Antigua produces most cotton suitable for experimental spinning quality than that grown in Antigua, but the condition of the land is not favorable for the growth of cotton. The cotton is grown in the west of Antigua, but there is a lack of labor to pick and clean the cotton. The cotton is harvested by hand, and the labor is paid by the day. The cotton is then transported to the mill by handcart.

Every day WE BOIL A BOMB

You may well ask why we permit our scientists to do anything as foolishly. But the answer is that we have to do it to satisfy ourselves that even after prolonged storage, REGENT petrol will not form gum to stick valves and clog fuel systems. The tests which consist of hoiking samples under 100 lb. per square inch oxygen pressure in "bombs", are quite safe. We have satisfied ourselves that even after prolonged storage, REGENT petrol will not form gum to stick valves and clog fuel systems.
