Family Dollar appeals city decision

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

The developer who wants to relocate the city's Family Dollar store to a wooded site on U.S. 98 on the western edge of Apalachicola isn't giving up.

On Friday, Panama City attorney Robert Hughes submitted a notice of appeal of the Planning and Zoning Commission's Nov. 18 vote that gave a resounding no to a proposal to relocate the store from its current site adjacent to the Gulfside IGA to a lot that neighbors the Best Western Inn.

Hughes, who represents Blue Current Development LLC, the firm of Panama City Beach's Brett Woodward, is alleging the city's zoning approval process was riddled with errors and impropriety, and that the city should not be allowed to reverse its April 2012 decision.

The lawyer says the decision was a go-ahead for Woodward to move forward on the project and buy the land.

Hughes wants the city's board of adjustment to reverse P & Z's denial of the special exception request, and to direct city commissioners to grant the retail specialty store exception Woodward seeks in order to construct a more than 8,300 square-foot store on 1.16 acres at U.S. 98 and Clairmont.

The lawyer argues P & Z's unanimous vote in April 2012 to confirm that "the operation is consistent within the C-3 zoning district" led to Woodward spending about $302,000 on the project, including about $245,000 for the land, $24,000 for civil design work, $9,300 for legal fees, $9,000 for architectural work, $8,500 for surveying work, and $6,000 for environmental work.

In his recounting of what he says are the facts of the case, Hughes wrote that in April 2012 P & Z "of its own volition... voted unanimously to confirm that the C-3 zoning was appropriate and correct for the Family Dollar store."

He cites City Administrator Betty Webb's Sept. 19, 2012 follow-up letter confirming the vote as "justifiable reliance" upon which Woodward went ahead to buy the property a month later. He said Blue Current "worked diligently in late 2012 and spring of 2013 to develop its site plan in conformity with the city's land development code."

Hughes said the company "incurred extensive obligations and expenses such that it would be highly inequitable and unjust to now prohibit (Blue Current) from proceeding with the project's development."

He says P & Z Chairman Tom Daly's comment at the Nov. 2013 hearing, that "the reality is we voted on something very quickly without really thinking it through at that time," shows P & Z acted negligently, did not exercise sound judgment and was not "without wanton disregard for the company's rights in the property."

Hughes admits in this filing the city's land development code does not include "published criteria" as to what constitutes a retail

Local medico assists in the Philippines

Editor's note: In early November, Typhoon Haiyan, known as Typhoon Yolanda in the Philippines, was an exceptionally powerful Category 5 tropical cyclone that devastated portions of Southeast Asia, particularly the Philippines, killing 5,260 people and causing many more injuries.

Apalachicola resident Larry Applebee, a physician assistant who currently works as a hospitalist for IPC, took leave from this job to volunteer with Clarion Global Response, formerly IMAT (International Medical Assistance Team) as part of a crew of medical professionals from around the world who flew to the devastated region to help. He has done work like this in Haiti and other places, so he knew some of what to expect.

Applebee's team started out as with a PA, a nurse, and two paramedics, and later added four physicians and two RNs. The last two days Applebee's team was back down to him and the RN, so he "freelanced," traveling to Tacloban and Dagami with other groups, who provided needed medications in appreciation.

Applebee found himself working with professionals from Malaysia, Finland, Germany, the Netherlands and Israel. During his work there, he kept notes with the help of his iPhone which he worked into a journal on the plane trip home.

He describes his writing as "ADHD-like," but it is startlingly clear in its detail and moving in its impact. The Times is grateful

Eastpoint fires leave nine homeless

Two mobile homes were destroyed by fire during the last week of 2013.

On Christmas Day, a double-wide home at 548 Ridge Road, near the Otter Slide Road intersection, was consumed by flames.

Ashley Carr, a spokesperson for the State Fire Marshal's office, said the fire was ruled accidental and may have been caused by a faulty electrical outlet or space heater. She said the home was a total loss but the trailer's owner, Julia Smith, escaped without injury.

On Dec. 29, a second fire occurred not far away. At about 1:15 a.m. residents of a mobile home at 38 Jefferson Street awakened to find their home in flames.

Morris "Jay" Eveland and his wife Wendy shared their home with daughter Clarissa Cruson, her husband Deven, their three children, and a niece and nephew.

The families escaped from their home with nothing but the clothes they wore. Two Chihuahuas were killed in the blaze. A Red Cross spokesperson said some members of the family were barefoot.

CEO: Drone testing would bring jobs right away

By LOIS SWOBODA
653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
Lswoboda@starfl.com

BRUCE MCCORMACK

A new company is promising 10 jobs in January for Carrabelle if it can find a place to do business.

On Dec. 13, Bruce McCormack, CEO of Gulf Unmanned Systems Center (GUSC), a Panama City-based company that wants to test robot drones here, conducted a public meeting at the Carrabelle Municipal Center.

McCormack said he believes Carrabelle is perfect for his proposed work because the population is small and it is surrounded by a large landmass.

About 20 people gathered to hear his lecture. McCormack later said the majority of these had already submitted job applications to GUSC. GUSC intends to test only small robot drones, weighing under 55 pounds, on land, water and air. He said the testing would be unobtrusive.

Most of the machines tested would be battery powered and produce a hum similar to an electric lawnmower, McCormack said.

About 20 percent of the drones would be airborne, he said, and would fly at 400 feet or lower and be unlikely to interfere with regular air traffic.

"We will be flying over the same area Tyndall uses now," he said. "It is Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) controlled national airspace. Nobody can fly there without permission."

According to the FAA, use of unmanned aircraft in the National Airspace System (NAS) was first authorized in 1990.

Since then, the agency has sanctioned use of unmanned aircraft under limited circumstances for firefighting, disaster relief, search and rescue, law enforcement, border patrol, military training, and testing and evaluation.

Unmanned drones can be allowed to fly at up to 50,000 feet and are not approved for use in congested airspace or over large cities.

