

Community Gets Bicycle & Pedestrian Master Plan

LAZARO ALEMAN

Monticello and Jefferson County now have a Bicycle and Pedestrian Master Plan, an extensive document prepared by the Renaissance Planning Group (RPG) and approved by the Jefferson County Commission on Thursday evening, Jan. 17.

Be prepared for a lengthy read, as the 125-page document is chockfull of details, analysis, statistical data, photos and graphics, as well as touching on the community's history and population projections and proposing bicycle and walkways designs and offering cost estimates, among much more.

The plan's introductory statement gives a hint of its ambitious goal.

Which is nothing less than to create a vision and framework for eventual creation of "a safe and robust bicycle/pedestrian network" that connects urban and rural communities within and without the county and the region, as well as connecting to major employers, schools and other desired destinations.

As such, the plan not only complements similar efforts in Leon, Wakulla and Gadsden counties — the other members of the Capital Region Transportation Planning Agency (CRTPA), the entity sponsoring these efforts — but it also prioritizes the projects for completion when the state and federal funds become available.

Again, the vision informing the plan, per RPG, is creation of a network of bicycle and pedestrian lanes and trails that allow for greater mobility options within the county through enhanced walkability, expanded bicycling opportunities and better connectivity.

RPG established upfront five goals and associated strategies for the plan. These goals were to enhance community mobility options; improve livability and quality-of-life for residents; address environmental justice issues affecting the transportation of the disadvantaged population; support economic develop-

BP Funds Now Available To Greater Array Of Businesses

LAZARO ALEMAN

Remember the 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico and the untold economic and environmental damage that the disaster caused, it turns out that many more businesses are possibly eligible for the BP settlement money than most people realize.

Or so say the experts, several of whom from Carr, Riggs and Ingram (CRI) accountants and business advisors will be in Monticello on Thursday evening, Feb. 7, to explain the latest on the developing situation.

Or more specifically, the CRI people will be talking about recent rule changes that have opened the process and made it possible for a greater number of businesses to qualify for a portion of the $13+ billion of BP damages funds now available to any who suffered from the oil spill, no matter how indirectly.

Julie Conley, director of the Economic Development Council (EDC), told the Jefferson Journal on Monday, Jan. 28, that her organization was sponsoring the CRI presentation, in conjunction with the Tourist Development Council (TDC) and the Chamber of Commerce.

Conley took pains to emphasize that the three organizations were merely sponsoring the event for the purpose of disseminating information to the community.

The three groups, however, were in no way promoting or endorsing CRI or any other vendor, she made clear. It was up to each business owner to decide if, how, and with whom they would want to proceed, should any decide to pursue damages, Conley said.

She said most people were unaware that they could possibly qualify for some of the settlement money, not excluding farmers, plumbers, hairdressers, bed-and-breakfast owners and the likes.

Conley encouraged businesspeople to attend the presentation, which is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. next Thursday in the chamber building at 420 West Washington Street.

She said the CRI people would give an overview of the BP oil spill and the settlement and talk about how anyone potentially affected by the disaster can apply for the funding. She said CRI would schedule individual interviews with anyone interested.

For more information, call Conley at (850) 997-7999 or the chamber at (850) 997-5552.

Tallahassee Man Cops Felony Charge

A Tallahassee man was arrested last week and copped a felony charge after apparently breaking into a local business to use the phone to call police for a ride.

The Monticello Police Department (MPD) reported that on January 22 at 3:40 a.m., Officer Brandon Abbott responded to a report of a burglary at Carrie Ann & Co., located at 925 East Washington Street.

Upon arrival, the officer discovered a rear door that had been breached and open. The glass window of the door had been broken to allow the suspect to open the door from the inside.

Officer Abbott also observed that the pile of glass at the bottom of the door had noted a visible sign that the door had been opened. The building was searched and no person(s) were found.

The officer then began processing the scene for evidence, when he received a call that a person was knocking on the door of 1445 East Washington Street.

Miami Man Charged With Fleeing

A Miami Man was arrested Monday night and charged with fleeing from a law enforcement officer.

