

New Lake Resort?

No, this is not a new lake resort in the county, but rather a retention pond at the industrial park. The sheer dimensions of the facility struck Commissioner Benny Bishop, who characterized it as possibly “a bit of overkill”. According to the engineer, the pond is capable of taking in the runoff from the 40-acre park, as well as from adjoining private properties. Even so, Bishop found the super-sized pond a tad over the top. No doubt it would take in all the overflow, Bishop said, adding only partly in jest that possibly the county could “open it up to water skiers.”

If you missed the January kickoff of the Florida Economic and Business Development Webinar series, which is part of the county's Vision Action Initiative, you will have an opportunity to participate in the second program of the series, scheduled for 2 to 3:45 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13.

Titled “Economic Diversification: Models and Strategies for Florida's Rural Communities”, the program will feature three speakers who will share their expertise in the areas of economic development, tourism promotion and agribusiness positioning.

The three are Bill Stanton, director of the Jackson County Development Council and vice chair of the Florida Economic Development Council; Kevin McGeever, director of content management for Visit Florida, the state's chief tourism promoting agency; and Hank Scott, president and general manager of Long & Scott Farm, a diversified fourth-generation family-owned farming operation in Mt. Dora, FL.

The three speakers will talk about how rural communities can avoid or reduce the vulnerability of being at the mercy of a few industries or institutions. Please See EXPERTS Page 3

Recession Stopped Subdivision Aiming To Make A Come Back

The matter of the unfinished Bide-a-Wee subdivision, which Farmers and Merchants Bank (FMB) now owns and is trying to complete, continues to engage the Monticello City Council.

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 4, FMB representative Mike Rogers presented the council with a proposal on behalf of the bank. That proposal asked that the city waive the sewer connection fee and the system development charge, in exchange for FMB or some other developer constructing the missing sewer line.

Typically, the responsibilities assigned the different entities for a new subdivision are clearly spelled out upfront. But in the case of the Bide-a-Wee development, which was initially approved about eight years ago, the legal wording in the contract is vague at best, as to whether the city or the developer is responsible for construction of the sewer line.

Complicating the issue, few of the original players are around, including the developer, who went bankrupt. Which explains why FMB is now the holder of the property.

After due consideration on Tuesday evening and input from both City Attorney Bruce Leinback and City Manager Steve Wingate, the council postponed a decision on the FMB proposal until next month. In the interim, Wingate is to research exactly how much money the city might lose on waiver of the tap fee and system's development charge, versus the cost of the line's construction.

Also, should the deal go forward, the council wants Leinback to draft language that limits the waiver specifically to the subdivision's eight remaining lots and to the sewer line alone, plus ties the waiver to the current charges. Meaning that if these charges were to go up in future and the developer has not completed the development by then, the latter must pay the difference.

At least one citizen took exception to the proposed arrangement. Troy Avera, of the Avera-Clarke Bed and Breakfast, said the bank should be held accountable for the charges and construction of the sewer line, the same as any other developer. If the city granted an exception, it could well set a precedent for other developers to seek waivers in the future, he said.

“I think this is a bad step to take,” Avera said.

Last month, the council approved the Bide-a-Wee subdivision's plat, conditional on city and FMB staff working out a resolution on the sanitary sewer line construction.

Alan Wise, of Preble-Rish Inc., the city's consultant engineer, estimated the line's construction cost at about $35,000, including the mobilization, erosion control and other associated costs.

FMB gained acquisition of the property through foreclosure following the 2007 recession.

When originally approved, the development consisted of 11 lots, three of which have since been developed. Bide-a-Wee means “Stay a While”.

The subdivision is located on the easternmost side of the city between Pearl and Washington streets.

Building Permits Report Tells A Familiar Story

When it comes to building activity in the city and county during January, the story is essentially the same it's been for the last several months, with home improvement projects continuing to dominate the numbers.

This according to the latest figures released by the Jefferson County/City of Monticello Building Inspection and Contractor Licensing Department.

The January report shows the city and county issued a combined 35 permits, up four from the 31 issued in December, with home renovations and repairs accounting for the majority of the activity.

