Missing plane, body discovered

Dunnellon man finds wreckage in preserve

BUSTER THOMPSON
For the Riverland News

An airplane matching the description of a plane reported missing in April was found Sunday night by a Dunnellon man walking on a trailhead inside the Halpata Tastanaki Preserve in southwest Marion County

Human remains were also found still inside the cockpit.

According to a Marion County Sheriff's Office

(MCSO) press release, the plane is believed to be the one piloted by 74-year-old Theodore Weiss of Zephyrhills and was last seen departing from Dunnellon Airport en route to the Zephyrhills Airport on Saturday, April 5, and was reported missing the following Monday.

"This is his plane," Marion County sheriff's spokeswoman Lauren Lettelier said.

Marion County medical examiners arrived on scene to identify the

WHAT'S HAPPENING

Two injured in crash at Dunnellon airport

A 49-year-old male piloting an experimental aircraft and a passenger, a male in his 20s, were injured Tuesday morning when the craft crashed at the Dunnellon-Marion County Airport.

The pilot was transported as a trauma alert. The passenger did not sustain life-threatening injuries, a Marion County Fire Rescue spokeswoman said.

According to the spokeswoman, the experimental aircraft's two passengers were out of the flaming vehicle when MCFR Rescue 31 arrived one minute after dispatchers received the emergency call at 9:33 a.m. Crews from Rescue 31, Engine 31 and Rescue 63 put out the fire and transported the patients to Ocala Regional Medical Center.

According to the Marion County Sheriff's Office, the NTSB and FAA will not respond because the agencies do not recognize this as an aircraft. The department's Major Crimes Division and Evidence team documented the scene.

When Tom Golden was hired to serve as pastor of First Assembly of God in Dunnellon, he not only brought with him a wealth of biblical knowledge, but a desire to see the congregation of his church reach out into the community.

Prior to serving as a pastor in Ohio, the Rev. Golden and his flock had helped to provide meals to high school football teams in the community he lived in. He had hoped through his experiences there, he could do the

POA seeks more details

Board wants financial data

The future of Rainbow Springs Golf & Country Club is in the hands of the Rainbow Springs Property Owners Association (POA) and the residents, said Mark Kaprelian, who issued an offer to sell the course to the POA with a Friday deadline to agree to a $2.3 million purchase price.

But Bob Frankenfield, the president of the Board of Directors of the POA, disagrees, explaining Kaprelian has to provide financial documents regarding the facility's yearly operating costs, or records showing the club's profits for the past eight years since Kaprelian and his wife, Kasia, purchased the clubhouse, course and lots.

"You've got to look at the financials," Frankenfield said. "I don't think he's going to be willing to share those. The ball is in his court to put all of the details together. You can't even start to talk to the community without all of the information. I don't think they are real anxious, unless Mark comes up with something reasonable."

However, if an email Kaprelian wrote to the POA Board is any indication of where he stands regarding the sale price, he has no intention of budging on the $2.3 million figure.

"As we discussed, my offer remains pretty simple," Kaprelian stated, extending

Dunnellon's Simply Seafood, LLC, owned by Debbie and John Galeazzi, has been given the honor of being the third best restaurant in the central Florida area by TripAdvisor, a travel website reviewing travel-related information.

"TripAdvisor called and said we were in the top 10 and later told us we were No. 3 out of 6,161 restaurants," Debbie said. "First- and second-place winners were restaurants located in Orlando. We were so excited."

The restaurant is located at 12149 S. Williams St., across from Dunnellon's City Hall and next to the Simply Seafood market.

The quaint, cozy eatery with the pleasant aroma wafting from the building is still difficult to find.

"I was looking for the seafood market and I drove up and down the street until I found it and as I was leaving I saw the restaurant and I've been coming ever since," Dunnellon resident Linda Costello said. "This place is the best kept secret and I body, but it could take months to determine if the body is that of Weiss.

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) was also on scene.

The airplane found Sunday is a white, Sonex experimental aircraft with a green stripe and "N229P" on the tail section.

According to the FAA, the Fortuna-Sonex, N229P, is registered to Weiss.

The aircraft was reported departing by a private pilot who did not file a flight plan from the Marion County-Dunnellon Airport to Zephyrhills Municipal Airport in Pasco County during unfavorable weather conditions, according to April's preliminary report by the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB).

In the same report, personnel from the Dunnellon Airport lost sight of the airplane as it flew south due to visual obstructions.

Radar lost track of the aircraft as it continued south and an emergency locator was not reported to have been activated.

Searchers with the Citrus County and Hernando County sheriff's offices combed 41,000 acres of woodland beginning April 7 between Dunnellon and Zephyrhills when the plane was reported missing, but gave up the weeklong search with no results.

Other agencies including Marion County Sheriff's Office also participated in the search.

The Halpata Tantanaki Preserve is directly south of the Dunnellon Airport in southwestern Marion County, a short distance west of State Road 200 and just north of the Citrus-Marion County border.

Daryl Burns travels the preserve's trails regularly and discovered the crash site when walking at the Pruitt Trailhead sometime around 8:30 p.m. on Sunday.

"I entered a big wooden hammock and I as I entered the hammock I saw what I thought was a squatters' camp ... and as I got closer I realized it was a plane," Burns said. "The first thing that came to my mind was here's the plane, where's the body?"