McCormack said airborne drones are mostly used to collect information. He said, using an aerial drone, it would be possible to survey Tate's Hell in three days, compared to the three to four months required for a land-based survey.

While he envisions testing aerial drones over Tate's Hell, McCormack said the majority of these robots would be aquatic and float or swim below the surface. These aquatic drones would be tested in state waters off the coast of Franklin County, he said.

Interviewed after the meeting, Carrabelle City Attorney Dan Hartman said the city is negotiating with Centennial Bank to allow GUSC to lease the Hexaport facility on John McInnis Road near the Thompson Field airport. The 65,000 square foot structure has remained empty since Greensteel declared bankruptcy in 2009.

Apalach cops nab burglary suspects

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

Apalachicola police last week arrested two adult men, and two male juveniles, in connection with a series of residential and car burglaries in the city over the last several weeks.

Arrested in different incidents was 34-year-old Lance A. Flowers, 30 Gibson Road, Apalachicola, and 21-year-old Kamron Lee Barwick, 8543 Highway 386, Wewahitchka. Two young males, neither over age 15, were also arrested with Barwick, and they are being held at a juvenile justice facility in Tallahassee.

Flowers was arrested by Apalachicola Police Officer Timmy Davis in connection with an incident last month at a residence on Tenth Street. Flowers is alleged to have broken into the house and stolen medications, as well as having broken into a car parked at the residence and stolen a handgun.

According to Franklin County Sheriff Office Detective Brett Johnson, Flowers also broke into two other vehicles that same day, parked at residences on 24th Street and Bobby Cato Street. From one car, Flowers snatched a bag full of personal items. In the other instance, Johnson said, the car alarm went off and Flowers fled.

Apalachicola Police Chief Bobby Varnes said Flowers is under investigation for the attempted break-in of two pickup trucks in the Lafayette Park area the night of Dec. 27, 2013. The chief said Flowers has not been charged in that incident, which was thwarted by Apalachicola Police Officer Sgt. John "Chet" Turner who drove by the scene while patrolling the city.

LANCE FLOWERS

Flowers was taken to the Franklin County Jail on charges of burglary of an occupied dwelling, two counts of burglary of a conveyance, grand theft of a firearm and petit theft.

On a separate unrelated arrest made by Apalachicola Police Officer Ginger Creamer, Barwick was jailed for the attempted Dec. 31, 2013 robbery of an Apalachicola man who was riding his bicycle at the time in the area of 17th Street.

Barwick was driving a truck, accompanied by the two male juveniles, when they pulled up to the victim and opened the door, throwing the man off his bicycle, said Johnson. Once the man was knocked to the ground, the three exited the vehicle and tried to rob him, said the detective.

Johnson said a search of the juveniles yielded three gold watches, and a fourth one in the truck, all of which are believed to have been stolen.

Barwick was taken to the county jail and charged with aggravated battery with a deadly weapon and attempted armed robbery with a deadly weapon.

The investigation into past break-ins is still pending and officers are asking anyone with information regarding these incidents to please contact the Apalachicola Police Department at 653-9755.

COUNTY TRUCK KNOCKS OUT CABLE

LOIS SWOBODA | The Times

At around 2:55 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 2, the county knuckle boom truck hit one of the main fiber optic cables providing Mediacom internet, telephone and cable TV service to most of the county. There were service outages all the way from 15th Street in Apalachicola to Alligator Point. Duke Power had wires running along the same street but said its power lines were undamaged. Avenue C between Fifth and Sixth Streets was blocked for several hours, and the knuckle truck was forced to remain there supporting the wires until a bucket truck and repair crew from Mediacom arrived to rehang them. A Mediacom spokesperson said that there were still outages on Sixth and 12th Streets in Apalachicola and in areas of St. George Island and Eastpoint as late as noon on Friday, Jan. 3. She said it was unclear whether those outages were related to the downed cable. Solid Waste Director Fonda Davis said the cable was damaged by a driver collecting yard debris in Apalachicola's historic district.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

The Carrabelle Marina was the only commercial sale on the eastern end of the county in 2013.

County real estate prices still on hold

By LOIS SWOBODA

653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
lswoboda@starfl.com

With but a few exceptions, real estate sales data for last year showed little change from the previous year.

Last week, the Realtors' Association of Franklin and Gulf counties shared its annual Multiple Listing Service (MLS) statistics for 2013.

Last year, a total of 452 properties countywide, comprising residential, commercial and lots and land parcels, sold for $97.2 million, compared to 461 properties for $95.3 million in 2012.

Residential sales were slightly up across the county. In 2012, 247 properties sold for a total of $79.5 million, and in 2013, 258 properties sold for $81.1 million. In both years, St. George Island had the lion's share of residential sales, 112 in 2012 and 109 last year.

Carrabelle had the second greatest number of sales, with 67 in 2012 and 77 in 2013. The biggest jump was in Apalachicola, which saw a 33 percent increase in residential sales, from 42 to 56, and a 54 percent increase in the total sales volume, $6.8 million to $10.5 million.

Eastpoint saw a slide in residential sales, from 26 in 2012 and 16 in 2013, but an increase in the average sale price, from about $173,000 to nearly $188,000.

The island saw a slight decline in median sales price for residential property, from $415,000 in 2012 to $410,000 in 2013. Apalachicola saw a rise in median price, from $138,000 in 2012 to $145,000 in 2013. The lowest median residential price was in Carrabelle, which increased from $95,500 in 2012 to $105,000 in 2013.

The biggest sales increase between the two years was in commercial property on St. George Island. In 2012, there were no commercial sales there but last year there were three sales totaling $2.25 million, with the largest chunk, $1.5 million, paid for bayfront property across from Harry A's. The property was purchased by George Kirvin Floyd, founder and chairman of the Apalachicola Maritime Museum.

