Hearts of Promise Walk and Pancake Breakfast a success

Special to the Times-Advertiser

CHIPLEY — The Hearts of Promise Walk and Pancake Breakfast on Nov. 5 was well attended.

Community members came out early Saturday morning to enjoy pancakes and fellowship at Chipley First Baptist Church. An hour walk was held concurrently across the street at Shivers Park. Walkers enjoyed a brisk fall morning, ending with a drawing for door prizes for all walk participants.

Hearts of Promise is a nonprofit organization that raises funds for research at Children's Hospital Boston to grow valves and arteries using patients' own tissue.

Chipola College student Hillary Saunders came up with the idea for the day's events as part of her Phi Theta Kappa service project. Saunders' goal is to help raise awareness and funds for Hearts of Promise, which was established by her family in 2003 after her cousin, Holly Turner, had her second cardiac surgery at Children's Hospital Boston.

The culmination of Hillary's awareness and fundraising campaign will be a speech by Dr. John Mayer of Children's Hospital Boston about his research to Chipola students and the community at 11 a.m. Nov. 14 in the Chipola College Theatre, and to physicians in the Chipola continuing education building at 6:30 p.m.

Following the presentation, Saunders will bestow Mayer with a check of the proceeds from the breakfast and walk, as well as funds raised from other activities she has been involved in, including presentations to church groups and civic groups, festivals throughout the summer and Beanie Baby and cookbook sales.

Hearts of Promise would like to thank Frank and Carol Kreis (walk co-chairs), Jerry Odom (breakfast chair), the breakfast team, all breakfast attendees, walk participants, corporate sponsors and personal donors who donated time and money to make this event a success. A special thanks to Santa and Mrs. Claus for their visit.

New businesses in Bonifay in time for the holidays

HAPPY CORNER
Hazel Wells Tison

At this time of the year, many of us are thinking about Christmas shopping. Oh!, well! Some of you disgusting people have already done yours, bought them last year at the "After Christmas Sales," have them wrapped, tagged and stored in your perfectly organized closets

But for us mortals who aren't so organized, I want to suggest two new businesses right at home that have many things suitable for gift giving.

Fashion Frenzy is located at South Waukesha and Holmes Ave. Owner Holly Taylor has a variety of Items to please the young and young at heart. She features Ashton Nichole and Austin Alexander jewelry to satisfy your desire for glitz or bling. A dazzling array of hand bags to compliment every outfit including the very popular animal prints are in stock. In addition, kids items such as hand made clothes and hair bows are there for your selection.

Luggage, back packs and diaper bags can be custom embroidered in just a couple of days. Another gift idea includes Village Candles or simply a gift certificate. A lay-away plan is available.

When asked what prompted Holly to open the store, she replied that much of her business is on-line and she needed a store front location in order to handle some of the preferred lines. However, the store has proven to be quite profitable. This hometown girl, the daughter of Emily Isaacs Taylor and granddaughter of Ike and Carol Hutchinson Steverson, is doing alright with her Fashion Frenzy.

Another new business on South Waukesha Street is Bonifay Bargins which opened in mid July at the corner of Brock Ave. When Beth Davis and husband Rob bought the Kelly and Evelyn Swindle home and decided to move from to Lynn Haven to Bonifay, she was a little at "loose ends" in the small town setting. Rob who loves to hunt and is a member of the Gum Creek Hunt Club was quite at home here, however. For awhile, she located at a booth in the Old Town Antiques store. But then her mother-in-law also moved to the home and the two combined their treasures, a need for space arose.

Thus, a new business was born. Bonifay Bargins has a small amount of furniture and many vintage, modern and whimsical items. So far, business has been good. They also offer a lay-away plan.

Christina Geise, Rob's mother was a military wife who lived in Hiwaii for three years and then moved to Tyndel, retired from the naval base in Panama City where Rob still works and looks forward to retiring next year.

He, however, does not plan to be involved in the business. Christina likes to do handwork, but her main passion is singing with Sweet Adelines, the women's barber shop singing group of which our own Margaret Hutchinson is a member.

They all agree that they enjoy the slower pace of things in Bonifay, less traffic, and the warm and friendly people.

Last year, when I wrote about places to shop in Bonifay, I forgot to mention Betty's Boutique, the Doctor's Memorial gift shop. Manned by the Hospital Auxiliary, the little shop has a surprising amount of stylish handbags, scarves, luggage, and other things suitable for gift giving or just treating yourself. Auxiliary members Vonzie Jenkins and Marianne Barton do a great job of purchasing and stocking items to please. You'd hardly expect to go shopping at the hospital, but you might be surprised at what you'd find there.