Burns was aware that a plane was reported missing five months ago in the area, but it wasn't until he found the "skeletal remains" that he knew it was the same plane.

"If the plane had been found earlier, then there wouldn't have been anybody there. So I knew, I didn't want to, but I knew there was a body inside, so I walked around the side, looked in and there he was," Burns said. "I was a little scared because that is my first time seeing something like that."

According to Burns, the plane was upside down and generally still intact except for extensive damage to its front cabin and nose.

"When it did hit the ground, I think it hit nose first because the rotor was about five feet in front of the plane," Burns said.

Burns later called 911 from the preserve's entrance located off of Southwest County Road 484 and managed to flag down a Dunnellon police officer.

Marion County sheriff's investigators collected vital pieces of evidence, including the GPS locator, scattered around the site.

Further details on the crash will be released after a joint-preliminary report is filed by the FAA and the NTSB with assistance from the Marion County Sheriff's Office.

his original Oct. 24 deadline to Wednesday, Oct. 28, for a response from the POA. "The price of the club is $2,324,000, non-negotiable."

Kaprelian also outlined the terms of financing the deal with the POA, noting he can finance the deal up to 10 years with 20 percent down, or $468,000, and a 5 percent interest rate ($9,360) or you can finance yourself.

"The purchase is contingent on your due diligence after you get the authorization to proceed from the residents," Kaprelian stated.

Frankenfield argued the POA Board cannot proceed with polling the residents without the proper information, which he stressed is necessary.

"You've got to do your due diligence," he said. "We cannot just write a check. That would be kind of crazy. Until I hear from him I'm not 100 percent sure how we're going to pursue it at this time. We have no idea what profits are and let's face it, you really are not buying acreage and bricks and mortar. It would likely take us two to five years to get to a break even."

If the feedback Frankenfield has already received from a number of property owners within the community are valid, the feelings of many are to steer clear of a deal with Kaprelian for the aging facility.

"I got a lot of email and phone calls over the weekend stating 'don't do it,'" Frankenfield said. "Hostile is the word. Most of them are negative about pursuing the purchase of the course. All of the golfers and members who live on (the course) want to preserve the club."

Hopefully, Frankenfield said, the community will see a private individual or group who would come in and purchase the facility and make it work.

"I understand the value of the country club in the community, but it's not all consuming. It does affect our property values," Frankenfield said. "When you really look at it, the model has to be changed, it hasn't been successful. We'll see what (Mark's) response is. (The residents) have to decide if this is something they want to pursue."

"We are truly in a holding pattern."

Kaprelian plans to close the country club Dec. 31; however, on Oct. 13, he unveiled three options to residents of the deed-restricted community for the future of the facility.

His first option would be to have the Rainbow Springs POA purchase the facility. Kaprelian said residents would need to pay an additional $240 yearly on their assessments.

Kaprelian's other two options were aimed at keeping the club open through 2015:

An increase in golf and social memberships. Kaprelian said he needs 315 golf members and 500 social members. Currently, there are less than 200 golf members and fewer than 100 social members.

The POA approving a one-time $300 assessment to each property owner. That, Kaprelian said, would allow him to purchase the necessary equipment and hire an outside realty company to run the day-to-day operations.

Vote 'yes' for public education

In just a few weeks, Marion County voters will decide what the future of public education looks like in our community. They will vote on a millage increase impacting property owners countywide.

I hope you will join me and vote "yes." Let me explain why.

This 1-mill ad valorem tax increase amounts to about $75 each year for the average homeowner. Expected to raise $15 million annually, a four-year limit on the tax means it could generate $60 million total. An independent citizens group will guarantee the money is spent as promised. And you, as a resident in our community, have every right to question that committee just to make sure. The same goes for our school board members and for me as your superintendent.

You may remember two years ago I did not favor a property tax proposal included as part of the primary election. I pledged that, if elected, I would closely evaluate our budget during my first year and determine if additional funds were needed. I have followed through on this promise and it is now more evident than ever that our school district needs additional revenue.

My administration's first year involved major challenges — a significant financial deficit thanks to a sluggish economy and lack of needed state funding and dangerously low reserves. This situation forced us to make painful choices like laying off employees and reducing programs like art, music, physical education, and library/media services.

Let me be clear: I am not satisfied with our current financial situation, and I strongly believe it must be a temporary one. We must restore art, music, library, and physical education programs to 100 percent. We must reduce class size and give our teachers the classroom support they need. We can do better, and we must do better.

Our district has three major sources of revenue — federal, state and local. It is at the local level where this additional millage makes the most impact and where you have the most control.

The millage will replenish elementary schools with their own art teachers, music teachers, and media specialists. No longer will they split instruction time between two schools. A full contingent of physical education teachers will serve our elementary schools, and class sizes will be more manageable and aligned with state requirements.

Highly qualified, state-certified teachers will stay in Marion County instead of moving elsewhere. And vocational programs will grow to offer students more exposure beyond the traditional classroom.

Marion County Public Schools is focused on fully preparing students for the future — whether that be in college, vocational programs, technical schools, the armed forces, or entering the workforce. Unfortunately, this focus has been blurred by a common factor — money. Or the lack thereof.

The last decade has been difficult for Marion County Public Schools. Funding cuts topped $50 million. Dozens of support positions — at both school and district levels — were eliminated. Teachers were not replaced when they retired. Other positions simply go unfilled. Our technology needs far outweigh our budget dollars, and maintaining our 7,000,000 square feet of school space happens with prayers for no major breakdowns or outages.

