FRANKLIN COUNTY SCHOOLS

Board OKs new principal

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN

The Franklin County School Board last week hired a veteran teacher and reading coach as the new principal of the Franklin County School.

By unanimous consent, the board June 19 accepted the recommendation of Superintendent Nina Marks to hire Yvette Lerner, a former teacher in the district who now lives in Chipley.

Marks said there had been about two dozen applicants to succeed Eric Bidwell as principal, and that a committee of the Panhandle Area Education Consortium, including Franklin County's Nick O'Grady, had whittled it down to five applicants. Four of these were interviewed, and Marks selected Lerner.

"I would like to express my support for the incoming principal of Franklin County Schools," Marks said. "Mrs. Yvette Lerner has been a friend of Franklin County for many years, conducting professional development workshops to improve our mastery of curriculum. Faculty and staff are very familiar with her. Mrs. Lerner has the talent for enhancing programs and using her leadership skills to make learning more exciting for the faculty and the students they instruct. Bringing in Mrs. Lerner is a gain for Franklin County."

A construction crew last week expanded Carrabelle's 10 Mile Reef system, further enhancing fishing and diving opportunities in and around Dog Island.

Alan Richardson, who chairs the Tallahassee-based non-profit Organization of Artificial Reefs group, said the deployment took place June 17 and 18, funded by a mix of state grants, matching funds and private donations.

The new reef components, named in memory of young men whose life were tragically cut short, expand to the south the 10 Mile Reef complex, about three miles offshore of Dog Island.

Origins of the reef date back to 1999 when a group of divers from Thomasville, Georgia created the Rose City Reef, the first in a complex series of smaller patch reefs that have grown over the years with additional portions, each named in the memory of a fishing or diving enthusiast who loved the Gulf waters.

The most recent of these, the popular "Robby's Reef" was christened in May, 2011, and includes a 12-ton metal sculpture. Costs are defrayed each year by supporters of the Robby Redding family, through a fundraising event on Robby's traditional birthday after Christmas.

Last week's deployment included an enhancement of Robby's Reef, which added another eight artificial reef units to the patch

Scary weather sweeps across county

The National Weather Service said there is no evidence that a tornado touched down in Carrabelle on Sunday.

When strong winds swept across his property downing limbs and trees on Sunday, Shawn Bunnell grabbed his 6-year old daughter and sheltered in a central bathroom. Jeff Fournier, a forecaster for the National Weather Service said Bunnell did the wise thing.

Bunnell said he did not see a twister but believed the pattern of damage in his Avenue J neighborhood indicated a small tornado had touched down.

The forecaster said his office didn't receive any reports of tornadoes in Franklin County over the weekend and there was no evidence of cyclonic activity on radar. He said the National Weather Service issued a warning of possible strong winds and thunderstorms.

"What we did receive were reports of trees and limbs downed by strong straight-line gusts all across the warning area," said Fournier.

While no gusts stronger than 40 mph were recorded, Fournier said small severe disturbances known as microbursts are difficult to record because they are short and often on a very small scale.

Bunnell said falling limbs damaged a child's plastic playhouse, dented his truck, scratched his car and flipped a carport in his yard.

Fournier said his agency received an unusual number of reports of damage to light structures like carports on Sunday.

On Monday, as rain continued to pour down, Bunnell said a crew from the Franklin Correctional Institution removed fallen limbs from his yard and cut up trees in the public right of way.

"In the summer you get microbursts you can't predict," Fournier said. "There are some days you can say they are more likely than normal."

He said trees are more likely to fall when they are rooted in water-saturated soil.

Candidates qualify for upcoming elections

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN

ELECTION 2014

The slate of candidates for the upcoming primary and general elections is now set, with one election already decided.

Because he was unopposed in his bid to succeed the retiring Jimmy Gander as school board member for District 4, Stacy Kirvin, 52, of 142 Deer Patch Rd., Apalachicola will assume that office following the general election in November.

Kirvin spent a mere $16.50 in his bid to qualify last week for the office. He invested $15 in a voter registration list for the district, and $1.50, or 10 cents each, to have the 15 names on his petition certified for the non-partisan election.

The other race in District 4, for county commissioner, promises to be an exciting one, as incumbent Joseph "Smokey" Parrish, 52, 108 Long Rd. Apalachicola, is facing a challenge from Royce S. Rolstad III, 31, 119 Hicks Lane, Apalachicola.

The two are squaring off in the Aug. 26 Democratic primary, where winner takes all. Because there are no declared Republican candidates for the office, the primary will be a universal one, meaning members of either party, or those without party affiliation, or those affiliated with a small party, all are eligible to vote.

As of Monday, the total number of registered voters, 1,213, in this district comprised 899 Democrats, 211 Republicans, and 103 either from other parties or without affiliation.

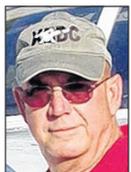

CONTESTED ELECTIONS ON THE EASTERN END

Both the county commission and school board races are being contested on the eastern end of the county, in District 2 encompassing portions of Carrabelle, Lanark Village and Alligator Point.

County Commissioner Cheryl Sanders, 58, 4901 Jeff Sanders Road, Carrabelle, is not facing an opponent in the Democratic primary, so she goes directly to the Nov. 4 general election.

There, she will face the winner from the two Republican candidates, Mark Nobles, 57, 10-5 W Pine St., Lanark Village, and William Snyder, 55, 2332 Enabob Street, Carrabelle, who are vying to unseat her.

The Aug. 26 Republican primary in District 2 will be decided only by those who are registered with the GOP Registration for the primary ends July 28.

Nobles and Snyder will be seeking to gain a majority of the district's Republicans, who numbered 513 as of June 16. The district also contains 813 Democrats, 198 without party affiliation and 45 registered with small parties, but none of these will be eligible to vote in the GOP primary for county commissioner.

All these 1,569 voters, however, will have a say in which of the three declared candidates for the non-partisan school board seat in District 2 emerges as the victor.

At the primary, the voters will decide among incumbent David Hinton, 78, 112 Hinton Street, Carrabelle, challenger Wilburn 'Ray' Messer, 55, 166 Sanborn Road, Carrabelle; and challenger Pamela Marshall, 56, 1989 River Bend Plantation Road, Carrabelle.

If one of the three earns a majority of the votes cast, 50 percent plus one, then they will be declared the winner. Otherwise the top two candidates will then square off at the general election.

While there are no local candidate elections in the three other districts, there will be plenty to decide on a state level at both the primary and general elections, including a school referendum in November that will decide whether the superintendent will remain as an elected office, or will change in Registration in the other three districts, as of Monday, were as follows.

- District 1, including Eastpoint and St. George Island: 1051 Democrats,

- 542 Republicans and 172 other, for a total of 1,765 registered voters.

- District 3, including the Hill area north of U.S. 98, 959 Democrats, 144 Republicans, and 102 other, for a total of 1,205 registered voters.

- District 5, which includes portions of Carrabelle and Eastpoint, 939 Democrats, 324

- Republicans and 171 other, for a total of 1,435 registered voters.

All told, there are 7,187 registered voters in the county, including 4,661 Democrats, 1,734 Republicans, 649 with no party affiliation and 143 others.

Early voting in the primary opens Aug. 11 and runs through Aug. 23.

VISITORS INJURED IN STAIRWAY COLLAPSE

Several people were injured when a set of exterior stairs collapsed Saturday at a Gulf front home in the St. George Island Plantation. At around 7:30 a.m. St. George Island Volunteer Fire Department first responders were called to a house at 1940 Nautilus Drive. When they arrived at the scene, they found individuals with injuries suffered when an outdoor staircase collapsed. The visitors had gathered on the stairs for one last vacation photograph before departing for home. Fire Chief Jay Abbott said 10-people were on the stairs when they fell. He said three were patients transported to Weems Memorial Hospital by ambulance, and two were carried in private vehicles. Information on the nature of the injuries was not available, but none were said to be life threatening. According to county records, the four-bedroom home was built in 1990. It sold in 2010 to the current owner for approximately $1.3 million. A local realtor said the home was extensively renovated in 2002-3.

Eastpoint under boil water notice

Special to the Times

A boil water notice went into effect Monday morning for Eastpoint residents/

The Eastpoint Water and Sewer Department said water main on Franklin Street was broken by a road crew, which reduced pressure in the system. When the pressure falls below a certain point, a boil water notice is required until the water can be tested for bacteria.

Any water used for drinking or cooking should be brought to a rolling boil for one minute. The precautionary boil water notice was to remain in effect until the tests on water samples show the water is safe to drink. The water department said they hoped water sample results would be returned on Wednesday, June 25.

WATER SAFETY INVESTIGATION

ATTENTION:

Apalachicola Water Customers

In May 2013, the City of Apalachicola Water System notified residents that their water failed to meet standards set by the Florida Department of Environmental Protection and the EPA.

During routine safety testing, the City of Apalachicola found levels of trihalomethanes (THMs) more than 50% higher than established maximum contaminant levels for drinking water.

THMs can also be inhaled and absorbed through the skin. Researchers discovered that blood concentrations of THMs rose 5- to 15-fold following such routine activities as showering, bathing and hand washing.

Often found in industrial solvents and refrigerants, THMs are considered carcinogenic and have been linked to numerous life-threatening health effects:

- Liver or Kidney Failure
- Liver or Kidney Cancer
- Colon or Rectal Cancer
- Bladder Cancer
- Adverse Pregnancy Outcomes
- Serious Central Nervous System Damage

If you or a loved one has received such a diagnosis, or a family member has died from one of these conditions, and if your water is provided by the City of Apalachicola, please contact our firm for a free consultation.

Future of the American workplace

"As I put my kids to bed...

I wonder what lies ahead..."

