Council approves family fundraiser

BONIFAY — Bonifay City Council approved of Casey Forehand's request to rent the Bonifay Recreational Center to hold a fundraiser May 12 for Jeremy Worthington, a local child diagnosed with cancer, during their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday.

Forehand said there would be a bake sale, yard sale, rock climbing, bounce house and a wrestling match, with all the money raised going to Worthington and his family for expenses.

"We've already got so much help," Forehand said. "The armory is donating the rock climbing and the wrestling troupe has agreed that 100 percent of everything they receive will go into funds raised for the Worthington family."

Also assisting residents, Diane Little from the Holmes County Health Department came before the council to inform them a faith-based free health clinic would be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays at the old Lottie Moon house in Bonifay on Waukesha Street.

"It's for those who have no health insurance and the staff is strictly made of volunteers, with six medical professionals already on board," said Little at a previous meeting with the Holmes County Board of County Commissioners. "We're already state certified, and this is additional care on a day that everything's closed and a way to lessen the load at the emergency room." Little added that there will be no drugs on the premises but there will be prescriptions made.

"It's strictly for those who have no insurance," Little said. "It could be considered a service of the First Baptist Church, but it's open to anyone."

The free clinic will be holding their Grand Opening from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, May 5, at the old Lottie Moon house on Waukesha

Judge to decide whether Johnny Mack Calhoun will get the death penalty

BONIFAY — Convicted murderer Johnny Mack Sketo Calhoun returned to court Wednesday for his "Spencer Hearing," during which both attorneys argued whether he deserves the death penalty.

Calhoun was convicted in late February for the first-degree murder of Mia Shay Brown in December 2010. Judge Christopher Patterson will take Wednesday's testimony under advisement before rendering a decision at a later, as-yet undetermined date.

JOHNNY MACK CALHOUN

"This is a case without question that calls for the death penalty," State Attorney Glenn Hess said in opening the final hearing.

Hess said that the aggravating factors far outweigh the mitigating ones.

"There's a vast difference between the aggravating and mitigating factors," Hess said. "What he did he did without regard to her as a human being; it was cold, it was calculated and it was without remorse."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Street.

Representatives from the Bonifay Down Home Street Festival thanked the council for their support and informed the council that $3,000 was raised for the Bonifay Fire Department, $1,000 for the Police Department, $250 for the Holmes County High School's Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps and a nominal amount for Holmes County High School's Project Graduation.

"You've all done a fantastic job," said Mayor Lawrence Cloud.

Police Chief Chris Wells informed council members that the police department obtained three vehicles through Federal Forfeiture, which means they were confiscated from criminals because they were used in a crime, such as transporting illegal narcotics.

Wells then requested to hire a lawyer, since the city attorney has a conflict of interest, to finalize the procedures. Wells explained after procedures are completed the city can choose to keep the vehicles, donate the vehicles or auction the vehicles off. The council approved.

Council members were announced their various departments needing overseers, and appointed Cloud over Administration and Police; Vice-Mayor Micah McCormick over Athletic Committee, Parks and Downtown Revitalization; Council member Richard Woodham over Fire, Water and Sewer; Council member Andrew Granger over Sanitation; and Council member Roger Brooks over Street, Cemetery and Clean-up.

The council announced there would be a groundbreaking ceremony for their new Wastewater Treatment Facility at 11 a.m. Thursday at 611 Martin Luther King Ave. and is free and open to the public.

The next regularly scheduled Bonifay City Council meeting will be at 6 p.m. April 23 at the Bonifay City Hall.

Moss stressed that he will utilize his extensive knowledge of the judicial system along with a strong "lunch pail" type work ethic to maintain the high level of courteous professionalism and efficiency that the citizens of Holmes County deserve and have grown accustomed to from their Clerk of Court.

Moss graduated from Holmes County High School in 1993 with high honors. After graduation he attended Chipola College and transferred to Troy University where he became a first generation college graduate by earning his bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice and Sociology. While attending college, Moss managed a retail grocery outlet and delivered ice during the summers. Moss stated that he takes pride in the fact that he worked two jobs to put himself through college debt free.

Upon graduation from Troy University, Moss began working with the Florida Department of Children and Families where he not only protected our most vulnerable members of society as a Family Services Counselor working in the field, but he also served as the Revenue Maximization Specialist. These duties included securing and managing the federal funding necessary to support the local foster care program. He was eventually promoted to Foster Care Supervisor for Holmes and Washington counties. It was during this time that Moss gained real life courtroom experience by preparing a wide variety of legal documents and participating in dependency court proceedings.

Moss is the son of the late Ventice Moss and Janie Moss Brown. His parents owned the Gulf service station in Bonifay during the 1970's and his mother served on the Bonifay City Council from 1996 until her death in 2003. He has been married to his wife, Dustie Mayo Moss, for the past 12 years. They have one child, Morgan, 8, who attends Bonifay Elementary School. Moss is a volunteer firefighter with Bonifay Fire-Rescue and is an active volunteer in youth athletics. In his spare time, Moss is an avid marathon runner and outdoorsman.

Moss can be contacted at 547-1046 (home), 260-4308 (cell), or lee-dustie@hotmail.com.

missing Dec. 16, 2010. Four days later, her burned car was found in rural Geneva County, Ala., and her body was discovered in the trunk.

Calhoun's public defender, Kim Dowgul, began by calling Betsy Spann, Calhoun's younger sister. She described her relationship with Calhoun as her best friend.

"Growing up he was always the one that I played with, lead me and kept me out of trouble," Spann said. "He has changed so many people's lives; he's not putting up a front to try to get out of trouble."

Sharon Calhoun said her son's fate is "in God's hands" and maintained that her son is innocent.

"We can't sleep at night, but he says he's let it go into God's hands," Sharon Calhoun said. "I'm sorry for Mia, and I know what it's like to loose a child. Johnny's innocent; he'd never have mistreated a woman. If you kill him, you'll kill my husband. ... You say he's guilty, but he's not guilty. I beg you; don't take my son's life."

