

Near-normal hurricane season foreseen

Conditions in the atmosphere and the ocean favor a near-normal hurricane season in the Atlantic Basin this season, NOAA announced May 24 from Miami at its Atlantic Oceanographic and Meteorological Laboratory, and home to the Hurricane Research Division.

This week is national Hurricane Preparedness Week.

For the entire six-month season, which begins June 1, NOAA's Climate Prediction Center says there's a 70 percent chance of nine to 15 named storms (with top winds of 39 mph or higher), of which four to eight will strengthen to a hurricane (with top winds of 74 mph or higher) and of those one to three will become major hurricanes (with top winds of 111 mph or higher, ranking Category 3, 4 or 5). Based on the period 1981-2010, an average season produces 12 named storms with six hurricanes, including three major hurricanes.

the continuation of the overall conditions associated with the Atlantic high-activity era that began in 1995, in addition to near-average sea surface temperatures across much of the tropical Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea, known as the Main Development Region. Two factors now in place that can limit storm development, if they persist, are: strong wind shear, which is hostile to hurricane formation in the Main Development Region, and cooler sea surface temperatures in the far eastern Atlantic.

"Another potentially competing climate factor would be El Niño if it develops by late summer to early fall. In that case, conditions could be less conducive for hurricane formation and intensification during the peak months (August-October) of the season, possibly shifting the activity toward the lower end of the predicted range," said Gerry Bell, Ph.D., lead seasonal hurricane forecaster at NOAA's Climate Prediction Center.

In a more immediate example of research supporting hurricane forecasting, NOAA this season is introducing enhancements to two of the computer models available to hurricane forecasters - the Hurricane Weather Research and Forecasting (HWRF) and the Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory (GFDL) models. The HWRF model has been upgraded with a higher resolution and improved atmospheric physics. This latest version has demonstrated a 20 to 25 percent improvement in track forecasts and a 15 percent improvement in intensity forecasts relative to the previous version while also showing improvement in the representation of storm structure and size. Improvements to the GFDL model for 2012 include physics upgrades that are expected to reduce or eliminate a high bias in the model's intensity forecasts.

The seasonal outlook does not predict how many storms will hit land. Forecasts for individual storms and their impacts are provided by NOAA's National Hurricane Center, which continuously monitors the tropics for storm development and tracking throughout the season using an array of tools including satellites, advance computer modeling, hurricane hunter aircraft, and land- and ocean-based observations sources such as radars and buoys. ## Donation to veterans

Ocala resident Maurice Owens, Jr., left, stopped by Publix on State Road 200 to make a donation to Stan Cohen, Vietnam veteran, who was offering poppies commemorating Memorial Day. In the course of the conversation, Owens said that he is a Marine veteran and that his father, Maurice Owens, Sr. is a U.S. Navy veteran and survivor of the attack on Pearl Harbor. ## 'Mended Hearts' seeks patient survivors

In an effort to secure support for a growing number of heart patients in the Ocala area, local volunteers are seeking help from heart patient survivors and other interested persons to strengthen the local chapter of Mended Hearts.

The Mended Hearts Support Group of Ocala meets the third Thursday of each month at 3:30 p.m. at West Marion Community Hospital in the second floor classroom of the Medical Office Plaza.

The next meeting will be held on June 21.

Mended Hearts is a national nonprofit support organization affiliated with the American Heart Association that includes heart patients, spouses, healthcare professionals, and others interested in helping patients with the emotional recovery from heart disease.

With 280 community-based chapters nationwide, Mended Hearts has 24,000 members, making it the nation's largest heart-related patient support group.

"Members assist cardiac patients with an accredited visitors program, support groups, health information workshops, social/special events, and other volunteer activities," says Marcy Frisina, vice president, Cardiovascular Services, Ocala Health System. "Mended Hearts has been offering hope and encouragement to heart patients, families, and caregivers for 50 years, and the outreach and support is such a proved benefit to the community."

Caregivers, family members of patients, physicians, nurses, and other healthcare professionals are also welcome to participate in Mended Hearts. Interested persons are encouraged to contact 800-530-1188 for more information and to register.