"Changes Comin' On" Written by Dean Dillon, Buddy Cannon, and Jimmy Darrell and recorded by Alabama

Some time back I was asked to speak to an investment class at the University of Alabama. The experience was invigorating. There's nothing like being around tens of thousands of young people enjoying the best years of their lives on a gorgeous spring day. Author Bill Bryson said the same about living in Hanover, N.H., but they don't conclude classes at Dartmouth with a resounding "Roll Tide."

The presentation focused on how our team makes investment decisions, how these choices differ for varying client objectives, and methods for establishing a productive balance of equities and fixed income instruments in portfolios. The students' questions afterwards centered around these same issues: investment strategies, inquiries involving particular securities, and how decisions are reached on market buys and sells.

As I returned to Florida, I realized that while we had engaged in a theoretical discussion regarding investment choices, no one had asked about how to build an investment advisory firm as a business. There were no questions about client services apart from portfolio management. No inquiries about the costs of office space or software. No questions about payroll or employee benefits.

What the students really needed was not only a presentation on investing, but insights into the entrepreneurial experience. Somewhere around 75 percent of all self-made millionaires in America are business owners. As the U.S. job market devolves, this number is likely to increase. The days when someone handed you a solid paycheck with benefits and a pension right out of college are rapidly disappearing. The ability of a young person to identify a need and fill it with a start-up enterprise may represent the lifeblood of our economy in coming decades.

Unemployment is now at 6.3 percent. This is down significantly from 2009, when our unemployment rate stood at 10 percent. Yet, our domestic economic landscape is in trouble. "There are still 1.49 million construction jobs missing," write Josh Boak and Chris Rugaber in an article entitled "U.S. Job Market Recovers Losses Yet Appears Weaker." "Factories have 1.65 million fewer workers... Government payrolls have shrunk, taking middle class pay with them. Local school districts have 255,400 fewer employees. The U.S. Postal Service has shed 194,700 employees."

Globalization and automation are wiping out millions of traditional employment opportunities. One of the best skills that a young person, or any person, can have is the ability to create and sustain one's own business. Small business has always been and remains the backbone of the U.S. economy. Creating a successful one may be the prime path to wealth for many younger Americans.

UF: Kids will eat whole grains

By BRAD BUCK
Special to The Times

GAINESVILLE — Many parents presume their children will shun whole grains because they think they don't like them, a University of Florida researcher says, but a new UF study may start to debunk that idea.

If whole grains are offered, kids eat them, according to a new study by researchers at UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences. Specifically, former graduate student Allyson Radford and two faculty members found children ate whole- and refined-grain foods in equal amounts.

"We tried to choose foods we thought kids would enjoy, such as cereal bars, macaroni and cheese and SunChips and found that they ate the ready-to-eat snack foods the most," said Radford, one of the study's authors. "We were interested to see if they would eat the whole-grain foods as much as the refined-grain foods, and so we were pleasantly surprised that they would eat the same amount whether the food was whole or refined."

Radford co-wrote the paper with assistant professor Wendy Dahl and professor Bobbi Langkamp-Henken, all of whom are in the food science and human nutrition department. The study was published online last week by the Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics.

Eating whole grains, combined with a healthy diet, may reduce the risk of heart disease and help with weight management, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Examples of whole-grain foods include popcorn, oats, whole wheat bread and brown rice. Refined grains, enriched and fortified with nutrients, include foods such as white rice and white bread.

The 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans call for at least half the grain consumers eat to be whole grains, and they urge adolescents to consume five to seven ounces of grains daily, with at least half being whole grains. National surveys suggest adolescents consume far less, about 1 ounce, or the grain contained in one slice of bread.

Federal dietary guidelines for the 2012-13 school year increased the whole grain required in school lunches. Starting this fall, schools must offer only whole-grain rich products.

The new rules requiring more whole grains in school lunches should result in adolescents eating more of them, Dahl said, but many parents believe their kids won't eat whole grains.

General Mills funded a broad study on the impact of whole grains on immunity. As part of the study, Radford wanted to know if children could meet the 2010 dietary guidelines for whole grains. For the study, 83 students in a Florida middle school were randomly assigned to receive either whole- or refined-grain foods over a six-week period in 2010. Of those, 42 students were in the refined grain group, while 41 were in the whole-grain group.

Participants and their families were given refined-grain or whole-grain pasta, rice, bread and other foods to eat at home. And they were given whole- and refined-grain snack foods to eat at school.

Researchers interviewed students weekly to see what fruits, vegetables and grains they ate in the previous 24 hours. Before the study, participants were eating about one ounce of whole grain per day. During the study, students in both groups reported eating more than six ounces of grains each day, and those given whole grains reported more than half their grain intake came from whole grains, meeting the 2010 dietary guidelines.

Snacks served at school were the most popular grain foods the kids ate.

"Encouraging consumption of whole-grain foods that require little to no preparation may be the most effective means of increasing whole grain intake at home," said Radford, now a UF research study coordinator in food science and human nutrition.

UF: Consumer confidence at post-recession high

By JOHN DUNN
Special to The Times

GAINESVILLE — Consumer sentiment among Floridians rose to a post-recession high in June, climbing four points to 82, according to a new University of Florida survey.

"Because the confidence level has been wavering between the upper 70s and low 80s for more than a year, we did not expect this jump," said Chris McCarty, director of UF's Survey Research Center in the Bureau of Economic and Business Research.

That surprise comes as Florida experiences a slowdown in housing starts and a rise in unemployment.

All five components comprising the index increased. Survey takers' assessment of being financially better off now than a year ago rose four points to 75, its highest level since the end of the Great Recession. Their expectations of improved personal finances one year from now increased five points to 81.

Respondents indicated they were also upbeat about the national economy over the coming year, registering a rise of seven points to 81. Their outlook for the next five years rose two points to 78.

Meanwhile, consensus on whether now is a good time to buy big household appliances rose four points to 94, another post-recession record.

June's burst of optimism was most evident among younger Floridians and those in low-income households. The current personal finances component among households with incomes under $30,000 a year shot up 18 points.

The uptick is puzzling. "This demographic is unlikely to benefit from record levels in the stock market and price gains in the housing market that typically affect higher income households," McCarty said. And because of a lingering effect of the Great Recession, there has also been delay in household formation among younger Americans who have had difficulty finding well-paying jobs and those saddled with student loans, he said.

Something else may explain the optimism, McCarty said. Gas prices have fallen in the past month, but the Iraq crisis could change that trend. The state has also added jobs over the past year, though they're mostly low-paying ones. "Many of them are associated with leisure and hospitality," McCarty said. "Those are the kinds that will be filled by people who live in lower income households."

Although Florida's increase in consumer confidence is welcomed news, McCarty said, "it is worth remembering that at the end of two previous recessions occurring in 1990-91 and 2001, consumer confidence was 89." In contrast, at the end of the Great Recession in June 2009 the index was 69.

"We are now five years out from the Great Recession, and consumer confidence stands at 83," McCarty said, "but five years after the first two recessions, consumer confidence was at 91 and 93. Clearly something is different about this recovery compared to previous recoveries."

McCarty also noted that five years after the end of the recession in the early 1990s unemployment stood at 5.4 percent, and five years following the recession in the early 2000s it was 3.4 percent.

Unemployment today is 6.3 percent after five years. Conducted from June 1-21, the UF study reflects the responses of 425 individuals representing a demographic cross-section of Florida. The index used by UF researchers is benchmarked to 1966, which means a value of 100 represents the same level of confidence for that year. The lowest index possible is a 2; the highest is 150.

TIME TO CLOSE SIKES CUT

In response to the June 5 article about the oyster harvest being cut back (see "Cuts in store for summer oyster harvest," pg. A1), if low river flow is in fact the "new normal," it would make sense to help the problem by reducing the amount of saltwater that comes into the bay. This could be accomplished overnight by filling in Sikes Cut.

Few important boats use this cut anymore, and the few that do have other routes to the Gulf. Whatever the reasons for dredging this cut back in the 1950's, none are as important as restoring the balance of salt and fresh water upon which the oyster beds were created and have reproduced for thousands of years.

With less freshwater coming down the river, it's time to have less saltwater coming in from the Gulf. It's time to close Sikes Cut.

'SAND CRAB' DEFENDS CONGRESSMAN

Dear Cus, did you see the letter in The Times from the lady that is supporting Gwen Graham and Nancy Pelosi for Congress? (See "Southernland salvo just Tea Party extremism" pg. A4, June 5, 2014 Times) My Uncle Skeeter who is very smart says he believes the writer is qualified to replace Susan Rice on Sunday morning talk shows, whatever that means.

Did you see that part where she called our letterwriting friend Willie Norred a surrogate flack? I had to ask my brother-in-law, Shorty, what that meant. You know, Shorty is smart too. Shorty says it's somebody that preaches every day of the week except Sunday on subjects ranging from Save Our Bay to Why Butterflies Fly, and if you want to know why butterflies fly, go to your computer and click on Charlie Crist, whatever that means.

I didn't get that part where she says that our congressman don't speak nicely about women. How could that be? The man has been married to his high school sweetheart for nearly 30 years and they have four girl children. That's as silly as saying Gen. Dwight Eisenhower didn't like soldiers! Think about it!

Folks sure claim lots of Rights I didn't know about. Some call these people Progressive. Shorty's twin brother, Stumpy, says Progressives believe that these Rights would have been in our Constitution but they ran out of ink. Think about it!

I've had my say but I will leave you with this advice, "save your wooden nickels." You never know when you may need one to call a taxi. Think about it!

Lerner, who is in Orlando this week receiving training on English Language Arts formative assessment tasks, said she was honored to have been named principal of the pre-Kindergarten through 12th grade school.

She taught second grade in Franklin County in 1985-86, after being hired by Janice Gordon at Brown Elementary School. "Two hurricanes, one tropical depression and a successful year of teaching later; I left to return to Washington County," she said.