On Nov. 16 and 17, they will be sponsoring a "Book Fair" where many useful items may be purchased. Thanksgiving dinner will be served on Nov. 16 in the hospital cafeteria and Hospital Foundation members may eat there that day for employee price. (See a Foundation member for how to join.)

Check out these boutiques and shops before traipsing off to Dothan, Panama City or Walmart for your holiday shopping.

And while we are on the topic of the hospital I have to report that our Outbreak (Haunted Hospital) was a phenomenal success averaging over 400 attending each night. We are indebted to the hospital staff, the high drama class with Ricky Ward, Brett Blitch, the Holmes Co. Sheriff's Auxiliary, and too many to name for making it such a success. We couldn't have done it without each of you.

We appreciate your patience as you stood in line and waited. I personally enjoyed the "let's make this a party atmosphere" that everyone exhibited. We are already looking a next years 's event with the idea of making it better.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Keeping orcas in captivity is cruel

Dear Editor:

A recent lawsuit claims that the five orcas currently living in captivity, and who were removed from the wild, violates the 13th Amendment's prohibition of slavery.

The lawsuit has provided fodder for late night television; the suit is indeed novel. However, life in an acoustically dead concrete tank does lead to significant health and longevity abnormalities as a result of their enslaved existence.

As former orca trainers at SeaWorld, my colleague and I worked with Tilikum, Katina, and trainer Dawn Brancheau, who was killed by Tilikum.

We recently released a summary compiling evidence that captivity leads to premature orca death, stress, social tension and poor health. The article can be accessed online at The Orca Project.

Spending their entire lives within tight family groupings, wild-caught orcas have been traumatically extracted from the security, comfort, and mentoring that these groupings provide.

The anxiety and volatility in captive orcas is exacerbated by having no chance of escape. As a result, captive orcas often display aggression or alleviate boredom by biting the steel gates used to separate them, resulting in painfully broken, exposed teeth.

The time has come to evolve beyond keeping orcas in captivity purely for profit and entertainment purposes.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Ventre, MD

Remember our real national debt on Veterans Day

By Fang A. Wong
Special to The Times-Advertiser

Google the term "national debt" and you will quickly receive the search results for millions of websites.

Most deal with the very serious issues of government overspending and the accumulation of more than two centuries of federal deficits. Yet very few bring up the biggest national debt of them all — that which America owes to her veterans. Nov. 11, Veterans Day — marks the perfect opportunity for us to take an historical audit on just how much this nation owes her heroes.

Marine Sgt. Dakota Meyer is one who America owes an enormous debt. Humble by nature, but heroic by deed, Meyer drove a humvee into an Afghan valley that he knew was heavily populated with well-armed enemy insurgents.

Outgunned and outnumbered, Meyer and Staff Sgt. Juan Rodriguez-Chavez made multiple trips to the hot zone, killing insurgents as Meyer manned the turret.

Disregarding serious shrapnel wounds that he received, Meyer left his vehicle several times searching for pinned down comrades and coalition forces.

He found his comrades shot to death, but with the assistance of Army Capt. Will Swenson, Meyer carried their bodies and gear away from the village.

As he received his well-deserved Medal of Honor from President Obama, Meyer requested that his fallen colleagues be remembered.

Our debt to these heroes can never be repaid but our gratitude and respect must last forever.

For many veterans, our nation was important enough to endure long separations from their families, miss the births of their children, freeze in sub-zero temperatures, bake in wild jungles, lose limbs, and, far too often, lose their lives.

Military spouses have had to endure career interruptions, frequent changes of address, and a disproportionate share of parental responsibilities.

The children often had to endure changes in schools, separation from friends and, hardest of all, the uncertainty of whether or not Mom or Dad will live through their next combat mission.

As the leader of our nation's largest veterans service organization, The American Legion, I recently had the opportunity to testify before a joint Congressional committee on Veterans Affairs. I reminded our lawmakers that it is not in the nature of America's warriors to complain. Warriors endure. Warriors make do with less. Warriors finish the job, no matter how hard, no matter what is asked.

Warriors need advocates and that is why The American Legion exists. We are here to serve veterans, their families and our communities. Veterans need each other, but, more importantly, our country needs our veterans.

You cannot fight a war without warriors and while the utopian idea of a society without war is appealing, let us not forget that wars have liberated slaves, stopped genocide and toppled terrorists.