Some people say we should cut everyone at the district level — too many administrators. In reality, we are the fifth lowest in the state when it comes to administrative costs.

Our finance department has received the highest accountability award in the country for 14 years running and our district earned multiple national awards for its transparency efforts. A districtwide energy program has saved over $21 million to date in utility costs. And this year, five National Merit semifinalists call one of our public high schools home.

We do great things in Marion County Public Schools. We will do even greater things with less worry about our finances.

As a voter, you have the power to impact our community in a great way. Let's invest in our future instead of simply depending on others to do what they should. Let's take charge and make the commitment to repair a major component of our great community — public education.

Vote "yes" for our schools on Tuesday, Nov. 4.

George Tomy is the Superintendent of Marion County Public Schools.

TALES OF TIME

Refocus negative aura

We all do it sometime or another. We know better, but we do it anyway. I know better than to read the Letters to the Editor in the Riverland News, but I did it anyway. Of course the anti-everything naysayers were there.

Writing a response is easy enough. The naysayers write in virtually the same thing in every paper I read. I already know what they are going to say, so I already know what my response will be. It's just a matter of picking up any copy of the newspaper.

If "they" inserted something in there, which was factual and informative, my apologies for missing it. People who talk just to hear themselves talk and speak loudly without actually "saying" anything are easy to ignore, and any stray substantive thought can get lost in the rambling.

I hope to address here a few of the pet issues of the peanut gallery.

• Foremost is Greenlight. This was a godsend for the naysayers longing for something to complain about. It was a poor plan to begin with and was an ongoing fiasco. If that fiasco had a slightly longer shelf life, it would have bankrupted the city and the naysayers would have received an even larger gift.

The good news with Greenlight is we have quit digging our hole deeper. Fittingly for that outfit, the transfer of ownership went wrong and it gave the naysayers good reason to pile on. The mayor and city manager would have to stay up very late at night to devise a more ineffective way to dispose of Greenlight, but in the big picture they had to dump that company somehow. And fast.

If we paid someone a dollar to take it off our hands we would have been far better off. Seems to me that's sort of what we did. Writing in to complain about Greenlight may get the loud talkers heard, but what does it accomplish? Just how many Greenlight proponents are left to be converted over to thinking it was a bad idea.

• Also near and dear to the hearts of the whiners is their water bill. The last time I took the time to explain to them how wrong, wrong, wrong they are about this issue I received a nasty rebuttable about taxation without representation.

Well it ain't no tax. It's a user fee. Use less and you pay less. An example of a tax is income tax. You have to earn less money to pay less income tax. A decidedly more painful experience than watering your lawn less.

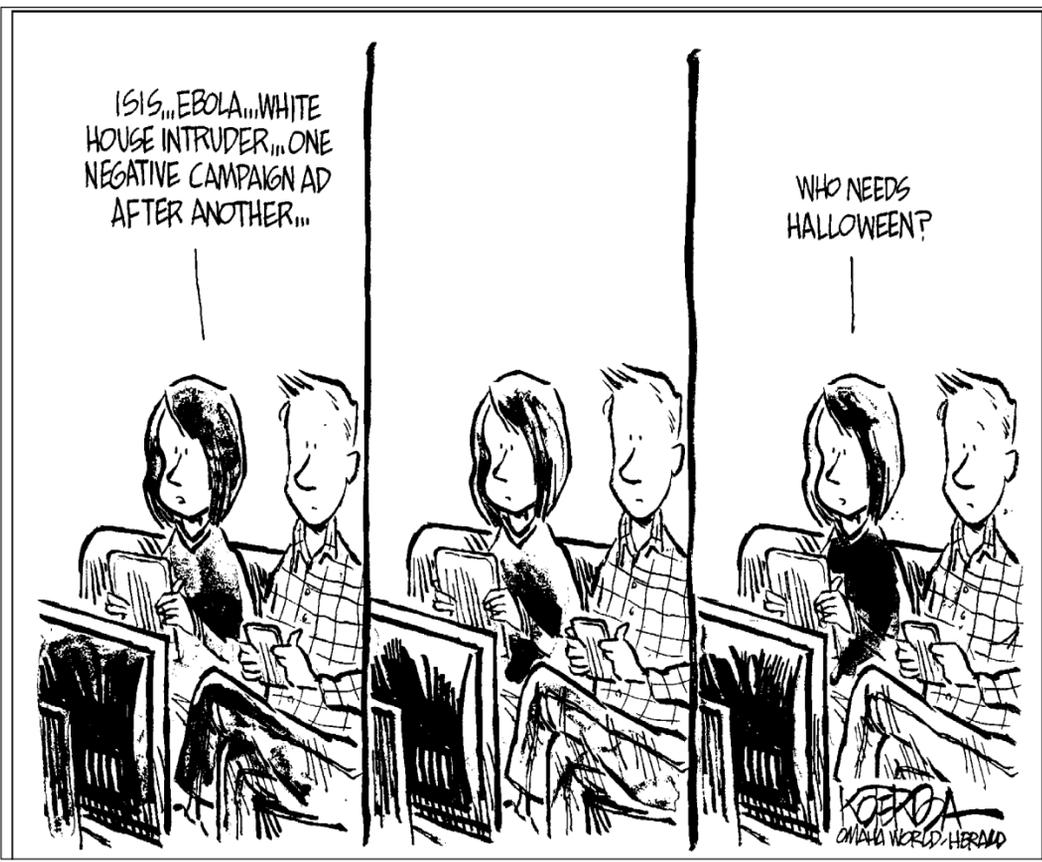

As for representation, every street corner I pass is covered up with the signs of candidates desiring to represent me in some fashion. If you want to be represented, vote. If you want to represent us, run for office. If you want your picture in the paper every week for years, pile on the frivolous never-ending lawsuits.