The 35 permits generated a combined $8,720 in fees, compared with $5,887.34 in the previous month. Of the 35 permits, the city issued nine and collected $1,633.35, and the county issued 26 and collected $7,087.08.

River Park Committee Offers Ideas For Wacissa

(Kumbaya Mood Prevails)

The committee appointed to come up with ideas for the development of the Wacissa River Park not only accomplished its task fairly rapidly, but it did so with complete unanimity and community support, and its recommendations for initial improvements at the head of the river received resounding endorsement from commissioners.

It was a remarkable accomplishment, given the passions and divisiveness that have characterized the issue, as duly noted by Commission Chairwoman Betsy Barfield and Wacissa River Committee Chair Teresa Tinker at the onset of the discussion on Tuesday morning, Feb. 4.

Tinker conceded that the committee's recommendations addressed only the first phase of the project, which concerned itself solely with restoration and preservation of the spring — something “everyone could agree on”. Later proposals for the improvement of the facility might not go as smoothly, she admitted. For this first phase, however, everyone was on-board, she said.

“There's a lot of consensus,” Tinker said. “What we're talking about today is not divisive. Everyone is for it. No one disagrees that we need to restore the spring.”

That said, the committee recommended — and the commission unanimously approved — several actions to jumpstart the process. These actions include removing all invasive vegetation, silt and debris from the spring; cleaning and de-silting the boat launch channel from the river proper to its northern end; constructing two sets of metal steps with handrails as designated points of entry into the swimming area; stabilizing the embankments; and expanding and upgrading the picnic and parking areas.

Two other actions were approved in concept only, pending the outcome of more committee research and community discussion. The two entail possible construction of a boardwalk around the perimeter of the swimming area to allow for swimmers' safety and as a docking place for boaters; and placement of a hand launch at the north end of the channel for canoes and kayaks.

Tinker emphasized the preliminary nature of the boardwalk and hand launch ideas. She wanted it clearly understood that the committee had yet much research to do before making a recommendation. That research, moreover, would include soliciting the community's input, she said.

Another point she emphasized was that all the contemplated changes so far simply aimed to preserve and protect the spring and assure for the safety of both boaters and swimmers, especially that of younger swimmers.

Debating Creationism, Defending Faith

AMBER HOUSTON
ECB Publishing
Staff Writer

Just this week, Bill Nye and Ken Ham debated whether or not Creationism was viable in a modern, scientific society.

Ken Ham is the president of Answers in Genesis and the founder of the Creation Museum. He is handsomely credentialed in academics and experience.

Bill Nye is just as credentialed and even better known as "The Science Guy." He has devoted his life to science, especially in making it palatable for children. He is a graduate of Cornell University.

Both men are successful by anyone's standards, published authors, and well respected.

But that is beside the point. The man doesn't make the argument, no matter how worthy his credentials.

The main question of the debate was the question of whether or not Creationism is viable. Both men answered as completely as time allowed. Both men were well-organized in their presentations and thoughts and polite towards each other. The scientific side of this debate can seem mocking and get bogged down in so many facts as to become boring and unpalatable — Nye tempered his case with anecdotes and humor to keep audience interest while maintaining the integrity of the argument with scientific observation. The religious side of this debate can often be made emotional and overblown, but Ham gracefully used a soft tongue and a quiet intellect to avoid being overzealous.

But that's beside the point, too. The point is that this debate should never have happened.

As politely as Ham participated in the debate, he should have declined it. However courteous, he allowed himself to be held up for ridicule. There are people that will not believe his side and never will. There are people that will ridicule him for the sake of doing so.

This is not a fair debate to either participant. On each side, people came in already knowing whom they would decide to be the winner. Too many people are too entrenched in their beliefs to change them on this issue.

And honestly, I do not think that Fundamentalists like Ham are quite consistent: they believe that God is vast and unfathomable. That He is the God who literally exhales stars—the New Living Translation of Psalm 33:6 reads: "The Lord merely spoke and the Heavens were created. He breathed the word and all the stars were born." In the Lord's Prayer, Christians confess this about God, "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen." And yet while Fundamentalists confess with their mouths that God is so far and above mortals in His power, ability, love, and knowledge, they claim to understand an incomprehensible God.

So what did this prove?