John Searsy with God is Faithful Ministries said Calhoun was "humble and shy" when they met in 1985.

"I can't compare what I met at the jail with the child I met; it's not a valid comparison," he said.

Dowgul noted that although a jury found him guilty, the state must prove "the crime was heinous, atrocious and cruel enough for the death penalty."

She said there was only evidence of what happened, but there was no evidence of those events leading up to what happened.

"They couldn't prove if she was conscious while she was in the trunk," Dowgul said. "It's speculative as to whether she was conscious during the burning of the trunk, so you don't know if it truly was heinous and atrocious. You can't prove if it was cold, calculated and cruel. It points more to an action while panicked, not calculated at all. This was not a well thought out plan."

She said there was no evidence he fled to avoid arrest and prosecutors didn't have a motive for Brown's kidnapping or murder.

"Again, going to the speculation of this case, the death penalty shouldn't be an option," Dowgul said. "We're left here to speculate what the events really were; there's just not enough facts. The facts are not specific enough and I recommend that you overrule the jury's death penalty verdict."

Calhoun speaks

Calhoun then approached the judge to speak.

"I've done and made some horrible choices in my lifetime, but my life's now committed to God," Calhoun said. "Whatever the court decides, if it's life in prison or death, I'm OK with it because my life's in God's hands now."

Hess then called the family of Mia Brown one by one to speak.

Chuck Riddle said he was one of those who found his sister's body in the burnt vehicle.

"I was asked if I had something to say and for 471 days I've waited, and in all that time I had a lot to say — until I got here today," Riddle said. "I tried to not hate him. Then I get here and he comes in with that smug smile and tells everyone how his life has been changed, that he's found Christ, but isn't the first thing about being a Christian is that you admit your sins and seek forgiveness? Not once has he ever admitted his guilt; not once has he sought for forgiveness — not from us — and on your knees to God at two in the morning isn't going to cut it."

When Brown's aunt Kay Newton was called to the stand, she countered one of Dowgul's arguments.

"His attorney said that he shouldn't get the death penalty because when he did what he did that he was in a panic," Newton said. "That may be true at first, but then he had 14 hours to change his mind and because he chose to kill my niece, I believe from everything that I read about the death penalty that it's called for now. At least his family has a chance to say goodbye, which is more than he did for my niece."

Meagan Kriser, Brown's sister, took the stand next.

"We were only 20 months apart," Kriser said. "She was my best friend and for the longest time we shared the same bed. Even when we got our own rooms, I'd still find my way to her bed."

"Now the only way for some of our family members to know her are by stories."

Kriser said Calhoun "creeped me out" when she first saw him, "but Mia said, 'That's Johnny Mack. He doesn't have very many friends; we should show him kindness.'"

"That was Mia, kind to everyone, giving everyone the benefit of the doubt, and to see him here, how he treated her kindness, I have no doubt that if he's made his peace with God, then he should get there all the sooner so the Father can deal with him personally," she said.

Nancy Williams, Brown's mother, was the last to speak, first reading from Brown's journal, in which she talked about wanting to spend more time with her family and starting one herself.

Brown also read an essay Brown wrote, telling how she sympathized with the main character of a book who was ostracized and an outcast because people judged him for his appearance.

"This is how she lived her life, treating others how she'd want to be treated," Williams said. "I've taught all my children to do the right thing, to be kind to others, and began to think that I taught them the wrong thing ... but then I realized right will always be right and wrong will always be wrong."

Williams then looked at Calhoun. "You made your choice and I believe in accountability and I believe justice will be served," she said.

NEXT WEEK ONLY NATIONAL COIN COLLECTORS ASSOCIATION IS IN BONIFAY!

By David Morgan
STAFF WRITER

Need extra cash? Who doesn't! The National Coin Collectors Association will be in Bonifay from April 17th - 22nd. The NCCA is asking people to bring in any old silver and gold coins made before 1970. Those that do bring in their coins will be able to speak with specialists one-on-one and have their coins looked at with an expert set of eyes. Offers will be made based on silver or gold content, the rarity of the coins, and key dates. All coins made before 1970 will be examined, including gold coins, silver coins, nickels, pennies, proof sets and uncirculated mint sets. Those that decide to sell their coins will be paid on the spot.

If you are like a lot of people, you might have a few old coins or even a coffee can full of them lying around. If you have ever wondered what they are worth, now might be your chance to find out and even sell them if you choose. They could be worth a lot according to the NCCA. Collectors will pay a fortune for some coins and currency for their collections. According to Mark Cooper, coin collector and NCCA specialist, if they are rare enough, one coin could be worth over $100,000. One ultra rare coin, an 1894 S Barber dime, sold for a record $1.9 million to a collector in July of 2007. While that is an extreme example, many rare and valuable coins are stashed away in dresser drawers or lock boxes around the country. The NCCA has organized a traveling event in search of all types of coins and currency. Even common coins can be worth a significant amount due to the high price of silver and gold. Cooper explains that, "even Washington quarters and Roosevelt dimes are worth many times their face value. Recent silver markets have driven the price up on even common coins made of silver. All half dollars, quarters and dimes made before 1965 contain 90% silver and are sought after any time silver prices rise. Right now it's a seller's market."

Other types of items the NCCA will be purchasing during this event include U.S. paper currency, gold bullion, investment gold, silver bars, silver rounds, etc. Even foreign coins are collectible and will be purchased.

Also at this event, anyone can sell their gold jewelry, dental gold or anything made of gold on the spot. Gold is currently trading at near record highs and can bring in a good amount of money. Bring anything you think might be gold and the NCCA specialists will examine, test and price it for free. If you decide to sell, you will be paid on the spot—it has been an unknown fact that coin dealers have always paid more for jewelry and scrap gold than other jewelers and pawn brokers.

