Lionfish café tonight at tapas bar

The Apalachicola National Estuarine Research Reserve will present "Sci-Cafe: The Lionfish Invasion" from 5:30-7:30 p.m. today, Aug. 14, at Tamara's Tapas Bar, 73 Market St. in Apalachicola.

The event features Meaghan Faletti, from the Florida Fish & Wildlife Conservation Commission's Lionfish Control Action Team, and Apalachicola fishing guide Grayson Shepard. Admission is free, but please register in advance by contacting Margo Posten at Margaret.Posten@dep.state.fl.us or 670-7719. Lionfish will be prepared for sampling. There will also be a "how to clean a lionfish" demonstration.

Lionfish have spread throughout the Gulf of Mexico, and with virtually no predators, they are devastating marine habitats. Come learn more about the biology, population status, the threat posed to commercial and recreational fishing, and what can be done.

Festival of Ice this weekend

The Water Street Festival of Ice continues from 6-8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 15, as author and ice expert Ellie Morris presents a talk at Apalachicola's Center for History, Culture and Art about the impact the introduction of ice had on early North Florida development.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 16, the town celebrates Dr. John Gorrie's induction into the Florida Hall of Inventors with a proclamation from Apalachicola Mayor Van Johnson and ceremonial champagne toast. Ice carving, snow cones and music will follow at the John Gorrie Museum, at 46 Sixth St.

County requests senior center audit

By LOIS SWOBODA

At their regular Aug. 5 meeting, county commissioners called for an independent audit of the Franklin County Senior Citizens Council on the county's east end, the governing body for the Franklin County Senior Citizens Center.

"I've had a lot of concerns from people," said Chairman Cheryl Sanders, who introduced the discussion. "Sometimes we have to bring things to the front. I feel I would be remiss not to do it."

She said the county had budgeted for the senior center, with the required 2 percent reduction. "I have had some concerns and complaints from the public that they're not doing what they told the board they would do for the amount of allocation of money that they have received," Sanders said.

"I don't have a bone to pick with anybody. I think in the interest of things, it would be best for us to request an audit of the Franklin County Senior Citizens Council and have it done before Oct. 1 so we can see where the money's going to. I would like to see the county auditor, Mr. Ralph Roberson and his group do the audit," she said.

Commissioner William Massey, whose motion to request an independent audit by Roberson and Associates was approved unanimously, suggested money was missing. "There's a lot of money gone," he said. "I'd like to have all the receipts for the roof and everything they spend money on. There was $68,000 in

More than 100 people got a peek at the future Aug. 7 when the Gulf Unmanned System Center (GUSC) had an open house.

The new Carrabelle-based firm welcomed visitors in grand style. The activities centered on three drone-manufacturing firms that came to demonstrate their products.

An unmanned system, or drone, is an air, water or land craft that operates remotely without a pilot.

The term "drone" was coined by the U.S. military. In 1935, the British had developed an early airborne unmanned system, the de Havilland Queen Bee, for use in target practice. American engineers copied the machine and dubbed it the drone, male equivalent of a

County renews TDC staff contracts

By DAVID ADLERSTEIN
653-8894 | @ApalachTimes
dadlerstein@starfl.com

A split county commission last week approved by a 3-2 vote re-hiring for another year the four leading service providers for the Tourist Development Council, including the administrator, Curt Blair.

With Commissioners Noah Lockley and Smokey Parrish dissenting, the county commission Aug. 5 OK'd contracts with 2K Web Group, which handles internet marketing and the TDC website; Bay Media Services, which does marketing and design; Forgotten Coast TV Inc., which handles local television programming; and Allyn Associates Inc., which handles administration.

After the vote, Parrish made clear his objection was limited to the administrative services contract. "I'm not opposed to the service contracts other than the administration," he said. "I think the TDC can save $100,000 and re-allocate the money to more important priorities if we brought that in-house."

Lockley opposed re-awarding all four contracts without a formal bid process. His criticism came after Commissioner Pinki Jackel pushed for approval of the contracts.

Before voting on the staff hirings, the commissioners unanimously approved awarding $120,000 in sustaining grants to seven area nonprofits.

Sustaining grants of $20,000 were given for next year to the Dixie Theatre; Apalachicola's Raney

County ordinance targets island beach trash

By LOIS SWOBODA
653-1819 | @ApalachTimes
lswoboda@starfl.com

After three public hearings and much discussion, Franklin County now has a law governing debris left unattended on St. George Island beach.

At the Aug. 5 county meeting, commissioners voted 4-1 to pass the "Leave No Trace" ordinance, which creates rules about beach debris. Commissioner Noah Lockley opposed.

The main purpose of the law is to protect endangered sea turtles that nest on island beaches, but human safety and aesthetics are also factors in creating the new rules.

The new ordinance drew widespread attention. USA Today ran a news brief to announce it, and a chat room about the topic appeared on the popular travel-oriented webpage TripAdvisor.com almost immediately after the law passed. One post warned, "This will not end well!" but eight other postings applauded the ordinance.

As the county hearing began, County Planner Alan Pierce displayed an online petition with more than 1,100 signatures collected in support of the ordinance. The packet presented to commissioners included photos of clutter on the beach.

The current version applies only to public beaches on St. George Island. County Attorney Michael Shuler explained the terms of the new law.

"At this point, the main issue is tourists on St. George Island," he said. "There was not a consensus from the public or the board on whether we should include both public and private property. This is a compromise so we can have an ordinance with the best shot of passing. We can always come back and you can expand it or contract it and amend it in whatever fashion the public and board think is appropriate."

The law, which took effect upon passage, stipulates that year round, between 7 p.m. and 9 a.m., all equipment must be moved from the sandy portion of the beach to the edge of beachfront vegetation or the toe of the dunes. Unattended holes also must be filled in. Anything left on the beach during prohibited hours will be tagged, confiscated and destroyed at the county landfill.

Shuler said during an initial educational phase of enforcement, there would be two tags posted on material in violation. A county employee will place a yellow warning tag on debris, and after an as-yet undetermined period of time, the tag will be replaced by a red one. If a county follow-up crew finds the debris still in violation, it will be confiscated.

Collection crews will maintain a log of items collected. The items then will be transported to the landfill, where they will be weighed and destroyed.

Once an item is collected, it will not be returned to the owner. Shuler said this policy is largely because of the difficulty of determining who owns items that carry no identifying tags.

Shuler said a widely discussed, important issue was how to deal with businesses on the public beach. Some businesses own property adjacent to the beach, and others are on the public beach but own no property.

Under the new ordinance, all beach businesses must obtain a permit from the planning and building office defining the area where they can make transactions.

Companies renting beach equipment are responsible for making sure the beach is clear of their products and other equipment during hours mandated by the ordinance. Rented equipment will be confiscated and destroyed if it is in violation.

Lockley expressed concern visitors might not understand the law or won't want to remove their equipment from the beach every night.

Pierce said most Panhandle counties have passed a similar ordinance, and many visitors will have encountered beach debris laws elsewhere.

Shuler said the ordinance would be enforced by county employees, including parks and recreation and sheriff's deputies.

Lockley said the St. George Island Turtle Patrol, a volunteer organization, already tags beach debris. "How will they tell the tags apart?" he asked.

Shuler suggested the turtle volunteers be asked to stop tagging beach debris.

Commissioner Pinki Jackel said a website should be created to inform the public about the ordinance. She suggested money from a fund awarded by U.S. Fish and Wildlife could be used both to educate visitors and to pay for a part-time enforcement officer for six months. She also said printed information could be provided to vacation rental companies and visitor centers.

Commissioner Smokey Parrish asked how enforcement would be paid for when the grant money is depleted. "In my opinion, it should come from TDC (Tourist Development Council) funds to pick up after the visitors and people we've asked to come here and spend their dollars," he said. "I don't think the taxpayers ought to have to fund that."

In a telephone interview, Pierce said the Bay County TDC is funding educational materials and staff to support its beach debris program.

Parrish warned that the county must take care not to offend visitors. "We don't want to discourage our tourists from coming to our area," he said. "They make a huge economic impact. We need diversification in our economy."

