Fire panel grills auditor on alleged embezzlement

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

North Bay Fire District commissioners March 13 asked the district's auditor why the alleged theft of $80,000 from the district by its bookkeeper hadn't been detected earlier.

Commissioners were also introduced to the department's new administrative assistant, Christy Woissol, who was hired by the fire chief Feb. 27. She replaces Ralph Banegas, who was fired Jan. 30, and was arrested by sheriff's deputies Feb. 29 on charges of stealing thousands from the fire district.

The district's outside auditor, Bruce Nunnally, of the accounting firm Carr, Riggs and Ingram, told the North Bay Fire Commission during a meeting March 13 at the firehouse on White Point Road, Bluewater Bay, that the annual audit of the district's financial affairs was about 90 percent complete.

Nunnally told commissioners that there were "no lingering issues," and that he didn't expect any more "surprises." Nunnally was referring to his discovery in January, in the course of an audit for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, that, according to Okaloosa County Sheriff's arrest reports, Banegas had stolen more than $81,000 in tax monies from the district over a five-year period starting in June 2006.

North Bay Commissioner Steve Strait, treasurer, asked why the audit firm had not noticed Banegas' alleged thefts in previous annual audits.

Nunnally said that the yearly audit is primarily a review of the financial statements of the fire district, making sure the numbers add up. That part of the audit is comparable to science, he said, while another part of the audit, inspecting a random sample of some of the financial transactions during the previous year, is more of an art.

The accountant likened the random sampling to poking a haystack in which a rodent may be hiding. Auditors have pitchforks that they thrust into the pile of straw, hoping to find a rodent, he said.

Valp. population drop shrinks state revenue

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

Between 2000 and 2010, Valparaiso's population shrank by 21.4 percent. City officials fear the decline may reduce the city's income more than its expenses.

The 2010 census showed 5,035 people living in Valparaiso, a decrease of 1,372 from 2000.

City officials attributed much of the decline to housing shifts on Eglin Air Force Base, part of which is inside the city limits, but makes no demand on its services. By the same token, officials expect a rebound as the Air Force housing changes are reversed.

The map used by the U.S. Census Bureau to count Valparaiso's population includes much of Eglin Air Force Base, from roughly the intersection of its two runways, eastward to the East Gate.

Valparaiso Mayor Bruce Arnold said the city's population decline was largely due to closure of a federal prison camp on Eglin, and the demolition of military dormitories to make way for new ones.

The minimum-security prison camp closed in December 2005 following damage from Hurricane Ivan the previous year. The closure of the 900-inmate, 130-employee prison caused the relocation of staff members, and their families, who lived in government housing in the base Post Point area around the prison, which is also included in Valparaiso's limits. The prisoners themselves were never counted as Valparaiso residents.

Also, a loss to Valparaiso's 2010 census population was the closure of a large mobile-home park at Post Point during the previous decade. Eglin closed the mobile home park between June 2003 and June 2008, and has no plans to reopen it. The area was home to dozens of military members and their families who lived in private mobile homes on government land.

Valparaiso is likely to recoup some population as Eglin builds and fills new dormitories on the east end of the base. But the prison and mobile home park

'A' grade yields $1.5M for school district

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

Besides any bragging rights, an A report card from the Florida Department of Education brings more money to teachers at top-ranked schools.

Rita Scallan, chief financial officer for the Okaloosa County School District, announced Feb. 22 that the school district received $1,533,392, from its School Recognition Award allocation from the Department of Education. The money is awarded annually to public schools that earn an A school report card during the past school year. This year's money was based on $70 for each non-weighted, full-time equivalent (FTE) student enrolled at A schools during the previous school year.

Last year the state gave A schools $75 per full-time equivalent student.

Even at the lower reward amount, the 28 district schools that received an A brought in $1,533,392 to the school district, according to Scallan. As in the past, the majority of schools have elected to use the report card money to give bonuses to teachers.

Release of the high school grades on Jan. 4, and last summer's release of school scores for elementary and middle schools, shows that all the schools serving the Twin Cities of Niceville and Valparaiso are A schools.

At $70 per FTE, here's what reward money each school serving the Twin Cities receives:

- Niceville High, $128,419.
 - Destin Middle, $46,189.
 - Lewis K-8 School, $46,099.
 - Ruckel Middle, $59,028.
 - Bluewater Elementary, $53,138.
 - Edge Elementary, $36,546.
 - Plew Elementary, $45,727.
- Collegiate High School, a charter high school in the school district, received $18,705.