The American Legion shows its support for America's heroes through its Family Support Network, Legacy Scholarship Fund, Operation Comfort Warriors, Temporary Financial Assistance and the National Emergency Fund, just to name a few of our programs.

But you can show your support simply by saying "Thank you" to the next veteran you meet.

You can show your support by hiring a veteran in your workplace, visiting a VA hospital or donating to a veterans program.

Companies should understand that it's smart business to hire veterans, and when members of the Guard and Reserves deploy, it is America's business to ensure that their civilian careers do not suffer.

Homelessness is another issue that affects veterans disproportionately. Too often today's tattered citizen of the street was yesterday's toast-of-the-town in a crisp uniform with rows of shining medals. This is hardly the "thanks of a grateful nation."

We can do better. We must do better.

Fewer than 10 percent of Americans can claim the title "veteran." And while the great military phrase "uncommon valor was a common virtue," has been so often repeated that it risks becoming a cliché, it is no less true.

In 1789 George Washington said, "The willingness with which our young people are likely to serve in any war, no matter how justified, shall be directly proportional as to how they perceive the veterans of earlier wars were treated and appreciated by their country."

We must ask ourselves as a nation, are we serving veterans even half as well as they have served us?

4-H'ers go behind the scenes with local vet

Going behind the scenes at Panhandle Veterinary Services gave Cloverbud 4-H'ers in the Fire Ants 4-H Club an up-close look at a day in the life of a veterinarian. 4-H'ers watched as Dr. Todd Anderson performed surgery on a dog and saw the heartbeat of Stretch, the three legged dog, on an ultrasound. They also listened to the heartbeat of a goat and got to pet Show-Girl, a silkie turken (a cross between a turkey and a chicken).

4-H'ers also learned about safety around dogs and how to "read" a dog's signals. This is a very important lesson for youth to learn, as they are naturally curious about animals, and knowing whether or not it's safe to approach a dog can prevent related injuries. While the 4-H'ers had snacks provided by McDonald's of Chipley, they learned about the variety of jobs available for vets.

The Cloverbuds of the Fire Ants 4-H Club would like to thank Dr. Ann Lindholm and Dr. Sherie Owens for being their tour guides at Panhandle Veterinary Services and for the PVS clients who brought their pets in to be observed. Interestingly, Drs. George, Anderson, Lindholm and Owens are all graduates of the University of Florida's College of Veterinary Medicine, and 4-H is the official youth development program of the University of Florida and all other land-grant universities across the United States. Cloverbuds 4-H'ers are the youngest members and are 5-7 years old. The Cloverbuds are focusing their 4-H year on learning about animals. So far this year, they have learned about rabbits and other small pets and will continue in December learning about horses.

The Cloverbuds of the Fire Ants 4-H Club meet the first Wednesday of each month in the RA Building at First Baptist Church Chipley at 9:30 a.m. For more information on the University of Florida/IFAS Washington County 4-H, find us on Facebook — washco4h — or visit our website washington.ifas.ufl.edu. Chipley Garden Club meets

Special to The News

On Nov. 2, the Chipley Garden Club held its regular meeting at the pavilion at Shivers Park in Chipley. The picnic tables were decorated with bouquets of beach sunflowers, Ryan's pink chrysanthemums, cardinal's hat and greenery, and the luncheon table was accented by a beautiful pumpkin and sunflower arrangement. Twenty members and seven guests were present.

Following a recap of the District II fall meeting in Vernon, several successful October projects were discussed including terrarium building at Kate M. Smith Elementary and the scarecrow contest. Plans were made for decorating and improving the downtown pots and adding the sundial garden at the Little Library to the project list. The November Yard of the Month was awarded to Kristina Corbin at 794 Third St. The club also discussed decorating for the Farm & City Banquet, collecting comfort items for the veterans at the VA hospital for Christmas and the English Tea & Garden Walk, which will be held in March 2012.

Club member Lyndal Pleas presented an informative program on "Poinsettias and Their Care." Native to Mexico, poinsettias are not poisonous and can be grown in our area if protected. Overwatering is the greatest danger. She explained the procedure to get them to "bloom" and said they propagate fairly easily. Poinsettias come in many colors and will be available soon at garden centers.

After the luncheon, members and guests visited the home of Edwina Showers to view her country cottage garden that was awash with Ryan's pinks. A newly constructed rose garden has been added as a backyard centerpiece.

