BONIFAY — With the aid of County Engineer Cliff Knauer, the Holmes County Board of County Commissioners was able to compile a list of bridges and roads that meet the federal funding standards and approved to send them to the Florida Department of Transportation during their regularly scheduled meeting on June 26.

“I was sure to include Commissioner Jim King’s requested bridge on Alford Road to the list,” Knauer said.

Before the list was approved, Knauer added a request from Commissioner Kenneth Williams to add the intersection of Highway

2 and County Road 173.

“We’ve been having some serious safety issues at that intersection,” Williams said. “I don’t know if it’s a design flaw and we need to put a four-way stop there or what, but we’ve had quite a few accidents in that area, and it needs to be looked at.”

Knauer also agreed to look into King’s request to seek funding to put in a boat ramp at the Choctawhatchee River in Holmes County on the west end of U.S. 90.

Knauer said there was a grant called the Florida Boating Improvement Grant that could help extensively in that area, and King said there were funds available that were dedicated only to that purpose and could be used as matching funds.

Local efforts replenish Mia Brown scholarship

cspears@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY — Mia Chay Brown's family established the Mia Chay Brown Scholarship Fund to carry on her memory as someone who helped others and now the local community wants to help replenish that scholarship.

Lori Patterson, owner of the Bead Garden in Bonifay, was one of those in the community who realized the willingness to contribute to the scholarship.

"It started with Mia's mom coming in and wanting me to sale these bracelets for donations to go to the Mia Chay Brown Scholarship," said Patterson. "Then Sorrelli donated a bracelet/ear ring set to be used in a drawing, so that whoever made a donation for the Mia Brown bracelet for the Mia Chay Brown Scholarship could enter to win this Sorrelli set."

The Sorrelli set was made specifically with Brown in mind, using stones called Harmony, which ties in with what friends and family described Brown's theme of love, peace and harmony.

All donations for Mia bracelets go to the Mia Chay Brown Scholarship Fund.

Bracelets bought at The Bead Garden in Bonifay will be entered into a drawing for the donated Sorrelli jewelry set, which has an estimated value of $129.60.

The drawing for the Sorrelli set will be held at 6 p.m. on July 9, the day after Brown's birthday.

Patterson said there have been several businesses from all over Holmes County who want to donate items for future raffles to go towards replenishing the Mia Chay Brown Scholarship.

Donations also can be made at the First Federal Bank formerly known as the Bank of Bonifay.

PTO, and serves other committees as well. She has logged in numerous school volunteer hours over the years.

"It's been a joy to volunteer at the school, because helping children is well worth it. Children are our most valuable asset," Kolmetz said.

For ten years, she has served on the Chipola Workforce Board and is acting vice president. For the past 25 years she has owned and operated her own business in Ponce de Leon.

"I am an honest, hard working individual with strong family values," Kolmetz said.

"Our children's education and needs will be my top priority. If elected to this office, I will actively work to serve the people of Holmes County.

"I will devote full time to this position, be available to the public, attend board meetings, and be seen in all the schools," Kolmetz said.

Kolmetz also said she will donate 10 percent of her annual school board member salary as a scholarship to a deserving high school student in the Holmes County district each year, if given the opportunity to serve on the board.

The board approved of holding a public hearing for the abandonment of Kelly Lane.

"We need to hold a public hearing to see what the public has to say about the abandonment of Kelly Lane," said County Attorney Jeff Goodman.

The board approved of the Holmes County Health Department's request to send a county employee in maintenance to check out an issue they're having at the dental clinic.

Of 15 applicants, the Board approved of hiring Travis Maples as the county Mosquito Control sprayer for a probationary period of six months.

Of three employees, the Board approved of Andy Sharp as road foreman for District 3 effective July 28.

The board approved of Cody Truet and Joseph Edmonson as the Emergency Management Services' newest emergency medical technicians.

HC EMS was awarded a grant for $140,000 with a 10 percent match, and the board approved of HC EMS pursuing a grant with a 5 percent match for new cardiac monitors.

The Board approved of Goodman and required staff to update the Holmes County Equal Employment Opportunity Plan, which hasn't been updated since 2005.

Commissioner Phillip Music sought help from the county attorney and county engineer to widen and round off a hair-pin curve that was considered dangerous on a county road.

Knauer advised that they meet up with the landowner to see if he had a survey of his land done and see about acquiring that corner of land to round off the road.

The Board approved of SHIP Replacement Projects for Pickron and Thomas and requested that from then on, applications come through the Board for discussion in case questions arise about the project.

"I know we've got questions about these two projects and we don't have a representative here to ask," Williams said. "It would be good to have someone to clear up these questions before we approve of them."

The next HC BOCC meeting will be 9 a.m. July 10 at the Board of County Commissioners board room behind the Holmes County Court House.

CLERK OF COURT from page A1

She also has experience with the Florida Department of Corrections personnel department, Walton County Sheriff's Office as dispatcher, Chipley Police Department as administrative assistant, and for more than two years she has been a legal secretary for the Office of Public Defender.

"Over eight years of my experience was in the courthouse, working closely with the clerk's office and I know the staff and we have a good working relationship," she said.

"I have worked with several different agencies with different roles, just like the clerk's varied roles," Sherrouse said. "All my experience has been related to the duties of Clerk of Court."

Sherrouse is the daughter of Pauline Steverson Farmer and the late Max Foster Farmer Sr. of Bonifay and the granddaughter of the late Mila and Esther Steverson of Bonifay. She has been married for more than 30 years and has four children and six grandchildren.

Sherrouse is a member of the Little Rock Assembly of God Church and said she enjoys playing the piano and singing.

She said she has received training with the Florida's public records management program and many computer data bases. "I attended the demonstration of the new E-filing system (electronically filing system) for the clerk's office, and per the Florida Supreme court, it is becoming mandatory for some matters on Sept. 1 and then for other matters, it will be Oct. 1, 2013."

"I have extensive experience in record keeping, budgeting, managing cash flows, computer data processing, accounting and payroll, office and staff management, working with individuals and groups, multi-tasking and preparing legal documents," Sherrouse said.