Marinas brought big money both years in Carrabelle. In 2012, the Moorings, at 1000 US 98, sold for $2.5 million, nearly 90 percent of the overall $2.8 million in commercial sales on the east end of the county. In 2013, the Carrabelle Marina, located almost next door at 803 US 98, sold for $560,000, the only listed commercial sale for Carrabelle in the MLS statistics last year.

Income from commercial sales varied little throughout the entire county.

In 2012, 11 sales brought in $4.03 million. Last year, even with the increase in commercial sales on the island, the total was $4.36 million, for an increase of 8 percent. Commercial sales in Carrabelle were down $2 million from the previous year, largely due to the decline in marina sales totals.

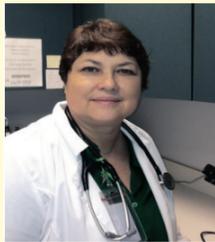

Sales of lots and land generated the least amount of income both years. In 2012, 203 sales netted $11.75 million, and in 2013, 179 sales brought in $11.74 million.

The median price of undeveloped land increased in Carrabelle, from $10,750 to $14,000, and in St. George Island from $77,500 to $89,000. But median sales prices in Apalachicola, for about two dozen properties each year, decreased from $32,000 in 2012 to $28,000 in 2013.

Eastpoint had the greatest decrease in median prices for lots and land, with almost a 50 percent decline. In 2012, the median cost of an undeveloped lot in Eastpoint was $23,600, and in 2013, it was $12,850.

"Activity is up a little bit. Prices are inching up," said Gloria Salinard, association executive for the local realtors association. "Everyone's been really busy although that doesn't always mean there are closings. There's lots of interest."

Study: Seashell loss because of tourism increase

By STEPHENIE LIVINGSTON
Special to the Times

Global tourism has increased fourfold over the last 30 years, resulting in human-induced seashell loss that may harm natural habitats worldwide, according to a University of Florida scientist.

Appearing in the journal PLOS ONE on Jan. 8, the new study by researchers from the Florida Museum of Natural History on the UF campus and the University of Barcelona demonstrates that increased tourism on the Mediterranean coast of Spain correlated with a 70 percent decrease in mollusk shells during the tourist season in July and August, and a 60 percent decrease in other months.

Scientists fear shell removal could cause significant damage to natural ecosystems and organisms that rely on shells, said lead author Michal Kowalewski, the Thompson Chair of Invertebrate Paleontology at the Florida Museum.

"This research is best described as a case study that evaluates shell loss due to tourism and then explores how this process may affect natural habitats," Kowalewski said. "It's too early to tell whether this depletion is substantial enough to trigger major environmental changes. However, our results suggest that we should not ignore this issue."

In the study, researchers conducted multiple monthly surveys from 1978 to 1981 and from 2008 to 2010 on Llarga Beach, a small stretch of shoreline on the coast of Spain. Based on area hotel sales data, researchers estimate the number of tourists visiting the beach increased threefold over the last 30 years, with most visits during the summer.

Over the same time period, the number of shells on the beach decreased by more than 60 percent.

The survey area has experienced no new commercial fisheries or urban development since the 1970s, suggesting human activity unrelated to tourism is unlikely to have contributed substantially to the shell loss, Kowalewski said. Changes in ecosystem structure and local environmental conditions, which could potentially contribute to a natural decrease in shell numbers, were not observed, he said.

Shell removal at Llarga Beach was higher during the summer, and shells were more abundant during the winter when fewer tourists visited the area. Although a popular destination, the beach is not a major tourist hot spot, and the shells found there are not beautiful, diverse or valuable to collectors.

Located on the Mediterranean coast of Spain, Llarga beach has experienced a threefold increase in tourism since the 1970s. As a result, seashells numbers have decreased more than 60 percent.

If a relationship between increased tourism and accelerated shell removal can be detected at a place not famous for its shells, it is likely that beaches known for their shells and frequented by collectors have had more substantial impact, Kowalewski said.

"Although significant research has been done on the impacts of human activity on live shellfish, including, recreational harvesting and curio collecting, we are still lacking rigorous studies estimating the scale of shell removal by humans," Kowalewski said. "Shells are remarkable in that they serve multiple functions in natural ecosystems, from beach stabilization to building materials for bird nests."

Shells also provide a home or attachment surface for diverse marine organisms, including algae, seagrass, sponges and other micro- and macro-organisms.

Hermit crabs use shells as their protective armor, while fish use shells to hide from predators.

These discarded exoskeletons of mollusks, including clams and oysters, are also important because most are made of calcium carbonate and in many coastal habitats they dissolve slowly and recycle back into the ocean.

The study may prompt more systematic assessments of shell removal by tourists, said Geerat Vermeij, a mollusk shell expert and distinguished professor of geology with the University of California Davis, which was not involved in the study.

"Molluscan shells are of prime importance to hermit crabs, and although sand beaches are not good places for such crabs, dead snail shells on mud-flats and rocky shores do form a primary resource for abundant hermit crabs," Vermeij said. "More subtly, many small organisms settle on dead shells, and so removing such shells will eliminate habitats for these colonists."

Though tourism-related shell loss may one day prove harmful, Kowalewski said more rigorous quantitative case studies are needed to fully understand the impact and develop reliable beach management practices aimed at shell protection. Some countries already recognize the negative effects of shell removal, including the Bahamas, which limits the quantity of shells tourists can export without special permits.

"Humans may play a significant role in altering habitats through activities that many would perceive as mostly harmless, such as beachcombing and seashell collecting," Kowalewski said. "It is important that we continue to investigate the more subtle aspects of tourism-related activities and their impact on shoreline habitats."

Study co-authors were Rosa Domènech and Jordi Martinell with the Institut de Recerca de la Biodiversitat and Departament d'Estratigrafia, Paleontologia i Geociències Marines, Facultat de Geologia, Universitat de Barcelona, in Barcelona, Spain.