Lerner met and married the local Navy recruiter and taught in Washington County until 1990, when her first son Matthew was born. The family moved when the Navy transferred Lerner's husband to Brunswick, Maine and they lived there for four years during which time Lerner's second son, Christian, was born. From there the Navy sent the family to China Lake, California where they lived until 1996.

In 1996, Lerner's husband retired from the Navy and the family returned to Chipley, her hometown, and have lived there ever since.

Lerner returned to teaching but in 2003 became Washington County's first reading coach. In 2004 she began working with Reading First, part of the No Child Left Behind legislation, and as a regional coordinator for Reading First schools was assigned seven school districts, including Franklin, where she worked with both Carrabelle and Brown Elementary.

"Mrs. Lerner has the talent for enhancing programs and using her leadership skills to make learning more exciting for the faculty and the students they instruct. Bringing in Mrs. Lerner is a gain for Franklin County."

Nina Marks
Franklin County Schools superintendent

She had the opportunity to teach at the college level, at Chipola Junior College and Florida State University, and said she found teaching at this level to be extremely rewarding but missed working with teachers and principals at the school level.

In 2010 she returned to Washington County School District as district literacy specialist. In this role she worked with all schools in the district and supported literacy coaches, teachers and principals as they moved the district initiatives forward.

Lerner will have to earn her principal certification, and is enrolled in a program led by the Panhandle Area Educational Consortium to enable her to complete the necessary requirements for the needed certification.

the school board and the employees. These have traditionally been approved just prior to the Christmas break, or even later, and are retroactive back to July 1.

Catherine Wood, president of the Franklin County Teacher Association, said talks began in early May and that the employees' team also included FCTA vice-president Jamie Duhart, FCTA treasurer Elinor Mount-Simmons and Tammy Sasnett president, and Joy Towns, vice-president, of the Franklin Educational Support Personnel Association (FESPA)

Representing the school district were Shannon Venable, finance officer, and Tallahassee attorney Leonard Dietzen, the chief negotiator.

Wood said the sides have tentatively agreed to raises for teachers and support staff, pending ratification. Teachers would get 1 percent and support personnel 3 percent.

"The teachers were fortunate to have money from Tallahassee last year that totaled 5 percent of their incomes," Wood said. "The support staff got nothing because the county was not in a position to offer anything."

"We went to bargaining determined that support staff needed to be respected for the jobs that they do and the best way the county could do that is offering a raise," she said.

Wood said the contract to be presented Monday night at the school would be for all employees, the approximately 80 teachers and 50 support personnel, not just union members. "We are the bargaining agent but we bargain for all staff, not just our members," she said. "All are encouraged to come to this meeting."

"Never before has this been done, a summer ratification vote," she said.

She said the proposed contract also features new language that relates to the evaluation documentation. She said it offers stipulations for pre and post conferencing with teachers for observation and evaluations.

In 2014-15 Florida is implementing new state guidelines that tie "pay for performance," and rely more than before on evaluations and test scores.

She said a proposed change in health insurance could end Franklin's status as one of the last counties in the state to fully cover the premium for individual coverage. Teachers have always had to cover the increased cost for family coverage.

The proposal would cap the district's coverage of single person coverage at this year's amount, and so employees would have to cover any increases in the cost of the plan.

She said the district will continue to pay the premium for dental coverage at 100 percent, which comes out to about $343 a year.

Wood said the contract also makes changes to the differentiated pay scale, which covers supplemental for coaches, class sponsors, and other positions.

If ratified, the band director would get the same supplemental as a head coach, and there would be greater reimbursement for class sponsors, who would no longer have to share a single supplemental.

BARGAINING MEETING MONDAY

All teachers and support staff are encouraged to attend an important bargaining meeting this Monday, June 30 at 5 p.m. in the lunch room of the Franklin County School.

The meeting will discuss the recommendations of the bargaining agent of FCS. This informational meeting is endorsed by the executive boards of the Franklin County Teachers Association and Franklin Educational Support Personnel Association. There will be a vote taken at the end of this meeting.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

reef, as well as creation of the Dixon Camp memorial reef, about two-tenths of a mile further south of Robby's.

Both the Camp and Redding families of the St. Teresa Beach community lost sons at young ages and approached OAR early on about donating funds in order to memorialize them. OAR also had the support of the Thornal family, who lost their 19-year-old son Price last Easter in a tragic traffic accident.

Richardson said the deployment, conducted by Walter Marine, out of Orange Beach, Alabama, included three Super Reefs, large concrete and limestone prefabricated reef structures, that tower 15 feet above the Gulf sea floor in 60 feet of water. The placement of the Super Reef forms is framed with 10 eight-foot tall reef structures known as "Florida Specials," which incorporate native Florida limestone as part of their makeup. All total, this project will utilize three Super Reefs, and 30 Florida Specials.

Walter Marine's website says Florida Limestone rock is comprised of ancient clam shells and matches a natural reef in both PH and substrate. Used previously in boulder form for artificial reefs, Walter said it developed a patented process to embed the rock into the concrete reef surface, and that boring organisms that dwell on artificial reefs cannot survive on a concrete reef but easily make the Florida Limestone reef their home.

Richardson said the deployment costs about $125,000, paid for by a $55,000 grant from the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission Division of Marine Fisheries' Artificial Reefs Program; a $15,000 match from the city of Carrabelle that came from OAR; and about $47,000 in additional private donations.

Funds from the Big Bend Saltwater Classic

Charley Redding and Stewart Walter, contractor, next to an "Eco-System Reef," four of which were deployed in the Robby's Reef Patch reef area have helped OAR complete its mission. State and federal funds come from a fee tacked on to recreational fishing licenses, and from excise taxes that people pay on boats, motors, tackle, and the like.

"We could not have been able to make this reef project a reality without the support of the city of Carrabelle, namely City Administrator Courtney Milender," said Richardson. "The city appreciates the increased opportunities for tourism that a project of this magnitude brings. It has been reported that for every dollar spent in reef development, $138 in tourism dollars are returned back to the coastal communities."

The state grant came after more than $1 million in requests came in for a half-million dollars in available grant funds, and Franklin and Wakulla counties each received $55,000.

The project envisioned for the City of St. Marks is a realignment and enlargement of the St Marks Reef, first deployed in 1964. OAR, through the City of St. Marks, will be deploying over 75 prefab reef modules in a depth of 20 feet, and is also matching $15,000 for this effort. "OAR has submitted the grant paperwork to the FWC, and we are currently moving this project through the proper channels," said Richardson.

He said re-permitting the reef expansion, after the original permit expired in 2011, was a lengthy process, but OAR eventually secured approval from the Army Corps of Engineers. "It took three years to re-permit," Richardson said. "That's the hardest part, dealing with the Corps. They're awful."

He said OAR had hoped to secure a contractor from Florida, but only Walter Marine, the largest deployer of artificial reefs in the nation, bid. "There's nobody in our area that's doing this," said Richardson.

He said OAR, a completely volunteer group, is working with marine enthusiasts in Apalachicola to expand the reef off of George Island to the east of Bob Sikes Cut, and perhaps one in shallower water off of Apalachicola. "We got to get it permitted and it takes forever," Richardson said.

He said they are also trying to permit a reef in shallower waters off Dog Island, perhaps in 25 to 30 feet deep waters.

"It would be closer to shore for smaller boats," Richardson said. "A lot of people are downsizing and fuel costs are so much. We're targeting more in-shore activity."

He said by building one off Apalachicola in state waters, there would be more snapper habitat closer to shore, and fishermen could take advantage of a longer state season for the prized food fish.

"We have to make sure we're not in shrimpers lanes, or sea turtle habitat," Richardson said. "We have to go through all the permitting obstacles."

While artificial reefs are popular with divers and fishermen, they are not without their detractors.

Some, such as the Ocean Conservancy, oppose their construction, contending that they exacerbate problems with overfishing by concentrating large populations of fish in one area. In addition, they argue that there are too many question marks as to the effect these structures have on the marine environment.

computers, modems and credit card equipment. On Sunday, lights flickered just over an inch-and-a-half in Eastpoint and on St. George Island, and parts of Apalachicola and Carrabelle were left without power for several hours. Cable service was cut for even longer in some areas.

In addition to strong winds, storms on both Sunday and Monday brought abundant lightning and pounding rain. On Sunday, about a half-inch of rain was collected in Rod Gasche's rain gauge in Carrabelle. On Monday, Gasche's gauge collected just over an inch-and-a-half. Based on radar observations, Fournier said Apalachicola received at least an inch of rain, and an area one mile west of Apalachicola received nearly 3.5 inches.

The record for June 22 in Apalachicola, 3.33 inches, was set in 1942. So far, in 2014, Apalachicola has received 30.44 inches of rain, 7.4 inches more than the normal rainfall of 23 inches based on records from 1981 to 2010.

Chasing SHADOWS

Inside of the Chapman outhouse

By LOIS SWOBODA

653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
lswoboda@starfl.com

A relic of the first Chapman School remains intact on the north side of U.S. 98.

In the backyard of a house on Avenue M is a small shed made of thick cypress boards. It has double walls and three diamond-shaped windows set high in the side. There is a thick corrugated tin roof.

Louis Van Vleet remembers the little shed from long ago. He said it was one of three outhouses that stood behind the old Chapman School built in the 1800s.

Last week, he and Holly Lemons arrived at the Times office with pictures of the old school and a page from the 1913 Sanborn Insurance maps showing the main Chapman building, with three little buildings at the back of the block occupied by the school. There were small outbuildings at the northeast and northwest corners of the lot, and a larger outbuilding at the center rear.

These were the outhouses. It may be that the two smaller outhouses were designated for girls and boys, and the larger shed in the middle for teachers. This arrangement was used at other schools of the same period.

