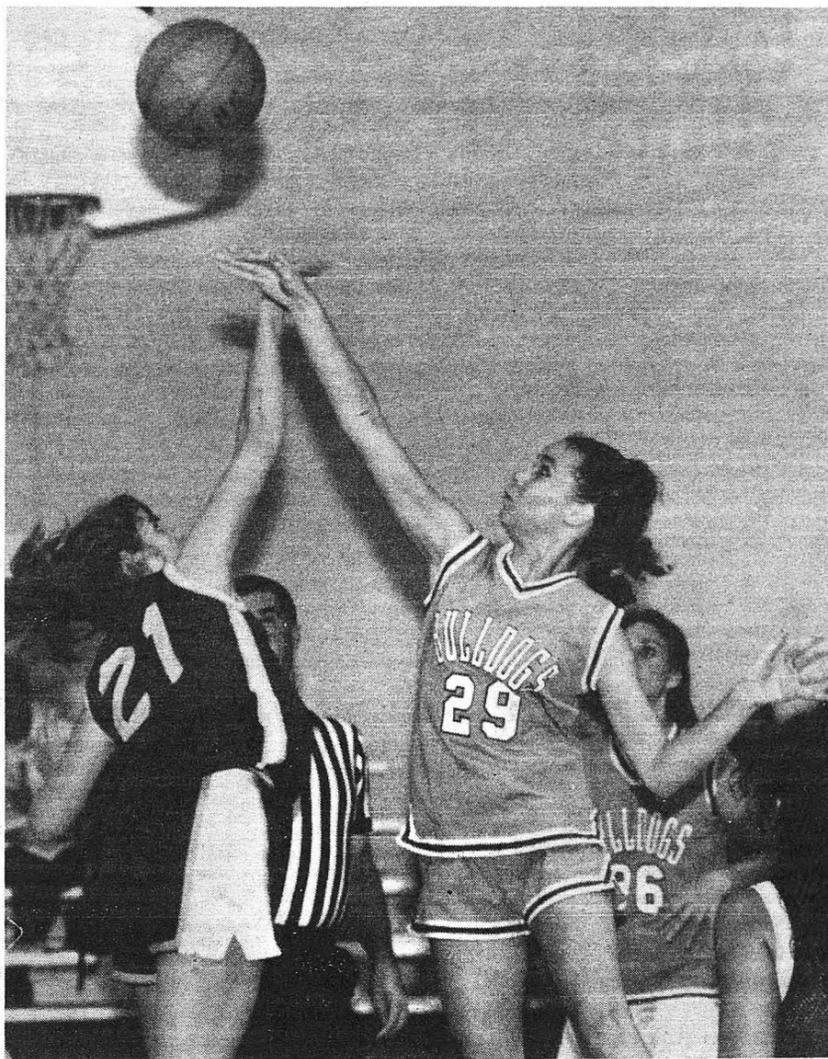

Williams likes his team's shooting, but credits the team speed and heart as key.

"We can play a transition game at anytime," he said. "We're sticking to the fundamentals of the game and try to amplify our strong points."

The defending champion Bulldogs are looking for some strong points. After losing most of his 1992 team, Coach Cleve Oliver is viewing 1993 as a rebuilding year. Having one of his top players (Beth Larrabee) out for several weeks doesn't help matters.

"We have one of the least experienced teams in the league," Oliver said. "We did surprisingly well during the Jamboree and hopefully we can build on that."

A lack of size and quickness hurts the Bulldogs, but Oliver thinks the team can make it up with aggressiveness and good defense. Oliver is optimistic about his team's chances.

"We can beat anybody in the league," he said. "We just have to play hard, hustle and come in with a positive attitude."

Tigers' coach Gayle Rankin is coming into the season with a positive attitude, despite only having two starters returning.

"We're shorter on talent than we expected," she said. "I lost eight players, including three key seniors, but I think we'll be competitive."

Rankin is starting her team with the basics and is looking to build on that from game to game.