Pierce has been charged with creating signs for rental homes and designated beach walkovers. Signs for rental properties will incorporate information about the county's turtle lighting ordinance in addition to the new beach debris ordinance.

Before the final vote, several island residents commented on the proposed law. Some opposed it.

"Everybody wants to pass feel-good legislation, but I don't think government needs to be involved in this," said Mason Bean, past president of the St. George Island Civic Club. "I don't know how the county could afford it."

"The answer is education. Trash used to be our biggest problem. It still is, but more people are picking up after themselves, and it's getting better. These tourists come back year after year, and it will get better," Bean said. "Every time we pass more rules and more government, we lose a little more freedom." Rose Drye, wife of Bruce Drye, the St. George Island turtle permit holder, said, "I have been a fulltime island resident for 35 years. I work with the turtle volunteers. I walk the beach every morning for six months out of the year. I have seen the disrupted nesting activity. I have seen turtle hatchlings that have been trapped in people's possessions and died."

"You have before you an internet petition with almost 1,200 signatures from a wide cross-section of people supporting the ordinance," she said. "It's not just the turtles; it's a matter of public safety. People fall into the holes and trip over the guidewires and walk into volleyball nets and they get hurt."

"This is the most visible beach on the island. We want to make a good impression. People want beauty when they come here."

After the ordinance passed, Steve Harris, a member of the board of directors of the St. George Plantation, said an attorney is in the process of amending the Plantation's rules to reflect the county's new beach debris ordinance.

House Museum, which is administered by the Apalachicola Area Historical Society; the Carrabelle Lighthouse Association, which oversees the Crooked River Lighthouse; the Camp Gordon Johnston Museum; and the St. George Lighthouse Association.

Grants of $10,000 were presented to the Apalachicola Center of History, Culture and the Arts, and the Carrabelle History Museum.

Diana Prickett, representing the TDC board, said the only change to the grants for next year was that organizations had to be able to match at least half of the grant, so that for those receiving $20,000, this "means they have to have at $10,000 extra income coming in," she said.

Prickett said all seven organizations said they could meet that requirement. "Hopefully, if the 2 percent referendum goes through, we can look at it a little differently and maybe come up with something different," she said.

Commissioners plan to place a referendum on the November ballot that, if approved by voters, would double the bed tax to 4 percent and bring in more than $900,000 estimated additional revenue per year to TDC coffers.

Jackel then moved, and Commissioner William Massey seconded, for approval of the four service contracts, and dissension began, including questions from Clerk of Courts Marcia Johnson about the timing of the move.

Prickett said the TDC on Aug. 1 unanimously approved recommending the four contracts. "Everything's been going good with everybody, and nobody has come to us to say they're interested in bidding on any of the service agreements," she said. "We figured it seemed to be going good, we'd just leave it like it is for another year."

Lockley did not support the move. "I think I want the administration to go out for bids," he said. "Y'all approving stuff by the TDC board. The public got some interest in this," he said. "They ought to be able to know when these contracts are coming up and be able to either file on them or whatever they want to do. You just can't go by the (TDC) board."

Prickett said the contracts "come due this time every year, and we've never had anybody show up at our meetings that's showed any interest in any of these different service contracts."

Lockley said "they're still supposed to be advertised and given a chance. If need be they go forward, and not automatically go through."

DIANA PRICKETT
TDC board

Jackel asked for a legal opinion from County Attorney Michael Shuler, who said though bids are required on matters of "tangible personal property" in excess of $10,000, there is no county policy on service contracts.

"You've done it on a case-by-case basis," he said.

Johnson said it appeared the Allyn contract had been changed, but Jackel said the terms of the existing contract remained in place. "That contract was pulled and is not being used," Jackel said. "This is the same contract from last year."

Johnson said during the current fiscal year, the contract had an estimated range for billable hours estimated to be between 100 and 160 per month. "During the year, those were exceeded, and the board needed a budget amendment," she said.

Johnson asked for a stipulation that the annual budgeted amount of $90,000 not be exceeded. "That's it, unless they come back to you," she said.

Jackel agreed to amend her motion to put a ceiling on the contract, which calls for payment at a rate of $42 per billable hour.

Johnson also brought up the issue of where the TDC administrator presently resides and what his announced plans had been.

"My understanding was that Curt Blair had said he was stepping down," Johnson said. "He's not living in Franklin County, is he right now? Why do we want to extend the contract, to someone who's not living in Franklin County at this point in time? He's not here (at this meeting). Is he going to be able to do what the TDC requires when he's not even in town?"

Jackel replied that "we certainly haven't seen any lack of service provided from him in recent months. He would be here today except he's at a continuing education class the TDC recommended for marketing training. It's the second or third year of a three-year course."

Prickett clarified that Blair "did say that he was not going to renew. What he told us at the (Aug. 1) meeting was that so many people had come to him and said 'Please, don't stop doing it. You're doing a good job, please think about continuing.' He said so many people came to him and asked him to continue for one more year."

Johnson noted that it seemed the board was taking quick action, with only a few days review.

"Last year, we didn't even look at these contracts until the middle meeting in September," she said. "You've got time. You don't have to act today if you don't want to. We didn't get these materials last week. You don't have to make a decision today if you feel pressured."

The TDC's regularly scheduled meeting for Aug. 6 had been moved to Aug. 4. In pressing for a vote on her motion, Jackel said that the TDC had voted unanimously at its meeting the day before. "This comes with their full recommendations, and we all discussed it lengthily yesterday, and there were no negative comments about any of the contracts whatsoever," she said.

Lockley said though some on the TDC board believe Blair has done a good job, "there's other people think he's not. I think they should have a chance to put in their application. Ain't no need to making the thing look crooked."

The board passed the motion, and afterward, Massey asked Prickett whether she had heard of interest in the contracts from anyone.

"I had somebody I thought was going to call you," he said. Prickett said no one had come forward.

ELECT PAMELA

MARSHALL FOR FRANKLIN COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD DISTRICT 2

Hello! My name is Pamela Marshall and I am running for Franklin County School Board District 2.

I am not a politician, but I feel I am qualified to hold this office because I have 32 years in the Franklin County school system. I know what works and what needs to be changed. I came to Carrabelle in 1980 fresh out of Troy State University. I fell in love with the area and the people and continued teaching here until my retirement in 2013. I am married to Mike Marshall and have four children, two of whom graduated from our school system. My son, Curt Chisholm, graduated from Florida State University and is currently employed by the Leon County Property Appraisers office. My Daughter, Drue Chisholm, is currently enrolled at Tallahassee Community College and plans to attend FSU as well. Currently, I help my husband, Mike, with our small business in Carrabelle.

My Concerns:
Students and teachers must come FIRST!

Discipline:
No student or teacher should feel unsafe or be unable to focus because of discipline problems.

The ARTS:
We must support the Arts! Art, Drama, & Music need to be brought back to our school in all grades.

Vocation Classes:
We also need to implement more vocational classes. All students are not interested in pursuing a college degree and should be offered courses on our campus that would help them find a well paying job after graduation.

You've entrusted me for 32 years with your most precious gift, your children.
Now, entrust me with their future and the future of our schools.

queen bee. The day began at the corporate headquarters at 206 St. James Ave. N.W., where CEO Bruce McCormack greeted his guests and gave an overview of his plans and progress. The facility in downtown Carrabelle, the former Gulf State Community Bank, was purchased in June.

GUSC will provide a venue for commercial manufacturers to test small robot drones, weighing less than 55 pounds, on land, water and air. McCormack said eventually, the firm also will provide support for manufacture and marketing of unmanned systems.

"Unmanned drones have developed further and faster and will become a major economic influence over the next decade," he said.

A swimming drone for treasure hunting

After the opening presentation, visitors crossed U.S. 98 to witness a demonstration of the VideoRay by David Copenhagen, of IPS NexGen.