"Let's go find some history!" said Lemons and we piled into her car and set off in search of the Chapman outhouse.

When we arrived, Van Vleet looked at the little building with something like awe. "My mother has probably been in there," he said.

The shed on Avenue M has three doors, one on each end and one in the middle, so it was probably a three-seater. The little diamond-shaped windows, for ventilation and light, were set high enough so nobody could peek inside. Each of the doors was furnished with a lock, so you probably had to ask the teacher for a key when you wanted to use the "necessity."

Louis Van Vleet has known where the Chapman outhouse is located for many years.

The original floor would have had holes to allow waste to drop into a pit. This apparently has been covered with a new board floor without openings. There also would have been interior walls dividing the stalls, which have been removed, and the seats are gone as well.

The pit under an outhouse had to be dug deep enough to prevent hookworms from escaping through the soil and infecting barefoot people near the privy. Hookworms can travel four feet through the soil, so pits were generally dug at least 6 or 7 feet deep. This would also reduce the problem of splashing. The building would have to be moved over a new pit periodically and the old pit capped with fresh soil from the new hole. The contents then degraded over time into very rich soil.

Roderick Robinson and his sister own the property where the shed is located. He said the house there originally belonged to his grandmother, Georgia Livingston, who passed away in 1990. He said there was a second shed of similar design on the property at one time, but he tore it down. Robinson said it was smaller than the three-door shed still standing. That gives a clue the surviving outhouse is probably the large one that was located center rear behind the former Chapman Schools, and may have been the teachers' privy.

The building is substantial, with thick cypress beams supporting the roof. Robinson said a tree fell on the shed without doing serious damage several years ago.

Robinson, 47, said the shed has been at its current site for as long as he can remember. He said his grandmother originally used it as a washhouse and he remembers it first contained a scrubbing board and later a wringer washer.

Recently, he cleaned the shed and found some treasures, which he shared with the Times. He found three textbooks dating to the 1950s: "Social Studies Skills," "Spelling in Everyday Life," and "North American Neighbors," a geography text. These would not have come from the old Chapman School, which was torn down sometime in the 1920s or 1930s. The wood from the old school, probably cypress like the outhouse, was recycled to construct houses.

Robinson also found an illustrated copy of "Bible Footlights," a study guide for Christians, and a fishing pole with rayon line and a cork handle.

Thank you, Mr. Robinson, for allowing us to photograph your shed and sharing your artifacts and information.

This is an interesting piece of history but it raises some questions.

First, does anyone know if the three outhouses at the first Chapman School were for boys, girls and teachers?

Second, when was the old Chapman School dismantled and does

'I DO HOPE YOU WILL GET IT STRAIGHT'

A Bible study guide, found in the former Chapman School outhouse contained the following note written in pencil on lined paper. One has to wonder how this entire matter all worked out since she apparently never sent the letter.

UFO MYSTERY SOLVED

JAN GORMAN | Special to The Times

Is it a bird? Is it a plane? Solved! Experienced photographer Ed Tiley offered the following explanation for a strange image recorded by a game camera that was presented in last week's Times. "I have a guess that it is an insect," wrote Tiley. "Looking at the image (wish it were larger) it is obviously a moving object. It is nearer the camera, and seemingly in range of the infrared light reflected in the deer's eye. Because it is moving (quickly and seemingly left to right and upward at a 30 degree angle), and nearer the camera, it blurs into that rectangular shape."

Gary Carroll concurred. He wrote, "It's a bug, flying past very close to the camera. The image is elongated because the bug moved during the exposure, and is overexposed because it's very close to the infrared LED flash."

"The camera you mentioned has a quarter-second exposure time, plenty of time for a flying bug to have moved, but the deer at a distance did not move in that time. Look closely and you can even see a gleam off a the legs." Thanks for you insight, Gary and Ed!

30 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

What was going on in the county 30 years ago this week?

There were 400 fulltime residents on St. George Island.

The Apalachicola A&P store had just held its going out of business sale, with 30 percent off all packaged items except tobacco.

The Wilson family of Apalachicola held a reunion at Fort Gadsden State Park that was covered in a feature article in the Times.

Hardee's announced it would be open 24 hours a day from July 2 through 5 to accommodate holiday visitors for Independence Day.

The Seafood Reef west of Apalachicola on U.S. 98 was looking for help and offered good pay, good benefits and an insurance plan.

Future Citizens of the Week were Chris and Chasity Richards, ages 4 and 8 years old.

LAW OFFICERS 'HARVEST' WEEDS FOR BURNING

By Roger Doherty
Times Staff Reporter
Local law enforcement officials discovered 600 marijuana plants last Wednesday during a raid on a field adjacent to the Carrabelle River.

The raid was made based on information supplied to Deputy Sheriff Archie Holton and Carrabelle Police Officer R.J. Brown. Five members of the Franklin County Sheriff's Department and Officer Brown participated in the raid.

The 600 plants were discovered on three acres of land near Mill Road. About 220 of the plants were planted in pots. The lawmen picked the plants and carried them out to a truck during a thunderstorm for transport to the county jail. The plants were burned the following day at the jail.

The field was evidently a major operation. Lawmen discovered a specially muffled rototiller in the field. They also found fertilizer, lime bags, manmade watering holes, a shovel and a bucket. There was evidence that the plants had been watered and dusted earlier in the day.

Each plant would have been worth $1,000 when mature, according to Sheriff Jack Taylor Jr. Each mature plant, when dried, would yield about one pound of marijuana. This one raid netted $600,000 worth of marijuana.

An additional 230 marijuana plants had been found in the City of Carrabelle earlier this week, and 90 plants had been discovered at another site. In all, 920 marijuana plants were found by Franklin County law enforcement officials last week.

"We have found somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,300 plants since April," Taylor said.

The sheriff's department had no suspects in the case as of Tuesday morning. The case is still under investigation.

Anyone who has information about marijuana plants being grown in Franklin County can call to report them to the Sheriff's Department. Names do not have to be given when reporting information.

DO YOU REMEMBER THE MAYPOLE?

Last month, The Times attempted to collect information for an article about traditional Maypole celebrations in Franklin County. Unfortunately, we were unable to find sufficient information and pictures for an article. Do you know about the maypole? We know there were at least two annual celebrations in Apalachicola, one at Trinity Church and one at Dunbar School. There may have been others.

If you have pictures or information, please contact The Times at 653-8868 or contact Lois Swoboda at lswoboda@starfl.com.

Kienzle to head Apalachicola historical society

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

The Apalachicola Area Historical Society on Saturday afternoon chose a retired librarian and former history teacher as its president for the next two years.

By unanimous election, at a meeting held at the home of Bill and Lynn Spohrer, the society voted for Carrie Kienzle to succeed Tom Daly as president.

Also approved were another two-year term for vice president David Adlerstein, treasurer Fran Edwards and secretary Shirley Taylor. Selected to serve on the board of directors were Kathy Willis and Susan Buzzett Clementson.

"I really appreciate this honor," Kienzle told the luncheon audience. "I'm very excited."

Kienzle, who has resided with husband, Charlie, in the historic district for the past eight years, brings a robust record of civic involvements in Apalachicola, including actively working with Trinity Episcopal Church's Tour of Homes and with the municipal library board, as well as a seat on the city's board of adjustment.

Carrie Kienzle is the new president of the Apalachicola Area Historical Society

Her career has been marked by a lifelong passion for history as well as an extensive know-how of the world of the modern library.

After earning a master's degree in library and information science from the University of North Texas in 1990, Kienzle worked as a school librarian on the elementary, middle and high school levels before being named library director for the Irving, Texas, Independent School District, which comprises about 34,000 students.

During her stint there, the American Library Association chose Irving as the school library media program of the year. And Kienzle has been a member of the Newbery Award Committee, which selects the best children's book each year; the Caldecott Award Committee, which chooses the best picture book; and the Printz Award Committee, which selects the best young adult book.

But even with that impressive resume, Kienzle made it clear in her remarks Saturday that the challenge ahead would be for everyone, whatever their background, to work harmoniously together.

TOM DALY

"We have to leave our egos at the door," she said. "We need to put on our oyster boots and roll up our sleeves."

A native of Portland, Ore., who grew up in Rhode Island, where her father was an attorney for lumber interests, Kienzle earned an undergraduate degree from the University of Rhode Island with a double major in history and secondary education.

In the early 1970s, she taught history in Middletown, R.I., and after living in various spots around the country, she and her husband settled in Texas. She and her husband have a son Charles, 28, living in Washington, D.C., and daughter Elizabeth, 32, in Lone Star, Texas, who has a son, Seth.

In her remark Saturday, she lauded the restoration work of Terry and Pam Corcoran, who have renovated the Marshall House at 13th street and Avenue C; of Michaelin and David Watts, who have restored the Key House adjacent to Lafayette Park; and Lynn and Bill Spohrer, who have long been devoted to restoration of their home and commercial buildings downtown.

Kienzle told of how she and her husband first traveled here in 1990, after canceling their room at Seaside, because they had heard Apalachicola was for "the intrepid." They stayed at the Gibson Inn and began a love affair with the town which has carried on to this day.

She promised to help "preserve, promote and protect" the city's rich historical legacy, which includes one of the state's largest collections of historically intact buildings.

Kienzle said she is working on options for boosting fundraising, perhaps with the creation of an "1831 Society" to help direct donations toward specific needs of the community.

"It's really never about money," she said. "It's about having a vision and having the will. If you feel that you really know what you're doing and know where you're going, they will sign on."

County jobless rate ticks upward in May

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

Franklin County's unemployment rate rose by 0.3 percentage point in May and is now higher than it was one year ago, when the work force was larger.

According to preliminary numbers released Friday by the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity, the county's jobless rate for May rose to 5.6 from 5.3 percent, as the number grew from 283 to 300 people in search of work. This increase in joblessness occurred as the workforce grew by 52 people, from 5,351 to 5,403.