So whether you have one coin you think might be valuable or a large collection you recently inherited, you can talk to these specialists for free and if you're lucky, you may have a rarity worth thousands. The events can not only be rewarding but fun as well. Watch what other incredible items come through and meet people with the same passion for collections as you have. Mark your calendars for April 17th - 22nd and come to the Holiday Inn Express.

'A' not always for Alabama; Arkansas gets no respect

If you see me out and about when I am not working, there is a good chance you'll catch me in my favorite baseball cap, which is blue and red and has a big A on the front.

Whatever you do, don't say "Roll Tide!"

I've had at least three folks see the hat and make the Alabama assumption, and though I have no animosity toward Alabama (other than the usual SEC heckling when they are playing the Razorbacks), the hat's A stands for Arkansas, as in the Double-A Texas League team, the Arkansas Travelers. So here's a little minor league baseball trivia.

RANDAL SEYLER
Editor

The Travelers, also known as "the Travs," are North Little Rock's minor league franchise. They used to reside in Little Rock, but those crafty North Little Rockians stole the team away by building a spanking new stadium about five years ago.

Ray Winder Stadium, where the Travs resided in Little Rock from 1932 until 2006, had seen better days. So a special election seeking a 1-percent sales tax bought the Travs a new home north of the Arkansas River called Dickey-Stephens Park. The park was built with a partnership between the city of North Little Rock, the Travs and Little Rock financier Warren Stephens. It was named after Jack and Witt Stephens and Hall of Fame catcher Bill Dickey and his brother Skeeter, who also played in the major leagues. Coincidentally, the Dickey brothers also wound up working for the Stephenses after their baseball careers ended.

The Travelers were founded in 1895 and were the first professional team to claim an entire state in 1957 when they became the Arkansas Travelers. About the time the Travs got their new stadium, Northwest Arkansas got its own Texas League team, the Northwest Arkansas Naturals. They play at Arvest Stadium in Springdale and have done pretty well, considering their team mascot is a Sasquatch.

Both of the Travs' names, the Travelers and the Arkansas Travelers, were derived from the old folk song "The Arkansas Traveler."

Which brings us to the actual topic this week — the song, "The Arkansas Traveler," which is largely responsible for the state of Arkansas' image, which is to say that thanks to a song written 160 years ago, Arkansas remains the Rodney Dangerfield of United States.

Our beloved columnist Perry Wells seems to enjoy introducing me as an Arkansas traveler, so I am sure he would see the humor in people mistaking my Travelers hat for an Alabama one, although I suspect Alabama fans would take much more umbrage at such a faux pas than I do — it's not like anyone has mistaken the hat for a Texas A&M cap, for example.

The song dates back to the 1850s and has had a variety of lyrics. It is credited to Arkansas' own Col. Sanford C. Faulkner, a fiddle player, storyteller and former Confederate officer.

According to the encyclopedia of Arkansas website, the song has "shaped the image of Arkansas since the 1840s." That's probably not a compliment, unless you find barefoot, wiseacre hillbillies attractive. Think "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Tobacco Road" or even worse — "Evening Shade" — and you get the average person's image of Arkansas.

Anyway, the song was adopted as the Arkansas state song from 1949 to 1963 and since 1987 has been the state historical song. I think the official state song now is Phil Ochs' "Here's To The State Of Mississippi," and if it's not, then it should be.

A visit to the Internet gives several versions of "The Arkansas Traveler" lyrics, and apparently there is even a Jerry Garcia version as well as traditional versions, official state lyrics written by a committee, and even children's versions of the song.

The song also was part of Laurel and Hardy's Academy Award-winning short "The Music Box" and inspired a Vaudeville circuit comedy routine, which is echoed in Garcia's song.

The song also is credited with inspiring the Edward Washburn 1858 painting of the same name.

By now you're probably thinking, "what has any of this got to do with Florida?"

Well, oddly enough, when I started searching online to hear "The Arkansas Traveler" played, the first version I found was Archie Lee performing at the 1956 Florida Folk Festival in White Springs. And what version is he singing? Why it's the vaudeville version, of course, which is very similar to Jerry Garcia's take — in fact, it's probably the same song.

Apparently someone named Michelle Shocked also has done a version of the vaudeville lyrics on a children's album, to boot.

Arkansas gets no respect, I tell you — but I'm still going to root for the Travs.

More about school spankings

In my article two weeks ago, I mostly filled the space with the comments made by former Holmes County students who were recipients of school paddlings and had no room left for any summary of opinions. And I have had little comment on the article, but it did result in having a good visit with my friend, Dot Galloway. She has been a resident of Tallahassee with her children Cissy and Billy for the past three years after the death of her husband, Clyde. But she still gets the Times-Advertiser and reads the Happy Corner. She and Cissy have become a part of Thomasville Road Baptist Church, where the No. 1 paddling recipient according to Jedd McFatter's informal survey, Matt Curry, serves as associate pastor/youth minister.

HAPPY CORNER
Hazel Wells Tison

On March 25, the pastor assigned Matt to preach at the 11 a.m. service. Dot purchased a CD of his message and shared it with me. We were both so proud of his message. The topic, "The Sifting of God," was timely, well researched and backed by scripture, and supported with plenty of real-life experiences. Not only that, but his delivery was right on. No need to apologize for his "Holmes County" accent.

Jamie McFatter Balkom won the title for the second most paddlings. (She said I paddled her, but I certainly don't remember it.) Jamie is a practicing attorney with the Manuel and Thompson personal injury law firm. She is voracious reader and is interested in becoming a writer. In addition, she is the mother of two little girls.

Obviously, the school paddlings didn't do much permanent damage to these two nor any of the others who responded. As a teacher who formerly paddled and then did not, I support corporal punishment in principal. If I had it to do over, I would not paddle, but as I did toward the end of my teaching, I would ask someone else to do it.

Mike Anderson, my next door teaching associate, was the best. He calmly talked to the student about his misdeed; he talked about how neither he nor I came to school to beat up on kids and then he administered the board of education to the seat of learning. That usually took care of a lot of future problems.