Liza Jackson Preparatory School, another charter school for grades 1-8 received $56,091.

Although Scallan provided Okaloosa County's A schools an estimated amount based on the $70 per FTE back in October, the state didn't release a final figure of reward money for all A schools (elementary, middle and high schools) until after Feb. 4, the end of the appeal period for high schools to challenge their report card grade, she said.

Plane crash kills 2 local men

Two men were killed Thursday when the small private plane they were crashed less than a mile north of the Ruckel Airport.

The plane apparently struck a tree then slammed into the top of a small hill about three-quarters of a mile north of the Ruckel Airport in Niceville, ejecting the pilot and one passenger and causing a small brush fire.

Construction workers on the Mid-Bay Bridge connector road reported a possible plane crash and smoke rising from a wooded area on the Eglin reservation, about 150 yards north of the connector road.

Niceville Fire Department received the call at 1:15 p.m. March 15 and was the first on scene about 1:22 p.m., according to Niceville Fire Chief Tommy Mayville. Firefighters walked from the construction site of the Mid-Bay Bridge connector road about 150 yards into the woods to the crash site.

Work ahead of schedule on bridge

Working at night, AC Columbia, one of two construction contractors working on the last two phases of the Mid-Bay Bridge Connector Road, placed the last of 10 beams over Highway 85 North overnight Thursday and Friday. Just north of the Mullet Festival site, the bridge is the termination point of the 11-mile toll road that will whisk motorists to-and-from the Mid-Bay Bridge connecting Niceville and Destin.

James Van Steenburg, construction manager for the project, told the governing board of the Mid-Bay Bridge Authority (MBBA) Thursday that contractors are making significant progress, and are ahead of schedule on several of the bridges that will carry toll traffic over Eglin wetlands and streams including Turkey, Swift and Rocky

Jim Vest, executive director of the MBBA, told the governing board members that toll revenue was up 3 percent from last year, but the increase was primarily due to an extra "leap day" last month.

Friends, family, military celebrate soldier's life

By Mike Griffith

A memorial service Thursday at Niceville Church of Christ honored the life of Niceville native and Army Sgt. Joshua Born.

Joshua was among several American soldiers murdered in the wake of a controversy surrounding the accidental burnings of copies of the Quran by American forces, after the Qurans had been defaced by Taliban prisoners to pass handwritten messages to one another.

Joshua's father, Craig Born, told the Beacon that he is proud of his son and the life he led.

During an earlier assignment in Korea, Joshua had spent most of his off-duty time volunteering at a Korean orphanage, rather than partying with his fellow soldiers.

"That says something about the kind of person he was," Craig said of his son.

Among those attending the memorial service were friends and family members of Joshua, as well as representatives of local veteran's organizations, Niceville Mayor Randall Wise, U.S. Rep. Jeff Miller, and Col. Miguel Howe, deputy commander of the Army 7th Special Forces Group (Airborne).

"We have a choice about how we live, and how we die," said Church of Christ pastor Joe Palmer in his eulogy.

Palmer said that unlike others who spend much of their lives on pointless or self-centered activity, Joshua chose to become a soldier, willingly putting his own life at risk for others. He quoted Jesus' Christ's statement, "I lay down my life—no one take it from me—I lay it down of my own accord," as an example of selfless sacrifice.

"We know Joshua because he was a soldier," Howe said. "He is our brother, and that makes us family. Your brothers in the Army remember, and will always remember Josh."

Hughes to pay $3,000 fine for ethics lapses

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

Former Okaloosa County Tax Collector Chris Hughes has agreed to pay a $3,000 fine, and receive public censure and reprimand after an investigation by the Florida Commission on Ethics.

The original complaint was filed by a Fort Walton Beach resident on July 30, 2009. After finding the complaint legally sufficient, a preliminary investigation was ordered by the Ethics Commission.

The investigation was released July 13, 2011, and on Oct. 26 the commission found probable cause to believe Hughes had violated the Code of Ethics on three of the five allegations, as follows:

- By using county office equipment and resources during work hours for personal business.
- By using a county vehicle to travel to a funeral for the mother of an employee.