VideoRay, a swimming drone that can be fitted with sonar, cameras, grabbing devices and cutters, also can drive along the surface of a boat's hull to inspect it. The device has been used to inspect bridges, underwater cables and pipelines, and could be deployed to search for mines or to seek submerged bodies, vessels or treasure. Copenhagen said one of the newest and most popular applications is the detection of submerged petroleum.

VideoRay has two vertical thrusters and one horizontal thruster. It is tethered to a 1,000-foot cord, which supplies power to the robot and transmits data back to the control center, where it can be viewed or transferred to a remote connection. The buoyancy of both the robot and cable can be adjusted for salt or fresh water and the type of work to be performed. Onboard lamps produce 3600 lumens of light, but with sonar, can operate in zero visibility.

VideoRay can lift up to 60 pounds with its thrusters; objects weighing up to 200 pounds can be clamped and manually dragged to the surface using the tether.

VideoRay is piloted from the surface using a simple set of controls including a joystick. The basic unit sells for about $40,000 or about $80,000 fitted with sonar. Copenhagen said more than 2,500 VideoRays are already in use.

After the demonstration of underwater technology, the group, using about 60 vehicles, caravanned to the operations center on John McInnis Road under the watchful eye of sheriff's deputies and Carrabelle police who joined forces to make sure demonstrations and transport ran smoothly.

The operations center, built to house the failed GreenSteel Homes manufacturing plant, is 64,000 square feet. When McCormack leased the metal structure from the city, he promised to make repairs and upgrades and the building, which had fallen into disrepair, appeared neat, parking lots cleared and everything inside neat and orderly.

GUSC Technology Vice President Larry Harvey welcomed everyone to the operations center. He said before choosing Carrabelle, he had toured Florida looking for a site for the drone testing facility. He said the "human capital" in Franklin County was important to his choice along with the tremendous support from government and the community.

The three visiting companies, NexGen, HoverFly and Prioria, gave presentations of their products and the future of drone technology.

NexGen presenters said their equipment is designed to facilitate synergistic operations using a combination of airborne, land-based and aquatic robots that can communicate through a central command center. NexGen also manufactures a mobile command center, housed in a trailer.

HoverFly manufactures both tethered and free-flying, aerial drones. CEO Al Ducharme is an electronic engineer. His tethered drones have a 148-foot cord that supplies power and carries data back to central control. They remain below the 150-foot altitude where they would be required to carry lights. A tethered drone also has the advantage of a constant power supply, so there is no need to carry fuel. If the tether breaks, power is lost, and the drone will not fly away and be lost. Ducharme said tethered drones could be attached to a tractor or other vehicle for use in precision agriculture or other large area applications.

Tethered vs. untethered drones

At the operations center, Ducharme demonstrated the LiveSky drone, a tethered aerial unmanned system for surveillance, public safety, agriculture or inspection. It has a control system similar to that of VideoRay. Ducharme said no training is required to operate LiveSky.

As the crowd watched, he launched it to hover first at 5 feet; then 10 and then up to the full length of a 40-foot tether. The rotary-wing drone appeared stable as it hovered. Then, without warning, it dipped in the direction of the operations center. Ducharme was able to stop its descent and stabilize it. He said he was having trouble with the unit's built-in GPS receiver, possibly because of sunspot activity. Again, without warning, the drone suddenly dove away from the operations center and towards a wetland. The motion was so violent, the tether snapped and the engine shut down. Employees of GUSC quickly retrieved the fallen drone, which suffered only minor cosmetic damage.

"That's what we are here to do, test drones and perfect the technology," McCormack said later. Ducharme said the LiveSky unit is a prototype of a design that is ready for commercial production.

Bryan Franker said his company, Prioria, specializes in both rotary and fixed-wing aircraft that operate without a tether. Prioria's drones would be deployed in surveillance, emergency management, search and rescue, wildfire control and hazardous material monitoring, mapping, utility and railroad inspection and land management.

Franker brought along a number of designs including the Maveric, an untethered aerial drone that weighs less than 3 pounds and folds into a case the size of a mailing tube. He said about 1,500 of the units are in use worldwide. The Maveric, designed to be carried by a soldier or other operator, unfolds automatically when withdrawn from the case and is literally thrown into flight. It is battery-operated and has a range of 6 to 9 miles.

Training standards under consideration

Everyone agreed one of the biggest problems facing manufacturers of free-flying aerial drones is what kind of training should be required for operators. The fear is a drone could collide with a manned aircraft. Frank Woodward of NexGen said there have been many near misses.

In the U.S., free-flying drones may only be operated by public safety organizations or universities. Operators must obtain a Certificate of Authorization (COA) from the Federal Aviation Administration specifying where, when and how the drone may be used. A COA normally takes 90 to 120 days to secure.

What training should be required to operate a free-flying drone commercially is a gray area. Woodward said most people operating them now have military training, and when the FAA specifies training guidelines, it is likely some operators, especially those using larger unmanned aircraft, will need a pilot's license.

Ducharme said training of operators for public safety agencies can take one or two years. "It's a deal killer," he said.

NexGen's Copenhagen said industry leaders are working with the FAA to develop training guidelines that are reasonable but keep everyone safe.

Operators of tethered flying drones are not required to have any training, because these are not legally considered to be aircraft.

Ducharme said the huge GUSC operations center could be a valuable asset for developing untethered aerial drones and training operators because the craft could legally be flown within the structure.

Visitors to GUSC seemed pleased by Carrabelle's newest business. "I am impressed and very excited," City Commissioner Charlotte Schneider said. "I'm looking forward to this creating even more jobs. A ninth-grader in school now will have an incentive to stay in and study hard."

Commissioner Brenda LaPaz echoed her praise. "The building looks fabulous," she said. "I am excited about this."

David Butler, who chairs the city's Economic Development Council, said, "I think it has potential. They are planting seeds here, and we are going to put the water on them."

McCormack said GUSC has fulfilled its promise to the city to employ 10 Franklin County residents full-time.

An organization chart provided to the press shows three GUSC vice presidents: Mark Milliken, business development; Larry Harvey, technology; and Maria Peterson, corporate relations. Carrabelle resident Lisa Spooner has been tapped as chief financial officer. In addition, there are 11 positions including an administrative assistant who has not been hired. Clint Ivey heads up sales. Jeff Wren is range operations manager. Jason Millender is facilities manager, and Sissy Ivey is human resources director. Gregory Newman is in charge of aerial operations. Camron Brownell is senior range technician, and Heather Bishop is educational director. Monty Vogue and Patrick Fleming are both listed as operations facility staff, and Jeff Watts is proposed operations facility instructor.

A training room with computer terminals has been installed on the second floor of the headquarters building, and all GUSC employees are enrolled in an online course in industrial operations offered by Gulf Coast State College. The group meets for class from 6-10 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday. The class is paid for by GUSC, and students obtain regular credit hours for the study.

Next, employees will receive six weeks of training in fundamentals of unmanned systems from civil engineer John Watts, who will travel to Franklin County. McCormack said after that course, Sea School of Panama City will offer captain's training in the GUSC classroom. That course will be opened to the public. At least 10 students are needed. Interested parties should contact Sea School at www.seaschool.com.

Re-elect

for School Board

It has been a pleasure and honor to serve the children of Franklin County the past thirty four years. The past 14 years has been on the Franklin County School Board. Many good things have happened to our school system and I am proud to have been a leader in their development. I feel my service and dedication is worthy of re-election and I ask the voters of District Two to support me in that endeavor.

When I ran for election 14 years ago I offered a platform of simple priorities. I am glad to say that all were accomplished. Some of those priorities were as follows.

INCREASED DISCIPLINE: Among numerous other things, we were the first public school system in Florida to require school uniforms.

FREE LUNCHES: Hungry children do not learn well. I asked for free lunches for all children. Franklin County Schools were the first in Florida to provide quality free breakfast and lunches for all students. This was done without an increase in taxes or reducing the operating budget.

BETTER LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES: After over thirty years of consolidation hassling, Franklin County has the finest k-12 facility in the State. Along with the new facility we provided numerous new opportunities in the curriculum and extra-curricular activities.

INCREASED PAY: I initiated the procedures that provided a major salary increase for all employees. This was done without a tax increase.