"For more than 30 years, I have shown to the community by the way I have lived and worked that I am accountable, honest, have morals and principles, am a hard worker, courteous, and treat people with respect," Sherrouse said. "These are all necessary attributes to carry out the duties of the Clerk of Court and to be the clerk and bookkeeper for the Board of County Commissioners."

"I believe that we should stand for what's right and that being a person of integrity is better than being popular," she said. "I live daily by a simple code of conduct — 'Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.'"

Bonifay Kiwanis discusses The FARM

CECILIA SPEARS

547-9414 | @WCN_HCT
cspears@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY — During the regularly scheduled Bonifay Kiwanis Club meeting on Wednesday, June 27, guest speaker David Lauen explained the new program coming to Holmes County called The FARM, standing for Faith-based Addiction Regeneration Ministries.

The FARM is based on the concept of Dunklin, City of Refuge located in Okeechobee that “provides a community environment, biblical instruction, and work opportunities for men trapped in chemical addiction to become new creatures in Christ Jesus and help rebuild and reclaim their lives,” Lauen explained.

“Chip and Jill Chester are the ones who are going to head up our facility and minister to men and their families,” said Lauen. “They’re from this area and know that the FARM is what this part of Florida needs. Chip grew up in Panama City and Jill in Bonifay and Chip’s testimony is a great story of how God can change a man’s life and save his family from the brink of destruction.”

“God restores lives and families and gives healing and hope to any situation that seems impossible and hopeless,” said Chip Chester. “After a twenty-year cocaine and alcohol addiction, I was in this bottomless pit of self-condemnation, depression, loneliness, and I just

ABOUT FARM

The FARM of Northwest Florida will be a non-profit organization and will be a place of regeneration for men and families struggling with alcohol and drug addiction. Men come into the program with low self-esteem and little hope that their lives can ever change. We believe the Christian approach to alcohol and drug addiction produces the most effective and enduring results. They experience a personal relationship with God, a healthy work ethic, and freedom from the bondage of addiction. The “New Birth in Christ” achieves not only sobriety, but more important, a permanent and lasting relationship with God.

wanted to die.”

Chip Chester said that he’d committed himself to several secular recovery treatment programs, but would still feel “lost and desperate” afterwards.

“The battle with addiction and everything that goes along with it nearly destroyed me, my marriage and my family,” said Chip Chester. “At the lowest point in my life, I finally gave up doing things my way and looked up to see Jesus Christ standing right before me for the first time, face to face and understood His love for me.”

“It was through the grace of God that my marriage and family have been restored and now we know that God has called us to bring hope to the hopeless and shine His light for others in need of a Savior,” said Chip Chester. “What Satan had meant to use as evil, God restored for His glory and our ministry here at the FARM.”

The projected date of opening their locations is in September of 2013 and there are three locations in mind: the camp grounds in Bethlehem, the old Caryville work camp and a location near a lake in Vernon.

“With the prayers and support of our community I believe we can be a valuable asset to the community and those in need,” Chip Chester said.

If you are interested in learning more about the FARM visit their website at www.thefarmnwfl.org.

If you are interested in making a donation make the donation payable to First Baptist Church of Bonifay with The FARM written in the Memo area.

“This is a non-denomination organization open to everyone,” Lauen said. “The First Baptist Church of Bonifay was just kind enough to donate their time and effort to help this project move along.”

Local forestry officer promoted to national level

By Brian Goddin

After nearly two decades of playing a very important role in fighting a few thousand Northwest Florida wildfires while protecting possibly in the tens of thousands of homes along the way, Chipola Forestry Center duty officer Starla Peters is moving on to what she believes will be a new adventure.

“I do love my job; and I love dispatching but it’s time for a new challenge in my life.” That’s the life-long Holmes County native’s optimistic view of not only her past service but also what’s to come.

STARLA PETERS

Walton, Holmes, Washington, Jackson, Calhoun, Gulf, and Bay. Besides dispatching on the radio to Florida Forest Service wildland firefighters and crews during wildfires, she and other duty officers like her are also responsible for greeting and issuing prescribed fire authorizations to the members of the public usually over the phone often in the morning hours in those same seven counties. It’s estimated that Starla alone has probably issued several thousand burn authorizations during her nearly 19 years serving the community since September of 1993.

Starla will still actually continue to be employed by the Florida Forest Service (FFS) but her new role is a joint venture with the U.S. Forest Service and although it will be based in the FFS’s Forest Protection Bureau in Tallahassee, she will work from the Florida Interagency Coordination Center. The first-of-its-kind position is the Dispatch Center Management Specialist.

Starla has been selected from several other highly qualified people from similar dispatching and leadership backgrounds. She will continue to use her skills and experience in coordinating and communications although perhaps on a much higher and broader level as she interacts among national agencies particularly in times of great need and wide-spread disaster relief efforts like hurricanes, floods, and wildfires for example.

How Hearing Loss Occurs

A. Loud sound waves pass through your outer ear.

B. The eardrum, at the entrance to the middle ear, transmits sound through tiny vibrating bones.

C. Tiny hair cells convert the vibrations into electrical pulses in the inner ear, which are then transmitted to the brain

D. Those tiny hair cells can be damaged by loud noises, causing hearing loss.

WE ARE DEDICATED TO PATIENT SATISFACTION

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,
I have been a resident of this county since the early '80s.

I married a young man from this county many years ago – 1942, in fact. So I consider this my home. I am a volunteer at the Council on Aging.

I am a registered voter, and I have voted in every election since I was old enough to vote. Back then I was 21 years of age. Quite frankly, I am deeply concerned.

Our beloved country is in deep trouble. We need to wake up and do something about it. First of all, we as a nation need to turn back to God. We need to pray. We need to register to vote, and we need to vote. So many people, both federal and state, have made a career of holding office. We need to vote them out and put someone new in. We do not need career politicians in charge. We need some new ideas and new blood for the lifeline of our nation. Please, friends and neighbors, register to vote and cast your vote for someone new! Maybe, God willing, it can get better. Give it a chance. We can make a difference if we make our voices heard. We are a democratic nation — we each and every one have a choice — we can vote and be a part of it. A praying nation gets things done! Remember — God loves you and so do I! Thank you.