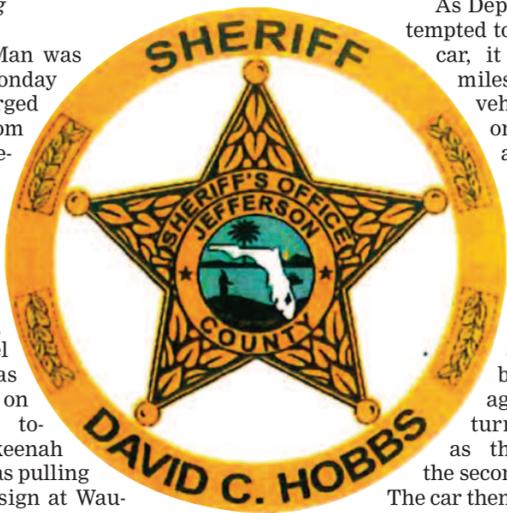

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Office reported that on January 21 at 11:15 p.m., Deputy Daniel Williams was driving west on Martin Street towards Waukeenah Street. As he was pulling up to the stop sign at Waukeenah Street, he observed a light colored car drive north through the stop sign at the intersection. The deputy estimated the speed to be about 30 miles, per hour, and it clocked 34 miles per hour.

As Deputy Williams attempted to catch up to the car, it sped up to 55 miles per hour. Both vehicles turned onto Chase Drive, and the deputy turned on his blue lights.

The vehicle pulled to the right side of the road and appeared to be stopping. It then began driving again. The deputy turned on his siren as they approached the second speed bump.

The car then turned left onto South Railroad Street, and right on Emerald Lane into a residential neighborhood. Please See FLEEING Page 3

The Triple L (LLL) Club met on its usual fourth Tuesday, in the late morning, for lunch and a program. Attendance was down because of the flu season but all the tables had visitors seated at them.

Sheriff David Hobbs coordinated the program with speakers Kevin Sears and Don Barfield. LLL President Ethel Strickland invited the guest speakers to join for lunch afterwards.

Barfield offered insight on Project LifeSaver. He demonstrated the equipment used to locate lost clients and encouraged caregivers to contact program director Nan Baughman for more information about the program; and to contact them immediately if a client is missing, even if they are not truly sure the person is lost. When a new client is signed in, a detailed profile with pictures is created. The client files are updated monthly and bat-

"Don't respond to mailings you aren't sure about," he said. "Ask a friend or family members to go over anything you feel uncomfortable about. Review your bank and credit card statements and be leery of 'charities.' And, use a credit card rather than your bank debit card for purchases. The credit card company will refund the 'bad charge' and help to locate the perpetrator, your bank won't." The next LLL meeting will be held on February 26, at 10:30 a.m. at the First Baptist Church, in the ministry center. A day trip is scheduled for February 15. Alzheimer's disease is the 6th leading cause of death in the United States. It is the only cause of death among the top 10 without a way to prevent, cure or even slow its progress. In Florida alone there are more than 450,000 living with the disease and more than 960,000 caregivers contributing to more than $13

The Alzheimer's Association is the world's leading voluntary health organization in Alzheimer care, support and research. It's mission is to eliminate Alzheimer's disease through the advancement of research, to provide and enhance care and support for all affected, and to reduce the risk of dementia through the promotion of brain health. ent possibilities related to recreation and ecotourism; and increase regional mobility and recreational opportunities.

The corresponding strategies entail connecting key destinations, such as downtown commerce and recreation; closing gaps in the existing network of bicycle lanes and pedestrian sidewalks; getting the biggest bang for the dollars from the available funding; and realistically addressing needs first, and desires last.

The study found that a significant percentage of the county's population currently is either below the legal minimum driving age or at an advanced age where mobility options other than driving become increasingly important. Both of which factors argue for the provision of supportive infrastructure and programs that encourage alternative transportation choices other than cars, the plan underscores.

"Having such additional choices can make living in a small city or a rural county more feasible and desirable for all segments of the population," the plan states.

RPG reports conducting in-depth on-the-ground assessments to identify the existing bicycle and pedestrian facilities, identify the gaps and barriers to pedestrian and bicycle travel, and describe the possible opportunities for improvement.

The planners found that the county's existing bicycle facilities consist primarily of paved shoulders along rural arterial roadways and that many county roads are regularly used for recreational cycling routes, although they lack paved shoulders. They also found a limited number of existing trails and sidewalks, with the latter mostly confined to the city.

The plan talks about the installation of "sharrows", defined as shared lane markings that allow bicyclists to travel alongside vehicles; and road diets, which entail the reduction of street widths by conversion of unnecessary lanes or unnecessarily wide streets into bicycle lanes.

The most common road-diet projects involve converting a four-lane undivided roadway into a two-lane roadway (one travel lane in each direction plus a two-way center left turn lane) by removing one travel lane in each direction and using the remaining space for bicycle lanes.

The plan also explores the city and county's respective comprehensive plans and development codes, as well as the various policies and objectives of each. The plan also describes the process that the RPG team used to arrive at its findings.