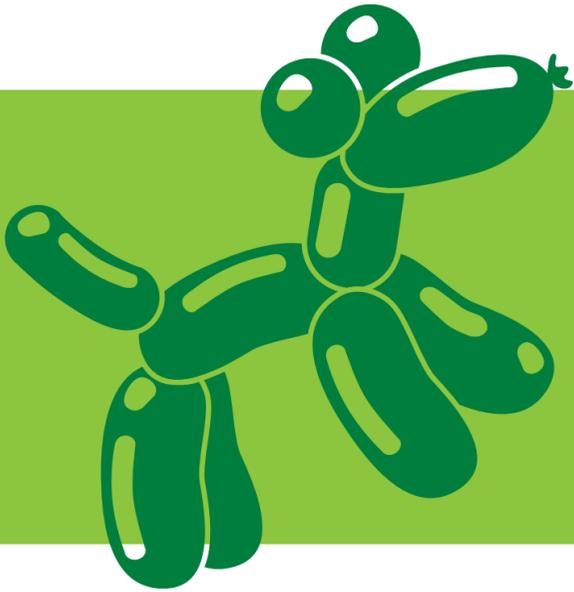

- By using county funds to reimburse an employee for costs associated with attending the funeral of the mother of a co-employee.

Hughes admitted the three allegations and agreed March 7 to a $2,000 fine on the first allegation and $500 fines on the next two.

The commission found no probable cause that Hughes had had county employees help him set up and clean for his cooking show during work hours or that he gave bonuses to employees who helped him with Salvation Ministries, the cooking show, or his cookbooks.

The Commission on Ethics will consider the stipulated agreement at a March 30 hearing in Tallahassee.

The Niceville High School football stadium's underground drainage system collapsed, requiring an extensive repair job.

NHS stadium gets $40K repair

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

For weeks, motorists on John Sims Parkway have passed Niceville High School's Eagle Stadium and seen piles of dirt being built up, then spread around.

The construction activity is part of a near-$40,000 renovation of the football field caused by a collapsed drainage system underground, according to Steve Bolton, the school district's maintenance program director. The field was last renovated about 10 years ago, he said.

Underneath the playing field of the stadium, a drainage system with French drains was previously constructed to control water from a small stream that courses north-to-south under the stadium, as well as drainage of surface water off the field, he said. The drainage system had collapsed, causing sink holes and marshy sod on the football field on one end that gets too much water, and too-dry conditions on the rest of the field.

Money for the renovation comes from the district's capital outlay budget, said Bolton, not money from the classrooms.

The work started the third week in February and should be completed in May, he said, with plenty of time for NHS graduation ceremonies held outdoors in the stadium in early June.

Bolton said the work is being accomplished with a combination of in-house resources and school district personnel, as well as contractors. The drainage and irrigation work was estimated to cost about $20,000, he said, while the sprigging and building the crown on the field was estimated to cost $18,500.

Rebuilding the 12-to-18-inch "crown" on the field should be accomplished this week (March 19-23), Bolton said, followed by installation of the irrigation system next week, then sprigging and sodding the field the following week. The field will then be watered and fertilized over the next four to six weeks, he said.

Gaetz describes wins, losses in session

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

Speaking from Tallahassee where a special session of the Legislature had been called to redraw eight senate districts found unconstitutional by the supreme court, Sen. Don Gaetz, (R, Niceville), listed some of the accomplishments and failures of the 2012 regular legislative session.

"The good news is that unlike other large states, Florida balanced the budget without raising taxes for the second year in a row," said Gaetz. There were also no new state-mandated fees for the second year in a row, he added.

Gaetz, who is in line to become the Senate President next year, said he was pleased to get two education bills passed that he sponsored. The former Okaloosa County Schools Superintendent said he plans to build on both bills to enact more educational reforms as the senate's presiding officer starting with next year's Legislative session.

Senate Bill 1366, Gaetz said, requires "economic security reports" to be generated for parents of every seventh- through 12th-grader in the state. The reports will compare career fields and professions, telling students and their parents how likely they are to get jobs, and what they can expect to earn if they pursue different majors or careers.

"It lets people know what the realities of the economy are," said Gaetz.

It also provides for a $15 million incentive package to state colleges and universities based on how well their graduates succeed in getting well-paying jobs in their field of study after graduation. Gaetz said the incentives, and the reports to students and parents, are designed to encourage more students to pursue studies in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) fields.

Senate Bill 1368, the other education bill Gaetz highlighted, provides acceleration options for high school students who are able to master course material faster than the traditional semester or year-long classroom course. He said high schools in the state currently operate on the old assumption that everyone learns at the same pace and students are required to sit in classrooms for a set amount of time before being allowed to demonstrate their mastery of subject matter.

The bill also expands career technical opportunities to the middle school level, he said.

Gaetz said both education bills are thresholds for future education reforms, a topic he intends to pursue when he returns next year as Senate President.