The next meeting of Chipley Garden Club will be at 10:30 a.m. Dec. 7 on Orange Hill at the Kent Cabin. For more information, contact Karen Roland at 638-9968.

Hooked on Outdoors

I suppose everyone knows about our flag system and when it is safe to enter the water. Personally I think that if the human population has to rely on the government to tell us when it is too rough to swim, we have regressed quite a bit.

Outdoor Life
Scott Lindsey
captainlindsey@knology.net

Years ago, when we discovered we didn't have enough sense to be able to tell it was too rough to swim, they came out with a simple red flag to inform the misguided it was too rough to swim or stick your toes in.

Then they came up with the idea to use a yellow flag to let you know it was still rough, but you might survive if you risked it. Then came the green flag to tell everyone all is well and the Gulf is safe.

This system worked for a while until it was decided one red flag wasn't good enough so they added another. I suppose that means it's really, really rough, so stay out of the Gulf.

The same crew wasn't satisfied with red flags and yellow flags and green flags, so they added I believe a purple flag. This flag meant there was the danger of sea monsters or such swimming in the same area. Actually, it was added for Portuguese man-of-wars, a type of jellyfish we have here in the early spring and summer.

They had better keep the purple flag flying because two sea creatures were spotted last week that put the Portuguese man-of-war in the shade when it comes to harm. These new jellyfish are called box jellyfish, and if you rub against one, you will think you have been set on fire.

Where these things came from no one knows, but one box jellyfish was caught and given to the Marine Lab in Panama City Beach, and another was spotted at the bell buoy. I know for sure the one at the bell buoy was a box jellyfish because I saw it with my own eyes.

I had never seen one except on the Discovery Channel, and I also saw what they will do to a swimmer. It will leave a nasty scar on the portion of the body that it touches — that is, if the person lives.

I would advise you look them up on the Internet, and if you see one in the Gulf, give it plenty of space.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES-ADVERTISER

(Above) Redfish are one of the primary winter targets for winter anglers. They often enter back bays, sloughs, coastal rivers and creeks and settle into deep, rocky holes where water is warmer than that they can find on the flats. (Right) Shrimp tail hook: Live shrimp are the universally-useful winter bait, available at bait shops when catching your own baitfish may be difficult. And nearly all fish that enter panhandle bays and creeks in winter readily eat shrimp.

Panhandle fish head inland in cooler months

By FRANK SARGEANT
franksargeant@bellsouth.net

Fishing for sea trout, redfish and mangrove snapper in freshwater rivers and creeks seems an endeavor doomed to success because both are saltwater fish. But for a few months each year, there are many locations miles from the Gulf where the briny species are not only possible but likely catches.

No one is sure why the coastal species move into the rivers in winter. Some theorize that springs keep these flows warmer than the salt flats, and others suggest that the tannin stain of most Florida rivers acts as a heat sink on sunny days. There's also a theory that the cold-blooded fish move into the river to get away from warm-blooded bottle-nose dolphins, which can easily run down the lethargic fish during cold weather on the flats.

Whatever the reason, the fish do migrate to the rivers, usually beginning around the 1st of November and remaining there into March. The movement is not limited to the Panhandle; coastal fish all the way down into the Everglades make the migration. But it's most pronounced from Tarpon Springs north and west because of the colder winters here.

Panhandle waters noted for producing good winter action, moving east to west, include the St. Marks River, Ochlocknee River and the Apalachicola River.

Off West Bay, Crooked Creek and West Bay Creek sometimes hold fish. And the long stretch of the dredged Intracoastal Canal all the way to Choctawhatchee Bay is all worth probing.

At Choctawhatchee Bay, the feeder rivers in the east end are all winter possibilities, including Black Creek, Indian Creek, Mitchell River and Choctawhatchee River. Farther west on the bay, Lafayette Creek and Alaqua Creek, Basin Creek, Rocky Bayou and Garnier Creek are worth checking.

And at Pensacola Bay, both Blackwater Bayou and Escambia Bayou are likely.

On all these waters, the fish tend to settle into deep, rocky holes. They gradually push inland with succeeding cold fronts; the first hole near the mouth might be smoking hot after the first big November front but might be empty a few weeks later as the fish move farther upriver.

It's not uncommon for saltwater species to be found five miles or more from the nearest saltwater by Christmas, and there they'll stay until the first bright days of spring.

Dredged canals, spring seeps, ship turning basins and other deep holes also attract winter fish, as does the deep water under some residential docks. It's a matter of prospecting until you catch that first fish, then anchoring down to work the schools. On the bayous, the cuts where creeks flow in often produce.