However, the current work force has 98 fewer workers than one year ago, when it comprised 5,501 workers and the jobless rate was lower, at 5.4 percent.

The May jobless picture tied the county with Bay, Orange and Gilchrist counties, for 24th best among Florida's 67 counties. Franklin was worse for unemployment than Union, Collier, Baker, Holmes, Santa Rosa, Leon, Jackson, Liberty, Clay, Nassau, Seminole, Broward, Bradford, Jefferson, Sumter, St. Johns, Alachua, Wakulla, Okaloosa, Monroe and Walton, the state's best at 3.4 percent.

The CareerSource Gulf Coast region (Bay, Gulf and Franklin counties) experienced a slight uptick in unemployment, as a number of economic indicators continue to improve across the state.

"The size of the local increase in unemployment is statistically insignificant," said Kim Bodine, executive director of CareerSource Gulf Coast. "We do know, however, that there was a large-scale layoff that had the potential to affect the numbers slightly. The difference between April and May in terms of unemployment is historically flat, so the rates have gotten our attention."

'Just don't add up'

"The numbers that show we are losing jobs in leisure and tourism for our area just don't add up with other indicators that we see locally," she said. "We had the same issue throughout last year: When the 'adjustments' were made by the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics to the Local Area Unemployment Statistics (LAUS) data, we were no longer losing jobs in leisure and hospitality."

Bodine also pointed out data reflecting economic growth. "Every county in our region shows an increase in taxable sales, particularly in hotels and lodging taxes over last year, so to show a loss of 500 jobs just doesn't seem accurate to us," she said. "We question the number. Our staff does a great job in working with area job seekers and employers. Honestly, they have been recognized as number one in the state several times now. That said, I encourage folks who are looking for a job or employers who have openings to reach out to the CareerSource Gulf Coast job center."

The region's unemployment rate for May was 5.6 percent, up slightly from April's 5.2 percent. All three counties experienced growth in unemployment, with Bay up 0.5 percent to 5.6 percent, and Gulf up 0.3 percent, to 6.0 percent.

Out of a labor force of 104,180, there were 5,851 unemployed CareerSource Gulf Coast residents. The May 2014 rate was 0.8 percentage point lower than the region's year ago rate of 6.4 percent, while 0.5 percentage point below the May 2014 Florida rate of 6.1 percent.

Happy birthday, Mr. Dan

Sheriff Mike Mock, right, and Tax Collector Jimmy Harris, left, wished Dan Sangaree a Happy Birthday last week. Mr. Dan was 102 years old on June 20 and has been celebrating with family and friends from the community.

He was born in 1912 during President Taft's term. Sangaree served in the Pacific Theatre during World War II. He spent much of his life managing cinemas, although he also dabbled in the seafood industry and was an inventor.

He is best known around town as the orchid man for his great expertise with plants. For many years, he spread joy in the downtown business community by loaning blooming orchids to local businesses.

Mayor Van Johnson declared June 20, 2012, Sangaree's 100th birthday, to be Dan Sangaree Day in the city of Apalachicola.

Christian song stylist in concert Sunday

Special to the Times

Paul Lancaster will be in concert at Apalachicola Assembly of God Churches this Sunday.

Lancaster, who has been involved in full-time Christian music for more than 27 years, will be at First Assembly of God, 269 Brownsville Road, at 11 a.m. on Sunday morning, and at Living Waters Assembly of God, 1580 Bluff Road, at 6 p.m. Sunday evening.

He has been a recognizable face on many of the Gaither Homecoming videos and concert tours as a member of such well-known artists as The Mullins, The Nelons, The Martins and most recently, Palmetto State. His combined experience with these groups has afforded him the opportunity to win two Dove awards as well as tour with other well-known artists and speakers such as Mark Lowry, Clay Cross, Jaci Velasquez, Josh McDowell and most recently, The Judds (Wynonna and Naomi).

He also has been seen filling in over the years with other well-known artists such as Karen Peck and New River, The Booth Brothers, Three Bridges and several others.

"My greatest ambition is to connect with the people in front of me. When I'm singing lyrics about God's unmatched love and sacrifice, it makes me want to give everything I've got to make sure that the message is received and understood by the listener," Lancaster said. "Frankly, there is no joy or fulfillment in singing anymore without knowing that fact."

His self-titled debut CD is a collection of some of his favorite songs that inspired him from his childhood to the present. It includes hymns such as "Great Is Thy Faithfulness," "What A Friend We Have In Jesus," and a soulful rendition of "His Eye Is On The Sparrow." Other favorites include "He Looked Beyond My Fault" penned by the late Dottie Rambo; Andre Crouch's "Soon And Very Soon," a souped-up arrangement of "I'll Fly Away" and several more.

Please don't miss the opportunity to see Paul Lancaster in concert. It will be an experience you won't soon forget! For more information, call 653-8651.

Rebecca Hutto, dogs' best friend

By LOIS SWOBODA

653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
Lswoboda@starfl.com

Rebecca Hutto is devoted to dogs and she has good reason.

Working with the Franklin County Humane Society, Hutto has fostered more dogs over the years than she can remember and owned quite a few as well. She said her first foster dog was Bub, "a crazy terrier that spoke only Spanish."

She said that so far this year, she has provided shelter to more than 30 canines until they could find permanent accommodations.

Her partner in her personal rescue mission is Monty, an AKC registered, 2-year old, liver and white Springer spaniel. Monty's parents are a pair of Springers that belong to Hutto's daughter in North Carolina.

"Monty is a big brother to all of the dogs I foster," said Hutto. "He helps with toilet training and if one of the foster dogs wanders away all I have to do is say 'go find puppy' and he will find the missing dog."

Hutto said Monty, a puppy himself, adapts to the size of his foster siblings and is very careful not to be too rough.

"I have seen him play tug of war with a miniature dachshund. He was so careful. It was the funniest thing I've ever seen," said Hutto.

Hutto has a special place in her heart for Springers.

When her daughter, Mariah, was 18 months old, the Hutto family lived in a mountaintop cabin near Asheville, N.C. One day the baby got out of the house, and dressed only in booties and a diaper, wandered into the woods with dogs belonging to the family. She was missing for hours.

Eventually, all of the dogs returned home except for a Springer spaniel named Beulah. When searchers found the girl at the bottom of the mountain and miles from home, Beulah drew their attention to the child. Mariah was unhurt.

Monty accompanies Hutto to work at the Peddler's Alley garden shop in downtown Apalachicola.

"Springers are working dogs. You have to give them a job," she said. "He is our greeter. He is very good about getting people to come inside and plays with the children while their parents shop."

Monty is paid for his services at Peddler's Alley. He takes his wages in dog biscuits provided by Oyster Bones of Apalachicola.

FWC combats lionfish invasion

Special to the Times

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) made several changes at a June 18 meeting in Fort Myers that will help combat the lionfish invasion in Florida waters. Lionfish are an invasive species that have a negative effect on native wildlife and habitat.

Approved changes going into effect Aug. 1 include:

- Prohibiting the importation of live lionfish.
- Allowing the harvest of lionfish when diving with a rebreather, a device that recycles air and allows divers to remain in the water for longer periods of time.
- Allowing participants in approved tournaments and other organized events to spear lionfish or other invasive species in areas where spearfishing is not allowed. This will be done through a permitting system.

“Changes like these will make it easier for divers to remove lionfish from Florida waters and will help prevent additional introductions of lionfish into marine habitats,” said State Rep. Holly Raschein, who has been proactive in the lionfish-control efforts.

From outreach and education to regulatory changes, controlling the lionfish population has been a priority for FWC staff. In 2013, they hosted the first ever Lionfish Summit, which brought together various stakeholders from the public as well as management and research fields to discuss the issues and brainstorm solutions. These changes were inspired in part by discussions at the Lionfish Summit.

Webworm tents soon to appear

By LOIS SWOBODA
653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
lswoboda@starfl.com

The fall webworm, Hyphantria cunea, is a moth known principally for its caterpillar, which builds impressive silk tents that sometimes enclose entire branches of hardwood trees.

The tents appear in late summer or fall. Defoliation by fall webworm caterpillars does not usually cause damage to the tree, since they feed in late summer or fall, just before leaf drop. While the nests are unsightly, the caterpillars are not believed to harm otherwise healthy trees.

Fall webworm caterpillars will feed on any one of over 100 tree and shrub species. Preferred host plants include hickory, pecan, walnut, elm, alder, willow, mulberry, oak, sweetgum, and poplar.

The moth is native to North America, ranging from Canada to Mexico, and is one of the few insect pests introduced from North America into other continents. Introduced into the former Yugoslavia in the 1940s (firstly recorded in 1949), it is now found in Europe from France to the Caspian Sea and in Central Asia where it continues to expand its range. It was also introduced into Japan in 1945 and is now present across the northern hemisphere.

One generation per year emerges in the northern part of this moth's range. In the southern part of its range, there are two or more generations annually.

LOIS SWOBODA | The Times

The caterpillars are highly variable in color, ranging from a pale yellow, to dark grey, with yellow spots and long or short bristles. There are two cream stripes along the sides.

After the caterpillar enters a cocoon, the pupa stage overwinters in the bark and leaf litter at the base of the trees. It is dark brown and about 10 mm long. The thin brown cocoon is made of silk covered with bits of twigs and dry leaves.

The adult is mostly white in the north, but in the south, it may be marked with black or brown spots on the forewings. It is quite 'hairy', and the front legs have bright yellow or orange patches.

Several methods of control can be applied to webworms. Small nests can be pruned out of small to medium trees. Try to detect the nests when only several leaves are involved. These small nests can be easily crushed. Do not burn the nests in trees as this may do additional damage to the tree.