Prepare a letter of last instructions

By SHELLEY SWENSON
Special to the Times

With the beginning of a new year comes a time of reflection as well as anticipation. What was your life like in 2013? What do you plan to do differently during 2014? Would you consider some steps to get organized, be more energized and feel more fulfilled?

One of the things that I am going to pursue is to get organized for my end of life. Does this sound morbid? Perhaps, but it also sounds like a realistic thing each of us should do to make things easier for family members. I have only one child and few nieces and nephews. My daughter lives in the Midwest with her family in a very small house. I must come to terms with the idea that "my treasures" may not make it to her home for several different reasons. One is that her taste is different from mine. Secondly, she has little room for more things and does not have the resources for a storage unit rental. Are my things going to be sold at a rummage sale, given to charity or friends, or taken to the landfill? Although it will have little effect on me, these decisions could be difficult for her. Are there things I can do to reduce the anxiety that she will face?

One of my 2014 resolutions is to develop a plan so that she will have the materials she will need to complete the process at the time of my death. This is another way of saying that I am going to write a Letter of Last Instructions, an informal document which can be one of the most helpful things I can provide.

A Letter of Last Instructions is simply a letter that expresses my wishes following my death. It will provide my only child with information that she needs concerning my personal and financial matters.

UF/IFAS has published an EDIS document that outlines this process in detail. It is numbered FCS5238 and can be found at www.solutionsforyourlife.com. If you have never reviewed materials available to you through this website, you should. All aspects of family life, horticulture, agriculture and youth development are available. If you prefer, you can request a copy at the Extension Office, 66 4th Street, Apalachicola, or by calling 653-9337.

Because I find it easier to complete big tasks by breaking them down into smaller units, I have developed a plan to accomplish one major aspect a month during 2014. If you feel you should do something similar, consider my plan and we can compare notes a year from now.

Here are my goals divided by the months of 2014:

January: Prepare a list of people to notify at the time of my death.

February: Summarize the funeral arrangements I want, review those I have already made and finally, leave instructions as to the decisions that my daughter must make. This includes organ donation, autopsy, if requested, embalming, public viewing or not, body disposal and types of service and location.

March: Continue with the funeral arrangements. Do I want a funeral and if so, what do I want to have happen at the funeral? What information would I like in my obituary?

April: Make a list of who should be notified of the death; how many death certificates does this require? Make a list of the necessary information for the death certificate.

May: Write a summary of all the locations of all personal documents including my will, birth, baptismal and marriage certificates, communion and confirmation certificates, diplomas, military papers, and others such as divorce or adoption papers.

June: Develop a list of everything related to my automobiles.

July: Develop a list of all financial accounts to include checking, savings, and certificate of deposits, IRAs and other financial accounts by name and institution.

August: Compile a list of usernames and passwords for all of your computer and online accounts. Wow, this would be useful right now.

September: Make a list of the location of any safe deposit boxes, a list of the contents and where the key is located.

October: Another job that is long overdue whether living or dying is to make a list of all credit cards by issuer, number and where they are located. November: Make a complete of all debts and all funds owed to you.

December: Compile a list of all homeowner information including a list of household contents and personal effects.

This is a good start on developing a Letter of Last Instruction.

If you and I can complete these tasks during the months of 2014, we will have accomplished a great deal.

By completing this much of the task, we will be giving our family members the information needed concerning personal and financial matters. The organization of important documents will allow us to feel way ahead of where we are today. I encourage you to get started and periodically give me a call to tell me how the process is going.

Further details on this subject are outlined in the EDIS publication listed above. Let me know if I can get you a copy.

Has writing gone the way of the pay phone?

I am sure that young children love to see their letters to Santa published in the Times.

He has a subscription, doesn't he?

However, many children's letters to Santa Claus this year were obviously scripted for them by their teachers.

They looked like form letters. Maybe a computer-generated format was provided for them.

What with word processors using spelling and grammar checkers, I guess old-fashioned writing with pen, pencil and paper has gone the way of the pay telephone.

These compositions should have been spontaneous to provide kids an opportunity to express their own thoughts in writing. Written expression is not learned by writing something someone else tells you to do. That's copying.

Day 1: Travel. Left Tallahassee at 5:40 a.m., which made for a busy day, leaving from Apalachicola at 3 a.m. I had not much sleep as I worked the day before in Ocala, driving home and arriving at 12:30 a.m. The flights have gone smoothly, transfers without difficulty. The airport in South Korea was very modern with all the conveniences. Asiana Airlines was great, service was superb, food tasty.

I'm on the final leg from Incheon to Cebu, wondering what to expect. As I fill out my customs declaration I feel nervous, an anxious anticipation as I remember previous volunteer trips. I remember a very old woman in Haiti, who adopted us and lived on a cot in our field hospital. Of the locals, no one knew who she was, she was obviously demented. She swept and kept the hospital clean-ish. Mostly, she slept.

I remember a little girl, around 10, she came in with her baby brother, an infant. She and the baby were clean, well dressed and healthy in appearance. None of our translators could not get a complaint from her. Yet she hung out with us. I asked her about her parents and I found they were both killed in the earthquake, leaving her to care for the infant. After some questioning, I held her hand and told her that she was doing an excellent job taking care of her brother and he was very healthy. She was all smiles, I think this validation is what she needed.

A quick meet and greet, then to Ormoc district hospital to help in ER. Then we were dispatched to Palompon. This is a level 1 hospital, they had critical care needs.

We bought them meds when we arrived. We found they had docs coming in the next day, but no help the next 24 hours. I arranged to stay. I worked the ER, they gave me a sleep room, I stayed the night and saw a variety of illnesses and injuries.

I met a friend from my Haiti mission: Tim, a surgical PA, he needed help in Dagami. They left me in charge of minor surgery, patients with infected wounds, and the medical needs. Me and a nurse saw 20 wound infections. I sutured 12. I saw my first tetanus. I saw a child with measles, three children with chicken pox, one with infected pox. I am amazed at the resilient, homeless, sick but always smiling. They are working hard at rebuilding their homes, but in the process are lacerations are common. The German docs arrived and I took their transportation back to Ormoc City, 100 kilometers away.