Winter fish tend to be lethargic, and running down fast-moving artificial lures, as they will in summer, is not on the program. Live shrimp are the universal tender for winter reds, trout and snapper; tail-hooked on a size 1 or smaller hook, with a small split shot added to get it to bottom, this bait is fished at a crawl.

Adding a sliver of fresh-cut shrimp to a quarter-ounce jig with a paddle-tail plastic grub can also work well. Keep the cut shrimp small, just enough to add scent; a piece about the size of a pencil eraser is all it takes, thus one shrimp can provide a dozen tips.

Shrimp imitations can also be effective. The DOA shrimp does the job when fished just like the real thing, as do many versions of Berkley GULP!, also fished dead slow so that the scent can reach the fish. The advantage of these lures is that they will not be nipped off the hook by the many pinfish and crabs also in the rivers in winter.

It's also possible to catch trout, sometimes very large trout, by fishing a slow-sinking plug like a 52M Mirrolure very slowly through the holes. Slow in winter is a whole new dimension, though. A slight twitch every 5 seconds or so, just enough to indicate life as the bait slowly drifts downward, is all it takes. It's a good idea to fish these lures on braid with a two-foot clear fluorocarbon leader; the braid will help you feel the very faint "tick" that's all the indication you might get of a strike from these lethargic but hungry fish.

On Escambia and Blackwater bayous, some anglers do well on trout by fishing soft jerkbaits on lightly weighted hooks in the creek channels that cut through the bayou flats.

Winter fishing is a matter of prospecting until you strike gold. Once you're in the right spot, fishing is generally fast and easy, so keep moving, and eventually your bait will land in fishy soup.

Spas for fish

The cooling water from power plant outflows, which might stay close to 80 degrees all winter, is another winter fish magnet; the plume might extend for over a mile and create a fishy "spa" that draws fish so long as bay waters are chilly.

The best-known of these areas in the Panhandle is the Steam Plant Canal at Warren Bayou, a famed winter spot for West Bay anglers, producing everything from trout, jacks and reds to the occasional tarpon throughout the winter. It's a catch-and-release-only area from Nov. 1 to the end of February, but well worth the visit.

The Crystal River Nuclear Plant draws anglers from all over the West Coast on the first big cold fronts of the year, and the waters there are jammed with everything from blacktip sharks, sheepshead, jacks and tarpon to the more

Tigers fall to Blue Devils 34-14

By Cecilia Spears
Staff Writer
cspears@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — Holmes County Blue Devils continue their undefeated season after overcoming the Chipley Tigers 34-14 on Friday.

Toward the end of the second quarter, with a score of 14-7 Blue Devils, Tiger Ryan McIntyre pushed through a wall of Blue Devils for 15 yards, gaining a touchdown with 2:12 left in the first quarter, and with a successful kick from James Fletcher Dilmore, the score was tied 14-14.

Blue Devil Kodi Russ rushed the ball seven yards for a touchdown with 1:01 left in the first half, and with a successful kick from Ty Russ, the score was 21-14.

Russ ran the ball 11 yards for a touchdown with 4:02 left in the third quarter, and with a successful kick from Russ, made the score 28-14.

Blue Devil J.R. Miles pushed the ball inches from the end zone for a touchdown with 4:51 left in the game; Russ' kick was not good, leaving the game's score 34-14.

Chipley High School's Spirit of the Tiger Band celebrated their 75th anniversary during the halftime show, which included a production with the Roulhac Middle School band.

common reds, trout and mangrove snapper.

And the TECO plant on Tampa Bay is a noted winter spot for cobia and also holds winter Spanish mackerel, snook and permit — all warm-weather species.

In all these locations, it's hard to beat a section of fresh shrimp fished on a quarter to three-eighths-ounce jig head with a wide-gap hook. Bounce the jig across bottom for reds, trout and jacks, or crawl it for sheepshead.

Panfish of water

Silver trout and sand trout are species largely ignored for most of the year because there are larger and more prestigious species easily caught during the temperate months. In winter, though, silvers and sands can sometimes be the only game in town. Even on the day after an icy cold front blows through — a time when most species hunker down on bottom and seem to wait for the wind to stop blowing — these panfish continue to bite. And because there's no size limit and no bag limit, anglers who want a fish fry have good reason to target these little guys.