"We're going to get better as the season progresses," Rankin said. "They are going to learn and build up a sense of teamwork and family."

Conditioning will be an important part of the building process.

"We have to be able to stay in control during a game," she said. "There were several teams that ran a lot of fast breaks during the Jamboree. If that keeps up, we'll have to be up to it. I'm looking forward to the season. It should be a close race."

Today the Cougars face Red Machine at 4:30 p.m. at Balboa Gym. The Devils meet the Tigers at Cristobal at 5:30 p.m.

Da Boyz cut 2 Tough down to size, 41-31

by Sgt. Lori Davis
USAROS Public Affairs Office

FORT CLAYTON - Da Boyz started off the 5'10" and under basketball season by cutting 2 Tough down to size.

Two Tough's troubles started before the game was even under way. The team barely made it to Reeder Physical Fitness Center in time after playing a game in a separate league at Howard AFB.

The team stood its ground at the start of the first half, holding Da Boys to an 8-6 lead for the first 10 minutes.

Darryl Kimble and Paul Roby stuck to their team's name, defying Da Boyz defense again and again. Kimble found the hoop for nine points and Roby tacked on six.

Dugue Kerry and Kelly Dumas chipped in two points each, but 2 Tough was essentially a two-man team of Kimble and Roby at the hoop.

Da Boyz shared the wealth on the scoreboard. Jeffrey Moses lead the way with six points, Reco Calhoun nailed five and Bernard Grimsley sank two shots for four points. Arnold Pickney, Phil Mickles and Patrick Jones each contributed a basket and Roy Allen sank a free throw to put Da Boyz up 22-19 at the half.

2 Tough ran out of juice early in the second half. Da Boyz strong defense shut down Kimble, blocking every shot, allowing just one free throw.