I've always heard and found truth in this: "defending something acknowledges that it needs to be defended." Faith is an encompassing belief that has no need for basis in observable things. According to Hebrews 11:1, faith is "the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen" (ESV). By its very nature, faith has no space for doubt—a faith that needs to be defended is no faith at all.

So did Ham win hearts to Christ in this endeavor, or did he simply push non-Christians away?

Blind People Are Visually Impaired, Not Mentally Impaired

In early January 2014, a major U.S. newspaper ran an article entitled, "Why Do We Fear the Blind." The article, which was written by a teacher of the blind who works with the international organization, Braille Without Borders, focused on the fear that sighted people have of persons who are blind and visually impaired and that lives on today in many cultures including our own. One example the author gave was of a South American family in 2009 who asked a local priest to say a mass so that their blind infant son would die and not be a source of shame and hardship for the family.

I began losing my sight when I was 12 and became legally blind in 1999.

I lived and raised my children in Monticello, Florida, where fears like those cited in the article are more subtle. Many times, I have confronted assumptions held by sighted people, their ignorance about my abilities, and have seen their avoidance of my friends and clients. I once went to my bank to withdraw money from my account and was accompanied by a sighted friend. The teller addressed my friend exclusively asking if she had my "power of attorney" — the assumption being that I lacked the mental capacity to handle my own financial affairs. An older African American friend of mine, who had long ago experienced avoidance due to his race, lost his sight and experienced people avoiding him because of his blindness. His response, as others drew back from him, was that he was black and blind and that neither was catching. A blind client of mine, when arriving at her dentist's office, endured the anger of the office manager because she did not bring her "caregiver" to assist her during the appointment. Most individuals who are blind not require assistants but even if someone had one, what exactly is a caregiver supposed to do during a dental procedure?

The assumptions

that underlie these stories are that people who are blind are mentally incompetent, that because we cannot see we cannot do anything ourselves, and the irrational fear that maybe, just maybe, blindness is contagious.

Today, I am an independent living specialist at the Lighthouse of the Big Bend in Tallahassee, where our mission is to assist people with vision loss in their pursuit of independence. Our service area includes Jefferson County. Every single day, I advocate for my clients who are blind and visually impaired and for myself. There are 6.6 million U.S.

citizens today who suffer from a visual impairment and half a million in the State of Florida. Each and everyone one of us has the capacity to achieve and thrive in our lives. Please do not make our challenges more difficult as we strive to live as independent human beings — and as your friends, colleagues, and neighbors.

Sincerely,

Toni King

As part of her presentation, Tinker introduced the four other members of the committee. These are Kim Gilmore, Tourist Development Council Coordinator Nancy Wideman, Phil Calandra and Clerk of Court Kirk Reams.

Tinker praised engineer Alan Wise, of Preble-Rish Inc., and Dr. George Cole, of the Suwannee River Water Management District (SRWMD) Board of Directors, for their contributions. She especially thanked the two for generously sharing their expertise — Wise in the area of engineering and Dr. Cole in helping navigate the procedural maze involved in SRWMD funding.

Dr. Cole expressly assured commissioners of the availability of SRWMD funding for springs' preservation and general water quality improvement projects. He said the county's funding application would be before his board at its next meeting and a response on the funding could be forthcoming as soon as next week.

Wise, for his part, estimated the cost of the project at $234,245, including surveys, permitting, engineering work and such. He cited various potential funding sources for different aspects of the work, leaving the county with an in-kind match of about $96,000.

Everyone involved in the enterprise had nothing but praise for the committee and its accomplishment, creating what Reams characterized as "a Kumbaya mood".

Reams said when Commissioner Stephen Walker selected him as the latter's designee on the committee, he (Reams) had had second thoughts, given the "divisiveness and polarization" surrounding the issue. But he was now proud to be part of the process, he said.

"The committee did a great job and Alan and the SRWMD did great," Reams said.

Walker, who came under criticism for pushing for a committee that has an overwhelming District 5 representation (the river is in District 5), noted that the group had gone out of its way to be fair and inclusive.

"Everyone who uses the river was considered when developing this plan," Walker said.