Ocala Health System (OHS) encompasses Ocala Regional Medical Center, a 200-bed facility located in the heart of Ocala, and West Marion Community Hospital, a 70-bed hospital located in West Marion County.

This woman targeted German subs

BY JIM CLARK
 Editor

When you look at 89-year-old Heloese Bennett sitting and smiling at the dining room table at her home in Pine Run, you would never guess that at one time she used to alert the U.S. Navy when German submarines were about to surface.

After her upbringing in Pandora, Ohio, she joined the "Waves," and went to radio school. Eventually she found her way to Cape Cod, where she "searched for and copied" German communications. "We had stations up and down the East Coast," she said. She and her fellow operators would notify the Navy when a German sub was surfacing, so the submarines could be bombed.

What a great dinner and ice cream social! Did you try Dorothy Henry's chicken salad? Also, how about Pat Tobin's sweet potato salad? Everyone really had a great evening eating and visiting. After enjoying and stuffing ourselves with dinner, we were then treated to ice cream with a variety of toppings. Ron Gartman even provided an assortment of liqueurs for anyone who wanted a little "different" topping. Marion Gartman and Lil Carie dipped the ice cream, assisted by Dave Yoders and Ron Gartman. We really appreciate all the good cooks in the neighborhood who graciously share with us.

The next dinner will be July 4 - we will have more about this later. Bingo is on vacation until September. Check the Reporter for other summer activities. The pool is very refreshing!

This Friday, June 1, is the "First Friday" poolside gathering. Maybe this time we will even have some who want to take a dip in the pool. Meet us at the pool on Friday at 7 p.m. - bring snacks and beverages.

Forever Doo Wop planned at Ocala Civic Theatre

The a cappella doo-wop quartet Blend will perform their concert Forever Doo Wop... A Tribute to the '50s and '60s on Tuesday, June 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ocala Civic Theatre.

Formed in 2005, Blend is a touring group from Illinois. Evan Boswell, John Estes, Eric Rudd, and Andrew Smith are the four members who bring the songs to life. Though the music is from several generations before their time, they love doo wop, and they clearly love what they do.

Blend has opened for a variety of doo wop, country, and gospel acts, including The Platters, Bill Haley's Comets, The Van-Dells, The Drifters, Aaron Tippin, Confederate Railroad, Ivan Parker, and Greater Vision. In 2008 they appeared as special guests at The Dick Clark American Bandstand Theater in Branson, Missouri.

Performing music made popular by The Beach Boys, The Everly Brothers, The Del-Vikings, Elvis Presley, The Oak Ridge Boys, Roy Orbison, Otis Redding, The Shirelles, The Coasters, and Ritchie Valens, among many others, Blend has a diverse repertoire. Their concert program features classic songs like "Stand By Me," "Sittin' On the Dock of the Bay," "Blue Moon," "My Girl," "Only the Lonely," "At the Hop," "Come Go With Me," "Don't Be Cruel," "Duke of Earl," "Get a Job," "Good-night, Sweetheart," "In the Still of the Night," "Little Bitty Pretty One," "Barbara Ann," "Book of Love," "Runaround Sue," "Surfer Girl," "Teenager In Love," and "This Magic Moment" - and many more!

Paying homage to their Southern gospel heritage, Blend also performs a few hymns and songs such as "Beulah Land," "Unclouded Day," "Amazing Grace," and "I'll Fly Away" in each concert.

Blend is known for having fun at their concerts - and making sure the audience does, too. They frequently leave the stage and mingle with the audience, making them feel like they're part of the show. Before long, the audience is singing along.

Tickets are $16 for adults, $14 for Ocala Civic Theatre subscribers, and $8 for full-time students. For more information or to purchase tickets, stop by the Ocala Civic Theatre box office or call 352-236-2274. Tickets also may be purchased online at www.ocalacivictheatre.com. (A service charge applies to online purchases.)

The Ocala Civic Theatre is at 4337 East Silver Springs Boulevard (East State Road 40) in the Appleton Cultural Center.