Talking with teachers who work in districts where paddling is banned, they feel that spanking makes the difficult task of maintaining a satisfactory learning environment possible, especially at the elementary school level. I remember when Lorna Raper was in Holmes County having come from a district in coastal southeast Florida. She said we do more teaching in Holmes County with our Bibles and our paddles than anywhere she had ever been.

Some studies, however, have shown paddling can hurt mental development and can make kids more aggressive. It is also argued that it is ineffective as the same children go from grade to grade getting paddlings each year without significant change in their behavior.

One argument for the practice is that it keeps kids in school because the alternative to paddling is suspension. When students miss school and fall behind in their work (and the misbehaving student is likely already behind), they are much more prone to give up and drop out. One lengthy commentary showed some positive benefits from paddling.

He says, and I will try to summarize, when incorporated into the community's acceptance of punishment, corporal punishment can be legitimate and good. He goes on to say that "Bonifay, unlike other places, has an intra and an interconnectedness and that when a mature well-respected person (the principal) administers the discipline, the recipient understands that this discipline is administered by his own better self" and is seen as a form of self-discipline. According to this analyst, the student is subliminally emerging as a better person.

I wonder if that also works in families. If I was "emerging as a better person" after my little Mama's switchings, it was definitely subliminally. I would never have admitted it at the time.

One local writer has expressed the opinion that mental development is stymied by corporal punishment and even suggests that Holmes County's "backwardness" can be attributed to the administration of "beatings" in the school system.

I am sure that with the permissiveness we see in our society today, corporal punishment will one day be a thing of the past, but as a former teacher, I dread that day for those in the profession, whether they paddle or not.

HCSB willing to relinquish ag center to PDL

By CECILIA SPEARS
547-9414 | @WCN_HCT
cspears@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY — The Holmes County School Board agreed April 3 to relinquish all responsibility of the old county agriculture building to the town of Ponce de Leon, pending the acceptance of the Ponce de Leon Town Council during their next regularly scheduled meeting.

"I've done the title search and report that the deed is all ready to be signed over to the Town of Ponce de Leon if they are willing to accept it, which I haven't heard from them," said HCSB Attorney Lucas Taylor.

Holmes County Superintendent Gary Galloway said the building wasn't on school board property, but with an agreement from the landowner, the building was leased to the town of Ponce de Leon as a storage area in 1988.

"The school board no longer had any invested interest in the ag building but still had use for the gym," Galloway said. "I don't even know if we still have squatter's rights to the ag building because of the lack of necessity and use of the building by the school board."

Galloway said with it being on someone else's land and with the extent of repair needed to bring the building to satisfactory usability, it was too much of a liability to the school board to continue being attached to the building.

"With the recent interest of the town of Ponce de Leon to expand on the use of that building, we're more than willing to relinquish all ties to the building to the town of Ponce de Leon," Galloway said.

Present at the school board meeting were two parents concerned with the dress code enforced at the Holmes County High School Prom.

"We've got an issue with Principal Eddie Dixon singling girls out about the way they dress and not others," said parent Nikki Elmore. "There were girls at the dance that weren't able to dance or they were sent home because of the way they dressed, and there were others there who were dressed in less who got to enjoy their prom."

The second parent, Christian Mann, said more parents say they've had similar problems but never spoke up about it, and now that her daughter had missed out on enjoying her prom, she was there to speak to the school board.

"My daughter worked hard and saved up to go to prom on her own money, and she didn't even get to enjoy her prom," Mann said. "She didn't even get one step into prom when she was told that she could wear her date's jacket or she could leave."

Mann said she studied the dress code for prom and that she found it to be very confusing.

"It says that you can't have straps but you must have straps, you can't show your back, but you can and you see all these pictures of girls in the same dress or less, and they weren't told to leave or cover up," Mann said. "My daughter worked so hard to raise money for that dress and never even made it to the dance floor."

Galloway said he promised to look into the matter extensively.

Larry Zorn with the facilities division told the board they were being fined $40,000 by the Florida Education Finance Program from their last FEFP and transportation audit.

"It wasn't clear about the processing of the matrix, and there were places that needed initialing that weren't," Zorn said. "It was clearly just a clerical error, and we're asking permission to appeal the fine."

According to the report, "six of the 10 students in our ESE Support Levels 4 and 5 sample had exceptions involving reporting errors or records that were not properly or accurately prepared. Of the 131 students in our student transportation sample, 69 had exceptions involving their reported ridership classification or eligibility for state transportation."

"We've moved to new standards of documentation, and the adjustments to the new system have been less than smooth, but it's something that will be worked out with time. It just so happened that the state decided to crack down hard on these issues," Galloway said. "We're not the only ones having to place appeals because of this matter, and we're looking at a possible long process of appeals."

The board approved to move forward with appealing the fine.

The board also approved of out-of-state travel requests from Bethlehem High School's Future Business Leaders of America to attend the FBLA State Leadership Conference, competitions and workshops from April 27 to May 1 in Orlando and Bethlehem's grade 9-12 math teams to attend the Enterprise Community College Math Tournament on May 4 in Newton, Ala.

The next Holmes County School Board meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m. April 24.

HCHD celebrates 1st anniversary of Extended Hours Clinic

From Staff Reports

BONIFAY — Holmes County Health Department celebrated their first anniversary for Extended Hours Clinic Monday, April 2, in the lobby in the HC health department.

"Several health care agencies came to celebrate with us," said Outreach Specialist for HCHD Moises Vallejos. "We had a good response from the community, many health department clients were there, several local civic leaders, people running for public office, friends and family of the health department where there also."

Holly Holt gave a report on services rendered at the Extended Hours Clinic, with a total of 1,749 clients served a year, averaging about 145 clients a month.

There are no medical practices in Holmes County offering services after 5 p.m. on weekdays other than the ER at DMH.

Extended Hours Clinic is possible through a Federal grant called Low Income Pool, established to ensure continued government support for the provision of health care services to Medicaid, underinsured and uninsured populations.