Silvers look much like a spotted sea trout without the spots. They are closely related to the sand trout, which also has no spots, and are sometimes found in the same areas in winter. Dr. Bob Shipp, author of "Guide to Fishes of the Gulf Of Mexico," notes that silvers are usually found in deeper water than sand sea trout and run a bit smaller — silvers rarely exceed 12 inches, while sand sea trout often reach 15 inches.

Silver or sand, they both eat shrimp like crazy, and both tend to school up in the bottom of dredged channels inshore — the deeper the better during winter. You can often find them on a depthfinder. They look like a ball of bait huddled close to bottom.

All it takes to catch them is a piece of fresh-cut shrimp, about an inch long, on a size 2 hook, plus enough weight to quickly get the bait to bottom. Some anglers hang three hooks on one rig and reel them up three at a time.

It's also possible to catch both species by vertical jigging with a Hopkins Shorty spoon, half-ounce or heavier; simply drop it down into the fish, flip it up a couple feet, let it drop again and reel up your catch.

Cleaning these fish is a matter of a couple of quick passes with a fillet knife. Trim off the rib cage, strip off the skin by working the knife flat between skin and meat on the cleaning board and you're done.

They're usually just the right size to create instant fish fingers; dip them in seasoned meal and drop in hot cooking oil until they turn golden brown—they are tender, light and delicious, really one of the best-eating fish in the Gulf, and yet largely ignored by most anglers.

Dress for winter fishing

The coat you'll want most is the one you left at home. Dress in layers, and take along a lot more layers than you think you'll ever need if you go fishing the day after a cold front passes through the Panhandle; long johns, insulated pants, a wool watch cap and a rain suit to break the wind will be much appreciated, as will insulated gloves and boots. Yep, it's Florida, but it feels like Maine when a 20-knot wind is blowing on a 30-degree morning. Dressing in layers allows you to strip off a few garments as the day warms — if it warms.

Sun-fishing

Occasionally, when the wind dies and the sun is bright the day after a cold front, you might luck into a school of "sunning" fish in coastal bayous and creeks. Redfish, in particular, are prone to this behavior; they'll stack up in water just deep enough to cover their backs and let the sun's rays warm up their chilly blood. Dark rock shorelines or black mud bottomed bays are the places to look for them; go slowly and quietly and wear polarized glasses.

If you find a school like this, finesse fishing is a must; an unweighted shrimp cast on light spinning tackle is the ticket; cast to the outside fish first, and hopefully you can pluck a few from the perimeter before the rest scatter back to deeper water.

The nice thing about finding sunning fish is that they will probably be there again tomorrow and the next day, so long as the sunny afternoons continue.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES-ADVERTISER

Sand trout and the similar silver trout are also frequent winter catches, particularly in deeper channels. A small piece of fresh shrimp is usually the best bait.

Vernon wins District 2-1A championship

Florida Freedom Newspapers

SNEADS — Vernon erased a 20-6 second-quarter deficit and clinched the District 2-1A title when Hunter Dobbs scored with less than 4 minutes left.

Sneads scored on two touchdown runs by Dontarius Williams and another by Mickey Cassidy to take control early. The Yellow Jackets (4-5, 4-0) countered when Dobbs, who rushed for 123 yards on 22 carries, got their first touchdown.

Dylan Kirk completed only four passes, but two of them went for touchdowns. Giovanni Bell added a crucial conversion that tied the game 20-20 in the second quarter.

Defenses clamped down thereafter, but Dobbs eventually eliminated the Pirates (5-4, 2-2) for playoff contention in the waning minutes.

Veterans Day Mass

SUNNY HILLS — The Knights of Columbus Council 10513 will sponsor a Catholic Mass at 11 a.m. on Veterans Day, Nov. 11. The Mass will be celebrated outdoors at Calvary Catholic cemetery on Gap Boulevard in Sunny Hills in honor of all our veterans of all wars.

'A Bad Year for Tomatoes'

VERNON — The Vernon High School Theatre Department is in full rehearsals for their fall comedy production, "A Bad Year for Tomatoes." Director Kevin Russell recently cast the following students: Kori Maynor as Myra Marlow, Jeffery Bouet at Tom Lamont, Kate Burke as Cora Camp, Amanda Burt as Reba Harper, Dylan Rudd as Piney, Micha Munson as Willa Mae Wilcox, and Dakota Ball as the Sheriff.