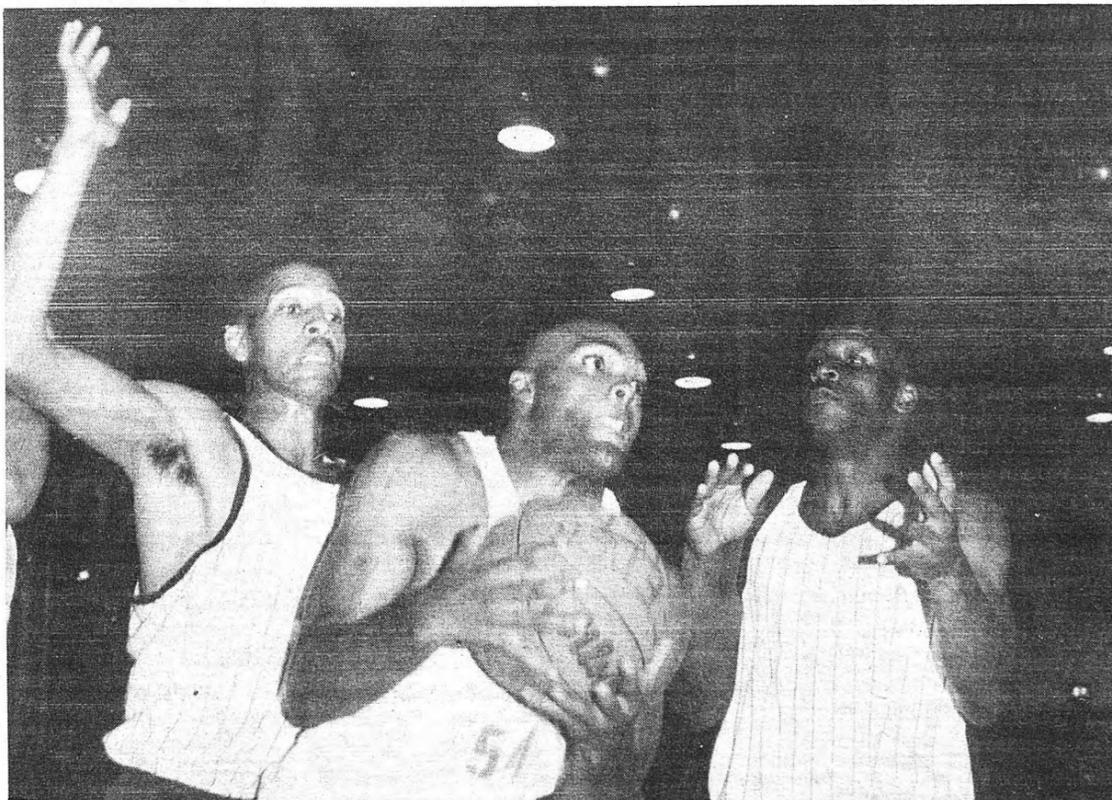

Da Boyz' David Burston took over on offense, dropping two three-pointers and a shot from the free-throw line. Hot-handed Calhoun backed him up with four points.

Da Boyz took off in the second half with a 10-2 run, to jump out to a 32-21 lead and leave 2 Tough in the dust.

When the dust settled, Da Boyz sent 2 Tough home with a 41-31 defeat.

"The key to our success was ball control, good coaching and slowing down the game," Moses said.

Da Boyz also capitalized on another factor, the lack of toughness in the 2 Tough team.

"They were weak on arguing amongst each other," Moses explained. "They cluttered up the middle, relied on one person to score and they weren't patient."