Gaetz also highlighted some funding he was able to get enacted for a number of projects of local interest, including:

—Inserting $325,000 in start-up funds for the STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Math and Medicine) Academy for middle school students that the Okaloosa County School Board will open in the former Valparaiso Elementary School next school year.

—Additional funding to the Children's Advocacy Center (CAC), headquartered in Niceville, including $100,000 for physician's medical services, as well as an estimated $50,000 for the Niceville CAC. The later figure is based on funding of $100 per child helped in each of the 25 CACs across the state.

—$21 million for construction of an overpass across Highway 98 at Hurlburt Field.

There were also a few disappointments during this year's regular session, Gaetz said, including:

—Senate failure to pass an e-verify bill co-sponsored by Gaetz and Sen. John Thrasher of St. Augustine, and aimed at controlling the hiring of illegal aliens.

—Senate failure to pass a legislative ethics bill that would have prevented unqualified legislators from obtaining jobs at state universities and colleges funded by appropriations from the legislature. The measure died in the Rules Committee by a 6-6 vote, he said.

—Gaetz said he was one of only three senators, including the Senate President, Mike Haridopolis, and Majority Leader, Andy Gardner, who voted against a bill that gives the University of Florida and Florida State University the authority to raise tuition "as much and as often as they want." He said the measure will have negative effects on Bright Futures scholarships and on pre-paid college tuition programs, and was the wrong thing to do while families continue to struggle to pay for their children's college education in the state's current economy.

On a personal note, the senator mentioned that as the first father-son, senator-representative team in the state's history, he and his son, Rep. Matt Gaetz (R, Fort Walton Beach), jointly sponsored House Bill 7055/Senate Bill 1312, ending the practice of state agencies implementing rules contrary to the direction of the governor and Legislature, and repealing hundreds of existing rules that stop job creation and intrude into citizens' personal lives. The regulatory relief bill is the only legislation the two men jointly sponsored, and the only one they are likely to sponsor together since, as Senate President in the next two years, the presiding officers normally do not sponsor legislation.

What do you think about America's role in Afghanistan?

Location: Oak Creek shopping center

"We need to get out. We've done all we can over there. We can't fix everybody. We need to fix ourselves."

Mary Ann Nichols, 67, Niceville, retired nurse

"I think we should come home. The way they treat us, they don't appreciate us at all. As for that soldier who killed those people — I think he's innocent by reason of insanity, after all he has been through in four combat tours."

Crawford Senn, 70, Crestview, retired federal investigator

"We need to be there. We need to protect our interests around the world."

Fred Littreal, 64, Fort Walton Beach, construction

"I think we should take our troops out."

Tessa Gyurica, 27, Bluewater Bay, mom

"I think it's good that we're there trying to help the Afghan people, but we probably don't need as many people over there. We have enough stuff to worry about here."

Max Martin, 20, Montgomery, Ala., student

"I think it's coming to an end. We have a plan to be out by 2014, after a controlled withdrawal."

Cindy Kenyon, 61, Niceville, nurse action," Nunnally said.

In this case, Nunnally said, auditors spotted a check that "didn't look right," and that led to more investigating, including closer scrutiny of prior years, which uncovered the alleged thefts.

"What did you check that didn't get caught for six years?" commission Chairman Jim Miller asked the accountant. "If you hadn't stuck that fork in that check, Banegas would still be there," Miller said.

"I'm comfortable with the (audit) procedures," Nunnally responded.

"Well I'm not," countered Miller.

Commissioner Janet Santner asked why the checkbooks always seemed to balance even though tens of thousands of dollars were missing between 2006 and 2011.

Nunnally said that Banegas started out with smaller checks, then "leveled off" after a couple of years. "The larger the disbursement, the more we pay attention," he said. "There was no instance of not being balanced," he said.

Fire district officials have told the Beacon that not only was Banegas placed in charge of preparing checks, he also was entrusted with keeping the district's books and balancing its checkbook. Until about 2008, he also was empowered to sign checks, according to the fire chief.

In the business world, it is preferred practice to "segregate" these duties, that is, spread them among different people so that no one person can long manipulate the figures undetected.

Commissioner Jim Boswell, assistant treasurer, asked whether the auditors checked the organization's internal controls over funds, to which Nunnally responded "yes."

Boswell asked if this was the first year that the auditor was aware that the fire chief, a check signer, used a signature stamp.

Banegas allegedly used the stamp without permission to sign fraudulent checks to himself, according to sheriff's arrest reports.