The next day we went together as a team and manned the ER at Ormoc district hospital. Truly an international affair: The ambulance (manned by Japanese docs) brought us patients, many tuberculosis, dehydration, etc. Here we delivered babies. More wounds, burns. It is interesting to note how this hospital functions. They write prescriptions when they admit the patients, they give the orders to the patient and the patient buys the meds and these meds are used during their stay.

It was her that I encountered a 21-day-old infant in respiratory in distress. This baby was intubated the day before with a presumed RSV (respiratory syncytial virus), now with a secondary pneumonia. The tube had advanced and had to be repositioned. The baby died the next day as we were unable to transfer her to the Chinese hospital ship. This ship has ventilators, intensive care docs, and is state of the art. We had arranged the parents to do so; they had a room on the ship. Sadly, due to politics we were unable to transfer and the baby died the next morning

LARRY APPLEBEE | Special to the Times

At our first clinic at a local church where we were assigned, we saw about 75 patients in a shortened day. There were some injuries from the typhoon and a lot of illness from the contaminated water and the smoke in the air from burning debris (intentionally burned for disposal). There were also several with chronic illness and a significant number of those who were severely stressed by their circumstances who can't sleep or who somaticize (Note: Anxiety converted into physical symptoms).

After clinic, we took a tour of the still mass of wreckage and debris. There were children playing and laughing, although the smell of rot was pervasive. The smells, an order hard to describe, a combination of diesel fuel, human and animal wastes and death.

The views were stunning but after a while, you just felt a waterfront. One of us commented that it was sad that the parents had lost a baby and didn't know where the body was. The bystanders said that the parents were probably dead too. I no longer felt numb, I felt a little sick...

Then we moved on to Ormoc, a functioning city. The economy is turning back on and the health of the people isn't too bad. The streets are bustling with activity. Tacloban, on the other hand, has disintegrated. There are many internally displaced persons from Tacloban in Ormoc despite the 100 kilometer distance.

I love this kind of work, wanted to stay longer. The destruction, loss of family, etc. is horrible. The peeps are noble, gracious, humble and very hard working. I especially liked working the fishing villages, As I saw a parallel between them and our community. The 14-year-old who lost all her family and clinged to her small dog for comfort, sad, heartbreaking.

In the Philippines, a great miracle happened. First came the once-in-a-century typhoon of such ferocious strength. Next came the demonstrated resilience and faith of the Filipino people. A smaller miracle, perhaps; the effect on my own heart, filled with so many testaments of hope.

As I return home from the Philippines at this Christmas season. I think how the messages of the holidays are so relevant: wherever we are in the world, we have reason to be thankful, and wherever we are, we can triumph over something that seems more powerful than we are.

I am warmed by the light of these stories.

This story was told me from another group in a nightly get-together. We used these as a nightly distressing. Also a few beer.

Perla, the girl with the violin: A 14-year-old girl emerged from the clinic after being treated for a minor wound, she had a violin in hand. She was reportedly reluctant to accept any assistance because she had to allow someone to hold her violin. She finally let a nurse hold her violin. Finally, someone asked if she felt like playing something. She stood up and played the Philippine national anthem to applause and hugs from those around her.

Reyna: I tried to engage this young lady in conversation, getting info on her present illness. She had a bronchitis. Seeing she didn't want to talk, I didn't make further attempts. It was near lunch, so we gave her something to eat. After she ate she gave me her name and said, "I'm sorry I can't talk now. I'm still in mourning - I lost six family members." At that point, I couldn't talk either.

We reached remote Guiuan, a village of about 45,000 that was among the first areas hit by the full force of the storm. The situation here is bleak. The village has been flattened - houses, medical facilities, rice fields, fishing boats all destroyed. People are living out in the open; there are no roofs left standing in the whole of Guiuan. The needs are immense and there are a lot of surrounding villages that are not yet covered by any aid organizations. We set up our clinic in what used to be a church with makeshift tarps to keep the rain out and set about seeing patients.

Saw 300 today, a variety of injuries, illness, diarrhea, upper respiratory illnesses.

Today we came across a young Mary Anne Moraleta who survived the storm surges of Super Typhoon Yolanda. While hopping from house to house, however, she got her foot trapped between ripped off roofing from her neighbor's home. The wound has been bandaged but not cleaned. She's scared to have it cleaned at a nearby because of the language barrier.

"Siguro kung Pilipino, okay ako, at least p'wede kong sabihin na dahan-dahanin," she said. (I'd be okay if medical workers were Filipino. At least I can tell them, please be gentle.)

"Resilient" is an overused word to describe Filipinos when disaster strikes, but it's what Matsuda would use for the victims of Yolanda. "May mga ngiti pa sa mukha nila, so medyo relieved na ako," he said. (There are smiles on their faces so I'm a little relieved now.)

But amid the widespread grief and despair, it was the extraordinary courage of the Filipinos that struck me most.

On my final day in Ormoc City, I saw a group of people walking back to town. It started to rain, a man looked up to the sky and asked out loud, "How much longer? How much longer?" I wished I had an answer for him. There was little I could do, little that I could give. I only had some cereal bars and crackers in my backpack. I gave these and my beef jerky and he graciously said thank you and smiled.

But, he argues, rather than articulating the evidence that it relied on to makes its decision, P & Z relied on "improper, irrelevant, immaterial and inadmissible" comments of the public.

Among those comments at the Nov. 2013 hearing were those of Board of Adjustment Chair Carrie Kienzle, who Hughes cites as having said that allowing the Family Dollar to be built is "a slippery slope into a cement ghetto, so let's not go there."

The attorney also alleges that Kienzle voiced "a baseless opinion that the company somehow acted less than honestly and 'tried to slip' the issue of project approval during the April 2012 meeting, when in point of fact (P & Z) took action on that issue of its own volition."