However, it was Wise, who has long been involved with the Wacissa River project, who best summarized the committee's accomplishment.

"We made more progress in the last two or three weeks than in the last four years that I've been involved with this," Wise said. "It's very exciting."

Troy Avera, a citizen with particular interest in the issue, sounded the only potentially discordant note in what another attendee otherwise described as "a feel good fest". Praising the committee for a job well done and for showing what citizens could do when they came together for a common cause, Avera nonetheless expressed disappointment that the plan hadn't gone farther.

He well understood the divisiveness surrounding the issue and the fact the recommendations were a preliminary step to begin the process, he said. Even so, he wished the group had tackled some of the thornier issues, he said. He also reiterated the request that the committee expand its membership to represent a broader segment of the community, given that the river was a countywide resource.

Commissioner John Nelson also sounded a cautionary note. While praising the committee's accomplishment, Nelson asked Tinker to share the plan with the African-American community in the Wacissa area and solicit its involvement in future proceedings.

Left unsaid was the fact that absent the county's purchase of the property several years ago and the Tourist Development Council recently pressing for formation of the committee, this particular development plan likely would have never come to fruition.

dential construction; two for commercial-related projects; and two for miscellaneous uses such as sheds, signs, workshops or barns.

In the residential permit category, the valuation was $936,719, compared with zero in the previous month. This valuation was $100,916 in January 2013.

The valuation for commercial permits was $110,000, compared with $649,367 in December. It was $143,000 in January 2013.

And the valuation for other permits (a category that includes additions, re-roofs and non-residential structures) was $1,020,564, compared with $671,673 in December. This valuation was $335,479 in January 2013.

Meanwhile, the Jefferson County Planning and Zoning Department issued seven permits and collected $4,662.26, compared with seven permits and $4,589.17 collected in December. In January 2013, the department issued six permits and collected $1,877.07.

PHONE SCAM

Automated dialers blast thousands of random calls to mobile numbers that are gleaned from public listings or obtained from black market dealers — who hustle "sucker lists" — but disconnect after one ring. The scammers count on call recipients to notice the missed calls in call logs and return the calls out of curiosity.

Return calls, however, are often directed to expensive international hotlines that can charge upwards of $19.95 to connect, plus additional costs per minute. Charges typically appear on end-of-month statements as "premium services".

Consumers and businesses report calls from several different area codes: Dominican Republic, 809; Jamaica, 876; British Virgin Islands, 284; and Grenada, 473.

The illegal process of sneaking unapproved charges onto phone bills is referred to as "cramming" by the Federal Trade Commission, and is one of the most common consumer complaints in America.

While it is unlikely that recipients will be billed for accepting incoming calls, wireless carriers assume that users accept charges when they voluntarily return the calls. The BBB recommends the following:

- Never return calls to unfamiliar foreign numbers.
- Regularly check wireless statements and immediately report discrepancies.
- Add phone numbers to the National Do Not Call Registry and report violations.

For more information on the latest scams, visit BBB's Scam Stopper.

ROOFING SCAM

The activities these individuals engage in can range from roof repairs to asphalt/milling drive-ways to painting to scrap metal cleanup and such.

Recently, several homeowners in neighboring Madison County paid to have roof repair work done by a so-called contractor from South Carolina. Soon after the work was completed, however, these homeowners learned that the roofing product used simply washed off in the rain. Attempts to contact the contractor by the number given failed, as the number was non-working.

Citizens are thereby urged, when approached by an out-of-town contractor searching for work, to contact the local Building Department to ensure that the individual is legitimate and licensed to work in Jefferson County prior to allowing and paying for any work. Homeowners may also contact the Sheriff's Office for assistance in determining the legitimacy of a contractor.

Man Demolishes Brother's House With A Forklift

In Etne, Norway, A man was sentenced to 14 months in prison after demolishing his brother's home using a forklift. The man heard rumors his older brother was going to destroy an older house on family property, and the youngest brother who felt he had a right to the house, retaliated by demolishing his older sibling's house. The older brother and his 16-year-old son were in the house when the youngest brother began tearing down walls using the forklift. The attorney for the older brother, Vik-Vestly said, "His way of reacting was totally crazy. You don't tear down a house because you hear some rumors." The younger brother has been ordered to pay $164,000 in damages to his older brother, along with receiving jail time. He also was hit with a five-year driving ban for drunk driving.