Slingshots were standard for boys in my day

As I sat out in the blueberry shed this past week watching all the birds flitting about, I thought about shooting them with a slingshot, if I had one. Actually, I had no desire to kill any of the birds that live up our back yard even though they eat their fair share of the blueberries. They also eat a lot of insects and relieve boredom when business is slow. But sitting there watching the birds got me thinking back how country boys and probably town boys, too, often carried a sling shot in their back overall pocket.

The stock was often made of a forked branch from a small tree limb. It had to be sturdy enough to withstand the pressure when the rubber straps were pulled back to create propulsion for the rock, which was held in the leather holder. Sometimes the stock would be carved from a solid piece of wood if you had an uncle like our Uncle Archie who was a whittler.

I helped my brother Clyde make many slingshots because his were always of the tree branch variety and wore out pretty soon. After finding the “Y” shaped branch, the next step was to cut the rubber straps. He used a piece of inner tube, which would be kept about the barn or car house for other purposes. Since he was left-handed, I always had to cut the rubber pieces for him and then the oval piece of leather, which he'd scrounged from an old brogan shoe. Since I was there I could also hold the rubber straps over the notched upper ends of the stock while he wrapped several turns of strong twine around. To the ends of the strap, more strong twine was tied securely and then pushed through a hole in the leather holder on both sides and tied securely.

Now, as soon as he found some good solid rocks he was prepared to attack the bird population or just target practice. When a group of boys got together, there might be a war with dirt clods that would break up when a hit was scored and no one was hurt. Sometimes when they weren't supervised, grains of dry corn made stinging hits on bare skin. However, this was strongly discouraged by adults who knew that a misguided missile could quickly damage an eye.

When a group of boys got together, there might be a war with dirt clods that would break up when a hit was scored and no one was hurt.

Clyde was the main hunter of my four brothers, so he got in a lot of practice at squirrels, birds, barn rats or anything that moved. My oldest brother Jim carried a slingshot, but the first time he shot a bird, he accidentally killed it. He brought it to Mama saying, “Oh, I killed it.”

Jack, my husband, tells about being chased through the corn patch by his sister because he cut the watermelon so that the heart came out on one side. He grabbed it and ran. His punishment came, however, when the slingshot that he carried in his overall back pocket caught on a corn stalk. As he continued to run, it released and the stock hit him in the chin. He carried that scar as a reminder to share the watermelon heart.

I wondered if slingshots had gone out of use or had gone hi-tech, so I visited the toy department. None was found there, but in the sporting goods department, for about $8 you can buy a metal and rubber tubing one, and for an additional $4, a box of ammunition can be had. My former student Brady Calhoun was most helpful and explained that the standard ammunition was necessary in competition. (I just thought of looking for small pebbles.)

Then I went to a web site and found much more sophisticated models of slingshots with higher prices. They were recommended to carry camping or to have about the farm to shoot predators. They were also recommended to take hunting. Since they are silent, the hunter can relieve the boredom of waiting for a deer or a turkey to wander by, target practicing with the slingshot.

Even though I helped Clyde construct slingshots, I never mastered the art of using one. I kept drawing back too far and shooting myself in the ear. Do you suppose David's sling with which he killed the giant, Goliath, was anything like I am describing? How about slingshot construction as a craft idea for vacation Bible school? Coach Mac could have taught them that I'm sure.

‘We chewed on all we bit off’

The old adage, “he bit off more than he can chew” could well apply to all the projects the Prattler took on during the months of May and June.

In early April, your writer had a visit from Blaine Waide, state folklorist with the Florida Department of State, with the two of us entering into a taped interview, all alone, in the local museum of the Washington County Historical Society.

From this session, he concluded that the “prattler” would be an acceptable participant for the Florida Folk Festival, scheduled for May 25, 26 and 27, to be held at the Stephen Foster Memorial State Park in White Springs, Fla. My assignment was in storytelling and jokes. This park is on the banks of the historic Suwannee River as it winds its way around the sleepy town, which is steeped in Florida History.

Preparation for the upcoming event demanded much of my time and effort during the entire month of May. Thanks to Scott Sweeney of Falling Waters State Park for the beautiful, professionally prepared collage, which portrayed much of this area's bountiful history. Thanks also our granddaughter Courtney Wells, a senior at the University of Georgia, who methodically assembled a similar, colorful collage, depicting the history of the Panhandle Watermelon Festival.

These pictures were taken from the from the mass of pictures, brochures, writings and other memorabilia that yours truly has in his archives from the thirty years of heading up the watermelon festival event for 30 long years. They are now on display in the local museum.

Both of these exhibits were displayed in the Folk Life Tent at the White Springs event at a table especially reserved for the Washington County delegation, and other participants from all across the state of Florida. Hester and our youngest son Gordon assisted in “manning” our assigned location and served as official ambassadors in talking to those who stopped by to view our popular arrangement of pictures and histories of life in Washington County.

Located next to us were Dalton Carter and his son Randy, who is now retired from his position as federal probation officer in Jacksonville.

He and his family are now making their home next to Dalton and Mady in the Wausau area. Dalton took a vast collection of materials depicting the long history of the First Saturday in August Wausau Fun Day, which is also known as “Possum Day.”

He made three stage appearances, speaking ably on the humble beginnings of the noted festival in Wausau and bringing the listeners up to date on what the event has developed into during its 40-year tenure.

Dalton and I shared the Folk Life Tent with Danny Sylvester of Marianna. Danny organized the Living Heritage Festival at Renaissance Park 10 years ago, in his home area. His goals are to preserve traditional knowledge about agricultural life in African-American communities. He highlights such traditions as cane grinding, hog butchering, sage broom making and corn shelling.

Also under the big tent was Rebecca Miller, who grew up on a large farm near Sneads and now calls Holmes County near Noma, Fla., her farm home. Rebecca's specialty was demonstrating the art of canning, or preserving, the produce grown on small farms or gardens in northwest Florida. She conducted daily workshops on canning and preserving. The inviting aroma from her table drew many park visitors to the location.