"Holmes CHD applied about a year and a half ago to provide primary care services es through extended clinic hours providing much needed care to individuals that need a primary care medical home," Vallejos said. "This project will also assist in ER diversion. Other services will include community outreach, case management, on-site mental health counseling and chronic disease identification/treatment with an emphasis on diabetes."

Holmes County Health Department offers various services to the community consisting of primary care, dental, school health program, environmental health services, communicable disease surveillance, family planning services, and immunizations.

Hooked on Outdoors

The fisherman paid the price of admission and walked to the end of the pier and hooked up his Sibiki bait rig. Everyone thinks Sibiki means something in Japanese, but I asked a lady of Japanese descent, and she said it meant nothing in her native tongue. The fisherman unraveled his king rod equipped with 30-pound test line, a swivel a length of wire of about two feet and two treble hooks, one arranged one over the other to assure a hook-up if the first missed its mark.

Outdoor Life
Scott Lindsey
captainlindsey@knology.net

Below him were thousands of greenback herring and cigar minnows that one fisherman described as being so large they had their own ZIP code. The fisherman lowered the bait rig into the clouds of bait under the pier, hooking up several herring and cigar minnows.

Picking out the one he figured had the best chance of being eaten alive, he hooked the top treble hook through its tail, leaving the lower hook to swing free. Usually this free-swinging hook will be the one that foul hooks the king, thus catching a fish that would otherwise have gotten a meal and gone on its merry way.

The other baits that were not chosen to be fished with were placed into an ice chest to be used later. Dead bait sometimes can be as effective as live ones, especially on the days the bait is just not under the pier to be caught. Herring and cigar minnows seek the safety of the pilings of the pier hoping the Spanish and kings and bonito will not come under the pier to eat them. On some days there are so many under the pier, it is impossible to see the bottom.

Most fishermen, after tossing the cigar minnow out as far as possible, will not put their rods down and instead hold on for dear life. To lean a rod against the rail is an invitation to lose several hundred dollars of high-priced reel and rod. When a king hits, it usually is a violent affair and the fisherman had better be holding on with both hands.

Fighting a big fish off a pier requires the cooperation of all the fishermen on the pier. Those not hooked up need to get out of the way of the fisherman who is. After the fish is subdued to the point of exhaustion, another fisherman will assist with a gaff on a rope to hook the fish and drag it on board as the line is not sufficient to lift the fish from the water.

That's about all there is to it. Whether you are a fisherman or just a bystander, it is worth the price of admission to just walk out on one of our piers here in Bay County and watch the action.

Photos special to Florida Freedom Newspapers

Whopper Spanish like this one have become common in recent years thanks to catch limitations that have allowed more fish to reach maturity. They take many of the same lures that kings like, though they usually are found nearer the beaches and piers.

Below, large king mackerel are not the exception, though this is a nice one.

MACKEREL 2 WAYS

Both species of macks come to Panhandle early

By FRANK SARGEANT
Special to Florida Freedom Newspapers
franksargeant@charter.net

Except for the paint job and the size, you'd have a hard time telling Spanish mackerel from their larger cousins, the king mackerel. They look alike and act alike, and both are fast as greased lightning. Both also have arrived in Panhandle area waters early this year thanks to the incredibly warm winter and will provide action through mid-October. Here's a look at how to go about tangling with these toothy speedsters.

FIT FOR A KING

Kings generally travel schooled by size. The "snakes" of 7 to 12 pounds swarm together in the largest masses, usually around reef lines or directly around the largest baitfish schools. It is the migration of the bait that brings the annual migration of the gamefish — threadfins and Spanish sardines are their primary targets. Sometimes these guys are only 1 or 2 miles off the beaches.

The larger kings, 15 pounds and on up to the maximum size of 40 and even 50 pounds, more often are found around wrecks and offshore ledges, though a few jumbos also prowl the outfall of the major passes. They home in on larger baits, blue runners, cigar minnows, ladyfish, even young Spanish and bluefish.

The smaller kings usually are easy pickings, easily located because there often is a fleet of boats trolling around the larger schools. If you can get out there on a calm day in your 17-foot center console, you can catch them. Just join the trolling circle, put out a 5- to 6-inch chrome single-hook spoon like the Drone on a downrigger or No. 2 planer, and you soon will be in business. Remember to stay in the trolling pattern. Don't drive your boat through the baitfish, or you will ruin the action for everybody — and get a well-deserved cussing from the charterboat skippers for doing so.

Bigger kings can be more of a challenge. Most of the largest are caught by slow-trolling large live baits, with blue runners a favorite for their durability. Foot-long ladyfish, mullet and other inshore species also attract big bites at times. Most anglers use "stinger" rigs on these big baits; a dangling treble, size 6 in triple-x strong, is trailed back the side of the bait on a No. 6 wire — and sometimes a couple of trebles are used on larger baits. These extra hooks prevent kings from chopping off the tail of the bait — as they often do — without getting hooked.

Kings are not difficult to handle after the first run. But that first run of a really big one can clean a spool in seconds, so reels capable of handling plenty of line are a must. Most anglers like at least 300 yards on the spool — tests of 20 to 25 are common in spinning gear, 30 to 40 in conventional. Keep your drag light, even with heavy tests.

SPANISH SURPRISE

Although Spanish mackerel never reach the maximum size of kings, it has become fairly common in recent years to catch them up to 7 pounds, unheard of 20 years ago when heavy commercial harvest made it rare for a Spanish every to reach it's third birthday. These days there are plenty of 5-year-old fish out there, and they run and fight just like the kingfish.

Spanish are great fish for kids and inexperienced anglers because they seem almost eager to take the hook at times, and if the first one misses the second or third does not.

Spanish average around 2 to 3 pounds so heavy gear is definitely not called for. A 7-foot medium action spinning rod, 2500-sized reel and a spool of 10-pound test microfiber is the ticket, allowing the fish to show their stuff and yet with enough capacity to handle the occasional 6 to 7 pounder. Again, pier tackle needs to be significantly heavier to ease control of the fish from the span, but even here be sure to set your drag light to avoid pull-outs.