It is beyond me how the taxation without representation guy can call himself an environmentalist and care about our river and then turn around and sue the city for lower water rates. These are two diametrically opposed ideas.

THE JERSEY GIRL

Party on, stepson of mine

My husband is on his way to the airport to drop off my stepson, who stays with us every summer. He's flying back to Vermont.

I chose not to ride with them as I needed some peace and quiet. Not only that, but I'll spend the day washing sheets and towels, scrubbing the bathroom and getting the house "back to normal."

Logan is 6-foot-4 and wears a size 15 shoe in a family where the tallest person peaks out at 5-10. He sort of comes in and out of a room with the intensity of Mr. Clean except instead of leaving behind a beaming ray of cleanliness, he leaves behind a messy trail of dirt.

If you have a son who's in his 20s, you know what I'm talking about. It's that age between child and adulthood, kind of awkward and kind of scary. He can do his own laundry, but please don't expect him to fold it or put it away.

Logan marches to the beat of a different drummer, which is a good trait to have. He has a bowl haircut and an odd looking mustache. Sometimes he wears wool caps and sometimes he lives in hoodies. But that's just him.

I never raised a boy at that age. It's a whole different ballgame. By the time my girls were 22, they were mature and working full time jobs. They say it takes boys a heck of a lot longer to grow up.

Right now, life is one big party. I think he wakes up in the mornings wondering what brand of beer he should try today, or maybe discover if he can sleep all day so he can stay awake all night. And I'm sure his thoughts also turn to food, as I've never seen anybody eat as much as he does. Oh, except my youngest daughter when she was pregnant and ate a whole pizza and 12-inch sub all by herself.

He's actually pretty ambitious though. Not only does he play in a band, but he's also a chef. He recently earned his four-year degree at Paul Smith's Culinary Arts College in New York.

When he was here last summer, he made us chicken Marsala. This year, it was spaghetti. Both meals were delicious; however, the kitchen looked like it had lost the battle with sauce, flour and grease splattering the floor and stovetop. It took longer to clean than it did to eat.

My husband converts to a grown child when his son is here. The first week he actually kept up with him and his partying ways. The second week, he gave a valiant try. By the third week, I think my husband was exhausted and done trying.

I'm not sure why I'm so hard on my stepson. Maybe it's because he's a boy or maybe it's because he's not a teenager anymore. But I think it's because I want him to live up to his potential and be the best person he can be.

I know I probably expect too much of him. But he's a sweetheart about it all.

I could never have a full-time kid at my age. I don't have the energy. If I don't get my eight hours of sleep at night, I cannot function the next day. I give my brother, Dominic, all the credit in the world for keeping up with his two young daughters.

It's not Logan's fault that we lead such quiet lives these days that having him here is like attending a rock concert every night. Russell's and my lives revolve around coffee, television and routine. When Logan is here, it's alcoholic beverages, loud music and nothing is ever on schedule. But that's what kids are for.

I enjoy his visits, but I believe that once kids are grown they need a place of their own so they can spread their wings and do their own thing.

He had originally asked us to purchase him a ticket to Mexico when he left our house. My husband squashed that crazy idea real fast. I'm happy to report he's safely back at home.

So for now we'll watch him grow and find himself. We'll enjoy his triumphs and endure his mistakes. Until he makes his own way in the world and we can finally sit back, relax and wait for the grandkids.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Columnist missing true calling in life

Was Ms. Kathleen Wallace serious in her column last week telling us people vote for candidates based on what they see in a paid television commercial and then telling us a truly informed voter, assumably meaning herself, is a rarity?

Ms. Wallace is clearly a very gifted clairvoyant and her talents are completely wasted as a "columnist."

Later on in her pseudo-commentary, she castigates the gubernatorial candidates based on their physical appearances and their method of presentation in a speech. It does appear that Ms. Wallace's methods of evaluating candidates are even more trivial and ridiculous than those who believe everything they see and hear on TV.

The wise and old adage of never judging a book by its cover has completely eluded Ms. Wallace who perhaps considers herself a physically perfect and visually aesthetic human.

I don't claim to know much, but I always thought that an informed voter embraces actual issues, which do not include physical appearances or unproven accusations of impropriety.

Ms. Wallace is guilty of the very same traits that she feels are lacking in the voting public. Does anyone at the Riverland News edit or even read Ms. Wallace's column prior to publication?

Judging from last week's column, I think probably not.

Matthew P. Fox,
Dunnellon

Third-party candidate is best choice

In last week's column, "Political ads on TV ...," Kathleen Wallace lamented the two poor choices for governor Floridians are facing. Don't believe what you see on TV is an adage we're all familiar with. We have a better choice.

Too many political commercials from well-funded RepubliCrats are driving our political system to ruin. The evidence plays out in high taxes and voter apathy.

The solution is to stop buying into the political junk you see on TV.