Fed up with the pressures and demands of her acting career, the famous Myra Marlow leases a house in the tiny New England hamlet of Beaver Haven and settles down to write her autobiography. She is successful in turning aside the offer suppressed on her by her long-time agent, but dealing with her nosy, omnipresent neighbors is a different matter. In an attempt to shoo them away and gain some privacy, Myra invents a mad homicidal sister who is kept locked in an upstairs room but who occasionally escapes long enough to scare off uninvited visitors. The ruse works well, at first, by complications result. Myra announces that her imaginary sibling has suddenly gone off to Boston, which brings on the sheriff and the suspicion of murder!

"A Bad Year for Tomatoes," written by John Patrick, will take the stage at 7 p.m. Nov. 17-19. General admission tickets are on sale in the Vernon High School Main Office. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students. Vernon High School is at 3232 Moss Hill Road. For more information, contact Kevin Russell at vhstheatre@gmail.com.

CATHRINE'S NASCAR PIT STOP

Smoke dominates at Texas

By Cathrine Lamb
Editorial Assistant
clamb@chipleypaper.com

There are only two races left and only three points separating Carl Edwards and Tony Stewart. Who will win the championship? This is the question on so many fans' minds right now. But, what is up with the points system? Edwards, the leader in the chase, hasn't won a single race during the chase. Stewart has won four races during the chase and is still three points behind Edwards. It just doesn't seem right. This is not the point system we were promised when they changed it. The new points system was supposed to give the winners of races the advantage. What happened to that? It all comes down to the Kobalt Tools 500 this Sunday and the race in Homestead on Nov. 20. On Sunday, the race will be held at Phoenix International Raceway in Avondale, Ariz., at 3:15 p.m.

In other NASCAR news

Kyle Busch was eliminated from the chase competition after being benched due to deliberately wreaking truck series championship contender, Ron Hornaday Jr., on Friday night, Nov. 4. His M&M Toyota, owned by Joe Gibbs Racing, was run by substitute driver Michael McDowell. M&M's, the primary sponsor of Busch's car, issued this statement on their Facebook page on Sunday, Nov. 6.

"The recent actions by Kyle Busch are not consistent with the values of M&M's, and we are very disappointed. Like you, we hold those who represent our brand to a higher standard and we have expressed our concerns directly to Joe Gibbs Racing."

Below is a copy of the apology letter that Kyle Busch wrote on Saturday, Nov. 5.

"To all, I've had a lot of time today to sit and reflect, and try to put my thoughts into words as best I can. I want to sincerely apologize for my actions during Friday night's Truck Series race at Texas.

"I apologize to my fans, all my sponsors, everyone at Joe Gibbs Racing and Kyle Busch Motorsports. After talking with my team, it's great to have their support and encouragement to assure me that there are better days ahead.

Even though this took place while driving for Kyle Busch Motorsports, I am sorry for how difficult this has been for everyone associated with Joe Gibbs Racing's Nationwide and Sprint Cup Series teams.

"I'd also like to apologize to Ron Hornaday Jr., and everyone associated with the No. 33 team in the Truck Series.

"I understand why I was taken out of the car for the rest of the weekend. NASCAR officials had to act, and I accept their punishment and take full responsibility for my actions.

"As a racecar driver, the hardest thing to do is to sit on the sidelines listening to cars on the track when you know you should be out there competing. For this, I have no one to blame but myself.

"Through a lot of support from the people around me, I feel like I've made a lot of strides this year, but this was certainly a step backward. Moving forward, I will do everything I possibly can to represent everyone involved in a positive manner. However, I know my long-term actions will have more of a bearing than anything I say right now."

Sincerely, Kyle Busch

He had taken an interest in writing, both scholarly and creatively, and had many articles published in various magazines. He was a gifted storyteller and loved to entertain family and friends with stories of his teaching days. His friendly nature and unique sense of humor will be sorely missed. Danny's passion was his church and his music. He was a member of St. Matthews Episcopal Church in Chipley, where he often played the organ.

Giving Thanks

As we near the annual celebration of Thanksgiving, many of us reflect on the many reasons that we have to be thankful. And, given the abundance of things to be thankful for, it is certainly wise and appropriate to do so. But, shouldn't we be thankful during the rest of the year as well, and shouldn't this attitude extend beyond the typical things for which we are thankful, such as our families, our work, and food on our plate? Indeed, if we pause to reflect on the ultimate source of our being and life itself, we realize that gratitude should be a fundamental part of our lives and a constant mode of our being in the world. That is, our very lives, and existence itself are things for which we should be profoundly thankful. And though some may consider the question of existence (and where it all came from) to be a fundamental mystery, certainly no one is responsible for bringing himself into existence. And thus, we owe our existence to someone or something outside of ourselves. Existence is indeed something to be reverentially thankful for, and not surprisingly, the more gratitude we have in our lives the better our lives seem to become. Those cynics who look around and see war, famine, and injustice are quick to point out that it is hard to be thankful for the evil we see in the world; however, they neglect to see that the people who are perpetrating crime and injustice are themselves lacking in this fundamental attitude of Thanksgiving. So, we can make our lives better by making every day a day of Thanksgiving, and taking time each day to reflect on all that we have to be thankful for.