Though Spanish have sharp teeth, they also have sharp eyes. You can catch them on live baits with No. 2 wire, but you will get a lot more hits on artificials if you go to clear fluorocarbon or hard mono in 25 to 30 pound test. Tie to the microfiber with a double uni-knot. Avoid snaps and swivels because macks sometimes home in on them, apparently thinking they are extra tiny glass minnows, and will cut you off.

FROM HOOKING TO COOKING

Both kings and Spanish are good on the table with proper preparation. They have a more "fishy" taste than some species. But get them on ice immediately when caught and cook them without freezing, and they can make excellent eating. Fillet, skin and remove the red line and you have gotten rid of most of that fishy taste — the remaining fillets are good grilled, baked or broiled or in an Italian tomato and parmesan casserole, among many other recipes.

SIZE AND BAG LIMITS

The limit on Spanish is a generous 15 fish daily, minimum size 12 inches to the fork. Note that small kingfish look very much like Spanish, but the limit on kings is two daily, 24 inches to the fork; you can differentiate the species because the Spanish has a black dorsal fin, while the king dorsal is blue-gray.

TALLADEGA, HERE WE COME

Times-Advertiser to provide live coverage of Aaron's Dream Weekend

By CATHRINE LAMB

clamb@chipleypaper.com

Ladies and gentlemen, we're going to Talladega. The one and only Cecilia Spears and I have gotten the go-ahead from our editor and the credentials from the speedway. There will be live updates from my Twitter account @catspitstop all weekend as we attend the Aaron's Dream Weekend at Talladega, Ala.

Because there were no races this weekend, I figured what better time to give my fellow NASCAR fans a brief history on the Talladega Superspeedway?

Known as NASCAR's most competitive track, not that long ago it was just farmland next to two abandoned airport runways the government had sold to the city of Talladega after World War II. One day, Anniston, Ala., insurance executive Bill Ward, a race car driver and fan, and William H.G. (Bill) France, who happens to be the founder of NASCAR and International Speedway Corporation, found the land in North Talladega County following a causal conversation in Daytona in the mid-1960s.

There was a meeting with then-mayor of Talladega James Hardwick and some of the other city officials in a restaurant in Anniston in 1966. France asked the group to think about putting the track at the site, and after a trip to the Firecracker 400 in Daytona, they agreed to the track, which was at first called the Alabama International Motor Speedway. In 1989, it was renamed Talladega Superspeedway after they saw the economic impact race fans had on Daytona. The track is 2.66 miles long, has banking of 33 degrees on each end, 18 degree banking in the tri-oval and is four lanes wide. Many of the cars have reached speeds above 220 miles per hour in the backstretch, which is nearly 4,000 feet long. The all-reserved 212-acre infield has room for thousands, and the grandstand seats an astonishing 143,231 people.

Construction began on the 2,000-acre speedway site on May 23, 1968. The first race was held on Saturday, Sept. 13, 1969, the Bama 400 Grand Touring, where Ken Rush drove his Chevrolet Camaro into Victory Lane. Then on Sunday, Sept. 14, 1969, the first Grand National race (now the NASCAR Sprint Cup), Richard Brickhouse became the first driver to win a major race at the Talladega 500 (now the Good Sams Club 500).

That first race didn't go off without some worries. At practice for that first major race, there were problems with the tires holding out for more than just a few laps.

Talladega is known as one of the fastest, most competitive superspeedways in the world for one reason: In that first practice, Charlie Glotzbach won the pole position with a speed of 199.466 miles per hour. The tires were declared unsafe by the Professional Drivers Association led by Richard Petty because the speeds the drivers were going weren't allowing the tires to hold out. But France knew there were thousands of fans who had traveled to Talladega to see the race, so it went on, using some of the drivers who raced the day before and the drivers who had decided not to race in the boycott. All 500 miles of that first race were run without any major accidents. France decided after that first race at Talladega to rain check the house for any future race at Daytona and Talladega. This action that France took broke up the PDA, and it dissolved two years later.

Talladega has been a place for many of the drivers to set and break many records over the years. It wasn't too long before the speedway became known for its speed and tough driving conditions. Being one of the fastest and most competitive tracks, it has played a very big role in the career of many of the top drivers of today. Pete Hamilton was the first driver to win two of the major events in 1970 driving Plymouths by Petty Enterprises. The first driver to win three years in a row was David Person. He won those three races in 1972, 1973 and 1974. Wining both races in 1975 and the spring event in 1976 and the race in 1980, Buddy Baker was the first four-time winner at Talladega. Drivers who have since joined Baker in that category are Jeff Gordon, Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison. In 1987, the world stock car record was made by Bill Elliott, when he clocked a speed of 212.809 miles per hour during qualifying. The record for a 500 mile stock car record was made in 1997 during a caution-free spring Winston Select 500 with a speed of 188.354 miles per hour by Mark Martin. He also won this race. The only person to win 10 NASCAR Sprint Cup races at Talladega was the late great Intimidator (Dale Earnhardt Sr.), he won those races in 1983, 1984, two races in 1990, 1991, two races in 1993, 1995 1999 and 2000.

The Diehard 500 became the first 500-mile race at Talladega to have 1,000 official lead changes in 1993. This is a feat because the track was only 25 years old at the time, and the Diehard 500 was only 188 laps. The first sell-out in Talladega history was when they moved the second event of the year from the summer to October in 1997. When the race was moved to October, it was placed into the schedule for the 10 Championship Cup races, which Talladega has enjoyed since 1997.

PET TALK

Excessive scratching could mean allergies

With the emergence of springtime, comes the arrival of allergies. Although the landscape is lush, many people experience the beauty that comes with the warmer weather as well as the bothersome allergy symptoms. Pets can also be affected by allergies and it is important to be mindful of any symptoms that your pet might be displaying.