Finally, the plan recommends a long list of projects that, combined with the existing and programmed facilities, would make for a comprehensive bicycle and pedestrian network for the community in the future.

The cited projects are too numerous to name; they include paved shoulders, roadway signage, multiuse trails/pathways, road diets, bicycle lanes, shared lane markings or sharrows, sidewalks and pedestrian crossing enhancements on numerous county roads and city streets.

The plan further ranks the projects by priority into three tiers, plus it gives cost estimates for each and provides possible funding sources.

Anyone interested in reviewing the full plan can do so by going online and visiting the county's website at www.jeffersoncountyfl.gov.

said the MU was for purchase of an electronic system to help the six counties manage their court cases.

Slayden explained that the Legislature had mandated that effective April 1 for the circuit courts and effective Oct. 1 for the county courts, all pleadings must be filed via electronic means.

He said without installation of an appropriate system, the six counties wouldn't be able to see or retrieve court files after the effective dates.

Slayden said that restricted dedicated monies from court fees and assessments would be used to pay for the system, meaning that Jefferson County wouldn't have to pay anything per se.

He said the fee was prorated for each of the counties. He said Jefferson County's share would amount to $9,347 for the first year and $1,241.21 annually thereafter.

He said Franklin and Gadsden counties had already approved the MU.

the scene, the officer responded and made contact with Bryan Jones, 30, of Tallahassee. He stated that he needed a ride to the Hilltop on West US-90.

Officer Abbott received information that Jones had called MPD dispatch at 3:09 a.m. and stated that he was at 925 East Washington Street and needed a ride to Tallahassee.

The officer then advised Jones that he was investigating a burglary, and he stated that he knocked on the door of the house he had called from.

Deputy Dan Williams and Deputy Jarrod Rigdon were also present at the scene, and Deputy Williams noticed fine shards of glass in the sweater that Jones was wearing.

Officer Abbot asked Jones if he broke into the building, and he said no, that he had knocked on the top of the door-frame and not on the glass.

Officer Abbott then noticed the glass shards for himself, and he observed distinct glass pieces on the outside of the sweater.

When the officer asked him about the glass, he stated that he did not break the window, but he saw other people do it. Jones could not name the supposed suspects, and he had freshly broken glass in his clothing.

Officer Abbott arrested Jones and transported him to the County Jail, where he was booked and charged with burglary of a structure with intent to commit a felony. Since he was on probation when this crime was committed, bond was revoked. He remained at the County Jail January 31.

borhood. The car slowed down to about 10 miles per hour, but did not stop.

Deputy Williams was able to pull his patrol car along the left side of the car. The vehicles came to a left curve, and the deputy sped up to block the driver's access to the curve. The car finally stopped.

The deputy ordered the driver, identified as Tavaris Lanorris Marshall, 25, of Miami, FL, out of the car. Marshall began begging Deputy Williams to let him go. Her said he was just trying to get to his girlfriend's house before he was going to pull over, because his license was suspended.

Deputy Williams placed Marshall in handcuffs and Investigator Logan Wilcox placed him in his patrol vehicle.

Deputy Williams asked Marshall if he knew that he was trying to pull him over, and Marshall said he knew what was going on. Marshall said he had seen when the deputy turned on his lights, but he did not hear the siren because the music in his car was too loud.

Marshall was transported to the County Jail, where he was booked and charged with fleeing to elude law enforcement, and driving while license was suspended or revoked. Since he was out on bond from previous charges when these crimes were committed, bond was withheld. He remained at the County Jail January 31.

Make Volunteering Your New Year's Resolution

JAY THURMAN BSW
Clinical Care Specialist

Now that the holidays are over, and you are starting to think about your New Year's resolutions, I encourage you to make one of those resolutions to become a Covenant Hospice volunteer. When people think about volunteering for hospice, their first thought may be, "I could never do that," or "I would be too depressed." However, talk to a Covenant Hospice volunteer and he or she will tell you a very different story.

Covenant volunteers come from many different backgrounds, ranging from retired persons, to working professionals, active military personnel, high school and college students. They all have one thing in common... a desire to give back, and in that giving they receive so much in return.

Covenant has opportunities for people with diverse skills and interests. Volunteers that are looking for a chance to meet new people and to be active in the community will love Covenant's Ambassador Program. For those that want to have fun and socialize with others, Covenant fundraising events are the perfect fit. Volunteers that enjoy office work or computers can find a home in administrative support. Individuals with care-giving experiences, emotional and spiritual support skills may choose to visit Covenant patients and their families.