REDUCE PROPERTY TAXES WHENEVER POSSIBLE: We have the lowest millage rate in the State.

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATOR EXPERIENCE: I felt we needed an educator's experience on the Board. My experience was paramount in the design of the new school. I am presently the only professional educator on the Board.

If re-elected, I promise to continue to serve the best interests of all our children.

Thank you for your support.

Market downturns, soup lines and Jimmy Braddock

MARGARET R. McDOWELL
Arbor Outlook

"It's a hard way to find out ... that trouble is real ..." from "Hickory Wind" as recorded by The Byrds

A character's movie arc is how an actor changes and evolves during a film. The most common arc is one that features a character who rises quickly to the top, takes a tumble, then slowly regains stature, until he eventually reaches his zenith as credits roll. Or at least finishes the film in a better position than when he started.

Boxing is the last sport I would ever watch, either televised or in person. But minus the pugilism, I love the movie "Cinderella Man." Released in 2005, starring Russell Crowe, Renee Zellweger and Paul Giamatti, and directed by Ron Howard, the film depicts the incredible true story of boxer James J. Braddock.

Professionally successful and personally wealthy, Braddock loses his life savings and home during the Great Depression. Then a series of bad breaks, including a broken hand, render him completely penniless. Braddock accepts government relief and at one low juncture, appears hat in hand to the boxing commission to ask for a handout. The reason? He needs $37 to get the lights and heat turned back on in the family's one-room, cold water flat in New Jersey. Eventually Braddock's hand heals, and the "Popular Battler" claws his way back, regains the heavyweight title, and rebuilds his family's personal balance sheet.

Market movements, like the arcs of our favorite film figures, do not trend upward without interruption. Sometimes markets are hit with a roundhouse right and temporarily stumble. And this is a good thing. Markets which trend upward continually without ceasing beget securities which become overvalued. Then these same markets are indeed more vulnerable to a drastic correction.

Markets tumbled on July 31, when the S&P 500 lost just less than 2 percent in one day. Several factors converged: wage increases, the Argentine default controversy, and a 4 percent second quarter growth report (that's a good thing, of course, but might indicate the Federal Reserve will end its artificial stimulation sooner than expected; thus, the negative effects on markets). Wage increases certainly are also good news for wage earners, but might foretell pressure to raise interest rates to offset potential inflation. So again, that was perceived as a negative for markets.

A report in The Wall Street Journal stated recently that market downturns have served as a buying opportunity for long-term investors, but that many short-term investors were selling.

These market dips also remind us that like the arc of our favorite movie characters, investments do not continually increase in value unabated; that the most important thing is to be in a better place when you finish your investing process than you were at the beginning. Just like Jimmy Braddock.

Teachers explore insight into poverty on Day 1

By Elinor Mount-Simmons
Special to the Times

This past Monday, bright and early in the morning, about 110 faculty and staff members of Franklin County School heeded the ringing of the school bell at 8 a.m. and eagerly gathered in the school's cafetorium to kick off a brand new and exciting school year.

After briefly greeting familiar faces, welcoming new ones, and receiving a welcoming message from Principal Kris Bray and Assistant Principal Harolyn Walker, we enjoyed a delicious breakfast prepared by the Franklin County Teacher's Association, a meal this professional organization under the leadership of Catherine Wood, has graciously offered for several years now.

With several new faculty members joining the Seahawk Family, as well as most of the veteran faculty and staff members not having seen each other since the close of the previous school year, Laura King, former elementary teacher and now our new intervention specialist, led us in a special welcoming activity. Through this icebreaker, we met and welcomed three new elementary teachers Carol Allen, first grade; Christy Thompson, second grade; and Helen Wilson, third grade.

In middle school, we've added Kendyl Hardy, eighth grade science, Kati Hathcock, eighth grade language arts, as well as Roy Carroll, math. This trio is no stranger to the Franklin County School district; Hardy is a 2010 FCS graduate, Hathcock graduated from the Apalachicola High School in 2007, and Carroll previously was a district-level employee and middle school math teacher just a couple years ago.

When Hardy was asked how it felt to return as an employee to a school she graduated from only four years ago, she said it was "surreal, but exciting" and she is really looking forward to it all. Hardy also commented that it is "a lot different teaching alongside teachers who were her teachers a few years ago" but I have no doubt that she, Hathcock and all the novice faculty members will be a fabulous addition to the Seahawk faculty and staff.

On the high school level, additions include James Chapman, math and science; Bruce Hubbs, ESE (Exceptional Student Education); Jason Luquis, Spanish; and Keilan McWhorter, science. Hardy and Hathcock will also be doing double-duty and handle some high school classes, too, with Hardy teaching ninth grade science and Hathcock teaching ninth grade language arts. The FCS returnees have already embraced the new Seahawks, and at the Meet & Greet event this Thursday afternoon, August 14 from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., you can do so, too.

One big change for the 2014-15 school year is the complete closure of the Franklin County Learning Center and the moving of its last tenants, the Alternative School and the HeadStart program, to the main campus. So for the first time since the Franklin County School opened for business, all students receiving a traditional public school education in Franklin County will get such on the same campus.

With this change, veteran teacher Angelina Stanley and her trusty aide, Wanda Brannan will now both be on the main campus, with Stanley assigned to the elementary segment. A brand new area for her, Stanley, with more than 20 years of teaching experience, says she is "up to the challenge." Also coming over with this closure is staffer Joy Towns, who will work in the front office area handling a multitude of tasks.

Another veteran teacher embracing a new area is Barbara Lee, long-time high school teacher, who will be working alongside Audrey Gay and Melanie Humble in fifth grade. Lee, who will soon add another grandchild to her personal fold, has worked in several areas as a Franklin County teacher and said of the upcoming year that she is "excited about it and looking forward to a great year."

Several other changes include the expansion of the Credit Recovery Program, which adds Sharon Solomon, David Meyer now handling the Alternative program, Mike Todd working in high school math, Kay Cadwallader leaving pre-K and becoming the elementary reading coach, and Tammy Sasnett, formerly the ESOL (English as a Second Language) leader, returning to pre-K as its director.

Monday, Day 1 of Pre-Planning was spent primarily preparing ourselves for the eager children who will enter our classrooms next week and this was done using several methods. Thanks to tremendous help from Franklin's Promise, one of these preparation methods was a poverty simulation activity, held in the multi-purpose building involving faculty, staff and some administrators. Facilitated by Franklin's Promise staffer Desiree Trest, also a former Seahawk Class of 2009, and utilizing the message derived from well-known author Ruby

Payne's book "A Framework for Understanding Poverty," the activity was an incredibly valuable learning experience that involved role-playing, allowing us to gain significant insight into the lives of some of our children and their families. Although it was pretending on our parts, the exercise gave us a powerful perspective that will help us even more so in our interactions with our students. Joe Taylor, leader of Franklin's Promise, was assisted by members of this organization, as well as other community members and we greatly appreciate him and his team for this wonderful experience, which also included a follow-up debriefing and lunch.

After a day filled with informational meetings on a variety of topics, our official first day back concluded with Afternoon Tea, hosted by Nina Marks, our school superintendent, who was assisted by Debra Fletcher, our culinary department head. Marks and her sister had baked cookies, each iced with a Seahawk logo.

"I am excited about another great year," said Marks. "I think everyone was pleasantly surprised that they returned to a more relaxing day than they've previously had on first days." She further added that "we met and greeted our 10 new hires and they will fit right in with the faculty and staff, enhancing our wonderful Seahawk Family."

Until next week, keep soaring.

CORRECTION

There was an omission in the July 31 Apalachicola/Carrabelle Times standalone photograph "Aman to refurbish Carrabelle monument" about the refinishing of the American flag and eagle statue in Carrabelle's Veteran's Park. In addition to Fred Aman's volunteer work repairing and repainting the statues, Mike Marshall of Marshall's Marine donated more than $200 worth of paint and his crew's time to do the actual painting of the flag.