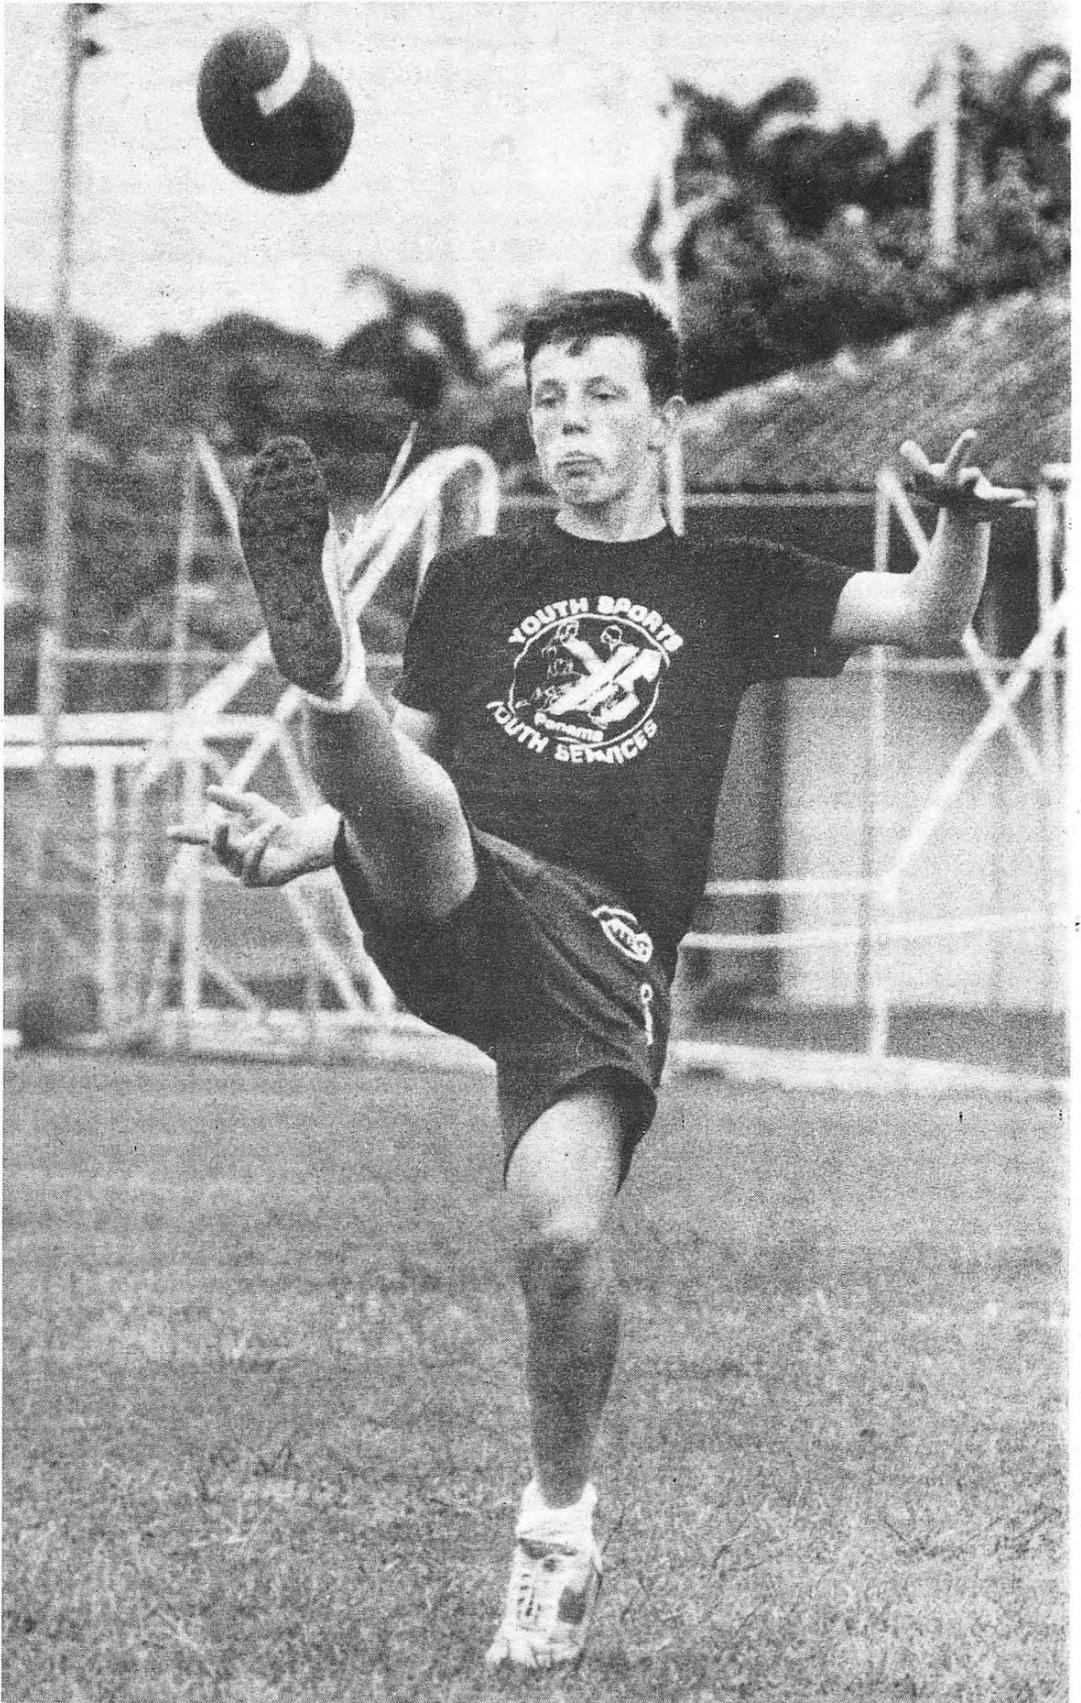

Da Boyz picked on these weaknesses and moved in for the kill, Moses said.

"They beat us because we missed a lot of shots," Roby said.

"We just finished a game at Howard," he explained. "We'll come back and beat them later in the season." For now 2 Tough is 0-1.

Flagging down fun

by Sgt. Richard Puckett
Tropic Times Sports Editor

FORT CLAYTON - The Fort Clayton youth flag football kicks off its season with opening ceremonies and games starting at 10 a.m. Saturday at Jarman Field.