Persons that have experienced the loss of a loved one understand what families have gone through and make wonderful bereavement volunteers. Volunteers from our communities help to garden, clean yards, make simple home repairs, build ramps, sew, crochet, cook and bake. Volunteers receive specialized training that prepares them to volunteer in their area of interest.

Covenant Hospice makes a promise to its volunteers that they will find a sense of purpose, worthwhile work and the realization that they are making a difference. That's why over 2,600 individuals have chosen to give an important part of their lives to Covenant Hospice.

The Covenant volunteer program has received Awards of Excellence from Florida Hospice and Palliative Care Organization for the Ambassador Volunteer Program, the Reflections Life Review Journal Program, and the Tuck-in Program. The late Sam Goldenberg and his wife Joyce, longtime Covenant Hospice volunteers, received the Volunteer of the Year Award from the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization.

So while you are composing your New Year's resolutions, think about becoming a Covenant Hospice volunteer. I promise it's a resolution that is easy to keep, as well as very rewarding.

If you are interested in becoming a Covenant Hospice volunteer in Monticello or the surrounding area, contact Kortney Rudd at 850-575-4998.

Covenant Hospice is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to providing comprehensive, compassionate services to patients and loved ones during times of life-limiting illnesses.

JCREA Retired Educators Day And New Years Luncheon

Whereas, Florida's education system is a vital part of the well-being of our state, providing education for people of all ages; and whereas, at the heart of our education system is the educator, who is devoted to sharing his or her knowledge with students; and whereas, Florida is home to many retired educators who have spent much of their lives giving their time, energy, and best efforts to our students; and whereas, it is fitting that we celebrate and recognize Florida's retired educators for their dedication to empowering students and strengthen our local and state wide communities; now, therefore, I Rick Scott, Governor of the State of Florida, do hereby extend greetings and best wishes to all observing November 18, 2012 as Retired Educators Day. In witness whereof, I have here unto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Florida to be affixed at Tallahassee the Capitol, this 29th day of October, in the year of two thousand twelve. - Rick Scott.

This proclamation was sent to the Jefferson County Unit of retired educators, and other units throughout the state, to host a recognition program on November 18.

The Jefferson County Retired Educators Association (JCREA) selected to have a combined celebration of Retired Educators day and the annual New Year's luncheon.

That event was held at 1 p.m., on Saturday, January 12, 2013 at the Serenade Oaks Bed and Breakfast/entertainment/conference facility. The theme of the event was "Education, The Pathway to Success."

The designated speaker was Bond Elementary retired Principal Dr. Thelma Hightower. Due to an emergency, she was unable to obligate. Instead, her husband retired Principal of Rickards High School Dr. Pink Hightower, gave those in attendance a powerful message. Presiding over the program was Unit Treasurer Louiza Larry. Unit Chaplain Reverend Ben Ransom offered the prayer and grace.

The members and guests enjoyed a hearty meal of connoisseur choice trays of ham, turkey, and roast beef; honey, hot, and fried chicken wings and drumsticks; Provolone, Swiss, Pepper Jack and American cheeses; wheat flatbread; potato salad; lettuce and tomatoes; chips; and butter cream cake. Drinks included iced tea, water and non-alcoholic sparkling wine to toast the New Year and a successful Unit year.

Unit President Louie Barrington introduced Dr. Hightower, also former principal of Howard Middle School and Jefferson County High School.

Dr. Hightower began his message by giving homage to all retired educators. He expressed his appreciation of the JCREA educators, and those who have touched children's lives in whatever capacity. He specially recognized those teachers who impacted others, and especially himself: Martha Stokes Hall, Theodora Gamble, Gussie Mallory, Frankie Lewis, Eloise Bythewood, Gertrude Canty, Emma Wilson Stokes, Gertrude Jackson, Raleigh Cox, Eddie and Dora Simpkins, and Doris Herrings, to name a few. He explained the "unto" sacrifices and loyalty these educators/trailblazers, brought to the table of education.

Dr. Hightower profiled the students of yesteryear and today. Being a former student and educator, he stated the things we (students/teachers) are missing today: teachers do not seem to possess the loyalty of the profession as the "ole teachers," students do not have the respect for teachers/education, as the children of the past did. He told of the expectations of one of his former college professors, and what it would take to be an effective educator: "Two covers of the books; four walls; and eight hours."