"People sneeze and wheeze with allergies, while dogs tend to itch and scratch," says Dr. Adam Patterson, clinical assistant professor and a board certified dermatologist at the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences. "The hallmark sign of allergic skin disease is itch that can be manifested as licking, chewing, rubbing, biting, scooting, head shaking, and/or scratching. Typically, the face, ears, paws, armpits, groin, and rump are the most affected sites."

Patterson explains that animals with allergic skin disease are highly prone to recurring skin and/or ear infections involving bacteria and yeast. Infections can cause increased itch, redness, pimples, blackheads, scabs, dander, hair loss, skin thickening, and odor. Horses many times will break out in hives.

SPECIAL TO EXTRA

"Animals tend to be allergic to many of the same things people are hypersensitive to such as pollen, mold, dust, house dust mite, and foodstuffs," Patterson explains. "An exception would be fleas — the most common thing dogs and cats are allergic to. Despite this, many people are in 'fleanial' and refuse to believe just a few flea bites can be triggering the itch response in their pet." Likewise, horse owners may not be aware how just a few insect bites could be responsible for or contributing to itchy skin disease.

Allergic skin disease can be mistaken for many other forms of skin disease. A veterinary dermatologist is trained to work with primary care veterinarians to get down to the bottom of how to best diagnose and manage skin and ear disease, including allergies, in animals. See www.acvd.org for more information.

It is important to understand that allergies can be managed, but not cured, just as with humans. The goal is to reduce the extent and severity of signs, not completely eliminate them.

"Management regimens might include increased frequency of bathing (washing pollens off the skin surface), antimicrobials or antibiotics, flea prevention, fatty acids, antihistamines, change in diet, steroids, and immunotherapy, also known as desensitization or hyposensitization. The use of the latter can be determined through a good step-wise diagnostic approach along with allergy skin testing and administered by way of allergy shots or oral allergy drops," says Patterson.

When it is time to take your pet in for allergy skin testing?

"Typically, dogs should have allergy symptoms for at least 5-6 months out of the year before considering skin testing for environmental allergies, which include reactivity to pollen, molds, house dust mite, and house dust, in order for the diagnostic tests and treatment to be cost effective over the long haul," Patterson recommends.

Patterson explains that rainfall cuts down on airborne pollen and may provide itch relief to pets, but at the same time rain may cause plants to produce more pollen over the next few weeks. Indeed, rain fall might worsen flea and mold allergies because moisture and humidity are favorable to fleas and mold. Of course, rain has no effect on food-related allergic skin diseases.

"Given the mild winter and lack of national weather fronts during the 2011-2012 seasons, pollen is likely to be at an all-time high this year. Consequently, there likely will be many itchy pets this year," says Patterson.

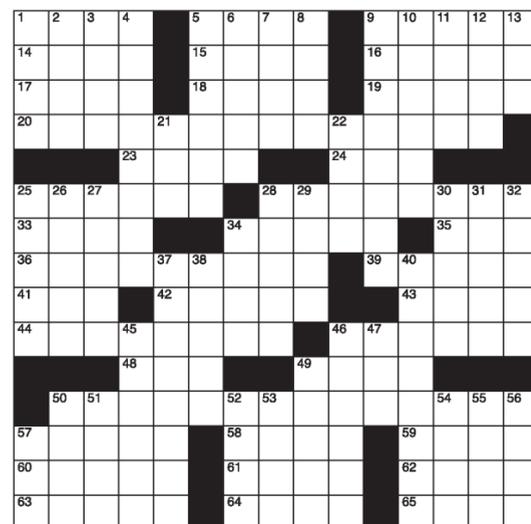

Allergies are certainly not an uncommon thing to see in pets. It is important to be aware of the symptoms and to notify a veterinarian when they persist. For more information please visit vetmed.tamu.edu/large-animal-hospital/dermatology/allergies.

How I can make a difference

By Bobby Ray Rackley
Special To Extra

EDITOR'S NOTE: This essay was submitted by Bobby Ray Rackley, an inmate at Graceville Correctional Facility. His essay won a writing contest based on the theme, "How To Make A Difference."

I believe there are many ways that I can make a difference in this world. However, I believe the most important is the impact and influence I have on those around me. I strive to be a positive influence on everyone that I come in contact with on a day-to-day basis. I am a firm believer in the age-old saying "Lead by example."

Therefore the best way for me to make a difference is to be the absolute best man that I can be, and encourage others to follow my example. I believe all of us have the power within ourselves to change the world. The problem is most of us have absolutely no idea how to begin to accomplish such a noble goal. How many of us even take the time out from the rat race and our hectic schedules to ask ourselves

"how can I make the world a better place?" most of us automatically assume "there is nothing I can do I am just one person, one voice, out of millions."

The fact of the matter is, though, change begins with one. If I want to change the world then it starts with me. I have to be the type of person that I expect others to be. I have to treat others the way I want to be treated. This life principle is known as the "Golden Rule" and I can think of no better principle to live by. I can make a difference in tomorrow by each life I touch today. The idea of making a difference in the world is not so far fetched. In fact just the opposite, it's quite plausible.

It doesn't take all that much to make a positive impact and be a good influence to others. Little things mean a lot more than most people think. Just a kind word or a smile can make a difference and brighten someone's day. I try to smile often after all smiles are contagious. Have you ever tried talking to someone that was smiling at you? You can't help but smile back at them. Even when you are in a bad mood, the smile is automatic when someone is smiling at you, it just come natural. I like to speak kind words and compliment others. It is amazing to watch the transformation on someone's face and how they just light up when you shower them with praise. A few kind words can lift someone's spirit and change their whole outlook on the day.