Although the first exhibition games take place Saturday, the season really began two weeks ago for the more than 50 children taking part in the program, said Rory Egger, youth sports director.

A preseason football camp that started Sept. 13 and will wrap up tonight at Jarman Field. Coaches worked with the players on agility drills, receiving, passing, kicking and offensive and defensive plays.

Watching the players improve has been one of the highlights of the camp, said volunteer coach Denisa Robinson.

"It's been a real blast," she said. "Not only are you teaching the basics to kids who've never played before, but also helping those who know how to play get even better."

Along with the learning process, Robinson likes the entire philosophy of the football program.

"The most important part of the program is for the kids to have fun," she said. "As long as they have a good time then it's all worthwhile."

Football wasn't the only thing being learned at the camp. Coaches like Margie Krynicky also taught cheerleading basics.

About 40 girls signed up for the cheerleading program. Teaching them cheers, jumps and teamwork has been a task, Krynicky said.

"The girls are learning it really quick," Krynicky said. "It is hard for the younger ones to get the cheers right away, but with repetition they can pick it up."

Starting this weekend all the football teams will have a cheerleading squad rooting for them on the sidelines. It's part of the game many people tend to overlook, Krynicky said.

"These girls are out there working really hard to get the spirit going for their teams," she said. "It takes a lot of effort and enthusiasm to be out there."

Both the cheerleading and football teams will be in action starting Saturday morning.

Although the teams are filled, coaches are still needed, Egger said.

106th Signal Brigade nips 108th Military Police

First quarter TD keys 7-0 victory

by Sgt. E.J. Hersom
USARSO Public Affairs Office

FORT CLAYTON - The 106th Signal Brigade showed no mercy Monday beating the visiting 108th Military Police Company from Fort Bragg, N.C., in intramural flag football 7-0 here at Jarman Field.

Signal quarterback Darrell Moore hit David Williams for a 35-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter, giving his team the early lead.

Signal converted the extra point and held its lead while the remainder of the game remained scoreless.

A couple of close calls almost set Signal back, but the defense came through in the clutch with Antonio Bryan picking off quarterback Anthony Bowers in the final seconds of the game.

Penalties kept Signal scoreless for the last three quarters.

Officials called back a 45-yard gain for a touchdown because of a clipping call against Signal.

The signal team's massive offensive line kept the MPs hopes of sacking Moore at bay and left him with more than enough time to choose his receivers.

"There's nothing more I could do," said MP coach George Winnfield. "I sent all the beef I had out there and we still couldn't get through to him."

Though the loss dropped the MPs to a .500 record, the defense kept the signal team within its own 20-yard-line for nearly all the second half proving it is among the best in the league.

"Our heads weren't in it," said 106th Signal coach Kenneth Hunter, downplaying the win that brought his team to 2-0 with an additional forfeit in its favor.

Hunter said he was not happy with the penalty calls and the flaring tempers of players when penalty flags flew.

"We'll be ready for them next time," Hunter said.

Det. 4 turns off Maintenance

Mason leads team with 22

by Sgt. James A. Rush
24th Wing Public Affairs

HOWARDAFB - Detachment 4 needed 22 points Sept. 17 from Carl Mason to hold off the 24th Maintenance Squadron 50-46 here.

Maintenance fell behind by four in the first half and could do no better than match its opponents in the second. Michael "Yak" Yakowenko and Brian Ackerman led the charge with 13 and 11 points respectively.

Mason, meanwhile, topped all scorers with his first half output alone. He rung up 14 in the opening period and finished with 22 overall. Teammate James Moore contributed 11 more points to the team's total.

The combined team of the 24th Air Intelligence and Operations Support squadrons gave a scare to the base's only undefeated intramural team in the next game.

After 20 minutes of play, AIS/OSS led the 24th Security Police Squadron Team A by eight points.

