Defence Counsel Makes Four-Hour Address

Prosecution Reply Continues Today

Mr. E. K. W alcott, Q.C., senior defence counsel in the Bryant's Village murder trial addressed the jury for three hours and twenty minutes yesterday, and told them that if they believed his evidence for the defence, then he should conclude that the accused was innocent, and therefore the prosecution had failed to justify their case.

Mr. W alcott had earlier informed the court that the defence did not intend to offer any defence in the case, but that they would rely on the defence of justification, which was open to them, and which they would rely on to prove their case.

The prosecution yesterday addressed the jury for two hours and twenty minutes, and told them that if they believed the evidence of the prosecution, then they should conclude that the accused was guilty, and therefore the defence had failed to justify their case.

No Witness For Defence

Mr. W alcott, who appeared, was called on Tuesday evening, and although he had been engaged in the case for some time, he had not been able to find a witness for the defence.

He told the court that if they believed the evidence of the prosecution, then they should conclude that the accused was guilty, and therefore the defence had failed to justify their case.