Ruben Hill and nephew, Jamie Lee, of Blountstown, demonstrated a worm “grunting” procedure that bring prized earth worms to the surface, providing fish bait for fishermen at the family business, which has thrived in South Georgia and North Florida for generations.

Add the historic and classic watermelon festival, just passed, which the former chairman of 30 years can't seem to totally break away from — and maybe really does not want to break away from! The event does add a trite on the plate for the writer to “chew on.”

Apparently we adequately “chewed on all we bit off” during the busy months of May and June. We will testify that it was all enjoyable “chewing” and we would gladly do it again.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES-ADVERTISER

At left, lights from a fire truck streak across a burning hillside in a time exposure as the Dahl fire burns, south of Roundup, Mont., overnight June 27. At right, an entire neighborhood burns near the foothills of Colorado Springs, Colo., on June 26. A towering wildfire destroyed dozens of houses overnight, though the intensity of the blaze kept officials from being able to fully assess the damage to the state's second-largest city.

Feds commit additional resources to combat western wildfires

Special To The News

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Forest Service, Department of the Interior, the Department of Defense and FEMA announced on Thursday more air support and additional Fire Management Grants to bolster the federal effort to protect life and public safety in response to fires in Western states.

Twenty-one airtankers continued to cycle in and out of firefighting action Friday across the western states, and more than 8,800 personnel, more than 550 fire engines and 170 helicopters are operating on wildfires around the U.S. Approximately half of active federal wildfire-fighting resources are currently staged in Colorado. More than 1,000 federal, state and local firefighters, approximately 70 fire engines and six helicopters are fighting the aggressive Waldo Canyon fire today in the hillsides west of Colorado Springs.

This includes four C-130 aircraft provided by the Department of Defense, equipped with U.S. Forest Service Modular Airborne Fire Fighting Systems, which have conducted 47 air drops and have dropped more than 127,500 gallons of retardant on the Waldo Canyon and Flagstaff fires.

"We are committed to continuing to do everything we can to provide the firefighters, aircraft and equipment necessary to suppress some of the most challenging wildfires we've experienced in years," said Tom Harbour, U.S. Forest Service director of Fire and Aviation Management. "The U.S. military has been a key partner in wildland firefighting for decades, serving as ground firefighters on the ground and supporting our air fleet with additional tankers."

The United States Army has also provided bulldozers, other heavy equipment and over 150 soldiers to cut fire breaks in response to the fires. Twenty-two fire trucks from five military bases including the Air Force Academy have joined the effort.

Fire activity in the Rocky Mountains, Eastern Great Basin and northern Rockies has significantly increased over the last few days, causing the National Preparedness Level to be raised to 4 on Wednesday. Preparedness Levels are dictated by burning conditions, fire activity and resource availability. The five Preparedness Levels range from 1 to 5, with 5 being the highest level. Each Preparedness Level has specific management directions. As the Preparedness Levels rise, more federal and state employees become available for fire mobilization if needed.

"We are continuing to coordinate closely with local, state, and tribal partners as we deploy resources through the National Interagency Fire Center," said Kim Thorsen, who oversees emergency management, security and law enforcement at the Department of the Interior. "The protection of human safety and communities remains the top priority as we battle wildfires across the West in very challenging conditions."

The National Multi-Agency Coordination Group establishes National Preparedness Levels throughout the calendar year to help assure that wildland firefighting resources are ready to respond to new incidents.

On Wednesday, FEMA approved Fire Management Assistance Grants (FMAGs) for Montana's Ash Creek Fire in Powder River and Rosebud Counties; and for the Clay Springs Fire in Millard County, Utah. Including the two FMAGs provided to Colorado on Wednesday, this brings the overall total number of FMAGs approved for western states during this fire season to 19. Other states that have received these important grants include New Mexico, and Nevada.

Fire Management Assistance Grants are provided through the Disaster Relief Fund and made available by FEMA to assist in fighting fires that threaten to cause a major disaster.

Eligible items can include expenses for field camps; equipment use, repair and replacement; mobilization and demobilization activities; and tools, materials and supplies.

Scallop season is open

By TIM CROFT

227-7827 | @PSJ_Star
tcroft@starfl.com

Instead of seeking a meal this year, scallop hunters might consider a different spot on the table.

Researchers with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Research Institute in St. Petersburg have completed their surveys of the bay, and the survey says scallop numbers are significantly off the stocks of 2011 and 2010.

The season, said Steve Geiger with the Research Institute, might be one in which hunters might want to aim to share the crop, the goal maybe a smaller take than last year.

"Instead of going out and trying to catch dinner, maybe they ought to think about going out for an appetizer," Geiger said. "What (researchers) are seeing is way down."

The scallop season begins today and continues through Sept. 10.

Each year, researchers place 20 transect lines of 300 meters in length at stations around the bay.

The configuration works like this: The first station is just off the boat ramp at Frank Pate Park and researchers work in a horse-shoe around the south end of the bay and up to T. H. Stone St. Joseph Peninsula State Park.

In all, about 12,000 square meters of the bay are surveyed, a diver dipping underwater at one end of each transect and counting scallops along the length of the line.

Last year, on average, 155 scallops were found per transect line in St. Joseph Bay. This spring, the average per line was 10.9.

"There are less over by the park and by the town, which has been the trend in recent years," Geiger said. "The grass is more lush at the south end of the bay so you would expect to find more."

"When we came back for our fall surveys, there were stations that had 600-700 in the spring and had zero, nothing."

REGULATIONS

- There is a daily limit of two gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or one pint of bay scallop meat per person.

- In addition, no more than 10 gallons of whole bay scallops in the shell or one-half gallon of bay scallop meat may be possessed aboard any vessel at any time. Folks are allowed to harvest bay scallops only by hand or with a landing or dip net.

- Bay scallops may not be harvested for commercial purposes.

- Bag limits are daily limits; it is illegal to take a limit of scallops in the morning and return later in the day and collect another limit of scallops.

- Unless otherwise exempt, a regular Florida saltwater fishing license is required when using a boat to harvest scallops. If folks wade from shore, a regular Florida saltwater fishing license or a free resident shore-based license is needed.