The bacterial insecticide, Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt), is quite effective against fall webworms if it is applied when the larvae are small. Thoroughly cover leaves next to nests. As these leaves are incorporated into the nest and eaten, the Bt will be ingested. Many standard chemical insecticides are also effective when applied to the foliage surrounding the nest.

FISH REPORT SPONSORED BY

Pier/Surf

Local area streams and creeks are producing nice bream and even good bass right now as well.

Inshore/Bay

Good trout reports are the norm for St Joe Bay and East Bay. Hot summer weather has the fish biting at first light, so don't sleep in. Other species, such as flounder and red fish, are abundant as well but are constantly moving because of tides and water temperature.

Offshore/Bottom

Offshore action is in between right now as federal red snapper is over and the July 1st re-opening of gag grouper. King fish have taken over all near shore wrecks and reefs with huge numbers.

Florida panther population expanding

Special to The Times

Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) biologists provided an update at the agency's June Commission meeting in Fort Myers regarding Florida panther research and conservation programs.

Due to the success of panther-conservation efforts over the past 40 years, the panther population has grown significantly since the 1970s, when the panther was federally listed as endangered.

Biologists have updated their "population range estimate" to reflect an increase to 100-180 adult panthers in Florida. Based on this estimate and habitat availability, panthers likely have reached their carrying capacity south of the Caloosahatchee River.

Historically, panthers ranged throughout Florida and into seven other southeastern states. Today, most panthers are found south of the Caloosahatchee River in Florida. The FWC and partners such as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are preparing for the natural expansion of the increasing population.

Because large tracts of land are needed to sustain a healthy panther population, private landowners will be crucial to range expansion.

“Due to the expansive habitat needs of the Florida panther, the continued growth of their population presents a unique challenge to the FWC and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service,” said FWC Commissioner Liesa Priddy. “As panther range expands, impacts on private landowners will continue to increase.”

With the increasing number of panthers, there also are increasing interactions and conflicts with people. The FWC and partner agencies currently are working with landowners to address the challenges they may face in having panthers on their lands.

“We know panthers can prey upon pets and livestock, and we strive to find solutions that work for people who experience these very real losses,” said Thomas Eason, director of the FWC's Division of Habitat and Species Conservation.

People can help with panther research by reporting sightings at FloridaPantherNet.org. Reporting observations can help FWC biologists address panther conservation needs by identifying the areas used by these large cats.

Florida residents can support panther conservation efforts by purchasing a Protect the Panther license plate, available at BuyAPlate.com. Fees from license plate sales are the primary funding source for the FWC's research and management of Florida panthers.

To report dead or injured panthers, call the FWC's Wildlife Alert Hotline at 888-404-FWCC (3922) or #FWC or *FWC on a cell phone.

AA All-Stars head to state

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
Dadlerstein@starfl.com

After dominating the District 4 All-Star Tournament two weeks ago at D. W. Wilson Field in Apalachicola, the Franklin County AA All-Stars are headed to Marianna to take on the best throughout the state.

Coach Andy Pace and assistants William Chipman, Travis Bentley and Ricky Abercrombie have shepherded a crew of 7 and 8 year olds boys, and girl, to the state.

The All-Stars dominated the June 13-16 district tournament in Apalachicola, by winning all three of their games. In AA, teams use a pitching machine, with the coach feeding the baseball into the machine, which hurls it at a speed of 40 miles per hour, directly into the strike zone.

"The speed is constant for every game," Pace said. "You can't change that."

"The official blesses the readjustment of the machine," he said. "If there's a flaw in the machine, or if something is not set just right, there could be problems."

Although they are not machines, but young people, the Franklin County team was set just right at the district tourney.

In their first game Saturday, June 14, the Franklin County All-Stars won 19-4 over Port St. Joe, and then in their second game won 21-2 over Wewahitchka. In the championship game Monday, June 16, the All-Stars again defeated Port St. Joe, this time 16-10, although it was their most lackluster performance of the tourney.

"We didn't do too bad," Pace said. "As a team we're hitting the ball great. We finished the district tournament with close to an .800 team batting average.

The coaches address their players.

"We pair them off one-on-one with coaches. We go over situations, we practice as a live game situation."

Coach Andy Pace

We need to concentrate on keep hitting the ball and defense and I think we'll do pretty good in the state tournament."

Pace said two players are batting .1000 and just one player is batting below .500. Hannah Abel, the team's only girl, and Brett Charles, rotate each inning on the mound, and while they don't pitch the ball, they are responsible for scooping up ground balls and making plays at the bases. Abel is one of two girls in the AA league in the county, the other Pace's daughter, Mason.

"They're a defensive player at the pitcher's mound," Pace said. "They have to make a defensive play on it. We've been blessed to play pretty good defense."

Franklin County, the district winner, and Port St. Joe, the runner-up, both leave to go to state Friday morning, in Marianna.

There, at the Friday night banquet, they'll find out who among the 16 teams they will face as they embark on a fairly tough schedule of games.

There are four pools of four teams, and each team plays seven pool games, three on Saturday, two on Sunday and two on Monday.

Depending on the outcomes and how they are seeded in the pool, the top two teams in each pool go to an eight-team double elimination playoff, with the first round at 8 p.m. Monday. That goes through Shortstop Terry Proctor.

Wednesday night.

"You'll play every day regardless," Pace said. "You got to make sure your players are rested."

Pace said players and coaches run through defensive and offensive drills at practice. "We pair them off one-on-one with coaches," he said. "We go over situations, we practice as a live game situation. Sometimes it's just like verbal practice,

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Associated Press/ERIC RISBERG

Carl chats with an old guy who, not long ago, was known as "The Kid."

What do we know about Carl's future?

Officially, nothing. But it's looking more and more like those late-spring rumors will hold: Edwards will drive a fourth entry for Joe Gibbs Racing next year. For better or worse, there are always all sorts of contractual issues that prevent — or at least discourage — the main players from giving more than a wink and a nod regarding their future plans. Actually, the nod has probably been deemed a breach of contract. We'll have to go with the wink, and the wink indicates Gibbs.

How crazy is all this?

By auto racing's historical standards, it's actually pretty civilized. Back in your dad's day, drivers and owners whipsawed back and forth. There were no contracts back then, so today's "Jack the Bear" might be tomorrow's unemployed hot-shoe looking for a wheel. Who knows, maybe that was better. But if you like some semblance of order and stability, today's way is probably better.

Is Carl playing mind games with Mr. Gordon?

Let's assume he didn't mean to do it, but if you're Jeff Gordon, pushing 43, and pushing it with a cranky back, the last thing you need is a guy pushing 35 to act like you're Grandpa Jones. But there was Carl, glowing after winning Sunday and saying what a thrill it was to beat a guy (um, Jeff Gordon) whom he watched as a kid. NASCAR for The Daytona Beach News-Journal for 27 years. HOT TOPICS: 3 ISSUES GENERATING A BUZZ

Ageless wonder

Carl Edwards had to fight off a last-lap nip by veteran Jeff Gordon to win at Sonoma Raceway on Sunday. Gordon was so impressed with Edwards' driving ability that he went to Victory Lane to shake the hand of the winning driver.

And then Edwards let it be known that when he was a little kid watching television at home in Missouri, he was enthralled by Gordon's skills on the Sonoma road course.

"I'm a fan of this sport, and I grew up watching Jeff Gordon go through those esses (turns) and watching how he drove his car, so to be able to hold him off like that means a lot," Edwards said.

Oops.

That little bit of innocent nostalgia from Edwards made everybody realize Gordon, now in his 22nd year of service to Hendrick Motorsports in the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series, is hurtling toward his 43rd birthday in August.

The 20-year-old kid, who gave Dale Earnhardt fits as a rookie in 1993, is now old enough to be the father of a 20-year-old child.

Gordon, who leads the Cup Series points chart, has plenty of stock-car driving ability. He took the age questions in stride, like an old pro.

"Yeah, I'm starting to hear that a lot more where somebody was born when I won my first championship or was watching me as a kid," Gordon said.

"But I love racing here. I love being competitive and leading the points and having a shot at winning races at 22 years into my Cup career. It doesn't matter; we're having fun."

Gordon doesn't have much else to prove. He is third all-time in Cup victories behind Hall of Fame drivers Richard Petty and David Pearson, and has won four Cup championships.