Trinity Catholic earns surprise diocesan award

During a recent Baccalaureate, Trinity Catholic High School was pleasantly surprised when superintendent of Catholic Schools for the Diocese of Orlando, Henry Fortier presented the school an award as the first recipient of the Blessed Mother Teresa Award. The award was given to a school that demonstrated the values of the corporal works of mercy, which focus on bodily needs such as feeding the hungry and sheltering for the homeless. Trinity Catholic won the award over other catholic high schools in the Diocese of Orlando.

The project that set the school apart from the competition was the freshman class community service project during Catholic Schools Week earlier this year. The freshman class performed their service off site at the local "Mothers of Missing Smiles" park located near Jervey Gantt Park and at the Samaritan Inn in Leesburg.

"We are so excited and honored to be the first recipients of this incredible award," said Jacquelyn Gehrsitz, principal. "Trinity Catholic students have truly set the bar high when it comes to giving back to the communities that have supported us."

In addition to the plaque given and a traveling trophy that will be on display at the school for a year, Trinity Catholic was given a $1,000 check for the school to donate to a charity of their choice.

News from the U.S. Air Force training center

Air Force Airman Jaymes D. Melvin graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas.

The airman completed an intensive, eight-week program that included training in military discipline and studies, Air Force core values, physical fitness, and basic warfare principles and skills.

He is the son of Chris and Kim Melvin of Northwest 62nd Avenue, Ocala. He is a 2008 graduate of West Port.

were doing," Bennett said, "and they would drop oil." The oil on the surface would make the U.S. think the subs had been hit. "They were crafty about things."

After the Germans surrendered, Bennett transferred to Washington state and did the same thing against the Japanese. She stayed out there until the Japanese surrendered.

She and her friends would stand out near the coast and wave at the American ships returning to port.

After the war, she went to Kansas City and attended air traffic control school, but instead got married. She eventually moved to Columbus, Georgia, where she met her second husband.

When she was 14, her dad took off time from his plumbing and heating shop and they traveled all around the western part of the country. Among the places she visited was the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone Park.

Later, her folks wintered in Florida, "and I always liked it here." She decided to retire when she was vice president of a sheet metal corporation in Georgia, and 27 years ago moved into the home in Pine Run which is still hers today.

Heloese plans on taking the Honor Flight in October. "I think it's a good thing. I really want to see the World War II memorial." Part of the time she was in radio training, she was in the D.C. area, so she says she has seen most of the sights in the nation's capital. "I don't think too many young people know much" about the war and its history.

She didn't lose anyone in the war, but had a brother, Leotus Sutter, and a brother-in-law, Lewis Dukes. Dukes was in France and lost an eye. "He was a farmer, he drove, and played softball, so it didn't stop him."

She has relatives in Florida, including two daughters, a niece, and three grandchildren. She also has a neighbor who helps as much as possible.

Heloese walks comfortably around her home, but uses a walker on her slanted driveway.

She had only one moment when she said she wished things were different. "The hardest thing I ever had to do was give up my car," she said.

Believe it or not! I used to think there were leprechauns

James Snyder

I must make a confession. It has taken me a long time to get to the place where I am willing and comfortable to make such an admission. I think some of my friends will be shocked at what I have to say. I think it is time I come clean and confess. Sort of, clean the air, so to speak. Simply put, I used to believe in leprechauns. I know that comes as a shock to all of my friends. At a distance, I look like a very reasonable, well-adjusted person. And the further away the better I look. The same thing goes with my distant relatives. The more distant they are the more I like them.

Nobody would suspect that I had such a problem. You cannot tell what burdens people are carrying just by looking at them.

It all came to me by way of reading books. When I was a young person, I read many books that had to do with leprechauns, rainbows and pots full of gold at the end of those rainbows. I was young and naive at the time and believed everything I read.

Once while my father was sleeping on the couch I ask him if he believed in leprechauns and he grunted in such a way that I took it to mean that he also believed in them. If you cannot trust your father while he is sleeping, who in the world can you trust?

Many a day I spent in the woods at the end of our property looking for leprechauns. I can testify that they are rather elusive creatures but several times, I almost caught one. They always were just a few seconds quicker than I was. I looked where I thought they were but they were nowhere to be found.

Do not get me wrong here. I was never frustrated in my fruitless search of leprechauns. There is no better way to spend a day in the woods than searching for the elusive leprechaun. I began to think what I would do if I actually caught one. Then what would I do in the woods? It is always better to seek and not find than to find something and have to quit the seeking.