- Divers and snorkelers are required to display a "divers-down" flag (red with a white diagonal stripe) while in the water. Boaters must stay at least 100 feet away from a divers-down flag in a river, inlet or channel. In open waters, boaters must stay 300 feet away from a divers-down flag.

GAG RULES

Gag grouper season now is open in the Gulf of Mexico, continuing through October. The limit is two per day over 22 inches long. The eastern Gulf offers the world's best gag fishing, according to many experts.

Opening weeks of grouper season should produce fireworks

By FRANK SARGEANT

franksargeant@charter.net

This year's gag grouper season will run just four months to the end of October. However, since there's been no harvest and no targeting of these tasty reef dwellers since last November, odds are that many of the prime numbers are covered up with keepers just waiting for a pinfish or a frozen cigar minnow to drop from above.

Gags are among the favorites of reef anglers because of their large average size and their fighting ability — as well as their very tasty fillets.

Gag grouper harvest has been closed in the Gulf since Nov. 16 of last year. Formerly, the season was closed only during the spawn, from Jan. 1 to March 31, with nine months of open season. The new regs will cut the open season more than 50 percent, a move which the federal regulators say should allow stocks to recover eventually.

Recreational anglers, particularly in the areas south and east of the Panhandle, have questioned the accuracy of federal fishery statistics, citing frequent catches of more than 50 gags a day while fishing for other species.

But federal scientists say that although small to medium-sized gags are abundant, numbers of adult males, which convert from females at about age 10, are extremely low on the offshore reefs, endangering the spawning cycle if more fish are not allowed to reach full maturity.

Be that as it may, the gag-rush started on the first.

Gags are most abundant — of anywhere — in the eastern Gulf of Mexico, and some of the biggest are found just to the southeast of the Panama City Beach area—the edge of the continental shelf, where water drops from about 250 feet down to several thousand feet, is a famed area for the giant "rusty belly" males of 20 pounds and up.

You don't have to travel all the way to "The Edge" however; to hook up with plenty of gags. Fish from 5 to 15 pounds are regular catches anywhere there's hard bottom, a ledge, rockpile, wreck or artificial reef.

However, there are thousands of square miles of unproductive sand out there and only limited areas of good cover where the fish stack up. Knowing exactly where these are located is essential, as is a good GPS and sonar to put you on the spots.

Fishing the numbers is an acquired art. Not only do you have to find the spot—not difficult with a GPS—but then you have to put the stern of your boat over that location exactly—no easy matter when it's a hundred feet down and there's a strong current running and plenty of wind to accompany it. Typically it takes five feet of "scope" or anchor line for every foot of depth to stay put offshore, and that's with a big anchor and plenty of chain between anchor and line. Consequently, the anchor has to be dropped far up current from the reef for the boat to settle into the right spot once the line is paid out—and being off by as little as 20 feet can sometimes be the difference between catching big fish or only cranking up the "junk" fish that roam farther from the cover.

Persistence pays, however, and old salts can figure an "anchor course" that will place the boat just right every time. It's then a matter of lowering an assortment of frozen baitfish or squid—or live pinfish—down to the reef and hanging on. A 20-pound gag can put even a big man on his knees for the first minute or so—if a big red snapper doesn't beat him to it. Snapper often inhabit the same reef where gags hang out, but the snapper usually hang a bit higher in the water and so have first shot at baits coming down. Don't be surprised if an occasional amberjack does likewise.

Most anglers use heavy tackle to handle gags and other potential heavyweights around the reefs—stout rods 7 to 8 feet long, 4/0 reels and at least 60-pound test mono, plus 80 to 100 pound test leaders and 7/0 or larger triple strong hooks are part of the gear. Anglers usually fish 4 to 6 ounces of lead above the leader, but strong current might require more—the object is to get the bait to plummet straight down before the current can carry it sideways, so lots of weight can be a must on some days. A bait that gets "kited" sideways may not wind up close enough to the structure to draw a gag out.

The first boat to stop on a given reef can often catch plenty of grouper just by impaling frozen cigar minnows or Spanish sardines on the hooks and lowering away. After a few fish have been caught, however, it often takes a live pinfish or grunt to draw a bite. The live baits seem to attract bigger fish, as well, and the bigger the bait, the bigger the grouper likely to eat it.

Some gags are also caught by deep jigging with 6 to 8 ounce jigs bounced on bottom. But in general, you'll catch a half-dozen on bait for every one you catch on artificials.

For those without capable offshore boats, many of the charter boats and party boats from Panama City to Fort Walton Beach include gag grouper in their target list when they go bottom fishing.

Grouper with gusto

The groupers are somewhat more "meaty" than the snappers; that is, their flesh is firmer, particularly in larger fish. Some people like this, some don't—but the flavor of both gag and red grouper is excellent any way you care to cook it.

One dish that's always a crowd pleaser is to place a couple of boned and skinned fillets in a cooking pan, then cover them with a layer of Delmonte stewed tomatoes, Italian Recipe, which includes lots of oregano and other spices. On top, place a layer of your favorite type of grated cheese—strong cheddar is good, but so is mozzarella—or spice it up with a Mexican taco mix. Broil in a 350-degree oven until the cheese begins to brown and the fish turns flaky. (If the cheese browns too soon, turn off the broiler and just let the fish sit in the oven for an added five minutes—it will bake to perfection.)

Thinly sliced pieces of gag also go well in serviche—just set the salted, raw pieces in a bowl of chopped onions and lemon juice for an hour or more. Serve on whole-wheat crackers—beats the heck out of most sashimi.

On large grouper, the "cheeks," ingots of meat found below the eyes, are considered the piece de resistance by Florida crackers—don't throw the carcass away without saving these tidbits.

Gag regulations

The bag limit is two gags daily of 22 inches or more as part of a four grouper limit in the Gulf. Not much when you consider you may be spending $200 or more on fuel to run out to grouper country and back.

But fortunately red snapper, mangrove snapper, grunts and other bottom species—along with roaming kingfish that can be caught on unweighted live baits fished near the surface—can make for a nice bag of fish and a busy day of fishing.

Note that red snapper season is slated to close on July 11. However, there's a request in to the National Marine Fisheries Service to extend the season a week because of the lost fishing time resulting from the recent tropical storm.