Nunnally said this was the first year he was aware of the signature stamp, but that use of such stamps is common and not usually a problem as long as they are controlled. "We felt it was positive control that Banegas didn't have signature authority," he added.

Santner asked the auditor if he recommended that the commission begin requiring two signatures on checks. Nunnally said two signatures might be useful for higher amounts, but that he would rather see that check signatures are scrutinized.

Santner also asked about the fire district's bank reconciliations, since the financial statements given to fire commissioners each month were prepared by Banegas. But Strait said that was not where the problem was, that as treasurer he checked balances with Banegas.

In other business, fire commissioners appointed Lee Wetzell, one of three applicants, to finish the term of former commissioner Karen Banegas, wife of Ralph Banegas. Citing personal reasons, Mrs. Banegas resigned from the commission Jan. 31, the day after her husband was fired. The term ends in November 2014.

North Bay Fire Chief Joe Miller introduced Rowena Crissey, an employee of CJW LLC, a Fort Walton Beach company that will take over the duties of handling payroll and reconciling the district's banks statements. He said the fire district also converted its financial software from Peachtree to QuickBooks, software that is expected to produce more user-friendly reports for commissioners.

Chief Miller told the Beacon that he is in the process of applying to the fire district's insurer to recover monies lost to the alleged thefts.

The next meeting of the North Bay Fire Control District Commission is set for April 10, at 7 p.m., at the North Bay Fire Station, 1024 White Point Road.

losses are irreversible.

Arnold said that outside the military gates, the city population seems to be holding its own. A count of water meters shows only slight fluctuations, he said. While some older homes may be vacant due to the nationwide housing crash, that's been balanced by small, but steady growth in new construction, he said.

Population figures are factored into state formulas used to calculate certain revenues cities receive from the state, including the local portion of state sales tax and state revenue-sharing funds.

City Clerk Tammy Johnson said that Valparaiso has taken a hit in both those revenue sources. In its 2011-12 budget, the city expects $379,016 from the sales tax, down from $449,520 the previous year.

The drop in state revenue sharing funds due to declining population figures is moderated by a guaranteed amount in the formula, Johnson said. Nonetheless, Valparaiso's revenue sharing money dropped $7,000 this year, she said.

It's unclear how much, if any, of the reduced state revenue was due to other factors, such as the state's own budget woes and the economic slowdown hurting taxed economic activity.

The "good news" is that population estimates used by the state typically grow annually each of the 10 years between U.S. censuses. Johnson said the state calculated 5,061 people lived in Valparaiso in 2011, an increase of 25 from the 2010 census figure.

A Valparaiso business owner, 133 N. John Sims Parkway, reported that on March 10 at least $935 was discovered to be missing from the cash register, as well as the tools of an employee.

A Valparaiso resident reported that while checking her bank account statement online she discovered that sometime March 1-11 unknown person(s) made unauthorized fraudulent charges of $890 for purchases over the Internet using her debit/credit card.

A Niceville resident from the 4100 block of Beach Drive reported that unknown person(s) burglarized the home overnight March 2-3 while the family was at home. Reported stolen was an iPhone and three remotes for a video game system. The victim also found an entry door to a detached garage open, and $5 cash missing from the center console of a car parked inside the garage.

Criminal Mischief

Niceville police responded to a call from the 600 block of Crestview Avenue March 11, where a resident advised that two people broke a window on his trailer. The complainant later said he did not want to file a report.

The father of a deployed Niceville man reported that unknown person(s) had slashed the two rear tires of his son's 2012 Jeep. The father said he has been checking his son's house and vehicle while his son is deployed and discovered the vandalism March 10. He told police he would repair the damage, then move the vehicle to his own home until his son returns.

BWB MSBU briefed by deputy and tax collector

By Mike Griffith
Beacon Correspondent

During an informal meeting on March 13, the Bluewater Bay Municipal Services Benefit Unit (MSBU) board of directors heard briefings from Okaloosa County Tax Collector Ben Anderson and Deputy Sheriff Frank Taylor. The guest speakers were the main subjects of last Tuesday's meeting, as no formal business was conducted because of the lack of a quorum of the five-member board of directors. Only two members, Dale Blanchard and Joan McCarthy, attended Tuesday's meeting.

Tax collector Anderson began by praising Bluewater Bay, which he called "unique" because of the careful planning of the community. He cited Bluewater Bay's golf courses, marina, walking and biking paths, and natural areas interspersed among residential neighborhoods as features that enhance the local quality of life and he praised the MSBU for "maintaining the quality and integrity of the community" after the original developer left.