Man Using Blow Darts Faces Charges

In Pullman, Wash., 18-year-old Joseph Gillies is facing felony charges and could be sent to prison for as much as five years for shooting at least four different people with blow darts. Gillies said he and his friends practice shooting blow darts for fun, but is sorry for shooting people and would like to apologize to each of his victims and called himself a "moron." Gillies said, "I'm sorry, it's a huge regret. It's going to stick with me for the rest of my life. It's childish. It's immature. It's ridiculous." None of the victims were seriously injured.

Punctured Tires Is Result of "Mental Suffering"

In Malmo, Sweden, a 71-year-old man, tired of listening to jingles being blasted by the ice cream truck that passed his house, used a power drill to puncture the tires of the truck. Percy Nilsson, owner of the Malmo Redhawks hockey team, confessed to the crime and paid to replace the driver's tires, but also took the case to court about the "outdated" practice of the ice cream trucks passing through neighborhoods with loud music. He told the court he suffered mentally as a result of the loud music. The court's decision was for Nilsson to pay a $15,500 fine and reimburse the ice cream truck driver for the loss of income caused by the damage to his vehicle.

The Search Is On For Florida's Outstanding Senior Volunteer

Every day, Florida senior volunteers generously give their time and service to help others. Now here's your chance to give back by nominating a deserving older adult in your community for his or her outstanding service through the Salute to Senior Service® program.

Sponsored by Home Instead, Inc., the franchisor of the Home Instead Senior Care® network, Salute to Senior Service recognizes the invaluable contributions of adults age 65 and older who give at least 15 hours a month of volunteer service to their favorite causes.

"Seniors have so much to give and make a positive impact on our communities daily," said Scott Harrell, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care office serving Tallahassee, Wakulla, Quincy and Monticello. "Senior volunteerism not only benefits others, but also helps seniors stay active and socially engaged in their communities - important elements of healthy aging."

Members of the community are asked to nominate and vote for these everyday heroes at SaluteToSeniorService.com. State winners will be determined by popular vote. A panel of senior care experts will then select a national Salute to Senior Service winner from among the state honorees.

Home Instead, Inc. will donate $500 to each of the state winners' designated and approved nonprofit organizations, and their personal stories will be shared online on the Salute to Senior Service Wall of Fame. In addition, $5,000 will be donated to the national winner's designated and approved nonprofit charity.

To complete and submit an online nomination form for a senior age 65 or older who volunteers at least 15 hours a month, and to view the contest's official rules, visit SaluteToSeniorService.com. Completed nomination forms can alternatively be mailed to Salute to Senior Service, P.O. Box 285, Bellevue, NE 68005.

For more information about Salute to Senior Service or the Home Instead Senior Care network's services, call your local Home Instead Senior Care at 850-297-1897.

Volunteer Spotlight:
Chuck Chambers & Merle Zinck
Brynwood

AMBER HOUSTON

Staff Writer

Chuck Chambers and Merle Zinck are a multitasking duo that volunteer with Brynwood Nursing and Rehabilitation Center.

Walking into the activities room, one can see a large crowd—a dozen or more residents—attending this Wednesday morning service. Before them stands a dynamic speaker, and though age may have taken strength from the bodies of the audience, it has not taken strength from their voices or hearts. The room is alive with thoughtful nods and the sounds of “Amen!” and “Preach!”

Merle Zinck gives a thoughtful sermon on Paul’s message in Phillipians 3, where he speaks of all his worldly gains and accomplishments and ‘counts them all as loss.’ He gets residents thinking critically about their own worldly gains and what they take pride in foremost. Then gently, he reminds them foremost to take pride in their relationship with God.

Zinck is respected, thoughtful, and knows all of the residents by name. He is well spoken and outgoing. Not only does he volunteer with the residents, he takes care of little maintenance needs, like hanging pictures and helping staff. Capable and godly, he ends the sermon with a prayer punctuated by, “God loves you and so do I! Amen.”