Whether or not the feds, who have been very stingy with reef fish in recent years, will provide the added fishing days remains to be seen—check the regs page at www.gulfcouncil.org for details.

For more on grouper fishing, including a list of artificial reefs, visit www.myfwc.com.

Live pinfish are among the favorite baits for larger gags. The abundant baitfish can be caught by castnet or small hooks baited with shrimp or cut fish inshore and in Panhandle bays.

Keselowski wins Quaker State 400

by CATHRINE LAMB
638-0212 | @catspitstop
clamb@chipleypaper.com

Brad Keselowski won the Quaker State 400 in Sparta, Ky., Friday night on a back up car. He was one of the few that made it through the race without any trouble. This marked Keselowski's third win of the season. When he made it to Victory Lane and all the excitement settled down, he did something I have never seen or even heard of another driver or anyone else for that matter do, he "Tebowed."

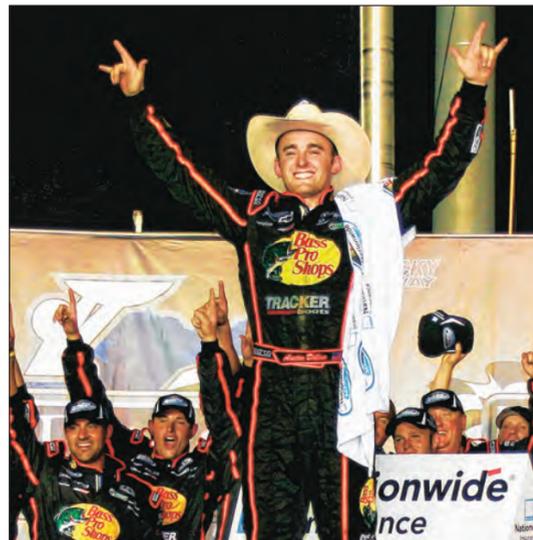

For those of you who have been totally tuned out in the sports world, "Tebowing" is when someone takes a knee and thanks God for his or her accomplishments on or off the field, or track in this case, and is usually done in front of a crowd. Kurt Busch got a little mouthy with his crew chief but left the media alone. He finished 19th after some car trouble, but it wasn't a complete loss in Sparta. He came in second in the Nationwide Series Race on Friday night. Keep up the good work Kurt. You still have the potential.

Poor Carl Edwards should have listened to his crew chief when he was told to come in and top off his fuel to be sure he could make it. He ran out of fuel with seven laps to go and finished in the 20th position. Denny Hamlin announced just before driver introduction on Saturday Night that he has resigned with Joe Gibbs Racing. As of Monday night they had not released any details on what kind of deal he signed just that he would continue with Joe Gibbs Racing and FedEx. For all you fans out there, here is a piece of trivia I found. FedEx sponsors 36 of the 38 Sprint Cup Series races. There may not have been a lot of drama or even a whole lot of cautions, but there was enough excitement for fans as they waited to see if their favorite drivers would escape troubles with their car.

The bad luck for the drivers and their cars started on lap 24 when Joey Logano's cooling unit went out in his car. He stayed out there and took it like a trooper. You know he had to be hot though, I didn't hear of any problems health wise with Joey after racing in triple digit temps without a cooling unit. Then in lap 27 the bad luck grabbed Tony Stewart and held on. He started reporting mechanical issues and stayed out on the track until lap 29 when he had to take the car to pit road and then to the garage. Stewart brought it back on to the track on lap 44 and then back to the garage on lap 46 where he stayed until lap 63 when he came back out of the garage and ran the rest of the race 34 laps down.

The first of four cautions was brought out on lap 44 as Scott Riggs had a mechanical failure and had to be towed off the track. On lap 90 Kevin Harvick reported that he wasn't happy with his car and took it to his pit stall to get checked out. Kyle Busch kissed the wall on lap 119 but kept on racing. Caution number two was for debris on the track. Caution number three came out as Dave Blaney's engine blew. The fourth and final caution came out due to Ryan Newman spinning and hit the wall hard between turns one and two.

Regan Smith was also caught up in this one trying to avoid Ryan Newman. There were two rounds of green flag pit stops this week they were on laps 92 through 101 and then again on laps 203 through 209.

Town code enforcement discussed

By RANDAL SEYLER
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
rseyler@chippypaper.com

WAUSAU — Town Council members discussed a touchy subject Thursday — property code enforcement.

Two members of the town's Code Enforcement Committee, Paul Culbreth and Kerry Collins, resigned Thursday and the council was asking itself "what next?"

"We need to accept their resignation and they have our thanks," Mayor Roger Hagan said. "We really appreciate all the work they did, much of it thankless."

City Clerk Margaret Riley told the mayor while there were several properties that responded to the committee's efforts and cleaned up their land, there were several code violators who had neither cleaned up nor responded to the town's letters.

"There are steps that we can follow, per our ordinance," Riley explained. "First we send a letter; then we send a second certified letter. If that gets no response, then we put the attorney in touch with them and set a court date."

"We need to do what we said we'd do, or go home," Mayor Pro-Tem Gail Culbreth said. "If we're not going to enforce it, why have a committee?"

Councilman Dallas Carter said, "I agree with Miss Gail. If we're going to do something, then let's do it."

"Someone is going to be mad at you no matter what you do," Culbreth said. She recommended that the council work through the cases they have already started and see them through before seeking new committee members and starting the code enforcement process back up. "Let's work with what we've got and get them done first," she said.

Hagan said he would like to see code enforcement move beyond Highway 77 and into the side streets of Wausau as well.

"I want us to be solid in what we do, and if we have to go to court, then we'll go to court," the mayor said.

WAUSAU — Wausau Town Council members closed out the work on the town's energy efficiency project by approving the final payment for work done at the Possum Palace during Thursday night's meeting.

Charley Cotton and Anna Hudson gave the council a status update and presented the town's energy efficiency plan to the council for approval at next month's meeting.

"There is a lot of insulation in this building now," Cotton said of the Wausau Town Hall. The city had a $180,000 Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant to make town hall more energy efficient, and part of the grant money was spent on insulation, windows and new HVAC systems. The grant also paid for solar lighting at the Possum Palace.