I think it is something like fishermen. Few fishermen really fish for fish. They fish so they can go home and brag about the one that got away. It is hard to brag about the fish you caught and then there is the messy job of cleaning those fish. No, it is better to have fished and not caught anything to have fished and caught something that you have to take home and clean.

Such was my thoughts concerning my leprechaun pursuit.

Many an evening I entertained my parents with the exciting exploits of searching and almost catching a leprechaun today. I am sure they got tired of hearing, but I never tired of telling.

Then the time came when I really had to face the facts. After almost a decade of diligently searching for leprechauns, I had to conclude that they were simply a figment of my imagination. And you know what happens to figs if you keep them around for a long time. I had to realize there were no such creatures as leprechauns.

I must confess that it was a rather sad day for me. It was the beginning of many sad days like this.

For instance, the day I realized Santa Claus was not real. Every year I diligently prepared my Christmas list starting out with, "Dear Ole Santa," and dictated my list of Christmas hopefuls. Often I would sit on his lap and carefully read my list to him. The last time I did this my wife made me get off his lap. Something about being too big or something like that.

To my recollection, he never made good on any of those requests. Jolly old soul? Phooey!

Then there was the Easter Bunny. This had me for quite a while. After all, I love the chocolate Easter bunnies he brought me along with the rest of the candy. Unlike Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny was very generous in dousing me with candy galore. I truly hated putting the Easter Bunny away.

Probably the last one I will mention would be when a politician says, "I feel your pain." At first, I thought this was a genuine concern for my state of affairs. When I found out he was just playing me in his political theater I wanted him to feel some more of my pain.

Pondering this I begin to realize that many things that I have believed in turned out not to be true.

It is quite disconcerting when something you have believed in for a long time turns out to be phony. While I am confessing here, I must confess that only one thing has turned out not to be disappointing. That one thing has been the Bible. It has been the only thing that has not let me down in life. I take great comfort in Psalms 119:105, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Many things disappoint me and I have given them up. I start each day with the only thing that will never let me down, that is the Word of God. I believe the Bible.

Education Foundation earns grant

The Public Education Foundation of Marion County has won a $15,000 grant from Progress Energy to support science, technology, engineering and energy curriculum in Marion County Public Schools.

The "SEEK a Challenge" grant provides training for teachers, experimental learning opportunities for students, and career awareness through field experiences and mentor coaching.

Secondary teachers in Marion County Public Schools will participate in the grant funding this month for next school year. This grant provides opportunities for teachers and students to study, practice and connect to the energy and technology workforce through Progress Energy.

The Progress Energy Foundation will invest $500,000 this year to fund energy education classroom projects as well as workforce development at high school career academies throughout Florida. The funds will support public-education foundations, science centers and career academies.

Over the past 10 years, the Progress Energy Foundation has invested $17 million to assist education initiatives in Florida.

"Every dollar we contribute to education is an investment in the future of our state," said Vincent Dolan, president and CEO of Progress Energy Florida.

"We are proud to support programs that engage and excite students about energy, alternative energy and energy efficiency. Our support of career academies will pay huge dividends when the students who benefit from these programs join the workforce and become active participants in our communities."

The Progress Energy Foundation provided funding to 18 education foundations throughout its service territory to support math and science education programs with an emphasis on those that include energy efficiency, renewable energy and environmental education. Education foundations from Alachua, Citrus, Gulf, Franklin, Hernando, Highlands, Lake, Levy, Madison, Marion, Orange, Osceola, Pasco, Pinellas, Polk, Seminole, Sumter, and Volusia counties received funding.

Our Message

Don't blow off hurricane season

Tropical storm Alberto, which swirled off the East Coast several days ago, was an early reminder that hurricane season is here.

Meteorologists are predicting an "average" Atlantic hurricane season; in other words, between June 1 and Nov. 30, the weather along the East Coast will be predictably unpredictable. The forecast includes 12 named tropical storms, five named hurricanes and two major hurricanes.