In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you. - New K.J.V.1 Th 5:18

A socialist pulpit

A few weeks ago, I had the special privilege of attending a Pastor's Policy Briefing sponsored by the Florida Renewal Project in Orlando. Which means that my traveling buddy, Gary Burkhead, and I were able to have dinner, breakfast and lunch with Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, Dr. James Dobson, Congressman Bob McEwen, historian David Burton, Congressman Dan Webster, attorney John Stemberger and others. Gov. Rick Perry was to be there, but instead did an interactive Internet skype with us from the Governor's office.

I came away from this meeting with a renewed respect for Gingrich and McEwen, whom I feel would be the best men to serve as our next president and vice president. I also was reaffirmed by attorney John Stemberger and others that I can say that in print, or from the pulpit, without fear of the church losing its tax exempt status. Because first of all, I am a citizen with rights like everyone else (as long as I say it is my thought and not that of the church.) Secondly, the Constitution guarantees the church that status and there has never been a church to lose it. It can't, unless we become a communist country and throw away the Constitution, as many are trying to do.

So that brings me to my first challenge I would like to present, which is to pastors. Please start ignoring those threatening letters you get in the mail; they have no teeth with which to bite you. Thousands of pastors preached from their pulpits a few weeks back on the decay of the morals across this land and spoke how politics have gotten away from the purpose of which it was established. They then sent tapes and manuscripts to the IRS of their messages.

No, the IRS has done nothing and will do nothing because they know they would lose. As historian David Burton shared so wonderfully, the Blackrobe Brigade (pastors) and their stand in the pulpit and in the battlefield was the wisdom behind our founding fathers who wrote the Constitution and the Bill of Rights that birthed this country into being the great land that it became. But the pulpit of today, I'm afraid, is not filled with men who fear the Lord as the men who filled the pulpit in the birthing of this land, or things would be much different than they are today.

FROM THE HEART
Tim Hall

"If there is a decay of conscience, the pulpit is responsible for it. If the public press lacks moral discernment, the pulpit is responsible for it. If the church is degenerate and worldly, the pulpit is responsible for it."

Rev. Charles Finney

Rev. Charles Finney (1792-1875) says it best I think when he said, "If there is a decay of conscience, the pulpit is responsible for it. If the public press lacks moral discernment, the pulpit is responsible for it. If the church is degenerate and worldly, the pulpit is responsible for it. If the world loses its interest in Christianity, the pulpit is responsible for it. If Satan rules in our halls of legislation, the pulpit is responsible for it. If our politics become so corrupt that the very foundations of our government are ready to fall away, the pulpit is responsible for it."

With that, I say to my fellow clergy and ministers, it's time we return to fearing God more than man. Remember Peter and John had to make a similar decision when those in authority said "'… let us severely threaten them, that from now on they speak to no man in this name.' So they called them and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus. But Peter and John answered and said to them, 'Whether it is right in the sight of God to listen to you more than to God, you judge. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard'" (Acts 4:17-20 NKJV).

My second challenge goes to those who fill the pews every week or claim to be Christians. Do you realize that as Congressman McEwen shared with me and a few others personally, "politicians only say what they think the people want to hear." They are only puppets. They listen to the words of those who make the most noise and vote. With that said, do you realize that in the last presidential election 95 percent of people who proclaim to be homosexuals voted, but only 35 percent of people who claim to be Christians voted? Thus we are living with the results. The politicians are hearing that our morality or moral value voters do not feel that we believe what we say we believe. So if you desire for America to return to the God who has so wonderfully blessed this land, get registered to vote today and vote in every election.

The lie has been spread that you cannot legislate morality, when the truth is all legislation has to do with somebody's morality, but is it yours? It would be, if you let your voice be heard where it counts, in the voting booths across this land.

(Please be advised that my articles are purposely meant to be challenging and at times, controversial. They should no way reflect negatively on the paper in which you read it.)