It doesn't serve us well to vote for the lesser of two evils. It doesn't serve us well to quit voting altogether. There is a better choice.

There is a third-party candidate you can vote for with a sense of doing something positive for your future.

The Libertarian ballot choice is Adrian Wyllie.

Wyllie is a husband, father, small business owner, veteran, radio personality and community leader. He is an honest, principled man who understands what defending the constitution means. He proudly served his country in the 56th Air Defense Artillery and the 53rd Infantry Brigade.

Libertarians believe in the ideals inscribed in the constitution.

The Libertarian idea is to be liberal socially — live and let live.

Conservative financially — minimize taxes.

"We the people" are quite capable of running our lives. The question we should be concerned with is how to best accomplish our goals, not how to appease autocrats or comply with government overreach.

Don't buy the TV propaganda. Check out Adrian Wyllie's website at wyllieforgovernor.com.

Buying country club shouldn't happen

I read with great interest the article in the Oct. 16 edition of the Riverland News, as Mark Kaprelian made his pitch to the property owners of Rainbow Springs.

The offer he made is just a continuation of his behavior for the past five years. The offer itself is ridiculous with an impossible deadline and no offer of negotiation.

Per the article, the price is $2.3 million, which is "the price tag he placed on the facility three years ago when he announced he was selling it." He publicly announced at an annual meeting in November 2012 that "the club was never for sale."

Which is it? Why the double talk?

Mr. Kaprelian wants $2.3 million for the golf and country club, which is "a broken down club," (Kaprelian's words via email June 19. Let us not forget the constant hammering by Mr. Kaprelian that our homes are going to lose value.

The presentation focused on what everyone has done wrong, which is why the country club is not making money. The big glaring omission in the presentation was what Mr. Kaprelian and his partner — sometimes they are married and other times not — have done to contribute to the downfall of the country club.

They have lost membership every year since they took ownership and will continue to do so until they close or sell the country club. Mr. Kaprelian has always tried to take the easy way to get money and started right after he got here — let's raise the rates.

This in turn caused a lawsuit, which was settled (Mr. Kaprelian says he won) — and he lost membership. He left the rates the same, but took away more of the amenities; food wasn't always available, social activities occurred less, but prices for everything kept going up. He lost more membership and then stated he never intended to be in the golf and country club business, but real estate.

want to keep it that way."

Costello and her husband, Patrick, are part of a group of seven patrons who have been gathering at the restaurant for their dinner on Wednesday evening for the past few months.

"We all met while eating at the restaurant. Everyone is so friendly here and we became friends," Kathy Appie of Inverness said. "The couple that just left were from The Villages."

The remainder of the group consists of Jim and Gloria Casey, who moved here from Cape Cod and discovered the seafood eatery from her mother's friend, Jules Yakus.

"The food here is cooked New England style," the Caseys both remarked about the taste and freshness of their dinner.

The group is concerned the little restaurant will become so popular that they won't be able to get a reservation for their usual Wednesday dinner, but Debbie assured them they would always make room for their regulars.

The restaurant was not part of the original dream when the Galeazzi's moved here from New York.

"We spoke of starting this business and when we first got here I would get a full time job and we could open the business in three years," John remembered. "With $5,000 and a car load of stuff we moved down here and rented a house."

They chose Dunnellon because Debbie's brother lived in Crystal River and there was a pre-existing fish market for rent. Unfortunately the store was already rented by the time they arrived, but the landlord still took their name.

"The first step was trying to find a location when the landlord called to tell us the place was now available and asked if we still wanted it," Debbie said. "We opened about two months later with two fish cases."

They advertised for two weeks before they had the grand opening of the Simply Seafood fish market on July 26, 2007.

"On the first day we took in $110 and the reality of what we were doing set in," John said. "On Dec. 24, we went over $1,000 and it was a sign that we should keep going."

Fortunately, John had gotten a full-time job at Walmart to help with expenses when they first moved here eight years ago. He is still working there and helping out with the business.

They both decided to get into the seafood market business because of their varied fish industry backgrounds. Debbie worked summers on different types of charter boats up north and then came south in the winter to work in the fish houses.

"It (the fish) would come off the boat and we would have to clean and prepare the fish before they went to the different restaurants," Debbie said.

John was an avid fisherman and was involved with the retail aspect of the seafood business, only on a bigger scale than what they currently have now.

"Our backgrounds are different," he said. "We have a great knowledge of fish, but we are still learning."

The eventual opening of the restaurant two years ago was a result of John's enthusiasm and customers asking them how to cook and prepare the different fish they were buying.

"John was so enthusiastic about opening the restaurant," Debbie said smiling. "My 'kick in the butt' husband convinced me that we could do it."

They moved into the small place next to the seafood market and planned their menu. They decided everything would be fresh made, cooked to order and made from scratch.

"Everywhere we go, the seafood on the menu is all fried. Why not have fish that isn't fried?" John questioned. "Let's give the people something out of their comfort zone and make it really good."

The Simply Seafood restaurant opened its doors in November 2012 with a chef, but that didn't work out for long. Soon a second chef was hired and health problems forced him to leave. Debbie took over the role of cooking about four months ago to rave reviews.

"I would come here after working at Walmart and work the tables and get positive feedback from the customers," John said. "They didn't even know Deb was cooking."

Since Debbie took over the job of cooking they hired Carlos Ramirez to help by waiting on tables and doing a little bit of everything.