"Energy conservation has the dual benefits of controlling energy costs and reducing the impact of one's carbon footprint on the global climate," according to the city's plan. "Local jurisdictions across the region and the nation are adopting and implementing energy and/or emissions reduction goals and strategies to save money and reduce pollution associated with energy production. The town of Wausau is one of these local governments that is currently undertaking energy conservation initiatives."

The town's primary facilities include the Town Hall, which also serves as a community center and the town's public library, and the Possum Palace Park. These facilities are utilized by the residents for activities ranging from recreational sports to community festivals to meeting locations for community groups and clubs.

Other improvements to the town hall include programmable thermostat, high-performance linear lighting system with T8 fluorescent bulbs and electronic ballasts. Compact fluorescent lighting was installed for interior and exterior lighting, and an energy star tankless water heater was added to the building.

At the Possum Palace, pole mounted security lights were upgraded with solar powered LED lighting, and the low bay fixtures were replaced with CFLs. The fluorescent lighting was replaced with T8 bulbs, and electronic ballasts and CLFs were also used for interior and exterior lighting.

Hilton Galloway of Carr Riggs and Ingram was also on hand Thursday, and he presented the 2010-11 audit results to the council.

The finances of the city are steadily improving, Galloway said, noting the city ended the 2011 fiscal year with $57,222 in the general fund. "The town ended the year with an increase in liquid assets."

The increased grant activity has resulted in increased capital outlays for the city to the tune of about $1.7 million, Galloway said, and the water department revenues are increasing while water loss is also decreasing.

"Obviously things are far better," Galloway said. "There has been a $2 million injection into the town, and the operating budget is a little better than it has been."

Students attend STEM camp

by ZACK MCDONALD

zmcaldonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Sea creature exploration, robot missions, playing video games and creating light for Third World countries has to come to an end at some point.

The Naval Surface Warfare Center Panama City Division and its Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) Institute's summer camp had the last day of providing students with hands-on, activity-based learning projects Thursday.

Students from Washington and Holmes counties participated in the event.

"What we're trying to do is energize students to have more STEM careers and to have fun while learning," said Susie Waters, Surfside Middle School physical science teacher.

During each day of the weeklong event, teams of students rotated from different areas featuring various aspects of STEM.

"Tabula Digita" features an educational video game that improves understanding of mathematics by asking the student to complete algebra equations to progress in the game. "Environment" had students exploring bay waters to study ecological properties by gathering and identifying samples of species. "Inventions" taught students to develop instruments to transfer solar energy into light.

And then there's the ever-popular "Robots" area.

"They always get the most excited over the robots," Waters said. "This year we got them using their cellphones to wire-lessly control their robots."

Each year during the three-week camp there is a week dedicated to training teachers, a week for middle school students and, during the final week, high school students.

"We have seen steady growth in our STEM program," Waters said.

The first occurred in 2008, according to Ed Linsenmeyer, STEM coordinator.

"What we were seeing around 2008 was what former CEO of Lockheed/Martin called 'The Gathering Storm,'" Linsenmeyer said. "In that document it said many science and engineering scores for U.S. students were way below other countries. That document really looked at the importance of STEM and our duty to advance technology to be leaders in a global economy."

According to Linsenmeyer, by fifth-grade, 50 percent of students exposed to STEM education will turn to a career in a STEM-related field.

"Not that we want everybody to be a scientist, but it acts as an opportunity, not a barrier."

The STEM program is funded through the National Defense Education Grant, which comes from the Department of Defense, according to Linsenmeyer.

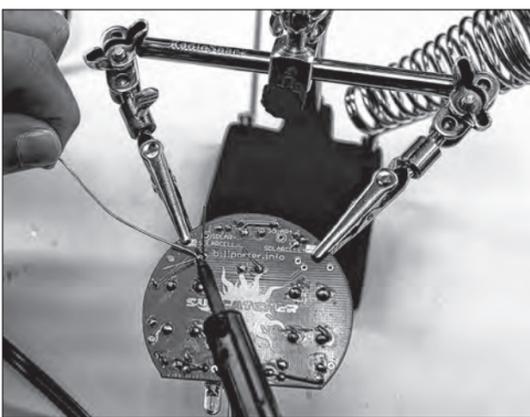

"It's a national concern of where the next scientists and engineers are going to come," said John Hansel, retired head of engineering for the Navy base.

The theme for this year's STEM camp was "Energy 2012," and on the third floor, Bill Porter's "Inventors" area embodied the theme. Porter, electrical engineer at the Naval Support Activity Center, taught students how to solder and assemble the components for "solar rechargeable LED lights."

Each group designed their own based off a prototype designed by Porter that later would be sent to a "developing country" for people to read or study by at night.

"So the kids know they have actually built something that will benefit other," Porter said.

The lights accumulated from this STEM camp will be sent to Honduras.

"After he explained it to us, it seemed easy," said Eddie Mosley, a Chipley High School ninth-grader. "I think it will be really useful and easy for them to use."

PET TALK

Celebrating The Fourth with your pet

This Wednesday most people will spend the day outside celebrating Independence Day watching fireworks with their family and friends. Often, people bring their dogs to enjoy the day's festivities. There are a few things to know if you plan to spend July Fourth outside with your pets.

Dr. Melanie Bolling, veterinarian for the Small Animal Hospital at Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences, said the most common problem associated with July Fourth is dogs' sensitivity to the noise from the fireworks.

"A lot of dogs are noise phobic, whether it's fireworks or other loud noises such as guns, cars backfiring and thunderstorms. These noises are scary, and if you didn't know what it was, you might be concerned about your safety, too," Bolling said.

Bolling said the best idea is to keep dogs, particularly those with noise phobias, away from the commotion. If that is not an option, Bolling suggested using "anxiety wraps" or "thunder shirts," a compression garment for dogs to wear that makes them feel secure. Bolling also recommended discussing appropriate anxiety-relieving medications with your veterinarian.

Another factor that can cause anxiety and stress in dogs is large crowds of unusual people. If you know ahead of time that your dog does not do well with large groups of people, Bolling suggested leaving the pet at home or boarding them. If you are going to bring them, she suggested having a calm area for the dog.