When it comes to hurricane preparedness in Florida, residents are often one of two extremes: those who have experienced the devastation that one of these massive storms can wield, worrying that every thunderstorm might be "the big one," and the devil-may-care types who won't leave their house until the roof falls in.

Both are understandable. Hurricanes are wicked sea monsters, capable of shifting course quickly, pounding the shores with wind and rain strong enough to knock down power lines, uproot trees and gut buildings. Hurricanes can trigger storm surges, tornadoes and catastrophic flooding. There is nothing like a hurricane to remind us of the power of Mother Nature, and on the Florida Peninsula the seaside blessing on three sides of our geography is also its curse.

On the other hand, hurricanes are so common that it's easy, particularly for life-long residents, to develop a ho-hum attitude or even "hurricane fatigue." After so many years of rushing to grocery stores, gathering emergency supplies, and for those near the coast, boarding up windows, battening down hatches and sitting in traffic jams on evacuation routes, especially when those evacuation routes bring the vehicles here to Marion County — many times only to have a light rain pass through — it is tempting to forego all the hassle and sit tight until the last possible moment.

For the most peaceful summer possible, we suggest a middle ground. This is the ideal time to stock up on batteries, flashlights, and even inexpensive generators. Create an emergency kit with these supplies along with bottled water and non-perishable food items. Store them in a designated spot in the house and conduct family drills so everyone knows what to do. If you're worried about computer data, back it up regularly onto a thumb drive that can be snatched up on the way out the door in the event of evacuation.

Sure, it is inconvenient and annoying to deal with hurricanes. But they are part of life in Florida. Make an emergency plan, assemble that kit and when the season comes ends, donate those canned goods to a food bank — just in time for the holidays.

Among Friends

Recalling my first hurricane encounter

My first encounter with a hurricane, that I remember, was in 1954. We had just moved to a house on a hill in northern New Jersey, a one-story with a basement, facing west.

I remember hearing about this storm called Hazel that was cutting across the northeast on its way to Canada, after starting in Haiti where it killed 1,000 people. At that point, I had no idea where Haiti was, but I didn't want something that could kill that many people coming my way.

My parents said not to worry, that it was greatly weakened by the time it got to us.

I learned a bit about hurricanes then, particularly the fact that the wind comes only from one direction when you're on one side of the storm or another.

The wind was brutally strong from the east, but we had our front door open except for the screen door, since we faced west. No air conditioning in those days, incidentally.

I sat there fascinated and watched the driving wind and rain, which we seemed to be immune to. But then I saw a tree, about 15 feet tall, blow past the house. Not a branch, mind you, but the whole tree.

If I remember right, I went into my room and pulled down the shade. I didn't want to see any more of it.

So now I'm older and supposedly wiser, and where do I live? Florida, one of the spots where hurricanes strike the U.S. first. My home is surrounded by big trees, too.

But in this day and age, we have things like satellite images, constant radar and other tools to tell us when and where a hurricane will strike, and how strong it will be. Most of the time the forecasts are accurate, but occasionally a storm will veer to a new course and surprise people. Just remember Hurricane Charley, which was supposed to hit the Tampa Bay area head-on, but suddenly turned and smashed into Punta Gorda. That was in 2004, when we were hit with the triple whammy of Charley, Frances and Jeanne.

The important thing is to be prepared. We should all know about the standard things to keep ... non-perishable foods, water, flashlights and batteries, a battery-powered radio, etc.

Just make sure you're ready to follow the paths of storms, and remember, most tracking coordinates only indicate the center of the storm. Damaging winds and rain can venture hundreds of miles from the main path.

The Atlantic hurricane season starts June 1. Tropical storm Alberto jumped the gun by being the first named storm in May. We didn't have too much to worry about from that one, and let's hope our summer and fall are just as calm.

But just in case, be ready. Then you can just sit back and calmly watch those trees blow past your house. But if you have any 10-year-olds living with you, don't let them watch. It will be something that will stay with them a lifetime.

Your Letters

How about you?

Once again, my mutual fund and IRA portfolios are losing money. The value of my house is at its lowest point since I bought it in 2004 and is now worth less than I paid for it.