The people around us have a lot more influence on our lives than we realize. I'm sure you have heard it said "you can tell who a man is, by who his friends are." Many young people in today's society blame their mistakes on peer pressure. They are just trying to fit in, or be one of the guys. This is proof that we all are influenced by the people around us. I believe deep in my heart if I had more positive role models growing up, I would not be in prison today. My influences were alcoholics, and street hustlers, and that is just what I became. I thank God that he allowed me to live long enough to see the error of my ways. I thank God for the wisdom I gave gained. I now realize that I am an influence on the people around me. This means I have a huge responsibility that's why it is so important for me to be the best man I can be, not only for myself but for the ones that I may influence, that call me friend.

I once heard it said that who we were is who we are; our past has shaped us into who we are today. Therefore, how we live today determines who we are tomorrow. The bible says that we reap what we sow, therefore I choose to sow good crops like kindness, compassion, generosity, friendship, and love. I sow good crops today so that I can reap good crops in my future. The only time I ever want to look down on my brother is when I am helping him up. I can make a difference just by being a good man.

In closing I would like to offer a word of encouragement to all who read this. Join me in my mission to be the best I can be and make it your mission as well. Think of all the ones that we may influence as a group instead of just an individual, A chain reaction of good that can go throughout the world. Yes, I can make a difference and with your help, we can change the world by the way we influence others.

Be careful where you stare, little eyes

By THE REV. JAMES L. SNYDER

Whenever I am out in public, I try conducting myself with the greatest of care knowing that people are watching. The thing that bothers me the most is that many people have never mastered the fine art of how to dress in public.

Some people have never been taught how to dress, let alone how to dress in public. Whenever I go to the mall, and believe me it is as seldom as possible, I cannot help noticing some of these people.

What I cannot understand is why young men wear pants too big for them and young women wear pants too small for them. Perhaps we ought to get a little group together and try to reverse this trend. Somebody got the wrong information.

I was in the mall the other day and noticed several young men in front of me with trousers several sizes too big and were constantly falling down. One hand was grabbing their trousers while the other hand was hanging onto a cellphone.

I wanted to go up and tell them that there is this marvelous new invention called "The Belt" that would solve the problem that they were having. Once they have "The Belt," they can put it on and forget about their trousers falling down to their ankles. If there is anything I do not want to see it is somebody's trouser falling down to their ankles.

Criticize me if you want to, but I simply cannot not follow these young men walking down in mall. By the time I cover the space of three stores, I am a nervous wreck, wondering when those trousers are actually going to fall.

Young women are no different. It seems to me that most young women purchase their entire wardrobe when they are in the first grade. At that time, the clothing fits very nicely. By the time these young women hit the 10th grade, those first-grade clothing are not only out of style, but fit no more. Where are their mothers?

I know the economy is bad, but really, is it so bad that people cannot afford to upgrade their wardrobe, as they get older and consequently bigger? Shouldn't there be some sale on mirrors these days?

If I were a congressman in Washington, D.C., I would work very hard to pass a bill that would make it illegal to walk out of your house on any given morning without first looking into the mirror to see if everything is covered. That is the kind of change I can believe in.

As I get older, it gets more difficult to conduct myself as a gentleman because there is so much I do not want to see.

Last week I had to return an item to a store and was unprepared for what I was to encounter: I assumed I was well prepared for the day. I went through the normal routine of exercising my eyes to look upward. I try my best when I am out in public to look into the eyes of people, especially those of the gentler sex. This particular day I had really met my match.

I stood in line waiting to return my item and I was not thinking too much about the process. I was humming to myself some hymn that was on my mind at the time and was not paying attention to the surroundings. As I say, I trained my eyes to look upward when I am out in public.

Eventually, it was my turn to go to the counter and return the item. I walked up and was aghast. I said to myself, "Look at the eyes, look at the eyes, look at the eyes." For some reason my eyes were not paying any attention whatsoever. All those years of training seem to have gone out the window.

My eyes were in a staring mode and I did not know how to break it.

It really is not my fault; I think people should take personal responsibility for their person when they go out in public. They should make sure that everything is prim and proper because you never know what you are going to run into in any given day.

For a moment, I had forgotten what I was at the counter for; I tried to shift my eyes into a higher level and it was all I could do to communicate what I needed to communicate at the time.

But my eyes, oh, my eyes. They certainly were not helping me in this regard.

I might as well come clean and confess. As I walked up to the counter to return my item I could not help but notice that the woman behind the counter was wearing, and you will not believe me, a beard. Yes, I said a beard, whiskers and all. I could not believe it at first. I thought maybe my eyes were trying to get back at me for being so harsh on them the last few months.

But no, there in full view of everybody, including my pair of eyes, was a woman with a beard any man would have been proud to wear.

All I could think of at the time was what Job said. "I made a covenant with mine eyes; why then should I think upon a maid?" (Job 31:1 KJV).

My motto: be careful, little eyes. where you stare.

God Loves the Poor

The Bible contains over 2000 references to poverty and social justice issues, with at least 200 references telling us directly to help the poor. Throughout the Old and New Testament we are commanded to help those in need, whether they are widows, orphans, immigrants, or the impoverished. Nowhere are we advised to question whether they are lazy or why they find themselves in dire straits. We are simply told to help them. The Bible even institutes particular social programs to help the poor. Farmers are instructed to leave the corners of their fields unharvested and not go over their fields a second time, but to leave the gleanings for the poor. (Leviticus 19:9) Perhaps if we had such wise social programs today, updated to reflect the realities of modern economies, there would be less poverty, or at least there might be less misery amongst the impoverished. It is probably true that we shall always have the poor with us, and this makes it more important, not less, that we should minister to their needs.

"The poor are shunned even by their neighbors, but the rich have many friends. It is a sin to despise one's neighbor, but blessed is the one who is kind to the needy."
Proverbs 14:20-21

He then went on to teach middle school math in Ft. Lauderdale before retiring to Marianna in 1987. Grant loved food, loved to eat and especially loved his morning routine of meeting with friends at Hardee's, eating sausage biscuits and drinking coffee. Marianna proved an excellent place for another of Grant's favorite activities — fishing. He loved life on Merritt's Mill Pond, loved his little fishing boat and the friends he made in Marianna.