The wait for St. George Island cut was over

There was a lot going on in the county in August 60 years ago. Everyone was preparing for the county fair to be held September 30. Miss Miriam Edwards was chair of the exhibiting committee and Bill Zorn was general chairman.

A larger tent was ordered due to increased premiums and a separate poultry tent was planned for the first time. The 4-H Club was preparing a poultry show.

Areas of competition included five Japanese persimmons; five-stalks green sugar cane; three-stalks red sugar cane; a display of fresh vegetables not over 3x3 feet square such as greens, peas, carrots, egg plant, okra, etc.; one quart kumquats in a glass jar; one grapefruit; one cushaw; one clear glass jar any variety pickles or relish; one pair pillow cases embroidered; one luncheon set or table cloth, crocheted; one hook rug; cypress knee or driftwood article; single cockerel, single hen; bantams (pairs); one goose; one rabbit.

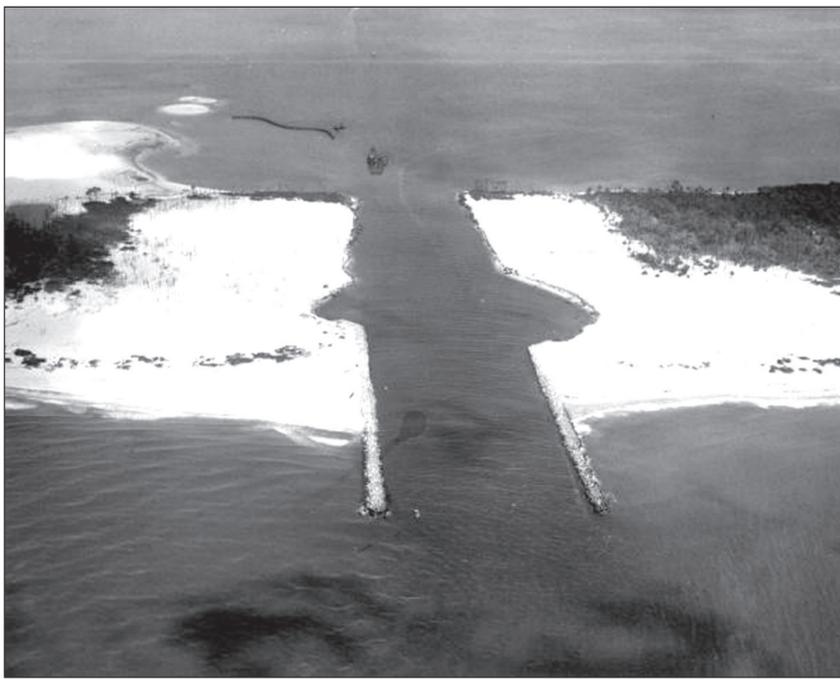

Does anybody remember when the last Franklin County fair took place? If so, please contact the Times at 653-8868 or contact Lois Swoboda at lswoboda@starfl.com.

The following selection of articles from The Times' Aug. 13, 1954 edition should give you a feel for some other things people were thinking about in 1954.

Channel cut through on Wednesday

The cut through St. George Island is thru. Those are the words that this county has been waiting for many years. The McCullough Dredge let the Gulf water into the channel at 11:18 on Tuesday night August 10 with a good array of spectators. Two boatloads of people from this city were there, having gone to the island in boats belonging to Fred Sawyer Jr. and Mannie Brash. However, the dredging is not completed, as they still have to run out into the Gulf approximately 300 feet before the work is finished. This dredging has created a lot of interest in folks hereabout and almost daily, somebody has been on the scene, watching the activities.

However, there are a number of people who cannot get to the island and it is believed that if some boat owner would start an excursion he could make him a profitable sum taking passengers to the island.

Tasso Russo slugged last Saturday night

Last Saturday night, about 9:30, as Tasso Russo entered his home, unknown assailants slugged him on the head, inflicting a gash on his forehead and caused him to have a very badly bruised eye.

It is believed that the motive for the slugging was robbery, but the person or persons who did the work escaped without taking the money from Mr. Russo's person.

Officers investigating the crime arrested three suspects but were later released. Mr. Russo says he has no idea who the persons were.

Too late to classify

Well, it seems that the "Flying Saucer" season is on again. I'm still one of the few individuals that hasn't seen one. Since I last mentioned the subject, I have listened to lectures on the subject, read half a dozen books dealing with the mysterious unidentified objects appearing in the skies throughout the world and watched diligently to no avail.

However, I am convinced that they do exist and believe that sooner or later we will have the answer. A press report from Delray Beach last week tells of flying saucer sightings over the Atlantic.

Getting closer to home, my son-in-law vacationing at the Gulf Beaches reports sighting a strange light in the sky over the Gulf. He is a pretty levelheaded chap and not inclined to go off Half-cocked about anything. He watched the light thinking it might be a star or meteor. It was close and too bright for a star and, unlike a meteor, it traveled across the sky in a horizontal position wobbling as it moved. No sound of any kind could be heard.

In Jacksonville, a good friend of mine, an official of the Florida Greyhound Lines, sighted a weird object traveling over the St. John's River. From Miami comes a report from another reputable official of a radio station of saucers seen in the area.

I have just finished reading "Flying Saucers from Outer Space" written by Major Donald Keyhoe of the U.S. Marine Corps. His amazing book is based on official reports of the U. S. Air force, and the Department of Defense in Washington credits him with being a reasonable accurate reporter who has cooperated effectively with the Air Force in its study of unidentified flying objects.

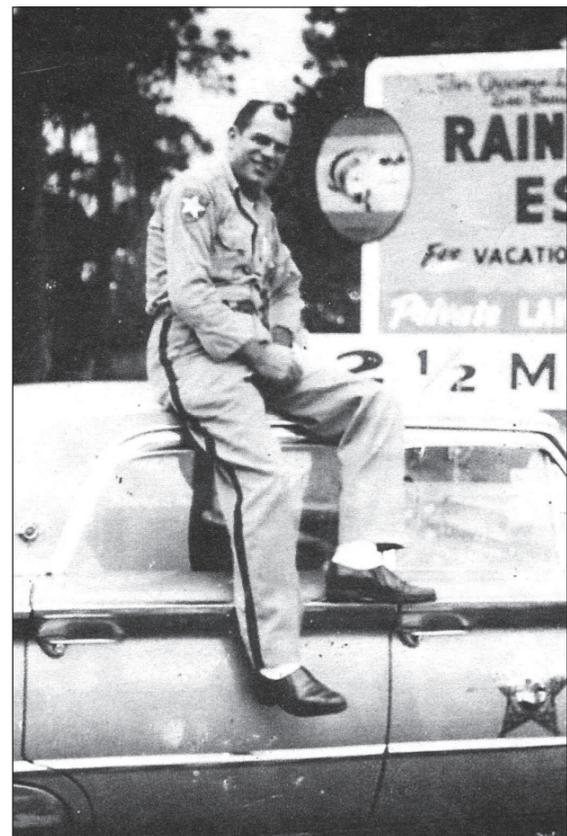

The Air Force and its investigating agency, "Project Bluebook" are aware of Major Keyhoe's conclusion that flying saucers are from another planet and does not deny that this possibility exists. Some of the personnel believe that they may be strange natural phenomenon completely unknown to us but that if the apparently controlled maneuvers reported by many competent observers are correct, then the only remaining explanation is the interplanetary answer.

Hundreds and hundreds of sightings have been reported from every section of the globe. Major Keyhoe has personally contacted and interviewed many of the people responsible for these reports. The pattern is uniform enough to indicate that whatever was seen in the United States, Canada, Australia, France, Korea, Austria, Germany and elsewhere is of a similar nature. The behavior of these flying objects is similar and would indicate that the Earth itself is under careful study and observation by intelligent beings who are concerned with life on this planet.

It is not unreasonable to assume that life exists on other planets and that inhabitants of such planets have advanced in knowledge to a point where they have been able to conquer the problem of space3 travel. It is equally reasonable to assume that before attempting to land or contact us they would gather all possible data before attempting a landing.