The motion argues Kienzle, therefore, cannot render an impartial decision on the matter, and demands that she recuse herself from the board of adjustment process.

Health Department: Pregnant women should get flu vaccination

The Florida Department of Health in Franklin County urges pregnant women to receive the flu vaccination because of the increased effects influenza infections have on pregnant women and their babies in Florida this year.

"The flu vaccine is the single best way to prevent flu," said Marsha Lindeman, administrator of the county health department. "We want to make sure people understand how important it is for pregnant women to receive the influenza vaccination to protect themselves and their babies."

The county health department recommends all individuals age 6 months and older receive the flu vaccination each year. It is especially important for pregnant women to be vaccinated because of the increased risk of complications associated with contracting the flu while pregnant. The flu vaccination is safe and will protect the mother, her unborn child and babies during the first months after birth.

Additional flu prevention steps include washing your hands often, keeping your hands away from your face and covering your mouth and nose with a tissue when sneezing and coughing. Symptoms of the flu include headache, fever, severe cough, runny nose or body aches. If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, see your primary care provider immediately for guidance on treatment. For more information on pregnant women and influenza, visit www.cdc.gov/flu/protect/vaccine/pregnant.html.

It is important for you and your family members to get a flu vaccine every year. Flu vaccines are offered in many locations, including doctor's offices, clinics, health departments, retail stores, pharmacies, health centers and by many employers and schools. Check with your physician, the county health department or visit www.floridahealth.gov/prevention-safety-and-wellness/flu-prevention/locate-a-flu-shot.html to search for a location to receive a flu vaccine.

DOH protects, promotes and improves the health of all people in Florida through integrated state, county and community efforts.

Extension office schedules vegetable gardening series

Special to The Times

Curious about getting back to the basics by planting a garden? Have you tried with little success and know you need some basic gardening skills before you attempt it again? Do you feel that a raised bed would allow you to garden without the soil quality at your location being a factor? Are you trying to live more in tune with the environment and just don't know how to control the pests without chemicals?

Join others from across the Panhandle in a Spring into Vegetable Gardening Series for novice gardeners. UF/IFAS Extension horticulture agents will present seminars through interactive video on the topics of what to grow, Florida growing seasons, site selection, soil improvement techniques, fertilizers, pest control and specifically how to grow tomatoes, peppers, squash and cucumbers.

The workshop will be 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Jan. 14 through Feb. 4, in the historic Coombs Armory, 66 Fourth St., Apalachicola. To assist with the expense of the meeting, $30 per person or $45 per couple will be charged. A notebook of gardening information will be provided for each participant and refreshments will be served.

Never let the cost of an Extension program keep you from attending; contact us to discuss if assistance is needed. Consider attending this gardening series and meet the additional UF/IFAS extension agents who are now serving Franklin County.

Call the county extension office at 653-9337 for more information or to register.

Deer hunters ready for peak season

By LES HARRISON
Special to the Times

Franklin County deer hunters will be heading to the woods shortly in hopes of a trophy rack as 2014 kicks off. The rut is forecast to peak in January for the county's hunting areas.

Tate's Hell Wildlife Management Area has a predicted peak rut date of Jan. 11 and St. James Island of Jan. 20. Unseasonable weather may change these dates, but many Zone D hunters will be planning hunts based on these dates.

Sites for deer stands should have long been identified and the stand erected nearby with a clear field of fire. One of the best stand locations is near a route to a food plot or feeding source.

Food plots are an effective but potentially expensive method of providing food sources for deer and other species. Plots or fields are planted with grains, legumes, sunflowers and other plants with high nutritional value for wildlife but may run over $1,000 to produce.

The size of food plots varies according to hunter's preferences and the requirements of the target wildlife species, but usually they are a minimum of a half to one acre to a maximum of about five acres.

An economically friendly alternative is to locate the stand near mast, edible seeds and fruit produced by indigenous trees and plants, which appeal to the deer's dietary needs. Mast species are divided into hard mast and soft mast.

Hard mast includes hard-shelled seeds like acorns, hickory nuts, chestnuts, beechnuts, walnuts, pecans and pine nuts. These seeds, which are produced in fall and winter, are typically high in fat, carbohydrates and protein.

They provide an energy-rich food source important to many wildlife species during colder months when other forms of nutrition are scarce. There hard coating insures their availability all winter.

Soft mast comprises soft, fleshy, perishable fruits such as blackberries, cherries and persimmons. These warm-season native fruits are high in sugar, vitamins and carbohydrates, providing an important food and energy source for wildlife.

Most production for wildlife can be increased on forest property through the judicious planning and use of native plants. The two most important criteria for the success of your efforts will be the diversity menu choices for the deer and seasonal availability of food sources.

Sundew a common carnivorous plant

During the Christmas Bird Count, I visited the Port St. Joe Airport and saw a number of interesting plants there.

BUDS 'N' BUGS
Lois Swoboda

I couldn't help but notice a very healthy stand of dwarf sundew creating a pretty red carpet around the drainage ditches.

The sundew family, Drosera, has almost 200 species and is found on every continent except Antarctica. It is the largest family of carnivorous plants, most often found in wetlands.

Carnivorous plants use the nitrogen in insect protein to supplement the poor mineral nutrition of the soil in which they grow.

There are five species of sundews in Florida: dwarf, pink, thread leaf, spoonleaf and Tracy's sundew. All are found in Franklin County, but the dwarf sundew is the commonest by far.

The plant is called sundew because of the gel-like glue on the leaves that helps the plant trap insects.

Both the botanical name, from the Greek word "drosos" and the English common name sundew, roughly translate to mean "dew of the sun" and refer to the glistening drops of glue at the tip of each tentacle.

Sundews are mostly perennial and form rosettes of leaves that vary in height from a quarter inch to three feet.

All species of sundew are able to move their tentacles in response to contact with digestible prey. The tentacles are extremely sensitive and will bend toward the center of the leaf to bring the insect into contact with as many stalked glands as possible.