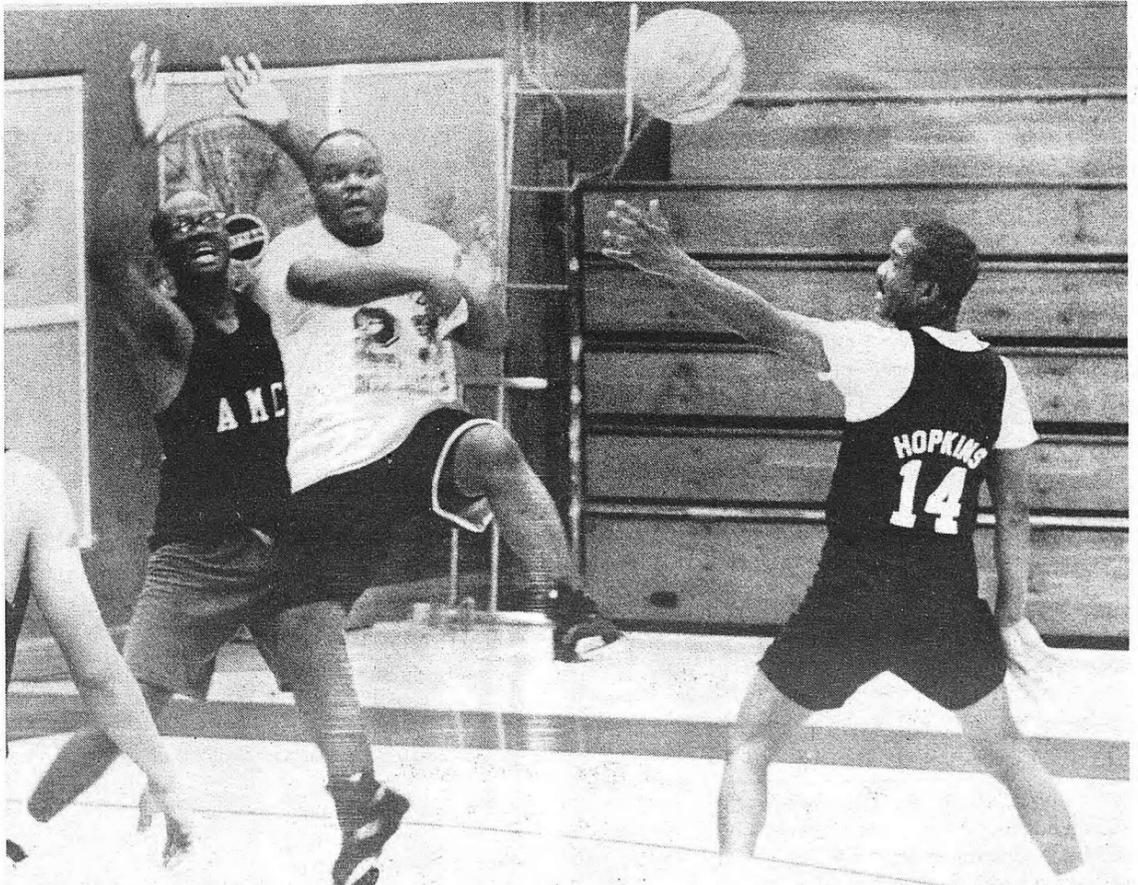

Security police star Michael Owens had been limited to six points.

This set off an alarm that the cops responded to in the second half. Four security police players hit for double figures in the second half.

The period saw Norris Davis and Dale Carnell slam home two-thirds of their 21 and 15 points while Bernard Hodges racked up all 10 of his in the same timeframe.

Making the biggest contribution, of course, was Owens who pounded inside for 17 of his 23 points in the latter half.

The underdogs had three players make double figures as well. Dave Dixon led the team with 17. Johnny Taylor added 17 and Charles Hamilton had 10 more.

Game three saw another potential upset shot down by a second-half rally.

The 24th Transportation Squadron enjoyed a 10-point advantage at halftime after holding the 310th Airlift Squadron to nine points.

The flying squadron would zoom back to win 39-37, with Pat Piche piloting the comeback.