It is interesting to note that as far as the United States is concerned, most sightings have occurred over military bases particularly those identified with atomic research activity. This seems to hold true in other countries, indicating that our visitors from outer space are alert to our military activities and are interested in the progress we have made.

It does not appear that those strange visitors are unfriendly; on the contrary, they avoid contact and get out of the way in a hurry when we try to intercept them. They have paced our airlines and military planes on numerous occasions only to speed off at such a rapid rate that pursuit is impossible.

Like you, I don't know the answer, but I am convinced that there is one. It certainly feeds the imagination and I'm sure that it is nothing any of us need be afraid of.

The following week, there was excitement in Carrabelle when a prominent citizen was nearly killed in a freak accident.

Deputy Curley Messer nearly drowns Monday

Deputy sheriff Curley Messer escaped drowning and electrocution Monday in an unusual accident.

Curley was working with an electric drill on the dock when the extension cord dropped into the water thereby shocking him so severely he could not release the drill, and knocked him into the water.

His wife, who was standing nearby, grabbed a stick and knocked the cord from the socket, then lifted his body from the water. He was taken immediately to Tallahassee hospital.

Johnson new office manager of extension

Special to the Times

Jamie Johnson has been hired as the office manager/program assistant with the UF/IFAS Franklin County Extension program.

Johnson has a strong background in the areas of computer technology, software and social media which all are important to the operation of an active, engaged Extension Program. Johnson will be assisting County Extension Director Erik Lovstrand with office and program management, festivals and events and volunteer coordination. She will be a vital part of providing the citizenry of Franklin County with access to the vast array of helpful resources that extension has to offer.

"She just has a great background in technology and computer skills that is really a high priority for the extension service," Lovstrand told county commissioners Aug. 5. "We really need to be involved in aspects of social media I think we have really kind of hit the jackpot with a young person that is motivated and hardworking and seeking a career-type position with the county."

"She took after her daddy," Commissioner William Massey said. "She's a good girl."

If you need assistance with an extension issue don't hesitate to call Johnson in her new position at 653-9337.

Breastfed babies are happier babies

Special to The Times

On Thursday, Aug. 7, the Franklin County Health Department celebrated World Breastfeeding Week. Patricia Rickards, a certified lactation counselor, was on hand to answer questions and share her wisdom.

World Breastfeeding Week, first celebrated in 1992 by the World Alliance for Breastfeeding Action, is observed in more than 120 countries around the world. The World Health Organization and the American Academy of Pediatrics recommend exclusive breastfeeding for the first six months of life and then supplemented breastfeeding for at least one year.

Foods to avoid when breastfeeding include egg whites, French fries and chips, cereals with sugar, cake and cookies, salad dressing, mayonnaise, candy, citrus fruit,

First-time homebuyers workshop Saturday

Special to The Times

The Franklin County Community Development & Land Trust Corp. and The Realtors Association of Franklin and Gulf Counties cordially invite you to attend their annual first time homebuyers workshop.

This year the workshop will be at the Carrabelle library this from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 16. It is free and open to the public. All are welcome.

Carol Barfield, president of the Franklin County Community Development & Land Trust Corp, said because of many credit hurdles the participants encountered at previous workshops, this year's facilitators will include credit counselors from NID Housing Counseling Agency, HUD approved, who will partner with future homeowners and help them with their credit issues, such as preventing foreclosure or foreclosure intervention.

In order to better serve you, we ask that you bring your free credit report with you when you attend the workshop. The credit report must be within 30 days. If you have your own computer, log onto these websites or one of your choosing, www.annualcreditreport.com, this site is recommended by the Federal Trade Commission or <https://www.creditkarma.com>. These sites will give you a free credit report.

If you need help pulling your free credit report, we have partnered with the local libraries and The Realtors Association of Franklin and Gulf Counties to assist you by appointment only. Call one of the numbers below to set up an appointment: Apalachicola Municipal Library, Caty Green, 653-8436; and The Realtors Association, Gloria Salinard, 653-3322.

The Carrabelle and Eastpoint public libraries will be available for computer use from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 14. Call the library in Eastpoint at 670-8151 or the Carrabelle library at 697-2366.

For further information, call Barfield at 653-9224 or Salinard at 653-3322.

District 2 meet-and-greet today

Ahhh, August. The month for family reunions, shopping for school clothes and supplies. For those who can't afford them, please drop something in the donation boxes. And, at the end of the month, the tropics will start getting cranked up, so keep your escape map and your survivor kit handy.

The Republican Party of Franklin County will hold a meet-and-greet all the District 2 candidates today, Aug. 14, at Crooked River Grill at St. James Bay Golf Resort. Things will get underway at 6 p.m. Finger food and cash bar.

Hamburgers are the thing on Friday nights at Camp Gordon Johnston American Legion Post 82. Enjoy the evening with friends and neighbors. Open to the public.

LANARK NEWS
Jim Welsh

Orders taken after 6 p.m. Enjoy!

The place to be seen on Saturday, Aug. 16, is at the Lanark Village Boat Club. A good, full breakfast will be prepared and served by our faithful volunteers. Pancakes, French toast, bacon and sausage, eggs, grits coffee and juice. Yum, yum! Members of the boat club are always happy to prepare and serve. Everyone welcome. You donation of $5 will be collected inside the door.

Saturday, evening, is the Birthday Bash for those having birthdays in August. The party starts at 6 p.m. Fun starts when you come in the door. Finger food, your favorite beverage and music, music, music. The swearing inn of the new officers from all three branches of Post 82 will take place at this time for all to enjoy.

After church on Sunday, Aug. 17, come on over to Chillas Hall and join us for our monthly covered dish. A donation and your hunger pains. Be watchin' for ya and have a great weekend!

Wasn't it great to see and have Father Eddie back with us. Had a great meal after mass. Thanks to all of those who prepared and brought a dish to share. The cake icing was a map of Father's trip, and the cake was very good too.

Pray for eternal peace for Marvin McIntosh and for peace and strength for Becky and family.

Be kind to one another, check in on the sick and housebound and remember, contrary to popular opinion, God's last name is not damn.

Until next time, God bless America, our troops, and the poor, the homeless and the hungry.

Warren Hayward

Mr. Warren S. Hayward passed from this earth 10 years ago on August 14. He was a shrimper for about 30 years and loved working on the water. Mr. Hayward was born in Georgia, but made Apalachicola his home and loved the people of Apalachicola. He was president of the Apalachicola NAACP and worked hard for the rights of all people.

He left one son, Warren Hayward, Jr., and five daughters, Barbara Wilson, of Savannah, Georgia, Jeanette Redmon, of Miami; Dolores Hayward-Croom, of Apalachicola; Warrenetta Key, of Apalachicola; and Clara "Liz" Varner, of Panama City. We miss you, Warren Hayward was my beloved husband, who I will love and miss forever.

Card of THANKS

Tammy Taunton

I've just spent the longest, most confusing and scariest week of my life. I've had to keep talking to myself, over and over, to just breathe. The only thing more overwhelming than the loss of everything was the outpouring of love and support of friends in the community. I almost forgot I was born and raised here in Apalachicola. I have friends on boats, in the swamp, on the poorest side of town, on the richest side of town, and even in people I've never met. I don't think I would have made it without you all. Thank you for everything; 48 years in Franklin County makes you a survivor.

Also, thank God for churchgoing, praying Mommas!

there, and it's gone. (County Planner) Alan (Pierce) and I have gone over permits."

Sanders said "the public is concerned about the forthrightness of the process, and any time the public is concerned, the commission needs to be as well.

"Rather than have a blemish, I'd rather go ahead and just ask them," she said. "That doesn't mean they will do it."

Roberson said Monday he would act on the county's request, but had to not yet taken a look at the details of the assignment. He said the cost would depend on the scope of the audit, and he wanted to make sure "the road's all paved," in terms of approvals and directions, between the county and the private Florida nonprofit corporation.

Its March 2014 filing with the state shows officers of the Franklin County Senior Citizens Council Inc. are Ed Pattillo as president, Sue Reed as vice president and Carolyn Spivey as treasurer. As an eligible nongovernmental organization, they are set to receive $17,683 from the county for the next fiscal year, down 2 percent from $18,043 this year.