The flowers of sundews are held far above the leaves by a long stem. This separation of the flower from the traps once was thought to be an adaptation meant to avoid trapping potential pollinators, but recent research found insects commonly trapped by sundews are different species from their pollinators. Botanists now think the tall flower stalks probably help raise the flowers to a height where they are noticeable to pollinators.

The root systems of most Drosera are often only weakly developed, serving mainly to absorb water and to anchor the plant to the ground. The roots are relatively useless for nutrient uptake.

Many species of sundews are self-fertile; their flowers will often self-pollinate upon closing.

The tiny black seeds germinate in response to moisture and light; some species also require cold.

New plants also are produced in some species when specialized roots called stolons come near the soil surface or where old leaves contact the ground.

Sundews were used as medicinal herbs as early as the 12th century. It has been used commonly in cough preparations in Germany and elsewhere in Europe. Sundew tea was especially recommended by herbalists for dry coughs, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and "bronchial cramps." Today, Drosera is usually used to treat ailments such as asthma, coughs, lung infections and stomach ulcers.

Medicinal preparations are primarily made using the roots, flowers and fruit-like capsules. Because all native sundews species are protected in many parts of Europe and North America, extracts are usually prepared using cultivated fast-growing sundews.

Cultivation requirements for sundews vary greatly by species. In general, they require high moisture content and full direct sunlight. Water must be very pure, and sundews should never be fertilized.

The glue produced by Drosera has remarkable elastic properties and has made this genus an attractive subject in biomaterials research. Because living cells attach readily to the mucilage, research is underway to determine if it can be used by surgeons during organ transplants or hip and knee replacements.

The roots of the tuberous sundews native to Australia are considered a delicacy by the aborigines. In the Scottish Highlands, purple and yellow textile dyes were prepared from sundew roots. A sundew liqueur called rosolio is still produced using sundew roots in Italy using a recipe from the 14th century.

Girls win, boys don't at hoop tourney

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

Two Franklin County School basketball courts, one brand new, were well-used last weekend when a dozen high school teams to squared off in the Battle on the Gulf holiday hoop tournament.

Attendance was modest, but the action was exciting at the quiet, well-run affair by Seahawk boys basketball coach Michael Sweatt, with help from his family.

Jacksonville Bolles, a private prep school, brought its girls team, which handily won the title, completing their work Saturday night with a 51-23 domination over the Lady Seahawks.

Carlos Hill's squad was runners-up in the tourney by virtue of victories over North Florida Christian and Liberty County.

The other long-distance participant, Yulee, brought its boys team but they didn't make it into the championship, which was won by Bay High School over North Bay Haven.

Yulee defeated the Seahawks Friday night, one of three losses sustained by Sweatt's squad over the course of the tourney.

The Lady Seahawk tournament squad was anchored by a superb performance by junior Myesha Campbell, who had 19 points in the final game, after a 23-point performance on Friday to lead Franklin County to a 36-31 win over North Florida Christian.

Hill said he knew it would be a challenge going into the finals against the Class 4 powerhouse Bolles Lady Bulldogs, now 16-2 on the year.

But, he said, the Hawks had met his expectations, to score throughout and avoid the running clock.

Campbell hit 3-of-6 treys, and 5-for-12 for two-pointers, to lead the team, with junior Dyshereah Key adding four points and nine rebounds.

Campbell went 10-of-16 from the floor against North Florida Christian, while Key added eight points. Sophomore Chanelle Ducker hit a three-pointer, and junior Aaliyah West a bucket.

The Lady Seahawks opened the tournament Thursday with a 46-38 win over Liberty County, keyed by 19 points and 13 rebounds from Key.

Campbell contributed 15 points and nine rebounds in the game, in which Franklin County led from start to finish.

Freshman Tyanna Townsend scored five points, Ducker three and senior Daiesha Carr two.

Also taking part in the girls tourney were Wewahitchka and North Bay Haven.

Jones nails 31 in tough loss

The Seahawk varsity basketball team fell in all three of their contests, but it wasn't without a spirited fight at last week's hoop tourney.

In their opener Thursday against North Bay Haven, the team took a 36-35 lead into the locker at halftime, but endured a bad third quarter, in which they were outscored 22-12, and went on to fall 76-65.

Sophomore forward Josue Barahona nailed 4-of-6 treys to lead the team with 12 points, with eighth grade point guard Tyler Farmer adding 11.

Freshman guard Tyler Howard hit 5-of-6 for 10 points, while junior Kelsey Jones and freshman Kenneth Wilson each scored nine points.

Senior guard James Gordon added six, with freshman guard Marshall Sweet nailing a trey and senior guard Cameron White scoring a bucket, while leading the team with nine rebounds. Jones added six assists and six rebounds

On Friday night, in the multipurpose building, the Hawks, outmanned by a taller squad, lost 52-42 to Yulee. Jones led the team with a dozen points, with White tallying 10, and leading the team with eight rebounds.

Barahona hit 3-of-11 treys, for nine points. Farmer scored seven, and Sweet and Wilson each two.

On Saturday night, the action got hot, in a cliffhanger against Wewahitchka.

Trailing 17-7 after the first stanza, and 27-23 at the half, the Hawks fought back with a strong third quarter, which gave them a 48-42 lead going into the final period.

With the game clock ticking down, and the Seahawks in a position to tie, Howard went high on the rim to tip in a caroming shot that had the crowd roaring.

But the ref waved it off as a basket interference violation, and Sweatt displayed an unusual bout of extreme anger.

The senior ref calmed the coach down, and did not throw him a technical, but the call had clearly deflated the Seahawks, who went on to succumb 69-65 to the Gators.

Jones hit all three of his three-point attempts, and went 14-of-19 from the field, to lead the team with 31 points.

White had eight points, and seven rebounds, while Howard added six points and seven rebounds.