"Carlos has been a friend of ours for a long time and he came to help us," Debbie said. "We'll keep Carlos on as long as he's willing to stay."

The eatery offers fresh seafood obtained from Tampa, Orlando, Homosassa and a northern purveyor provides the New England scallops, salmon and lobster, according to the owners.

For those who don't eat seafood, the menu has a few chicken choices available and they offer a non-seafood special on most days.

"We can cook most anything if someone can't eat seafood," Debbie said. "We want to please everyone."

The Simply Seafood restaurant is at 12149 S. Williams St. It is open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For information or to make reservations, call 465-1554.

DMS gears up for Red Ribbon Week activities

Delbert Smallridge
DMS
Principal

October is National Bully Prevention Month and Oct. 22 was National SAVE Day. We have been meeting Mondays and with each after-school meeting the Dunnellon Middle School SAVE (Students Against Violence Everywhere) Club has discussed bullying.

One day, club members watched an informative short video, did team building exercises, another day students filmed a commercial/PSA regarding bullying.

During lunch, from Oct. 16 to Oct. 21, students were asked to "stand up" and pledge to be violence free for the rest of the year by signing pledges that were links of a paper chain.

On Oct. 22, during National SAVE Day, we asked everyone to join us in solidarity by wearing orange and purple. By doing so, they were showing they were breaking the code of silence and helping us "Break the Chain of Violence." We symbolically took the paper link chain and broke it and hung the broken pieces up to represent throughout Red Ribbon Week, our continued pledge to be bully free.

Red Ribbon Week will be today through Oct. 31 at Dunnellon Middle School. Please join us in our week of activities as we bring awareness to the ills of drugs, alcohol, and violence. Our theme is "Keep Calm and Stay Bully and Drug Free." The kickoff is from 6 to 8 p.m. today at the Ocala Police Department, and

Bulldogs nip DHS rally

DWIGHT PORTER/For the Riverland News

Dunnellon coach Price Harris chats with his offensive unit during their second-half rally, in which the Tigers' outscored Suwannee 28-18. However, the third-ranked Bulldogs held on for a 52-35 victory. It was Dunnellon's second straight loss after reeling off five straight victories. The Tigers will attempt to end their losing streak at 7:30 p.m. today at Gainesville Eastside.

Tigers aim to snap slide at Eastside

JEFF BRYAN • RIVERLAND NEWS

Dunnellon coach Price Harris knows the end results of the Tigers 52-35 loss to third-ranked Suwannee wasn't what his squad had hoped for coming off a disheartening blowout loss to North Marion the week before.

But what the first-year Tiger coach did learn is his team might be able to look back on the second half of their District 5A-5 tilt against the Bulldogs and realize it was when Dunnellon turned the corner for the future.

"In the second half, the players understood they can play with this team, but by the time we realized it, we had got in such a hole," said Harris, whose team outscored Suwannee, 28-18, in the second half. "We got a couple of possessions and scored ... we came back and made it 45-35. That last outside kick, we just couldn't get to it, and they recovered it. The defense started stepping up in the second half, got a couple of turnovers.

"(The kids) fought and they clawed. I was still proud of them. We really fought, we never gave up. The key was we continued to fight. That's what I was so proud of; they didn't give up. Hopefully that will carry over in last two games and into the future."

The third-ranked Bulldogs jumped all over Dunnellon in the first half, racing out to a 35-7 halftime lead. Harris said his team's first-half performance wasn't because from lingering effects of the Tigers' 43-0 loss to North Marion the week before, but was due to poor execution.

"We just didn't execute to begin with, we missed a couple of blocks, we dropped a few passes and missed a few tackles," he said. "Once we started to execute, we started playing much better."

Dunnellon doesn't have the luxury of contemplating about its past two games, as the Tigers take to the road tonight for another District 5A-5 contest against Gainesville Eastside. Despite their 2-5 overall mark, the Rams are 2-2 in district play, in a two-way tie for third with Dunnellon.

Dunnellon running back Rudy Sinflorant rushed for 134 yards and one touchdown on 14 carries against the Bulldogs.

Eastside also has speed, a troublesome problem this past season for the Tigers, notably evident in their past two games, both losses.

"We haven't done really well with the speed factor the past couple of weeks," Harris said. "Offensively, they're very good. They can beat up on you easily."

A victory is important because the Tigers aren't out of the playoff picture yet, Harris said, but his team will need plenty of assistance from Santa Fe come Friday night. The Raiders will play against North Marion, and a loss by the Colts would create a three-way tie for second place among Santa Fe, North Marion and Dunnellon.

"Now we just have to be really big Santa Fe Raider fans, because if they can pull off the upset," he said, noting it would force a three-way tie. "Before it was in our hands, because we could take care of our business. But now, hopefully, Santa Fe will help us out a little."

Tiger to Cubs program back at Dunnellon Elementary

RITA HUTTON

For the Riverland News

The Dunnellon Elementary School Tiger to Cubs program has returned. Last week, a number of students from Dunnellon High School were on campus to pair up with their buddies.

This is a successful program started four years ago by Danielle Prinz. The high school students come once a week before their school starts to mentor and be a buddy to elementary students.

In the future, there will be book studies as well as field trips that "Tiger to Cub" students will participate in. Students here at Dunnellon Elementary really look up to their buddies and benefit from the one-on-one time.