"One of the things that I'm concerned about, and I know this for a fact, is that they said they served so many meals a month for the people at x amount of dollars, and I know that there was a month or two months, maybe more, when they didn't serve those meals," Sanders said.

In a telephone interview, Times columnist Jim Welsh, who regularly attends lunch at the Senior Center, said until last May, lunch was served there every Thursday. But in May, he said, the senior citizens council announced that, for the summer, lunches would only be served the first Thursday of each month.

Welsh said the reason given for cutting back on lunches was reduced attendance. He said average attendance at the luncheon had dropped from several dozen to about 15. He also said the price of lunch at the Senior Center has increased from $3 to $5 over the summer.

"Before we go into a new fiscal year, a budget cycle, I would like for that to be cleared up for the public to know that (the Senior Citizens Council is) doing business like they are supposed to or they are not," Sanders said. "Then, that will determine what we do.

"I don't know what this will turn up, but I'm just saying, as a commissioner, given the complaints from the public that I'm getting, I have to do something," she said.

"I say you are fixing to open a can of worms, and somebody's going fishing," Massey said. "I want to know where the money is because they are broke."

In a telephone interview, Pierce said the building permits referred to by Massey were related to a new roof ordered by Pattillo for the Senior Citizens Center, at 201 N.W. Ave. F in Carrabelle. The estimated value given on the permit was $80,000.

On Sept. 26, 2013, Gene Strickland of Lanark Village was issued a building permit to reroof the Senior Citizen's Center. Because he is not a licensed roofer, he was listed as a subcontractor. On the same date, a permit was issued for the signature of the contractor, Dustin Lord of Garrison Design and Construction Inc., a Tallahassee firm.

But the permit was not signed at the time. Pierce said Strickland presented a letter from Garrison when he requested the permits. The letter, not specific about dates, said Strickland was a subcontractor for Garrison.

On Oct. 10, Pattillo signed an agreement to pay Metal Roofing Sales LLC of Tallahassee $30,900 as a deposit on materials to build the roof.

Pierce said Planning and Building began receiving complaints about the quality of the work on the roof. The planning office then contacted Garrison and advised them that as contractor, they should inspect the project. A Garrison spokesperson told them Strickland had only subcontracted on a single job for the licensed roofer and was not acting as a subcontractor on the work at the Senior Center, Pierce said.

On Oct. 17, Pattillo faxed a letter to Zoning Administrator Rachel Ward asking that the stop work order be lifted. The letter named Garrison Design as the primary contractor.

In a letter to Ward dated Oct. 24, Debbie Smith, vice president of finance and administration for Garrison Design, said Garrison would sign the permit for the senior center roof and designated Jenkins Roofing of Tallahassee as the subcontractor.

On Oct. 25, Elliott Jenkins of Jenkins Roofing and Dustin Lord of Garrison Design signed building permits, and Jenkins completed work on the roof.

Dog days redfish

Hot weather, hotter fishing

By FRANK SARGEANT
franksargeant@charter.net

Yep, it's much like fishing in a sauna, except with occasional bolts of lightning thrown in.

But August marks the beginning of the fall redfish run on the west coast, and that makes it well worth deserting the air-conditioning for a few hours to get in on the action.

Most anglers pursue redfish in the 18 to 27 inch slot; these fish are just under spawning size, which is the reason for the upper limit — those which reach adulthood about age 4 become the spawners which renew the population. But the big attraction of slot reds is that they spend much of their time in water anywhere from ankle deep to about 4 feet, making them ideal sight-fishing targets.

"Tailers" are a special attraction; on low tides, reds often tip up to root crabs and shrimp out of the bottom, causing their tails to wave above the surface. Alert anglers can spot a tail at a hundred yards, and this allows them to pole, paddle or wade into range and make a presentation to a visible fish.

Shallow-water reds are extremely wary and it's a test of skill to make the cast accurately, work the lure just right and fool the fish as you watch it, but for many this is the most exciting type of angling. Plastic jerkbaits rigged weedless are the favorite lure for this action, but topwaters and weedless spoons also work well, as do flyrod streamers. Some of the vast flats of the western Panhandle are ideal for this type of action, and the back side of many of the barrier islands all the way from Apalach to Pensacola have good areas.

Good flats typically have lots of turtle grass, with slightly deeper sloughs of grassy area between shallower white sand bars. Fishing is often best on the lowest low tides, which occur on the new and full moons each month. On Panhandle waters, a strong north or northwest wind on a falling tide during one of these strong moon periods is prime time; it pushes the water out and makes for extreme low water where redfish tails are easy to see.

Reds often settle into potholes in the flats and around docks, as well as over rockpiles and wrecks in the open bays, as well, and in these locations live bait is the ticket; a live pinfish or shrimp under a popping cork often draws an instant strike. And some anglers do well with cut threadfins or ladyfish, using pieces of the baitfish both as chum and as bait — reds home in on the scent, particularly when they cruise marshy shorelines on high tide. The Berkley artificial bait known as "Gulp!" also does the job, again through scent attraction — it's a favorite among tournament pros when the fish are hard to fool with artificials.

Preferred tackle for flats reds is spinning gear loaded with 10-pound-test microfiber line; this allows long casts, and the no-stretch fiber gives plenty of power to handle the hard-running drum. An 18-inch length of 20-pound-test fluorocarbon leader will stiffen the connection and prevent the line from tangling the hooks frequently as you work the lure, as braid often does. Flyrodders typically use 8-weight gear and weight-forward floating lines.

Juvenile reds remain inshore pretty much year around, and there's a good fishery in the coastal rivers and creeks of the Panhandle at times from October into early December as fish gather in deeper holes on the first cold fronts of the year — this action is best on live shrimp, or on shrimp-tipped jigs.

ON THE BEACHES

Much larger redfish typically begin to prow the beaches and inlets this month, with the run continuing into October as the adults move inshore to spawn. These are typically fish from 15 to 40 pounds, big bronze giants that are far beyond the legal slot, but that make great gamefish for catch and release.

The fish can be anywhere from right against the sand to out several miles — anglers who walk the beach at dawn and dusk often connect with some of these giants simply by fan casting as they move

PHOTOS BY FRANK SARGEANT | Special to The Times

Juvenile reds are found inshore, in bays and back country, until they're about four years old. This fish is at the age where it is about to mature and move offshore. Below, in shallow flats, reds often "tail" or tip up to expose the tips of tail and dorsal fin as they feed, typically at depths of 12 inches or so.

down the shore, dropping the first cast right in the spindrift at the edge, then working out to deeper water.

Large wobbling plugs or swimbaits are usually a good bet. These are big fish, so lures at least 6 inches long are called for. (I once saw a 40-pounder inhale a 15-inch seatrout on my buddy's Mirrolure so don't be afraid to fish big lures.) They also take big topwaters like the Super Spook at times.

Best gear for handling the fish from the beach is a saltwater duty spinning rig, with a reel in what is known as the 4000 size, capable of holding several hundred yards of 30-pound test microfiber or braided line — the tough, no-stretch braid gives the power needed to control big fish when you can't follow them in a boat.

For shorebound anglers, some areas naturally produce better than others. The beaches for several hundred yards on either side of an inlet are always worth fishing, as is the inlet itself, particularly around jetty rocks. And runouts that form where the wash of the surf pours back into the Gulf can also create feeding areas — look for spits and points, anything that might give the reds a spot to trap bait. Panhandle fishing piers are also fish magnets, and many big reds are caught from them each year.

Big schools of reds also gather just off the beaches from now through fall, and sometimes these gatherings can be enormous, covering several acres. There are so many fish that they literally turn the water red as the sun reflects off their pinkish-red backs, and when you spot one of these aggregations from a boat, it's simply a matter of easing close and throwing any lure or live bait of your choosing into them — hook-ups are instant, and can continue so long as the fish stay near the surface. Heavy tackle is necessary — otherwise the fish run back through the school and the line breaks on the backs of the free-swimming fish.