He spoke of his message to the teachers at his school. He told them that the students of today are a "new breed," and in order to reach them, you must meet them half way; take the time to get to know the kids and their concerns; make an impression on them; and make them understand why they need an education. In essence, he was referring to, and giving a biological sketch of the teachers of the past. He emphasized the respect he and other students had for all of the teachers, back then, and how there was no selfishness in those teachers, just loyalty to their duty. He stated it is his belief that teaching is the greatest of all professions. He concluded with how strong parental involvement sent a clear message to the child of their commitment to their education, and why they were to respect their teachers. He told how past educators/pioneers of education, crawled so we can walk; bowed so we could stand on their shoulders; made every child feel they could do anything but fail, essentially, they were the "Wind Beneath Our Wings."

Unit Cultural Affairs Chairperson Nancy Benjamin presented a certificate of appreciation and a glass mug to each Unit member. She then called for brief experiences and responses from the audience about teaching, teachers, and education.

After which, Unit President Barrington gave the closing remarks.

Teacher Of The Year Nominees Announced

Leslie Lisenbee, Nominee For District Teacher Of The Year

FRAN HUNT
ECB Publishing
Staff Writer

It's that time of year again for the Macy's Teacher of The Year.

There is one nominee from each of the two district schools for the 2014 District Teacher Of The Year. One of those nominees is Leslie Lisenbee.

The nominees were chosen by their peers, and then three out of town judges sift through the paperwork, tally the scores and determine the winner. The winner will be announced February 11.

Lisenbee is a high school math teacher, who teaches Algebra I, integrated math, and college readiness for grades 9-12, at Jefferson County Middle High School (JCMHS).

She has three years teaching experience, all of which is at JCMHS, the last year in her current position.

Of Lisenbee, JCMHS Principal Loretta N. Holmes said, "Mrs. Lisenbee has been a dedicated full-time employee at Jefferson County Middle High School for three years and is known for her high standard of performance. She cares for the parents, students and faculty of the JCMHS and treats everyone with respect and dignity. She is a tremendous asset to JCMHS as well as the school district and community at-large.

"Mrs. Lisenbee has a passion for our school. She volunteers for the additional duties and tasks in an effort to make sure that everything at JCMHS runs smoothly. She can often be seen at sporting events cheering on the students or taking action pictures with a smile," she added.

"Mrs. Lisenbee is well known throughout the school and community for her compassion and energy. She is always courteous and helpful to others. She is highly respected by her peers and appreciated because of the way she treats others. She is seen as a very positive person on this team and exhibits a 'can-do' philosophy.

"Mrs. Lisenbee is efficient and thorough in her work and finishes the job in a timely manner. The combination of her high ethical standards and vast experience enable her to be an excellent mentor to other employees. She represents JCMHS well and strives for excellence.

"The energy and enthusiasm with which she goes about her day is remarkable. Mrs. Lisenbee emulates warmth, humility, and compassion as she serves others and always expresses appreciation to others for their efforts," Holmes concluded.

JCMHS Mathematics Coach Debra Willacey added, "I have been Mrs. Lisenbee's colleague for two school years, and it has truly been a pleasure working with her to guide our students in the right direction academically and socially.

Energetic, enthusiastic, and effective, Leslie succeeds in affecting her students beyond the confines of a classroom.

"Leslie is a professional teacher who meticulously organizes, plans, and executes her lessons. She is continually praised by staff for her ways to engage students. Her content knowledge is superb, and her teaching methods motivate even the most struggling students. She tailors her lessons to the students' abilities and needs. Leslie is a hard worker and outstanding teacher who voluntarily undertakes new assignments to meet a common goal. Though a young teacher, she tirelessly does ACT and SAT prep after school with struggling juniors and seniors. She is a member of the RTI committee, and makes herself readily available to other teachers needing assistance. She maintains a positive working relationship with her teammates and administration," she said.

"Mrs. Lisenbee has proven she is competent and motivated to teach on any level. She has made an effortless transition from teaching high school reading to middle school math to now high school math, all with no complaint. At Jefferson County Middle High School, she has displayed her dynamic teaching methods and her ability to motivate and challenge students through traditional as well as innovative strategies. Leslie creates and utilizes word walls, real world experiences, and hands on activities to capture the interest of students. She also shows her care for her students by attending and staying involved in their extracurricular activities.

"Leslie's colleagues and her students are truly fortunate to have the opportunity to experience her passion for teaching first hand. Her enthusiasm for education is contagious and should be caught by all. It is with extreme pleasure that I recommend Leslie Lisenbee for the 2014 Florida Department of Education Macy's Teacher of the Year. Her dedication and motivation make her very deserving," Willacey concluded.