When the GOP had control of Congress and the Executive branch in 2006, my portfolios were earning 13 percent; they are now losing money. The Democrat-controlled Congress took power in 2007. Obama was elected in 2008. Then the bottom fell out! My house in 2006 was valued at 76 percent more than I paid for it; now it's valued at 3 percent less.

My income right now is stable. But, if Obama's strategy to levy more tax on the very rich becomes law, the additional revenue won't be nearly enough to fix the economy. Guess who will make up the difference: us! The middle-class will end up paying the additional tax required to fund Obama's inane policies.

Obama can't run for re-election on his previous accomplishments ... he has none. So, in his meager attempt to lasso votes, he's running on things like supporting gay marriage, the imaginary "War On Women," "Class Warfare" where he's unfairly pitting the middle class and poor against the rich. He's also putting a lot of emphasis on education reform in his attempt to win the youth vote. Granted, education is very important. But, right now it's not critical. Fixing the economy and getting people back to work are; these are the things he should be concentrating on.

Obama's administration keeps telling us that the economy is improving but I see little evidence of that. The truth is: Obama and his cronies have no clue of how to repair the economy so they're telling us what they want us to hear.

I can't imagine four more years of his administration. How about you?

Joe O'Hara
Ocala

Same-sex marriage

Recently President Obama publicly announced his support for same-sex marriage but not wanting to paint himself in a corner, his announcement was to "support" the decision, that is, if the individual states legislated the matter. Surely he is aware that the majority of states have already spoken on this subject and have rejected the concept. To serve his immediate political purposes, Amendment X (States' Rights) was employed. This administration rarely before acknowledged States' Rights.

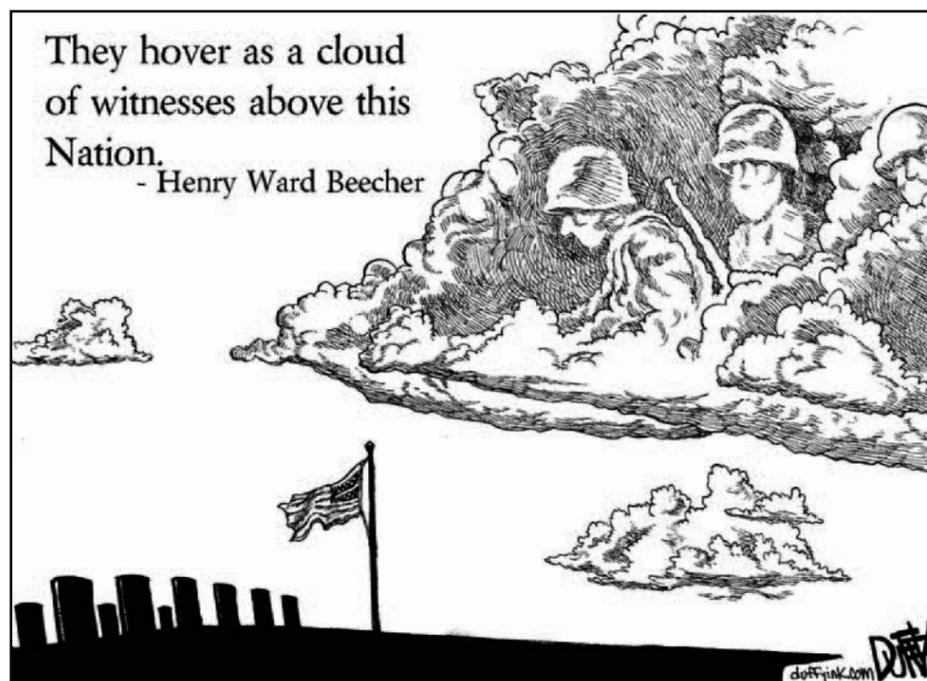

Persons of goodwill have or have had friends of homosexual persuasion who are highly regarded unmindful of their sexual orientation. Disagreement with the life style cannot deny earned esteem — as Christians or as friends, we can do no less.

Covenants between God and humans, as written in both the Old and New Testaments, contain condemnation of the practice of homosexuality — not homosexual inclination, but the practice of homosexuality.

Opponents of same-sex marriage are often classified as bigots. Such classification would thus include Protestant clergy and laity of different denominations, Catholic clergy and laity, writers of the Holy Scriptures, and throw into this mix of bigots Pope Benedict XVI, Rev. Dr. Billy Graham, and others of equal acclamation. Presents a dubious measure of bigotry, does it not?