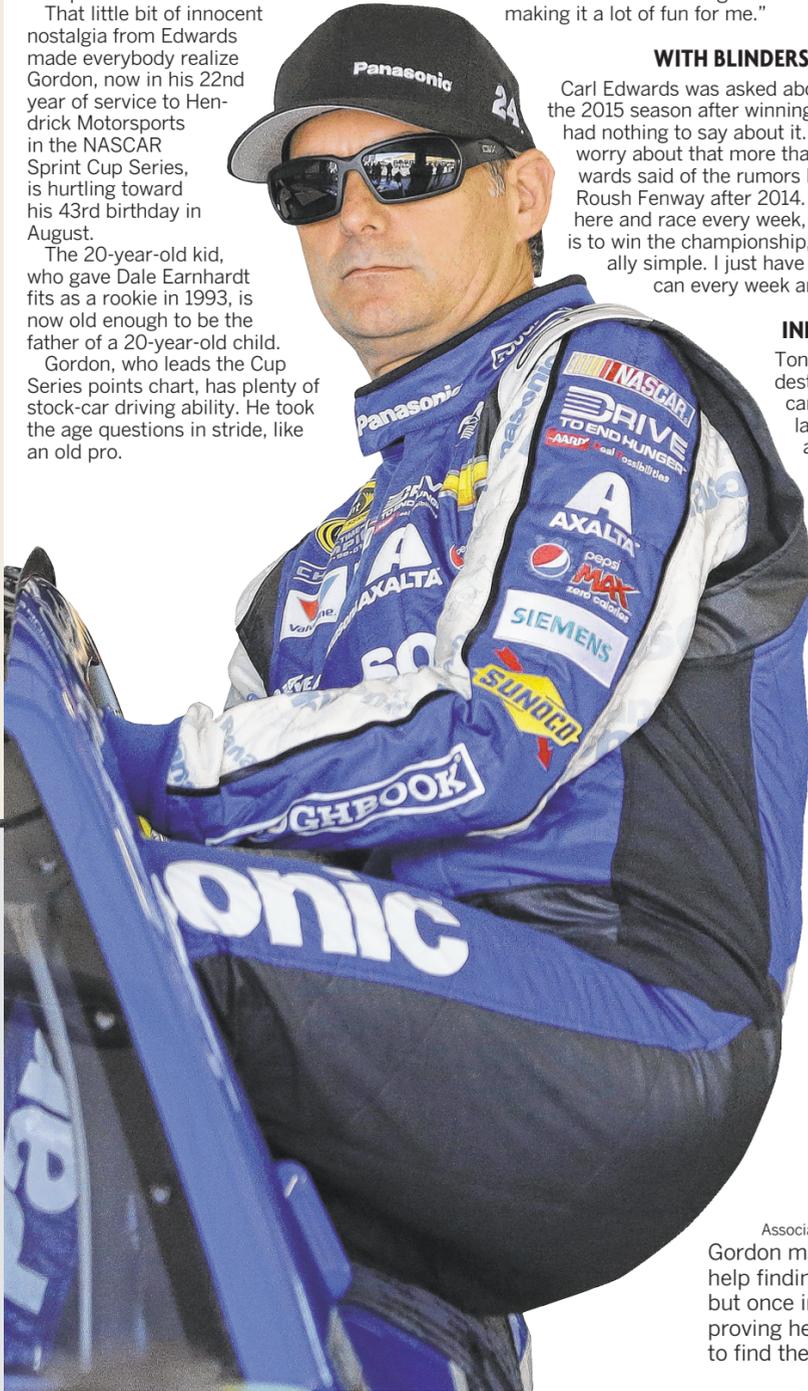

Gordon said he's rejuvenated this season because of the equipment he gets every week. Gordon said he's clicking with his team "and that's making it a lot of fun for me."

WITH BLINDERS ON

Carl Edwards was asked about his plans for the 2015 season after winning Sonoma. He had nothing to say about it. "I think you guys worry about that more than we do," Edwards said of the rumors he plans to leave Roush Fenway after 2014. "We come out here and race every week, and the mission is to win the championship, so for me it's really simple. I just have to give the best I can every week and that's it."

INDY WRECK

Tony Stewart destroyed a stock car at Indianapolis last week during a Goodyear tire test. Goodyear said: "On Day 2 of the test, the three-time NASCAR Sprint Cup champion had a right-front tire lose air 17 laps into a 20-lap run." Stewart said: "We blew a tire. It destroyed the car, so it was a good hit." Stewart added: "That's why you go to the test. I'm sure they'll learn something from it and go on."

 Gordon may soon need help finding his parked car, but once inside of it, he's proving he still knows how to find the fast lane.

A couple questions we had to ask — ourselves

AP/ERIC RISBERG

Junior has his sights set on Homestead.

Win at Sonoma? Big sign for Edwards' title hopes?

GODSPEAK: Don't get too giddy. This boils down to the last 10 races and surviving those knockout Chase rounds.

KEN'S CALL: We've learned to not start polishing Carl's trophy too soon. But this sure didn't hurt.

Can we say the same for Junior's third-place run?

GODSPEAK: Junior's Sonoma run tells me this could be the Year of the Earnhardt.

KEN'S CALL: Junior third at a road course? Somewhere today, cats and dogs are playing together.

SONOMA REWIND

Team Penske is ready to challenge for the championship

Travis Geisler, competition director for Team Penske, told reporters at Sonoma Raceway that the team is on track to challenge for the 2014 NASCAR Sprint Cup Series championship.

Brad Keselowski took the title in 2012. Penske switched from Dodge to Ford in 2013. The team, which includes driver Joey Logano, is well ahead of its 2013 performance.

Where do you feel your team is right now compared to the same point last season?

"Everybody is a whole lot more comfortable with everybody we're working with. We know our way around Ford a little bit better now and where the strengths are. Everybody has weaknesses, but the biggest thing is to figure out where the strengths are, and I think there are certainly a lot of those at Ford that early last year we didn't know how to tap into, and now we've been able to work together a little better on areas that they can help us a lot, and I feel like as a company we're a whole lot more stable. The relationship with the engine company (Roush Yates) was new for all of us. So I think overall everybody feels pretty good about it. We came out of the gates very strong compared to last year when we had some issues early in the season."

Where do you feel Team Penske is in terms of competing for the championship this year?

"I think you're gonna see about four or five cars. I think if you looked at today, and everything can change by the time we get to there because this deal really ebbs and flows a lot, but I think the No. 4 and the No. 48 are probably the two main targets."

"I think it will certainly be a difficult battle, but I think we're getting ourselves in position and we're focused on what we need to do for those last 10 races to be the best ones of the year."

The bottom line is you feel despite this Hendrick hot streak that you're right there with them?

"Yeah, I would say that week in and week out we're there. We're leading laps. We're qualifying and we're getting things done. I think being able to lead a lap in every race this season says that you're there."

Great white shark Katharine bypasses island

Special to the Times

On Friday, June 20, a 14-foot, 2,300-pound shark passed about 60 miles south of St. George Island headed west. Experts say she may be headed for Texas.

Katharine, a white shark (Latin name: carcharodon carcharias) has taken on celebrity status along with dozens of other sharks tagged with electronic tracking devices. The lovely Katharine, Kat for short, now has star status due to her unusual migratory meanderings.

Chris Fischer is founder and expedition leader for OCEARCH, an acronym combining Ocean and Research, a non-profit organization with a global reach for research on great white sharks and other large apex predators. He said Katharine has become particularly popular among about 50 sharks being tracked because she often swims close to shore.

"I think what makes her special is she swam right down the east coast of Florida, right through Miami, right around Key West and then showed us for the first time in history how the white shark gets up into the Gulf of Mexico," Fischer said in an interview with Computerworld. "When she swims through these populated areas ... more and more people feel included and join in the movement."

Though sharks like Katharine typically cruise up and down the eastern seaboard, she is currently crossing the Gulf of Mexico. Experts from OCEARCH

Katherine on the day she was tagged in Cape Cod.

R. SNOW | OCREACH

believe she may be heading past the Mississippi River for the Texas coastline.

Originally tagged by OCEARCH researchers off Cape Cod last August, she was named after Katharine Lee Bates, a Cape Cod native and writer of the patriotic song "America the Beautiful."

A dorsal fin tag attached by OCEARCH uses a satellite to track a Katharine's position each time she breaks the surface. Other tags include an RFID implant whose ping is picked up whenever the shark passes a special, underwater buoy; an accelerometer, similar to the technology used in an iPhone or Nintendo Wii, that detects up or down movement; and a Pop-off Satellite Archive Tag (PSAT), which acts as a general archive, recording average water depth, temperature and light levels.

OCEARCH is a nonprofit, global shark-tracking project that uses four tagging technologies to create a three-dimensional image of a shark's activities. Researchers hope to develop successful conservation and management strategies by studying shark habits in detail.

Katharine has become a social media sensation.

Tens of thousands of people have visited the OCEARCH website in recent weeks, and its Facebook page has received as many as five million visits a week and many of those visitors are looking for information about Katharine. On several occasions, she has crashed the servers at OCREACH.

Why so much interest? In addition to her shoreline hugging habits, she may be pregnant.

According to researchers, male white sharks and non-pregnant females typically return to breeding grounds every year, while pregnant females return every two years because of an 18-month gestation period.

Cape Cod is a white shark breeding ground, and typically, this time of year the fish begin voyaging back to that area, but not Katharine. Observers speculate this is because she's not trying to breed this year, which could mean she is already expecting.

Katharine is also very interesting because this is the first time a white shark has been tracked entering the Gulf. Up until now, researchers were uncertain of where the white sharks occasionally seen in the Gulf of Mexico came from.

Well, Katharine came from New England. She traveled straight down the East Coast, past Miami and Key West and up the western side of the peninsula remaining within 200 miles of the shore the whole way and often venturing much closer.

Should you stay out of the water knowing Katharine may be lurking there? Actually, Katharine is far more likely to be injured by humans than to injure one.

Fischer said that 50 percent of the sharks tagged have been commercially caught and killed over the last year.

"This does help one understand the mind-blowing statistic that up to 100 million sharks per year are caught and killed, some just fished for a bowl of soup," he said. "A research project that was started to advance science for conservation purposes has become a wakeup call for the global community to grasp the significant mortality rate of shark populations."

Over 50 researchers from more than 20 institutions have collaborated with OCEARCH to date with over three dozen research papers in process or completed.

According to its website, OCEARCH expeditions, through the support of Caterpillar and other partners such as Costa, Yeti, Yamaha, Contender, SAFE boats and Mustad, generate satellite tracks and other forms of data for sharks, with planned expansion to other species in the future. Seventeen research expeditions have been conducted to date, with seven more scheduled through the end of 2015.

Contact the city for Carrabelle CRA grants

By LOIS SWOBODA

653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
Lswoboda@starfl.com

Money is available to increase the curbside appeal of Carrabelle businesses.

The Carrabelle Community Redevelopment Agency has a mission to reduce and eliminate blight within the designated redevelopment area or district. To that end, they are offering grants to spiff up the business district. A brochure and application forms for the program were debuted at a CRA meeting held Tuesday, June 17.