Piche delivered inside and outside hitting short jumpers and layups while stretching his range out beyond the three-point line.

He finished with 16 points for the game, 12 in the second half. Teammate Dan Broughton was the co-pilot on this flight with 11 points.

Tyree Brown got most of his 11 points in the opening period to lead the losing cause.

The final game of the night saw the 24th Communications Squadron squeak past the Co. B, 1-228th Aviation Battalion's 45-40.

Communications needed the win to keep ahead of the pack in its division.

Wayman Black and Aaron Caldwell answered the call for the winners, Black had 16 points and Caldwell put 13 more. Their effort led to a five-point Communications lead at halftime.

Joseph Jenkins had 17 and Michael Gordon added 10 more to lead Company B, but they failed to gain any ground in the second half.

Postal officials advise early holiday mailing

HOWARD AFB (24 Wing/PA) - As holiday season nears, it's time to start making holiday mailing plans, according to 24th Air Postal Squadron officials.

"Our customers are very concerned with safe, speedy delivery of their mail, especially at this time of the year," said Capt. Karen Cordle Jordan, postal squadron commander.

"By labeling and packaging their gifts correctly, and observing the holiday mail-early dates, people can help us ensure friends and family back home and around the world have their presents in time for the holidays," Jordan said.

Post offices in Panama have copies of the U.S. Postal Service pamphlet, Packaging for Mailing. It gives instructions for loading and marking packages properly.

Most Santa-by-mail gifts leave Panama in boxes, say postal statistics; therefore, much of the pamphlet is dedicated to these packages. The following information is drawn from the pamphlet.

◆Make sure the box is large enough to hold the item(s) with enough space for cushioning material. Boxes that are too small don't have enough room for cushioning and may come apart.

◆Used boxes may be used; however, they must be rigid with all flaps intact. Boxes without flaps may be used with another box of the same dimensions as a lid.

◆Wrapping paper isn't necessary in most cases, but when used, the paper should be equivalent to regular large grocery bags. Shipping or strapping tape (not masking or cellophane varieties) are needed for closing and reinforcing the box.

◆To prevent damage while in transit, properly cushion boxed items. This absorbs and distributes forces caused by shock and vibration.

◆When several items are shipped within the same package, take care to prevent contact between them and external forces. Don't package heavy items with fragile ones unless extreme care is taken.

◆The final step is the easiest, but most important: proper marking. All writing should be done with a waterproof marker that won't rub off or smear. Words must be readable from 30 inches away.

◆Include both the names and addresses of the sender and receiver inside the package in case the exterior is defaced, and be sure to complete the customs form.

◆All mail leaves Panama by air, so space available mail service is as reliable as priority mail to the southern and eastern states and is less costly.

For information on what items are or aren't eligible for shipping via mail, contact your local military post office.

DUBOIS COATS FIELD - Soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment, counted on the old saying "practice makes perfect" as they trained last week for an external evaluation in October.

"This field problem is gearing us up for that evaluation," said Maj. Thomas Comodeca, battalion operations officer.

"The battalion intelligence officers wrote the field problem to mirror an important unit mission: defense of the canal," he said.

"The scenario is basically that we have some armed individuals gaining control of the Gatun Dam, and personnel and property in that area."

The unit's mission was to fly infantry soldiers to the dam and help take it back from the enemy, he said.

No infantry soldiers took part in the exercise so the aviators could concentrate on planning and executing the mission.

"We get a fragmentary order from our battalion staff for an upcoming mission, then we receive the air mission brief, which prepares us for the whole mission," explained Capt. Marc Moquin, Co. A commander.

"We come back to the company area and hash out the company internal things we are going to do."

Security and fighting positions for the flight crew are examples of internal things.

They were also an important part of the exercise, he said.

"Within an aviation unit we can fly, no problem," he said.

"The things we need to work on are soldier skills."

The unit is concentrating on preparing the staff officers for the field, but the side benefit was the motivation it gave the soldiers, Moquin said.