The majority of states reject the concept of same-sex marriage. Should all of these citizens who voted to reject be considered bigots?

Due to abortion and contraceptive use, the USA birth rate is below replacement value. From a practical point of view, this is critical in the administration of any government that depends on a reliable work force to continue funding government programs. Needed are traditional marriages to increase birth rates, preferably children born within a committed relationship known as husband and wife. Same-sex marriages cannot achieve this goal.

Summertime's the right time for electronic payments

Adon Williams

When you are away from home, one thing you don't want to worry about is how you will receive your next monthly Social Security payment. That is why it is important for everyone receiving Social Security or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits to sign up for electronic payments.

These days, almost everyone gets benefit payments electronically. Today, about 90 percent of all Social Security and SSI beneficiaries receive their payments electronically.

SOCIAL SECURITY

That number is increasing because the law requires that by March 1, 2013 all federal benefit payments, including Social Security and SSI payments, be made electronically. Whether you receive Social Security or SSI, you can depend on your payment arriving in your account on time, every time.

If you don't already receive electronic payments, there are many good reasons to sign up. For one, less money and time spent driving to the bank to cash your check helps you save. Second, fewer paper checks, envelopes, and stamps, and less fuel to deliver the checks means savings for the government.

Hurricane season is here for some areas of the country. Other regions bear the brunt of flooding. Some areas of the nation are plagued by tornadoes, and still others must deal with wildfires, severe thunderstorms, or even earthquakes. If you are unfortunate enough to be in the path of a natural disaster, the last thing you want is for your income to be interrupted because of an evacuation or a missing mailbox. With electronic payments, you know your money will be in your account on time no matter what.

When on vacation, an electronic payment ensures payments will be deposited into your account on time, so there's no reason to worry about the safety of your benefit or to ask a neighbor to look out for your check when you are away.

As an added bonus, many banks offer free checking accounts for people who use direct deposit because it saves the bank the cost of processing paper payments.

Skip the line at the bank, save money, get your payment faster, and know you can depend on your payment being in the bank no matter what happens or where you are. You can do all of this with electronic payments. Learn more about it at www.socialsecurity.gov/deposit.

Adon Williams is Social Security district manager in Ocala.

Tourism grants available

The Ocala/Marion County Tourist Development Council is accepting applications for grant funds to support projects and special events held in Marion County that promote tourism, create paid lodging, enhance the county's appeal to visitors and create significant economic activity. Awarded grants will be tied to overnight lodging productivity (hotel, motel, camp grounds, RV parks) in Marion.

A total of $50,000 is available for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 2012. Each awarded grant may not exceed $10,000.

To obtain a grant application, visit www.ocalamarion.com and click on the "Grant Application" tab on the left bar. Completed applications must be mailed or delivered to the Ocala/Marion County Visitors & Convention Bureau (112 N. Magnolia Ave., Ocala, FL 34475) by 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 20, 2012.

Lend a hand: Volunteers are needed in Marion County

Marion County Literacy Council – Tutors

The Literacy Council is in need of reading tutors for the outreach program at the county jail. The jail is located at the Sheriff's complex. Tutoring in the jail is a unique experience, but it is also a very rewarding one. Although they are incarcerated, the inmates you will be working with are still students who seek to better themselves. You could have a huge impact by working with individuals and giving them the tools they need to not wind up back in the jail again. Meetings are once a week, typically 1 hour in duration. If you think this is something you may be interested in helping with, please contact Dmitriy at 352-690-7323.

Long-term care group needs volunteers

Florida's Long-Term Care Ombudsman Program needs volunteers to join its corps of dedicated advocates who protect the rights of elders who live in nursing homes, assisted living facilities and adult family care homes.

The program's local councils are seeking additional volunteers to identify, investigate and resolve residents' concerns. Special training and certification is provided.

All interested individuals who care about protecting the health, safety, welfare and rights of long-term care facility residents — who often have no one else to advocate for them — are encouraged to call toll-free 1-888-831-0404 or visit the program's website at <http://ombudsman.myflorida.com>.