Lisenbee spoke of her teaching philosophy and practices. "There are many people that play an important role in education therefore; education can be described as a team effort. Our goal as educators is to provide an information rich, engaging, and safe environment that will provide all types of students the ability to succeed. Success, though, is more than just a grade in the grade book. Students succeed in many ways while they work towards the completion of their education.

"The stigma that accompanies the field of teaching is that we as teachers only teach the skills outlined by our state standards. This stigma is a myth. During the thirteen years a student is in the public education system, we as teachers, have the opportunity to mold them into educated young men and women, as well as good citizens in their community, state and country. I feel that I, as a teacher, have the responsibility to not only teach math lessons, but also the life lessons our students will take with them into their future. I feel teaching the students how to become better citizens will aid in their overall learning experience. We want the students to be responsible, come to class prepared, and give learning their best effort. This goal can be aided if the students know how to be responsible and understand how being prepared now while they are in school will make them successful in their life outside our campus. We as teachers spend almost as much time with the students as their parents and legal guardians do, therefore we have a lot of influence on them as individuals. I make it a goal of mine to know each of my students inside and outside of my classroom. I make myself visible at events in the community to support my students. They know that I want them to succeed and that I measure my own success by helping them reach their goals. My first priority is teaching the skills my students need to know in order to meet the requirements set by the school and state in their area of study, but I also take pride in molding the students into citizens that will benefit their society," said Lisenbee.

"In public education all people involved are accountable for the success of the students. Students, parents, administrators, teachers, and all other district personnel have a role in the success of our students; whether it is teaching or providing a clean, safe environment for the students. The students themselves need to be held accountable for the effort that they put into their class work, which is reflected in their grades and test scores. Privileges like athletics, clubs, etc. also hold the students accountable. Without proper effort in the classroom students are not qualified to participate in activities. Behavior is also a factor that the student is held accountable for. Behaving in any way that is unprofessional affects the student in the classroom as well as in the extracurricular events. Teachers have to teach. That is simple. We have to put that as our first priority. We are required to have open communication with all parties involved so that the student has every opportunity to succeed. Parents have a responsibility to the student and the teacher to ensure that they support their child's education and provide support to the teacher. This support can simply be making sure their child is on track in class and has completed necessary assignment. Other teachers and staff in the school may not ever interact directly with every student, but they are required to carry themselves in a professional manner that will model the characteristics of a good citizen for the students to observe. Accountability is measured and evaluated in many ways, but the most important aspect of accountability to me, is open communication. If the lines of communication are open, then all parties involved with a student's education will be able to share and help the student succeed," she added.

"Educators have opportunities every day to influence a child, something as small as a smile can be encouragement to a struggling student. We have to remember that we are a big influence in the lives of these students outside the classroom as well as inside. We need to make them feel welcome and safe. They need to trust us and depend on us to do our part in helping them achieve whatever goals they may set for themselves. There are challenges that teachers face on a daily basis, but there is no need to dwell on what the challenges are. We as teachers just need to be flexible and do what it takes to help our students. Public education as a whole, must come together to fight for our students," Lisenbee concluded.

Nicole Roddenberry, Nominee For District Teacher Of The Year

FRAN HUNT
ECB Publishing
Staff Writer

It's that time of year again for the Macy's Teacher of The Year.

There is one nominee from each of the two district schools for the 2014 District Teacher Of The Year. One of those nominees is Nicole Roddenberry.

The nominees were chosen by their peers, and then three out of town judges sift through the paperwork, tally the scores and determine the winner. The winner will be announced February 11.

Roddenberry is a first grade teacher at Jefferson Elementary School (JES). She has nine years of experience, all of which are at JES.

Of Roddenberry, JES Principal Dr. Gwen S. Coverson said, "Mrs. Roddenberry has a thorough knowledge of first grade curriculum, which combined with her excellent communication skills, enables her to express herself and present topics remarkably well. She has a creative imagination that allows her to make classroom work interesting to her students. Mrs. Roddenberry has the physical energy and drive to do a fantastic job, however demanding, in any school setting.

"Mrs. Roddenberry's personal characteristics, including patience, consideration, emotional stability, and good judgment are a great asset to our school. She understands both students and the learning process to an exceptional degree," she added.

"I recommend Nicole Roddenberry, without reservation, for the 2014 Teacher of the Year for Jefferson Elementary School. I believe if she is selected to represent the state of Florida, Mrs. Roddenberry will prove to be an exceptional Teacher of the Year."

JES Assistant Principal Nancy Whitty added, "Mrs. Roddenberry has been a valued member of the Jefferson Elementary School's faculty for nine years.