Since taking office, Anderson said he has reduced spending within the tax collector's office. He added that he has cut the number of employees from 80 to 75, and cut overall salaries by 11 percent. To save money for customers, he has eliminated the former $3.50 "convenience fee" that was charged to anyone who chose to pay their property taxes online.

Anderson said he is trying to improve the system for issuing drivers licenses. Now, new driver's licenses, he said, must meet strict federal Department of Homeland Security standards as reliable forms of personal identification. Only the new, "gold star" driver's licenses will be accepted as proper ID for boarding airplanes as of 2015.

Taylor, the community policing officer for Bluewater Bay and other nearby communities, warned that spring break may bring extra traffic and more accidents to the area. He also said that various types of petty crime, such as thefts, may occur during spring break, as college students and other visitors come to Northwest

Florida. He urged local residents to take reasonable precautions, such as driving carefully and using extra following distance on local highways, locking homes and cars, being alert, and reporting any suspicious activity to police. Taylor also reminded people that it is not legal to fish in ponds or lakes along the Bluewater Bay golf courses during times when golf is being played.

More tickets, fewer wrecks in 2011 Valp.

By Del Lessard
Beacon Staff Writer

Valparaiso police gave out more traffic citations and arrests for DUIs in 2011 compared to 2010, while the city had fewer traffic accidents, according to annual statistics released by police.

There was little change in the number of arrests in Valparaiso in 2011 compared to the year prior.

The number of DUI arrests in Valparaiso doubled, from three in 2010 to six in 2011, while traffic citations rose slightly, from 582 to 600, a 3 percent increase over the same time frame. There were 65 traffic accidents last year, five fewer than in 2010.

There were 58 arrests in 2011, two fewer than the previous year. The total includes 34 misdemeanor arrests and 24 felony arrests, one fewer in each category.

Valparaiso Police Chief Joe Hart said the police department has 10 full-time employees, including himself, as well as three part-time officers and four full-time dispatchers. One full-time police officer slot was replaced by a part-time slot last year, he said, while there have been no new full-time hires. The police department continues to carry one unfunded police officer slot, from the entire 2011 fiscal year into the current 2012 fiscal year, he said.

With the slowdown in the economy, Hart said the number of officers in training has been reduced, with only two full-time officers in training at the beginning of 2012. It was typical to have three or four officers in training when the economy was booming, he said, when the small police department trained officers only to see them leave quickly to take higher paying jobs with other law enforcement agencies. Having officers in training generally limits traffic details such as DUIs, Hart said.

MBBA has begun looking at a marketing campaign to encourage travelers to use the 11-mile connector bridge toll road and to get familiar with toll-by-plate technology that will free motorists from stopping at the toll plaza when the road is completed.

A logo is in the works for the connector road, he said, and cash-payers on the bridge will begin receiving handouts this summer explaining the new tolling technology.

On a separate issue, Vest told the board, "We dodged the bullet again this year," escaping legislative consolidation of the local transportation authority under the Florida Turnpike Authority a second year in a row. The Florida Senate put consolidation of MBBA in two bills, he said. The House did not have consolidation in any of its transportation bills, he said, and the Senate bills were removed during conference.

The plane wasn't on fire, he said, but the crash created a brush fire near where the fuselage came to rest on the top of a small hill in the wooded Eglin reservation. The two passengers in the plane had been ejected from the plane and did not survive, he said. Firefighters used shovels and fire extinguishers to control the brush fire from spreading, he said.

The Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office has tentatively identified the victims as 59-year old Donald Marco of Niceville and 66-year old Stanley Bloyer of Fort Walton Beach.

The crashed aircraft included a panel with the word "experimental" written on the panel. That typically is an indication of a plane that was home-built from a kit.

Marco's small experimental plane crashed in woods on Eglin reservation. He and Bloyer were reportedly flying from Ruckel Airport to the Yellow River Airstrip in Holt, according to the sheriff's office.

Representatives of the Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board will be in charge of investigating the deadly crash.

Marco survived critical injuries from another plane crash in 2008. On June 9, 2008, Marco was the lone passenger of a home-built aircraft that crashed at the north end of the Ruckel Airport. A Niceville High School student witnessed the crash and called 911 after trying to comfort the pilot who was upside down in the wreckage.

One Hour Air Conditioning

Lower utility costs with preventative maintenance

Advertising Feature

One Hour Air Conditioning takes pride in their excellent on-time residential customer care for Okaloosa and Walton County. One Hour Air provides all your heating and cooling repairs, maintenance and unit replacements with reliable, friendly and professional service. Utility costs are on the rise, and One Hour Air's maintenance program, The Comfort Club, can be vital to lowering your monthly energy bills. In addition, blown in attic insulation can also significantly reduce utility costs.