Stan Cohen works to honor vets

Priscilla Geissal

It did not surprise me on Saturday, May 19, when I heard someone say, "Hi, Priscilla!" and turn to see that it was Stan Cohen doing what he loves to do most...help veterans.

Stan and his wife Sheila are well-known all around Marion County for their tireless work on behalf of foster children and the Guardian ad Litem program of this area of Central Florida. Those two extremely generous people work nearly every day on behalf of some child or veteran who needs a bit of a helping hand.

This particular time,

Stan was at the exit of the Publix Grocery on Hwy. 200 with commemorative poppies in his hand and waiting to see when someone would ask for one. I noticed he never asked anyone to donate ... he waited for them to approach him. And, even in the few minutes that I was there talking with him, about half of those who walked by stopped to get a poppy and to donate to help and commemorate those who have done so much for our country.

With Memorial Day approaching, guess it will be past by the time this goes to print, I am thinking not only of those who have died for our country but also of those who have spent many long hours enduring painful injuries, those who spent so much time away from friends and family, and for the families who stayed behind hoping and praying that their military loved ones would return home safe and sound.

My daughter's family is one of those military families who have worked together as my son-in-law has done his very dangerous job. They know what it is to be aware that husband and father is in harm's way and may not be heard from for a time. There are those times when even with the best of communications, it is not possible to connect with someone who is doing that special kind of work that has been keeping us all safe from terrorist attacks. I marvel at their dedication and expertise.

During this special time in May, I remember as a young teen being allowed to offer poppies for donations sponsored, I believe, by the American Legion Post in my hometown of Rome, Ga. Many of my friends and I made a competition to see who could collect the most money, and we were very proud to help. I don't see youngsters doing that today. I wonder if they are not allowed to help or if they just have not been approached because I would be willing to bet that many teens would take the time to help if they could.

I think young people should be made aware now more than ever before of the need for all of us to think in terms of "proactivity" so that we don't have those terrible bombings and such that happen in other countries here in our country. We have been truly blessed, but I think that much of the reason for this is that our military is so vigilant and determined to keep our wonderful homeland a place that is safe so that we can go about our daily lives in relative security.

From Fairfield Village, where military people are very special to us, we would like to wish God-speed to all those who serve and protect and send thanks and love to those who have done so in the past. Also, to the families who have sacrificed so that one or more members can be "on duty" and often away from home may we express our abundant thanks and wishes that all of your loved ones stay safe and know that they are appreciated for all they and you as family do for us.

Coming from Fairfield

Trudy Bliss, a neighbor from Bahia Oaks, generously donates to Stan Cohen and wishes veterans well.

Village, "...the lively place filled with lovely (and patriotic) people" may we offer a hearty happy Memorial Day and God bless America!

'Camp Kiwanis' available for youths

For more than 60 years, thousands of Marion County students have called Camp Kiwanis their temporary summer home. Once again, Camp Kiwanis will offer hundreds of local children a wilderness adventure in a cooperative overnight camping program sponsored by Marion County Public Schools and the Kiwanis Club of Ocala.

The traditional program puts kids ages 7 to 13 in a summer camp setting at Mill Dam Lake deep in the heart of The Ocala National Forest. The five-day camp offers a variety of activities including archery, swimming, arts and crafts, canoeing, games, sports and more.

Transportation to and from camp will be provided by a single bus on Mondays and Fridays. The bus will load and unload at Marion Technical Institute (1614 S.E. Fort King St., Ocala). Families in private vehicles may also transport their campers to and from Camp Kiwanis.

This year's program kicks off on Monday mornings and run through Friday afternoons. Four one-week sessions are being offered June 18 to 22, June 25 to June 29, July 2 to 6, and July 9 to 13. Space is available for 104 campers each week.

Campers may attend more than one session if space is available. Meals, instruction, and accident insurance are included in the weekly fee of $200 per student.

The Marion County School Board employs Camp Kiwanis staff members; the camp director is a school district administrator, instructors are teachers, and the counselors are local college and high school students. Camp Kiwanis started back in 1948.

Parents and students interested in Camp Kiwanis should log on to www.CampKiwanisOcala.com to download application forms.