"Her positive attitude and love for her children are reflected each day through her kind smile, warm hugs, and high academic expectations she sets for students each day. Her flexibility in working with students, teachers, and the public has earned her an enviable reputation as an excellent teacher who truly cares about people and our school. Under her leadership the first grade team continues to provide our students with a quality and firm educational foundation," she said.

"Mrs. Roddenberry demonstrates the highest level of professional commitment and skill in her work with students and colleagues. To carry out her professional responsibilities, she gives generously of her valuable time, and often her work extends beyond the school day and throughout the summer.

"I am proud to say that Mrs. Roddenberry is not only a personal friend of mine, but a professional colleague that I admire and proud to have representing Jefferson Elementary School as Our Teacher of the Year and a nominee as be an effective teacher, planning ahead, knowing the curriculum, and analyzing student data is key. I strive every day to be an effective teacher in hopes that my students will embrace what has been given and continue a rewarding and successful educational journey," said Roddenberry.

"In my opinion, public education is an institution that should be a community where educators, parents, and administrators work together to achieve student success. Positive communication should take place and each should have a part in the decision making process in an individual student's education. We all should be held accountable in making sure students are successful. However, it is the teacher who must be held accountable for educating the students.

"A teacher is a lifelong learner who continues his/her education over the years to stay up to date and aware of the state expectations. Accountability is measured and evaluated by planning in advance and analyzing data weekly. Students are grouped according to their needs, which allows them to receive additional help in the areas where they are presently experiencing the most difficulties and others to be challenged. By doing this, students should continually show growth. Student portfolios and Data Notebooks are kept current and are easily accessed for parent conferences to stay in tune with their child's progress. Weekly newsletters are also sent home to keep parents informed on what is being taught in the classroom, so extra help can be provided at home," she added.

"It is unfortunate that the effectiveness of teachers and students is solely evaluated by yearly test scores. This is where the challenge comes into play. As a first grade teacher, I put an extreme amount of effort into teaching reading and math. They are the most crucial areas that are tested. Reading is usually the most crucial, where students are having the most difficulty. This is why data is a beautiful thing to help plan my instruction, targets, and learning goals. Grouping students according to their needs is an effective part of my instruction. Different reading strategies are utilized in small groups such as comprehension, phonemic awareness, and vocabulary. By grouping my students, this allows me to target specific skills and differentiate my instruction to help them achieve their learning goals. I also utilize my Smart board in my teaching. It is a hands-on and innovative way of keeping my students engaged in the lesson away from the standard text. It also allows them to be the facilitator and helps improve their self-confidence. Ongoing process monitoring is also used to plan instruction. My students are grouped accordingly from the data on weekly assessments, beginning, middle, and end of the year assessments and the state-mandated FAIUR reading assessment," Roddenberry concluded.

"She expects each student to give their personal best in every endeavor and she expects no less of herself. She is warm, humorous and presents a tone in her classroom that's extremely conducive to learning. In all situations in dealing with her students, Nicole goes the extra mile. Throughout her lessons, students are actively engaged and enthusiastic about learning. She also has planned for differentiated abilities in her room and assures all students at all times have something academic in nature. She meets every day with a positive attitude knowing that it is going to be a great day in first grade," Collins concluded.

Addressing her teaching philosophy and practices, Roddenberry said, "If a Child Can't Learn the Way We Teach, Maybe We Should Teach The Way They Learn." This is something I take to heart in my teaching practices every day. There are different types of learners in a classroom, and different teaching strategies are needed to meet all their individual needs. By staying in tune with your students' learning styles, all students are capable of learning and experiencing success.

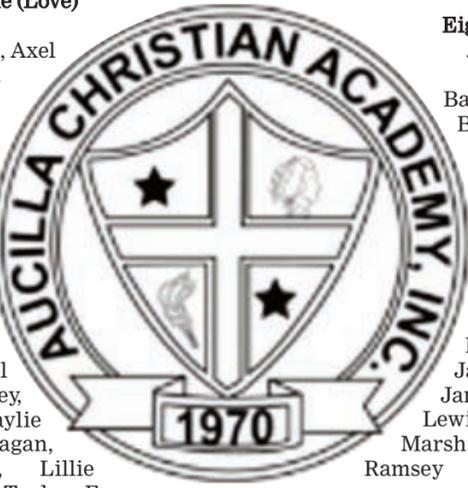

"It is my belief that learning should be engaging and interactive regardless the subject matter being taught. My role as the teacher is to provide a positive and safe learning environment incorporating differentiated instruction to challenge them to their own level. In order to

MLK Parade Best To Date

FRAN HUNT
ECB Publishing
Staff Writer

The 33rd annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. parade was the biggest and best to date. About an hour prior, people began picking out their spots along the parade route and densely lining the streets.