Chambers is a different character. He is quiet, reserved, and self-possessed. He was once the manager of the Monticello idents gather and talk. Grinning, he expressed a joking interest in starting a “Liar’s Club, where all the residents can get together, retell stories they already know about, and gossip about old times.”

Chambers is not the only one in his family that provides comfort and company to the residents. His wife, Sukie bakes for each resident’s birthday. Chuck recalls fondly, “She even made chocolate sleighs for Christmas - a couple dozen of them.” Zinck was quick to praise her too, saying that she is a talented cook and a sweet person.

For his part, Zinck laughed and encouraged Chuck. It is clear that the volunteers help to create a loving environment as well as meet maintenance needs and resident needs.

The biggest need is the warm environment, talking to and visiting with residents. There is a screening and training process involved. To volunteer, contact Brynwood Nursing and Rehabilitation at 997-1800.

Sorority Serves Veterans During MLK Day Of Service

ARLECIA HARRIS, SHARON G. BERRIAN

Scores of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. chapters across the country and abroad sponsored Sunday Supper and service project events on that Sunday, January 19 and Monday, January 20, during the Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service.

Locally, the Delta Kappa Omega (DKO) and Chi Upsilon Omega graduate chapters and FAMU's Beta Alpha undergraduate chapters celebrated the life and service of military veterans, active military members and their families. On Sunday, sorority members provided dinner and resource information to active and veteran military members. More than 250 persons were fed, including some residents in the Providence community. On Monday, the sorority packaged clothing, shoes, bug repellent, camp fuel, sunscreen, tarps, toiletry items and other items for veterans living at camp sites.

"This was a day designed for service and we wanted to show our respect for and appreciation of the sacrifice made by our military and their families," said Kym Grady Holcomb, president, DKO Chapter. "It was also an expression of our sorority's love for this community and provided us with another opportunity to put into meaningful action the tenets of service coined by both Dr. King and the founders of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority."

The events held at the Delta Kappa Omega Providence Community Center, began with the posting of colors by Rickards High School JROTC and benefited veterans in Leon and surrounding counties.

"This event offered great recognition and support for area veterans who have served their country and community. It is very much appreciated," said Jefferson County Commissioner John R. Nelson, Sr., Past District II Commander, Department of Florida, VFW.

"I am pleased that our sorority could support those who have made great sacrifices for our country," said Margie Wade, president, Chi Upsilon Omega Chapter. "Our sorority works hard every day to render timeless and sustainable service. I can think of no higher honor than to give back to our service men and women."

Arlecia Harris, DKO's Economic Security Chairman who spearheaded the events, said: "The events of the supper and service projects accomplished the goals of honoring the life and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. — mobilizing volunteers to serve, generating civic dialogue and inspiring community service."

The Sunday program featured speakers who provided useful information on housing, home loan resources and more. Panelists were Erin Foley, Outreach Worker, Big Bend Coalition for The Homeless and DKO member Mary Jones, who is also the Assistant Executive Director, Tallahassee Lenders Consortium.

"Our sorority's mission is service to all mankind. So this day allowed us to put that global mission into action, while addressing an issue important to our community and nation," said Annalise Anise, president, Beta Alpha Chapter.

The day also provided an opportunity for the next generation of leaders to give back through their service. DKO member Carmen Conner volunteered her time, working side by side with her daughter, Malone, a 13-year-old student at Montford Middle School.

"Working hard, coupled with service, is something that I strive to do in my everyday life," said Conner. "Being able to model this behavior for my daughter and other young people is very important." Conner is an assistant principal at Roberts Elementary School.

Also taking part in both days of service were DKO's Emerging Young Leaders and Pearls of Perfection youth leadership groups.

"It felt great helping out the veterans and thanking them for what they have done for our country," said Ariel Ward, Pearl member and 11th grade student, Florida State University High School.

"It meant so much for our youth members to be able to serve. You could see the appreciation in the eyes of the veterans" said Ambria Daniel, president, Pearls of Perfection and 11th grade student at Lincoln High School, "Service is what Dr. King preached during his life and I believe that a brighter tomorrow and better community begins with us."

While the event occurred at the Delta Kappa Omega Providence Community Center in Tallahassee, several in attendance were veterans from Monticello that were served by this event.