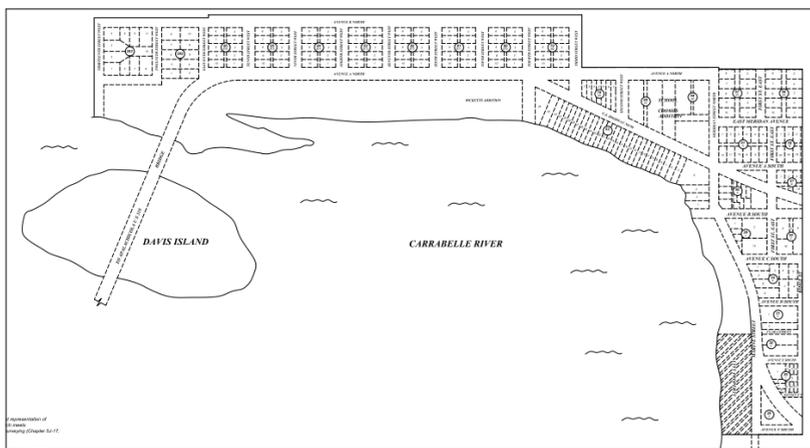

The Community Reinvestment Act part of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977 is a federal law designed to encourage commercial banks and savings associations to help meet the needs of borrowers in all segments of their communities, including low- and moderate-income neighborhoods. The Community Reinvestment Act requires federal regulators to assess the record of each bank or thrift in helping to fulfill its obligations to lend to low and moderate income borrowers. This record will then be used in evaluating applications for future approval of bank mergers, charters, acquisitions, branch openings and deposit facilities.

A CRA designates a district in need of revitalization. A baseline of tax revenue is set at the time of designation. From that date forward, any increase in property tax revenue, above the baseline, goes into a fund to be used to improve structures within the district.

Carrabelle established their CRA in 1993. Since then CRA, funds have been used to upgrade public areas with landscaping and sidewalks.

Now, the city is making CRA funds available as grants to upgrade existing buildings to improve appearance and environment, improve functionality, eliminate code violations, and help fill vacant or underused spaces within the commercial district.

According to a press release concerning the grants, "The CRA seeks to increase 'pride of ownership" and to get "feet on the street". Crowded sidewalks and occupied store-fronts indicate healthy economic activity and a safe environment; a place for people to come and enjoy."

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

Carrabelle's CRA district covers the business district from the pavilion to the Tillie Miller Bridge.

There is no fee to apply for a CRA grant; however, making application does not entitle the applicant to funding.

Application must be made prior to September 2014 to be included in the next funding cycle if approved.

The grant seeking process begins with a pre-application conference with CRA Director Courtney Millender to determine eligibility. Next, an application must be filed by the owner(s) of the property.

Please submit application and all documents as a complete package. Incomplete packets will be returned. A checklist will be provided.

CRA staff will review and approve or deny the application packets in the order in which they are received.

Once approved for funding, the grant recipient and CRA Director shall sign a "Carrabelle Commercial Building Façade Grant Agreement," that describes the obligations and limitations of the grant award.

Next, all required plan review and building permits must be approved and issued.

When this is done, the project may proceed with the CRA obligated to reimburse costs as approved in the agreement.

Any modifications to final plans will require review and written approval from the CRA Director and board.

Once the work is complete, the grant recipient will be responsible to arrange for any required on-site inspection by the applicable city or county officials as well as the CRA Director. Improvements will be documented and compared with what was proposed at the time of application. If any discrepancies are noted, the CRA has the right to request the discrepancies be corrected.

Recipient also submits written proof of payment for all improvements.

Interested parties may request an application for grant funding from the CRA Director.

In order to promote the revitalization of the commercial core of the redevelopment district, the current 2014-2015 grant program funding will be limited to properties with no identified code violations, unless the proposed improvements serve to correct violations.

Properties must pay taxes to the county and have no signage or structures that violate existing land development or other code regulations, unless the violations will be corrected by the work described in the grant.

Properties current and proposed future use must conform to the zoning map and must be legally permitted commercial activities.

Occupants must have maintained all required licensing to operate, as well as being current on all city utility accounts.

For qualifying projects, expenses are eligible for an 80 percent grant rebate. The maximum amount of a proposed project is $20,000, thus the maximum grant-funding amount is capped at $16,000.

Awards are currently limited to one award, per parcel, per CRA Fiscal Year (October thru September). Improved areas must be visible from the street or other public space. Labor and material costs that may be covered include professional design and engineering services related to exterior qualifying façade improvements.

Types of eligible improvements include removal or restoration of deteriorated or sub-standard exterior building material; masonry work or new stucco, brick or repairs; exterior painting; new or replacement windows, doors and woodwork; removal or replacement of signs, awnings, landscaping and fencing. Paving can be replaced. Roof repair or replacement may be included.

Grants may be used to bring buildings in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Millender said information about the grants has already been posted on Facebook and the city's website. "Funds will not be available until after the city's budget hearings but we wanted to go ahead and accept applications so we could get a feel for how much many to set aside for the grants," she said.

I don't believe I told that!

Least that's what everybody tells me when I tell it. It's like, "Keep yo' mouth shut and let folks think you're stupid or say something and remove all doubt." It wasn't the dumbest thing I have ever done but it ranks right up at the top. I've claimed to be a lot of things but smart ain't one of 'em. So here goes.

I'm on my sixth Toyota Land Cruiser since 1972. I just like 'em. My last one was a 1987, that had belonged to two different Mamas and all they did was haul kids back and to, and such and they had never even put it in four-wheel drive. It was nice and I have to have something like that to pull out my 28-foot Adventure Craft houseboat, "Lily," my river tour boat.

GILL AUTREY

So when a storm's coming I haul her out on this big special made trailer and park her in our front yard right across from the boat ramp at the Mill Pond. (The city got a grant to build a boat yard and a haul-out right in our front yard almost and there's a big pile of dirt where they're diggin' a retention pond. At first I thought they might be building a community Olympic swimming pool, which would have been a lot better than the dog park they proposed at one time.)

Any way this storm was comin' and so I figured I'd better haul "Lily" out, so I drove her down Scipio Creek to the Mill Pond, tied her up and got my Land Cruiser with the trailer hooked up and positioned them on the boat ramp in gear with the emergency brake on like I've done no tellin' how many times. Now "Lily" has a lot of surface area so when the winds blowin' it's like trying to dock a sailboat with the sails up. Whenever I do this, Lane always asks if she can help but me being so hard headed I always say, "No thanks."

So I cranked "Lily" up and started linin' her up to get on the trailer, well the wind was blowing straight up Scipio Creek really hard and I was having a time controllin' her and gettin' her lined up but I finally did and everything was perfect, almost snug but not quite. So, I gave her a little goose and when I did my truck jumped out of gear and here she came rolling down the boat ramp toward me. You can't image a worse helpless, sinking feeling, but I was able to brace my truck with my boat and hold her steady until a gust got me and I knocked out my back window, then I knew I was done for and my Land Cruiser was headed for the bottom of the creek.

When, lo and behold, out of nowhere came these three guys who got in the water, secured my truck, then pulled my truck and trailer out with their truck, unhooked my trailer and towed my truck to my yard, came back hooked up my trailer with their truck and pulled out "Lily." Of course they wouldn't let me do anything for them and they came back by my house three times just to see if I was OK, they weren't worried about my equipment they were concerned about me.

Hey, that's the way it is around here, everybody looks after each other, if you need help you don't have to ask. What a blessing for me that Larry Segree and his crew were working on their shrimp boat at the Mill Pond when I needed help.

By the way, I got a 1985 Land Cruiser and it's better than the one I sunk. My trucks keep getting older and better, but, hey, so do I.

Your better,
Capt. Gill

Two Alligator Point variances approved

On June 16, county commissioners unanimously approved two variances recommended by the Board of Adjustments both at Alligator Point.

The first was a request to construct a single family dwelling 15 feet into the front setback line off of Fiesta Drive on property described as Lot 57, Holiday Beach, Unit 1, Alligator Point. The requested variance allowed owner Daniel Scheer to avoid encroaching on wetlands.

Saturday movie at Camp Gordon Johnston

The film "Biloxi Blues" will be shown Saturday morning at the Camp Gordon Johnston World War II museum in Carrabelle.

Biloxi Blues was the second of playwright Neil Simon's semi-autobiographical trilogy (No. 1 was Brighton Beach Memoirs; No. 3 was Broadway Bound). Matthew Broderick stars as Simon's alter ego Eugene Morris Jerome, who is drafted and shipped off to boot camp in Biloxi, Missi., in the waning days of World War II.

The story begins as 20-year-old Jerome, from Brooklyn, is sent to Biloxi for basic training. There he meets a diverse assortment of soldiers, including the gentle intelligent Arnold Epstein (Corey Parker), the play's central figure. The piece portrays Epstein's struggle for power with middle-aged, hard-drinking platoon leader Sgt. Merwin J. Toomey (Christopher Walken). In the play's most memorable scene, Epstein manages to force Toomey to perform 200 pushups in front of the platoon.

The film will be shown at 10:15 a.m. Saturday, June 28, at the museum, 1001 Gray Ave. in Carrabelle. Free popcorn will be available. Entry by donation and appreciated

The second was a request was to construct a single family dwelling 13 feet into the front setback line off of Alligator Drive on property at 1237 Alligator Drive. The variance allows owner Leenette McMillan to avoid encroaching on the dunes.

McMillan resigns from hospital board

At the June 16 meeting, Director of Administrative Services Alan Pierce told commissioners that Homer McMillan of Carrabelle resigned from the Hospital Advisory Board. McMillan was appointed out of Commissioner William Massey's district.

Massey said he had two possible replacements and was waiting to hear from them.

Speed signs for Las Brisas

At the June 16 county meeting, commissioners instructed Superintendent of Public Works Howard Nabors to install 25-mph speed limit signs in the Las Brisas community in Eastpoint.

Residents requested the signs as a method of calming traffic in the development.