The Comfort Club is a maintenance program that minimizes overall repair costs to heating and air conditioning systems through bi-annual planned check-ups. These scheduled visits potentially extend the life of systems up to twice as long while significantly saving on utility bills. Members receive two comprehensive visits a year. As a bonus, members receive a 20% discount on any repairs and priority service.

One Hour Air's Filter Club program accounts for what size and number of filters each customer needs while providing convenient home delivery. Customers can order a wide array of air filters that include: basic green/blue fiberglass, electronic, high efficiency, and high rating filters. This program helps keep their systems clean and running efficiently.

Indoor Air Quality (IAQ) can be 4-5 times more polluted than outdoor air and the potential for it to be 100 times worse. IAQ services become more and more of value to your family's comfort and health. Depending on your filter, the average time to change it is approximately every 1-3 months. One Hour Air's Filter Club program can help maintain cleaner air for your breathing environment.

Additional services for IAQ systems are also available including central air cleaners, ultra violet lights, HEPA filters, fresh air intakes and electronic air cleaners. If you have concerns regarding excess dust, dry air, allergens or airborne viruses and bacteria, One Hour Air's IAQ services can help.

Prior to employment, One Hour Air conducts an extensive background check and performs routine drug testing to ensure the safety of their customers. Along with continuous training for their technicians to guarantee service calls are handled in a professional manner. Service vehicles are regularly well-stocked and prepared for repair visits. They refer to it as their "warehouse on wheels". This ensures a majority of the repairs to be done immediately.

One Hour Air Conditioning has tripled in size over the past five years and has moved to a newly expanded facility to accommodate its growing customer needs. They are now located at 319 Hwy 85 N, in Niceville, adjacent to Benjamin Franklin Plumbing, a sister company providing the same high quality customer service for all your plumbing needs.

World-class customer service representatives are available to take your calls 24/7. Contact the office at 850-678-1498 for all your heating, cooling and plumbing needs. Military and senior discounts are also available upon request. Ask about monthly promotions, or visit them on Facebook. Additional information on services can be found at onehouremeraldcoast.com.

Niceville area volunteer earns presidential award

Niceville area volunteer Jim Miller was recently recognized by President Barack Obama and ShelterBox USA with a Presidential Volunteer Service Award for his efforts during 2011 to provide shelter, warmth and dignity for survivors of natural and other disasters worldwide.

In the aftermath of disasters such as the Japan earthquake and tsunami in March 2011, many watched on the television wishing they could make a difference. Miller, a Niceville resident since 1990, knew ShelterBox, an international disaster relief charity, would be on the scene delivering its "green box" containing a family tent, water purification, a cook set and stove, along with other lifesaving supplies.

"The personal award is nice recognition, but being part of the ShelterBox organization and knowing our fundraising activities are important to many people who have suffered from a disaster is more rewarding," Miller said.

Through Miller's efforts of raising awareness and funds for ShelterBox, the organization was able to provide more than 17,600 ShelterBoxes to families throughout the world in 2011, including the tornadoes in the southern U.S., drought and famine in East Africa, widespread flooding in the Philippines and the subsequent earthquakes in Turkey.

Miller said he gives ShelterBox presentations to increase awareness of the program.

"The generous community of Northwest Florida has been very responsive," he said. "In fact, the Rotary Clubs of this area are our biggest contributors."

Students volunteer time, effort throughout community

Instead of soaking up the sun on the Emerald Coast beaches like many spring breakers, 13 students from Barry University, Miami Shores, hit the shores of Choctawhatchee Bay in Niceville on March 6, to restore the shoreline.

The students were part of Barry University's Alternative Spring Break (ASB) program, a student-run organization that is dedicated to "making the world a better place" through its volunteer service.

During the week of March 9, the ASB students participated in several volunteer activities throughout the Niceville area, including shore restoration and volunteering at the local Head Start.

The first two days of their spring break, students worked in conjunction with the Choctawhatchee Bay Alliance (CBA) to create an artificial reef made of oyster shells along the shores of the bay.

Last year, the CBA started the O.Y.S.T.E.R. Shell Recycling Program, or "Offer

Your Shell to Enhance Restoration." The goal of the program is to collect oyster shells that would otherwise end up in a landfill, and reuse them to construct an oyster reef habitat.