"It's important to do well not only for the soldier's training, but also to let the soldiers know we are in fact prepared for a real-world mission," he said.

"A soldier will fight better and train harder when he knows there is meaning to it, and it could keep him alive in a battle."

Soldiers of Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Garrison visit the remains of Fort San Lorenzo.

Fort San Lorenzo

Ancient fortress conjurs images of pirates, buccaneers

Standing on the decaying walls of the once strategically important Fort San Lorenzo brings back images of English and Spanish galleons sailing past. The salty sea breeze carries whispers of times past when buccaneers and Spaniards battled to control the fort and the surrounding waterways.

Tourists can now wander freely throughout the Atlantic coast fort as Panamanian government workers continue to restore the 16th century structure.

The fort's history began in the 16th century with the new power obtained by the Spanish Empire through its conquests of Hispanola, Haiti, Santa Catalina, Mexico, Panama, Cartagena, Maracaibo and Peru. Untold wealth poured into the Spanish crown and doubled the world's known gold reserve.

Spain's bullion, jewels and silver shipments were transported across the isthmus by the Camino Real and the Chagres River and financed the Spanish armies and the Armada in 1587. As a result, the British realized they must strangle the sea lanes and disrupt the flow of Spanish wealth. The isthmus became a focal point of this conflict.

With only one train route to transport the gold, the Chagres River became an option for an additional route.

Because of growing threats from the British, Spain fortified key ports and built Fort San Lorenzo in 1597 by order of King Philip II.

Around 1650, a boy appeared in the port of Bristol and signed onto the vessel Saucy Nell. After being sold into slavery in Barbados, Henry Morgan became an overseer of the slave gangs and later joined a gang of buccaneers. They hunted cattle in the West Indies and dried the meat into strips to be blackmarketed to ships returning to the Old World.

Because of the buccaneers' success, the Spanish suppressed the business and forced the buccaneers onto the small island of Tortuga. There the band exacted their revenge by capturing a small Spanish coastal trader laden with goods and sailed it to Port Royal. This was the start of Morgan's pirateering.

In 1668, he succeeded in capturing the port of Portobello and considered taking all of Panama. Soon after, he captured Santa Catalina and dispatched Col. Joseph Bradley to take Fort San Lorenzo.

After landing near Brujas Island, the men marched toward the fort and attacked from the Northeast, but failed to cross the moat. During the attack, a buccaneer became so enraged that when he was struck by a arrow he pulled it from his side, tied a piece of his shirt to it, lit it on fire and fired it from his musket into the fort.

The blaze kindled and as night fell, a roof caught on fire and collapsed onto a large supply of gunpowder. The explosion scattered debris all over the fort and weakened the Spanish defense.

After killing many of the sentries during the night, the buccaneers swarmed the fort and defeated the Spanish.

When Morgan arrived at the fort he began reinforcing it to protect the rear during his campaign across the isthmus.

After returning to Fort Royal with the booty from his victory he was in trouble with the British Crown. He was then taken to England and imprisoned in the Tower of London. Morgan managed to bribe his way out, received his knighthood in 1674 and was appointed lieutenant governor of Jamaica where he lived the remainder of his life.

Fort San Lorenzo again saw action in 1739 when Adm. Edward Vernon bombarded the fort for two days.

The Spaniards, who again occupied the fort, surrendered. In March 1740, Vernon had the fort blown up.

In 1751, the fort was rebuilt by Don Ignacio de Sala, then Governor General Cartagena.

In the late 1700s, the fort was again attacked by three British ships, but the Spaniards repulsed the attack. Eventually, the fort declined along with the rest of the Spanish fortunes. By 1849, it was under the sovereignty of the Republic of Columbia and was in a state of general disrepair.

The last time the old fort was used was during World War II when the U.S. Army Coastal Artillery units posted a searchlight and gun mount there to prevent German submarines from sending raiding parties up the Chagres toward Gatun dam.

Though the fort is no longer a battle site, it is a site where tourists can get a glimpse of the past.