We need to give a shout out to Morgan Luckey, Tiger to Cubs coordinator from Dunnellon High, and Denise Fields, fourth-grade teacher at Dunnellon Elementary, for their hard work in orchestrating this successful program again this year.

Please help us congratulate, Mary Blanchette, Dunnellon Elementary's Teacher of the Year, and Michele Goode, Rookie Teacher of the Year. Blanchette is a National Board Certified teacher in literacy (reading and writing). Since 2007, Blanchette has been awarded more than $21,000 in grants to assist our school and students.

The Dunnellon Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) has formed for the new school year. Officers are: Lisa O'Teney, president; Wendy Kimball, Vice president; Ms. Geatches, secretary; and Kathy Hainish and Nicole Sasnett, treasurers. The PTO has plans for a winter carnival and the event will be from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 5. There will be a display of Christmas trees from around the world with classes decorating each tree vying for votes from attendees.

"I brought that servant mentality to Dunnellon with me," Golden said.

Before fully implementing the plan, Golden approached Price Harris in January, shortly after the veteran football coach was hired as Frank Beasley's replacement. Harris explained Gruffs Tap & Grill would provide meals for the team at its home games, but the first-year coach was excited about meals being provided for away games.

When Golden shared his ideas with the congregation, Golden said, there was little to no discussion, but a call to action.

"The Board said, 'Let's do it,'" Golden recalled.

So along with Golden, the church members drew up their own game plan for feeding the Dunnellon High varsity football team when the Tigers would take to the road. Not only has the varsity team been feed on a regular basis, but monies collected have been able to provide meals for the junior varsity squad, too.

"We've got a game plan, which is we're flexible. We were willing to take it on," said Golden, who relocated to Florida with his wife, Krista; son, Levi, 10; and daughter, Molly, 8. He credited his wife and family with being supportive in the endeavor.

"My wife is with me every Friday night, she brings the halftime snacks to the locker room, she travels to the away games. The (Dunnellon) police officers assist her at halftime, bringing in the coolers and setting up to help pass out the snacks."

But the program, so to speak, has grown by leaps and bounds in the past two months, Golden said, attributing its success to St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, Hope Lutheran Church, Dunnellon Presbyterian Church, First United Methodist Church and the Annie W. Johnson Senior & Family Center for their respective assistance, whether it was providing a meal or contributing funds to help pay for food.

"Christine (Avinas)' daughters have been involved with our youth program for a while now, and with her work at Annie Johnson's she was able to help provide fruit for the

The Rev. Tom Golden, who is the pastor of First Assembly of God in Dunnellon, prays with the Dunnellon High football team and cheerleaders after the Tigers' last seconds victory against Crystal River this season. Golden, who serves as team chaplain, first approached his congregation about providing meals to the team during the season.

"That's been a great contribution," Golden said, crediting the five to six volunteers who pick up the fruit Friday afternoons. Then, he added, they spent an additional two to three hours cutting it up and placing it in baggies for the players.

Golden applauded the efforts of Betty Webb for organizing the team meals, lining up volunteers.

"She's been instrumental in making it all happen," Golden said.

In addition, it's been the knowledge of Peter and Betty Beyer for cooking the main course. Former restaurant owners before retiring, Golden said the Beyers understood of what is needed to prepare large meals has been wonderful.

"They are kind of our church cooks. They prepare the main dishes, get it cooked when it's needed," said Golden, noting meals are prepared based on the needs of carbohydrates and proteins. Most dinners consist of chicken and pastas.

"Our church here is very supportive of the idea," Golden said. "They are very energetic, very enthusiastic. Our people have responded very, very well. We have a lot of retirees from all over the U.S. who came to Florida to enjoy their lives, and they really are making an impact and making a difference. That's what it's all about."

"The boys are wonderful and always show their appreciation. They love it."

Betty Beyer said the experience has been a blessing.

"It's been very, very rewarding," said Betty Beyer, who has lived in the Dunnellon area for the past 11 years since she and her husband moved here 11 years ago from Long Island, N.Y. "The boys, the girls, the coaches, they are so appreciative. It's extremely rewarding, it's been fun to be a part of the community, be a part of the young people's lives. The boys, not one of them, passes in front of us without saying thank you."

Betty Beyer credited Betty Webb for her efforts.

"Without Ms. Betty Webb, without her coordination, getting papers in order, getting volunteers, it would have been very, very difficult without her," she explained, adding if Golden seeks to do it again next year, "we're first in line to help."

Dunnellon coach Price Harris considers the efforts of all of those involved, "unbelievable." "That's the people in the community stepping in for the kids, giving up their time, giving of themselves," the first-year skipper said. "It's just a blessing. Tom has been a blessing the whole year. These churches and organizations have been a blessing."

"He just wants to bless the kids, when you have individuals like that that's something special. That's what this community is all about: the kids come first and that's why I'm so proud to be here."

Golden also serves as the team's chaplain, a task he thoroughly enjoys, but does not take lightly either. He said he's not there for just the players, but the coaches as well.

"He's a super duper guy and a great man," Harris said. "He's a guy you can lean on, you can talk to when needed ... that's huge. He's just a guy who's there for the program. He wants to see the program be successful; he has no ulterior motives. He just wants to see the kids of Dunnellon having success and being treated right."

Golden credits Harris with helping his and his family's transition to Florida be an easy adjustment.