According to the CBA website, "Oyster populations have declined in many places worldwide and Choctawhatchee Bay is no exception. By building reefs, we are providing a hard place for oyster spat (the sub-adult to adult growth period of an oyster) to settle and thrive, as well as providing a habitat for a variety of other important species."

"On the first day we were bagging the oyster shells in plastic netting," said co-adviser of the group, Christina Leano. "We tied the bags and loaded them into trucks, and the trucks dropped the shells in the area where we were going to put them. Then, we placed the bags into a boat, which brought people to the site where they created the artificial reef."

Although the reef work was labor-intensive, the students agreed it was well worth their time.

"We are helping our oceanic creatures, and we get to be closer to God's nature," said Chrystal Rincher, a freshman psychology major.

On March 7, the students switched from manual labor and took their volunteer efforts to Head Start in Niceville, to interact with children ages 3 through 5.

"It helps the children to see new faces," said Head Start Director Nadine Smith. "Some of these children don't have a male or female role model, so it helps to have these college students come in and work with the children. It gives them a positive role model to look up to."

Smith said the teachers at Head Start explained to the children what it meant to be a volunteer and a college student, in an effort to encourage the children to seek higher education and give back to their community.

"They've enjoyed having them here so much," Smith said. "It's important for the kids have this kind of interaction."

After their volunteer work concluded in Niceville, the ASB group headed to Lakeland where they witnessed the Coalition of Immokalee farm workers of Florida take part in a six day fast at a local Publix. The workers were trying to get the grocery store to sign a Fair Food Agreement, under which Publix would pay an extra penny per pound for tomatoes.

"The No. 1 thing is that students need to know the difference between social justice and volunteer work," said Chelsea Baker, a junior social work major. "It's easy to say, 'it's not my problem,' but to our group this is our backyard and we need to do something to help."

Because the university is located in the Miami area, the students agreed that missing out on a traditional spring break was not an issue, since they are able to "go to the beach and party" any time they wish.

"There's a lot of bad things going on in our world," said Aaron Mohammed, a sophomore chemistry major. "Imagine if no one stood up to do anything about it. I figure I should be that one person to stand up and try to make a difference."

Advertising in the Bay Beacon gets results! Here's proof!

Dear Bay Beacon,

We are going on a year old, and the first thing I did when I opened my store was put an ad in the local newspaper, the Bay Beacon. By using the Bay Beacon, Eglin Flyer and Hurlburt Patriot, our customers have found a place to save money on costly mattress sets. We recommend that other businesses in the area consider the Bay Beacon and their military newspapers when advertising. Their representatives are kind and thoughtful, doing what it takes to help your business get off the ground.

It takes money to make money, and putting your money on the page of the Bay Beacon is like money in the bank. When it comes to service, the Bay Beacon show professionalism.

Sincerely,

Robert Cook

Lewis Band earns Superior ratings at assessment

The Lewis Band earned All Superior ratings from the Florida Band Association judges at the yearly Music Performance Assessment held on March 9 at Pensacola High School. All Superior is the highest rating possible, and means the band was rated at an "A" level from each judge in both stage performance and sight reading. The Lewis Band director is Robert Colón.

Lewis School played host, on March 10, to the Okaloosa Middle School Academic Tournament.

Ten schools competed, and Ruckel Middle School took home first place in the junior varsity division.

The junior varsity team is coached by Vicki Washington, and is made up of members Meredith Freeman, Julia Freeman, Mandy Martin, Jake Vernon, Chris Halprin and John Hencinski.

Okaloosa Middle Schools, including Liza Jackson and St. Mary, host five tournaments each year. Each of the 10 schools alternate hosting every other year. The schools competed at the Lewis tournament, and all but one, Liza Jackson, had both junior varsity and varsity teams competing. The junior varsity teams are composed of fifth and sixth graders, and the varsity teams are composed of seventh and eighth graders.

Each team competes in a "round-robin" manner, whereby each team plays all of the other teams in its category. Each match consists of 20 toss-up bonus question pairs. Each question is worth 10 points.

The types of questions relate to the students' grade curriculum, and there are a variety of categories ranging from math, science, civics, social studies, language, literature and trivia.

Questions are read out loud, with four members of each team competing at the same time.

Substitutions can be made at half-time. If a team member buzzes in, and answers the question correctly, then that team receives a bonus question which they can discuss.

To prepare for the tournament, Washington said the Ruckel team practiced once a week, and practiced match-style answering questions. To prepare for the tournament, Washington said the team practiced once a week, and practiced match-style answering questions.