Some of these fish will also move through the inlets and spawn on the deep edge of flats in the bays in fall, so it's not uncommon for trout and flounder anglers to occasionally get a 40-pound surprise that wrecks their tackle.

RELEASING REDS TO FIGHT AGAIN

Reds are durable fish, and readily survive the handling that goes with catch-and-release fishing. Just remember the usual cautions with fish that are to be released — have long-nosed pliers or hook removers at hand, get the hooks out quickly, leaving the fish in the water if possible, hold her up horizontally for a photo — one hand holding the jaw, the other the tail — and then get her back into the water promptly. Fish that sink to bottom and lie there exhausted can be brought back to life by tapping them lightly with a rod tip — don't leave a worn-out fish upside down on bottom or it will die.

REDFISH ON THE MENU

Reds are excellent table

fare, but like many species they taste best if the skin is removed and the red line cut away before cooking. The usual fillet procedure works fine with them, and the fillets, cut into 3 inch pieces, are delicious dusted with seasoned cornmeal and fried in peanut oil.

For reds near the maximum slot size, cooking "in the shell" is a good option — gut the fish but leave the skin, fillets and head in place. Salt the body cavity, then stuff with fresh-cut oranges or lemons. Wrap the fish in heavy duty aluminum foil and place on a low heat grill. Cook until a fork goes into the thick part of the shoulder easily. This cooking method basically steams the flesh, making it exceptionally delicate and tasty, almost like crab meat. Serve with melted butter and lemon slices.

REDFISH RULES

Florida's redfish regulations for Panhandle waters allow two fish per angler per day between 18 and 27 inches long. Fish must be landed in whole condition and no more than six can be possessed by one person away from the water at one time — which is to say loading your cooler for the trip back to Alabama is a no-no. There's no closed season. Commercial harvest is prohibited.

Inshore/Bay

Inshore fishing has slowed down some due to the extremely hot weather and water temperature's this week. Good fish are being caught in the Shark Hole area using live shrimp and small pin fish for bait.

The bite is slow, however, the new moon and tide changes should have this week looking better for trout and red fish. Flounder have been showing up at the docks lately with good numbers in St. Joe and East Bay so far this month, but most are on the smaller side right now.

King fish are still thick on all near shore and offshore wrecks right now. Slow trolling, drifting, or even night time fishing will all prove to be productive as the water stays hot. Sharks are a huge problem with our fisheries, and we have seen some huge ones this summer on many of our favorite spots. Beach fishing from Indian Pass is sure to be a great place to land a huge shark this week.

Bondarenko, Nordheim and Wiedeman set the pace for this year's St. George Island Sizzler and Fun Run hosted by the Tate's Hell Track Club.

Participants commented that the weather was indeed sizzling this year with temperatures in the 90s and no cloud cover. The race started an hour earlier than usual.

Fourteen runners turned out for the Fun Run, a mile-long warm up to the scorching main event. Daniel Wiedeman, 13, of Wakulla got his first win ever with a time of 6:48 minutes. This was the third ever race for the lanky young runner. Good job Daniel!

The top four runners in the One Mile Fun Run were Daniel Wiedeman; Lindsey Rykard, age 15, 7:16; David Miller, 10, 7:27; and Joseph Wiedeman, 9, 8:10.

More than 220 runners signed up for the Sizzler. This year's youngest runner was 7-year-old James Watson. The oldest competitor in the race was James Varley, 74.

Many were visitors who registered on impulse when they heard about the Sizzler. Not so Polina Bondarenko, 14, of Chicago. Her family planned their vacation so she could compete. Bondarenko said this was her third year running in the Sizzler. She won the women's division with a time of 20:24 and took ninth place overall. She beat her time last year by 1:03 but that was enough.

Bondarenko said she began running competitively at age 5 and frequently competes, but running is not her main athletic focus.

The sleek sophomore is a swimmer and is ranked 20th in the state of Illinois. She began swimming at age 4. Bondarenko said she competes as a swimmer every other weekend.

When she isn't running, swimming or studying, her hobbies are reading and drawing. Her advice to other athletes, "Don't give up.

Amy Hodson, right, presents Carl Nordheim, who took first place in the Sizzler with a time of 18:20, with his trophy.

Keep going and push through."

This year's overall winner with a time of 18:04 was Carl Nordheim, 51, a member of the Atlanta Track Club. This was his third time competing in the Sizzler. He ran here for the first time in 2006 and again in 2010. Nordheim said he began running competitively at 13 years of age. He has competed in roughly 15 races a year for 40 years.

Nordheim said he particularly likes the Sizzler because of the island's flat terrain and the shared meal that follows the competition. "Running is my passion," he said. "My advice to anyone is come out and run it."

The top 10 runners in the 2014 Sizzler were Nordheim; Bryce Cole, 16, 18:22; Joel Piotrowski, 44, Daniel Wiedeman of Wakulla County was ahead of the pack in the Fun Run with a time of 6:48 minutes.

18:42; Albert Smythe, 17, 18:59; Nikita Bondarenko, 19, 19:41; Philip Sura, 44, 19:56; Travis Parks, 18, 19:57; Michael Martinez, 48, 20:12; Polina Bondarenko; and Shawn Logan; 19, 20:34.

In spite of the very hot weather, island Fire Chief Jay Abbott said there were no serious medical problems. The only participant requiring help was a man who followed the route on a recumbent bicycle who became overheated and needed help to stand up at the end of the course.

One reason for the lack of health issues among runners was careful planning and placement of water along the course.

Several volunteers expressed concern that the road was not closed during the meet. Runners had to contend with automobile traffic especially along the stretch of Gorrie Avenue that runs in front of the Blue Parrot and the Buccaneer Inn.

After the last runner crossed the finish line, participants and their companions were treated to a low county boil prepared by Pat Kelly and listened to music provided by Debi Jordan.

The Sizzler is known for its unique ceramic trophies. This year the brightly colored images of a running shoe were created by Anne Eason. Proceeds from the Sizzler and Fun Run benefit the Franklin County Humane Society.

Radford to lead weekly writers forum

The children of Franklin County are anticipating a fresh start of the school year on Aug. 18! It is always exciting for the students to begin another chapter in school life. Adults should also be anticipating having some extra free time on their hands, to learn basic computer skills or to go to a library program.

Local author Dawn Radford is heading up a Writer's Forum for beginning and accomplished writers from 1-2 p.m. Wednesdays through Sept. 17. There is no charge to attend this weekly workshop, and it's a great way to learn how an accomplished author got her start.

Carly Peary from Wilderness Coast Public Libraries will be available to help people with their computer questions and problems at no cost to participants. She will be at the Carrabelle Branch from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 21 and at the Eastpoint Branch from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 28. We also purchased the books "Windows 8 for Dummies" by Andy Rathbone and "Windows 8 For Seniors for Dummies" by Mark Justice Hinton. For those who are totally confused, they might want to check out the book and meet with Carly also. All you need to do to participate is choose an appointment time at either branch. Also on Aug. 21, staff from U.S.

Sen. Marco Rubio's office will be at the Eastpoint Branch. Perhaps you have struggled with the Social Security, Medicare, Veterans Affairs benefits, immigration, the IRS or any federal agency; you can discuss your issues at this time in person! This event will be 2-4:30 p.m. at the Eastpoint Branch.

Family cinema is back and running at the Carrabelle Branch! At 11 a.m. Aug. 23, there will be great seats available and free refreshment to watch a newly released family movie. Don't miss this fun and free event.

Mark your calendars for the "Backyard Beekeeping" workshops coming in September. Whether you are already a beekeeper or you think you might like to try it, come and hear Erik Lovestrand, the extension agent from the University of Florida for Franklin County. Erik will be the speaker at a workshop that will include displays and equipment. Attendees have a chance at winning some honey just by coming to the library. He will be at the Carrabelle Branch at 1 p.m. Sept. 16 and at the Eastpoint Branch at 1 p.m. Sept. 23.

For information or appointment times, call the Eastpoint Branch at 670-8151 or the Carrabelle Branch at 697-2366. For comments or questions, email the director at fcplabirchwell@gmail.com.