The parade was also the most impressive, with over 50 entries.

Leading the way in their patrol vehicles were Sheriff David Hobbs and Monticello Chief of Police Fred Mosley. Also participating in the parade were the JROTC Color Guard and Battalion; Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 251; the Community Band; Parade Grand Marshals the Jefferson County Retired Educators Association (JCREA); students from Jefferson Elementary School and Jefferson County Middle

High School; Jefferson County Tax Collector Lois Howell-Hunter; Jefferson County Property Appraiser Angela Gray; Roosevelt Reichert and his 1941 car; the Jefferson County Senior Citizens Center; City Council members; Chi Upsilon Omega AKA; New Bethel AME; County Commission members; Jefferson Correctional Institution CERT team and K-9 unit; Jefferson County School Board members; Superintendent of Schools Al "Pee Wee" Cooksey; Welaunee Missionary Baptist Church; Jackson Hewitt Tax Company; and the Boys and Girls Club of the Big Bend Stix Band.

Also, Baby Bargain Boutique; Daughters of Debra #60; Heroines of Jericho; Virginia West Lane; Carrie White Boone Assembly; radio station 102.3 van and stretch limousine; Christian Motorcyclists Association (CMA); North Side Laundry; Jefferson County High School class of 1971 float; Greater Fellowship Missionary Baptist Church; Memorial Missionary Baptist Church; Patrick Monday; Bethel AME Church; Nims Middle School band; Sweetfield Missionary Baptist Church; Georgia Car Credit; Red Hats; US Army recruiter SFC Pittman; Bouncing Babies; Chi Omega; Flea Market Tally; Rickards High School band; Midway Antique Car; COG; Mt. Olive; Sunshine Riders; Keaton Tire; and Buddy's Home Furnishings.

Not to say the least, but this year's favorite crowd pleasers appeared to be the Rhythm Rushers, with their brightly colored costumes, dancing, and the catchy beat of drums and bells. The music had people dancing along the parade route.

WCTV said of the local parade, the historic event is the longest running Martin Luther King, Jr. festival in the tri-state area.

MLK Jr. activities continually grow and improve in quality and content since its inception from the symbolic march in 1982, when it paraded from the former Jefferson County Day Care Center (Old Howard Academy), to the Jefferson County Recreation Park.

The parade concluded at the MLK Center, where activities and vendors booths galore awaited the community.

This is the fourth anniversary of events at the MLK Center, following the parade.

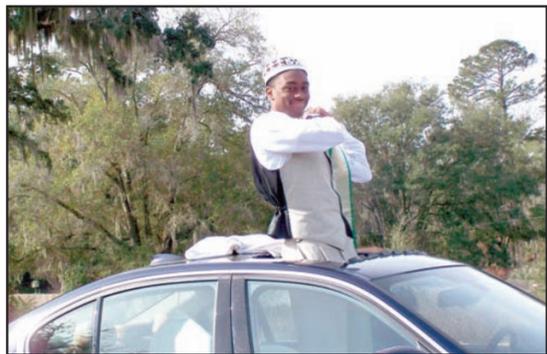

In conjunction to celebrating the life and legacy of Dr. King, there was a memorial service on Sunday, January 20 at the MLK Jr. Center. The service began at 3 p.m. The speaker of the hour was Reverend Tisdale and his congregation of the St. Phillips AME Church. Presiding the program was Gwenith Parrish.

Erma Morris brought greetings and the occasion. Mary Madison then reflected on the life, legacy, and contributions of Dr. King.

Jefferson County Constitutional Officers; Property Appraiser Angela Gray; Tax Collector Lois Hunter; Judge Robert "Bobby" Plaines; Superintendent of Schools Al "Pee Wee" Cooksey; Sheriff David Hobbs; and Clerk of Court Kirk Reams, received love offerings.

OIL SPILL CLAIMS PROCESS

Most businesses in the Jefferson County area have a potential claim to recover 2010 losses from the BP oil spill. Claimant-friendly payments under the new Court Supervised Settlement Program (CSSP) can be much higher than those previously offered. Some highlights of the new settlement include:

- The CSSP is paying a multiple of up to 2.5 times 2010 losses.
- Claims previously denied may now be eligible under the new settlement.
- Claims are based on monthly revenues – larger 2010 annual income does not disqualify your business.

CRI's team is among the most knowledgeable in the nation having filed thousands of BP oil spill claims and successfully assisted our clients in recovering tens of millions of dollars from BP.