"(Price) has been a vital component for helping me feel welcomed and comfortable in moving to Florida," Golden said. "Our friendship is strong. I think he's a great man, a great coach. I like the way he disciplines the players, but loves on the boys, too. I think God has put him in my life as much as he's put me into his life."

Golden is hopeful as he becomes more involved in the community, other churches will become involved in assisting with not just the football program, but the school as a whole.

"I'm all about whatever we can do to draw our community together, it's all for the better," he said. "It takes down a lot of walls. In my mind, it's not a church thing. It's a God thing and a community thing when it comes to helping out the high school or the athletic programs."

For information about how to contribute to pregame meals, call Golden at 419-631-5640.

be built on the golf course — never happened — and the condition of the golf course and the club house has gotten worse. If you are going to own a business at least have a little pride in it.

If one business is not successful, why do you open a second business (Kaprelian Real Estate) and pull assets out of one to create the other? When you rob Peter to pay Paul, it catches up with you and that has happened here.

The club had a major water leak/sinkhole situation in May 2014 and the alleged insurance settlement was $361,475. Allegedly, the money was never used to fix the club, but it did buy Mr. Kaprelian a house in Jacksonville.

The road widening of U.S. 41 is in its early stages with construction not scheduled to start until at least 2018. Mr. Kaprelian is going to close the club now. Why? So the residents should buy it for a cool $2.3 million — not happening — and Mr. Kaprelian is flushed with cash again so he can go off on his next adventure.

I'm sorry, but I don't want to be part of it. I don't like to be bullied. Sell it or shut it down and get out of town.

Mary Camara Stone,
Rainbow Springs

Purchasing golf course waste of money

Once again the current owner of the Rainbow Springs Golf Course is attempting to sell the property to area residents, citing all sorts of horror stories about what might happen if such an agreement isn't made. I take issue with not only the premise, but the pitch.

I moved here from Southwest Florida and the No. 1 resort development in the country, according to the National Association of Homebuilders, with its very own "signature" golf course. That first-class course was struggling to achieve profitability, along with others in the U.S., which are failing at the rate of one every 48 hours.

What makes anyone here think the Rainbow Springs golf course could do any better?

This issue was addressed shortly after I moved here two years ago. About two-thirds of Rainbow Springs Homeowners' Association residents voted against spending money on a feasibility study to purchase the golf course at that time. Why should anyone want to consider it now that it's apparently in even more trouble than before?

There is little real evidence that our property values would be affected by the lack of a golf course. Most of us didn't move here for the golf.

Rainbow Springs is not a "golf community" per se. It's a series of communities in which a very small portion of the residents — 170 or so — are golfing members of a private club playing at their own expense.

Golf courses are now in fact liabilities to home ownership in so-called planned "golf communities."

Rainbow Springs property owners were recently threatened with pictures of abandoned golf courses elsewhere "going to seed." Potential county regulations to discourage this kind of thing are being considered.

There are other golf courses available for recreational golf for the relatively small number of local golfers. The clubhouse is two decades old and in need of some repair.

Buying a golf course just to keep the grass mowed and have some place to congregate would be a stunningly poor decision. Requiring homeowners to pay for golf courses has been successfully challenged in court, and would no doubt be again should it occur here. (There has been no indication that such a requirement has been considered at this time were it even legal to do so.)

What does come to mind as a potential "win-win" scenario is converting the Rainbow Springs Golf Course into a conservation trust, state park or permanent wildlife preserve instead.

I don't know if the current owners have explored this option, but considering its location in prime spring shed area and the likely passing of Amendment 1 (Florida Water and Land Conservation Initiative) in the November election, it seems an idea worth pursuing.

I moved to the area partly to avoid having to pour money into yet another cash sinkhole (aka "golf course"). Judging by feedback from neighbors, most of us feel the same way we did two years ago.

I do, however, believe that repurposing the Rainbow Springs Golf Course into a protected area for the benefit of our world class Rainbow Springs and every resident in Marion County and beyond is, indeed, a worthwhile pursuit.

I hope the present owners will pursue this avenue instead of trying to convince Rainbow Springs retirees to foot the bill for yet another golf course failure.

Kathryn Taubert,
Rainbow Springs

DHS football team donates to Michelle-O-Gram

JULIE MANCINI/For the Riverland News

The Dunnellon High School football program made a donation to the Michelle-O-Gram on Friday night during halftime of the Tigers' contest against Suwannee. Pictured, from left, are: Principal Ken McAteer, coach Price Harris, Brittany Hytovick, Valerie Hanchar, Dane Hobbs, Lisa Hamm, Becca Gibbs, Elaine Hobbs, Dalton Hobbs, Andy Stancil, Mattie Gibbs and Sydney Hanchar. October is Breast Cancer Awareness month and the Tigers players and cheerleaders sported pink apparel during the game. The Michelle-O-Gram is a local foundation organized in loving memory of Michelle Blauser Standridge, a hometown girl from Dunnellon, who lost her fight to breast cancer five years ago. The Michelle-O-Gram foundation assists uninsured and underinsured women to have a mammogram, which will hopefully help prevent a loss like ours. Since Michelle-O-Gram was established four years ago, we have raised more than $165,000 and more than 600 women have had screening and diagnostic mammograms as well as breast ultrasounds. For information, call the Michelle-O-Gram message line at 352-469-6006. Leave your name, date of birth and the type of assistance needed and they will return your call.