Gordon and Wilson each scored five, senior guard Wesley Norred four, Farmer three, Barahona two and senior forward Logan McLeod one.

Also taking part in the boys tourney was Liberty County.

The Lady Seahawk girls basketball team savors their runner-up trophy in last week's holiday hoop tournament.

The senior ref counsels Hawk Coach Mike Sweatt Saturday night after he vociferously challenged a basket interference call.

Key's scoring keys Lady Hawk December

The Lady Seahawks varsity girls basketball team ended 2013 at about the .500 mark, splitting their seven games.

On Nov. 25, the team dominated North Florida Christian 66-33 at home, led by a blistering 18-of-23 from the field from junior Dyshereah Key, for 39 points. Junior Myesha Campbell added 16 points, and freshman Tyanna Townsend 11.

On Dec. 3 at home, the girls fell 49-34 to John Paul II. They were led by Campbell's 14 points, with eight from Townsend, and six each for sophomore Chanelle Ducker and Key.

On Dec. 5 at North Bay Haven, the girls lost 61-29. They were paced by 12 points from Campbell, 10 from Key, five from Ducker and two from Townsend.

On Dec. 6 at home, the Lady Hawks fell 59-29 to South Walton. Key led the team with 18 points and nine rebounds, while Campbell added six points and four rebounds. Senior Daiesha Carr tallied four points and nine rebounds, and Townsend a point.

On Dec. 10 at home, the girls team dominated West Gadsden 63-49, paced by 32 points from Key. Campbell and Townsend each scored 11, while Ducker had five, and junior Aaliyah West and Carr each a pair.

On Dec. 13 at Bozeman, the Lady Seahawks doubled their opponent's score, winning 82-41. Key was 19-of-32 from the field for 40 points, with Campbell adding 17, Townsend 12, Ducker nine, and Carr and West each two.

On Dec. 14 at home, the girls fell 35-21 to Port St. Joe. Key managed a dozen points, Campbell seven and Townsend two.

On Dec. 17 at Liberty County, the Franklin County girls won 36-21, paced by 20 points and 10 rebounds from Key. Campbell had nine points and eight rebounds, with Ducker scoring three, and Townsend and West each two.

On Dec. 19 at home, the girls lost a tough 44-40 match to Blountstown. Key hit for 16 points, and Campbell 15, with Ducker adding six, Carr two and Townsend one.

WHAT IS BASKET INTERFERENCE?

Basket interference is the violation of (a) touching the ball or any part of the basket while the ball is on the rim of the basket, (b) touching the ball when it's within the cylinder extending upwards from the rim, (c) reaching up through the basket from below and touching the ball, be it inside or outside the cylinder, or (d) pulling down on the rim of the basket so that it contacts the ball before returning to its original position.

There is one exception to the above: if a player dunks the ball, he may maintain contact with the ball into the cylinder and/or grab the rim (momentarily) without penalty.

North Bay Haven downs Lady Hawks

On Dec. 20, the Lady Seahawk girls varsity soccer team traveled to North Bay Haven, to complete a home and home set of games with the non-district opponent.

The Lady Seahawks had defeated North Bay Haven back in November, 2-1, at the Nest and were looking for another victory over the Buccaneers.

However, North Bay Haven seemed a completely different team and took control of the game from the outset with a very good possession-style passing game.

The Lady Buccaneers were able to control time of possession and stifled the Lady Seahawks' normally high offensive productivity.

Only seniors Adrianna Reeder and Jessica Shields managed shots on goal in the first half, one each.

Meanwhile the Lady Buccaneers had 15 shots on goal and managed two scores in the first half, taking a 2-0 lead into the break.

"The girls were a step slower and became very predictable when they possessed the ball," said Coach Joe Shields. "The Bucs seemed to know where we were going to pass before we did and that enabled them to dispossess our girls a bunch of times."

Down but not out, the Lady Seahawks stepped up their game and tried to reestablish control through one-touch passes in the middle third of the field. Reeder with two, and Shields, Gracyn Kirvin and Emily Zingarelli each with one, were able to get shots off but none found the back of the net.

As the game continued, North Bay Haven continued its assault on the Lady Seahawks net and added two more goals, putting the game well out of reach.

"With their passing being so quick and accurate, we started chasing the ball with two and three defenders, which is completely uncharacteristic of our total team defense," said Shields. "This left the opposite side of the field open and they were able to dictate where the attack was going throughout the second half."

The Lady Seahawks were unable to mount any kind of successful counter-attack and finally fell to North Bay Haven, 4-0.

The Lady Seahawks are now 7-5-1 and traveled Wednesday to John Paul II for the last regular season match.

Seahawk boys soccer struggle for wins

The Seahawk boys soccer team was unable to win in December, as it fielded lots of young middle school players.

On Dec. 5 at home, the boys lost 5-2 to West Gadsden, with goals scored by Stephan Devaughn and Tyler Pendleton.

On Dec. 12 at Freeport, the team lost 4-0, and then on Dec. 17 at Lafayette Mayo, the team fell 8-0 to the district leader. On Dec. 20 at North Bay Haven, Franklin County lost 2-0.

The team was to play John Paul II on Jan. 8, and then prepares for districts Jan. 21, 34 and 24 at Maclay. "Some of our key players were out due to the flu and injuries, and now we are playing with a younger groups of students," said Coach Ramon Valenzuela. "We have not lost the optimism and the encouragement is still on, and the team will continue to make an effort to end the season in a good standing.

"It is a tough district this year, but we'll try our best," he said. "We will be losing seven guys for next year, and we will make a very strong effort to come out with something better for the next season."

Gulfside IGA PLAYER OF THE WEEK

James Newell

Seahawks senior James Newell is in his first year playing as goalkeeper for the boys soccer team. Both coaches Ramon Valenzuela and Stacy Kirvin say Newell has been a tremendous saver for the team. "He came out from nowhere, with some natural skill that had made him a great keeper for this season," said Valenzuela. "We are very happy having him on our team!"