"It's a good idea to give your dog a quiet place where they can get away from all the crowds of people if they are just not that into it," Bolling said.

Bringing pets to these crowded areas usually means contact with other pets, some of which could be unvaccinated. Bolling said it is important to make sure your pet's vaccinations are up-to-date if bringing them with you.

"If you are going to be in a place where unvaccinated dogs might have walked, such as soccer fields, baseball fields or parks, you want to make sure your dogs are up-to-date on vaccinations. I wouldn't take an unvaccinated puppy or a puppy that hasn't completed the whole vaccine series to any of those places because they could pick up nasty little diseases along the way," she said.

In addition to vaccinations, parasites can pose a threat to your dog's health. Heartworms are spread by mosquitoes, which tend to be out around July Fourth. Other parasites like fleas and ticks are spread through contact with contaminated soil or other infected animals, so make sure pets are on heartworm, flea and tick preventatives before heading out.

The heat is another issue to consider. If your dog is going to spend the day outside with you, Bolling stressed the importance of bringing enough water.

"You need to bring enough water to last the whole day and then extra, especially if the dog is going to be active and running around. They are going to be panting and losing water just through evaporative loss, so they are going to need to replenish that," she said.

In addition to water, you should bring dog food because it is best to avoid giving your dog people food.

"Everybody wants to give their dogs a little snack, so if it is something your dog is used to getting, all things in moderation, but try to avoid the temptation to feed them people food in excess," she said.

It is a good idea to avoid giving your pet a lot of people food because then your dog may become sick. Bolling explained that on July 5 and 6 the hospital cares for a lot of dogs sick to their stomachs from eating too much people food.

"You want to stay away from any meat that might have bones in it, from raw meat and from bad actors such as raisins, grapes, chocolate, chewing gums, things of that nature," Bolling said.

Why not just be an American?

By Rev. James L. Snyder
As we celebrate another birthday of this great country, I cannot help but think back on some of our history. What a grand history we have had. I know some people are ashamed of our history, and so we have revisionists rewriting American history. Nevertheless, I certainly want to celebrate the real America.

My wife and I were relaxing after a scrumptious supper and were watching a little bit of TV. I was half dozing, as is usually my condition after such a supper, when my wife startled me with a question.

It was a news program on television updating us with the latest political scratch-talk. If it were not for politics, the airwaves would be silent. Oh, for those wonderful sounds of silence. Personally, I would be glad to double my tax rate if in doing so we could put to silence all this political-scratch-talk. I call it "scratch-talk" because whoever is talking is trying to scratch somebody's back even if it is just their own. I guess we have a lot of itchy backs in this country. Thankfully, we have an endless supply of back-scratching politicians.

It does not matter which way the wind is blowing. Each political party says it is blowing in their direction. I guess you have to go to eight years to Harvard and have a student loan debt of $120,000 to understand how that works. If you do not mind, I just do not want to know how it works.

With the politicians unable to create work in our country for common Americans, the real Americans, they sure know how to work a situation, usually to their advantage. If they could put all of this to work for the good of the ordinary American, I would feel happier about paying my taxes. As it is, I pay my taxes but not happily.

Back to my wife's question. "Who are," she said very carefully, "the real Americans in this country?" Then she paused for a moment and followed it with this question, "Who does America really belong to?"

Well, those two questions got me thinking.

Who are the real Americans? Are they Republicans, Democrats or Independents? I know there is a bunch of other miscellaneous political parties, but I cannot think of them right now. Which one is the American Party?

If I do not like any political party, where does that leave me? I am all for parties, but the whole idea of a party is for people to have fun. I do not see any political party where I could have fun. The strange thing today is, if I do not "belong" to some political party, I am not able to vote in this country. Moreover, if I do vote, who in the world do I vote for?

My wife and I got to talking about this and I, for once in my life, posed a question. How would you describe the average American?

Is the average American black, white, yellow, red or a mixture of colors? Do you define an American by the color of his or her skin? What about gender? Is the average American male or female? Then there is age. How old is the average American?

We bounced these questions around for a long time and did not come up with any good answers. Then there was silence.

I come back to one thought; why can't we just be Americans. Why do we have to have all the emphasis on variations, colors, temperaments and the people we elect to office who cannot tie their own shoes without conducting some poll? Why can't we send ordinary, common sense Americans to Washington, D.C., who understands the American life?

Most of the politicians, if not all, live in a bubble and cannot relate to the average American in this country. I challenge these politicians to act like, live like common, everyday, normal Americans.

We normal Americans have to live on a budget. If I do not have enough money, I have come to the end of my buying spree. I think this concept ought to be copyrighted and sent to Washington, D.C. It is a new concept. It will need somebody to interpret it to those who are living in that venomous circle that we call the capitol of the United States. I would recommend a first grader.

It would be refreshing to have somebody in Congress or the Senate who had common sense. I guess Will Rogers was right when he said the problem with common sense is it is no longer common.

A real American is one who is committed to the concept of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A real American is one who embraces the red, white and blue. A real American is the one who can clutch his five-dollar bill and say, "in God we trust." If it is good for our money, it is good for our life.

If only the American people, the real people of America, would wake up and see what our politicians are doing, perhaps they would do what our early founders did.

In celebrating another Fourth of July, my thought is simply, why not just be an American.

A real American also embraces what Jesus said, "Render therefore unto Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's" (Luke 20:25 KJV).

Is that the sound of a drumbeat I hear off in the distance?

Give Expecting Nothing in Return

The saying "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts" is an old piece of wisdom which advises us to not trust our enemies, after the story in the Iliad of the Trojan horse, a "gift" that ultimately destroyed the city of Troy and its inhabitants. But there was also another reason to beware of Greeks bearing gifts, and that was that they always expected something in return, of comparable value. Gift-giving in ancient cultures was meant to be reciprocated and this carries over to modern times. But, a true gift should be something freely given without any expectation of return. If there is an expectation of a comparable return then we are really bartering rather than giving. So, we should give with a spirit of genuine charity, not expecting anything in return. Test your ability to give in this spirit by giving anonymously, so that the recipient won't know who it came from. This isn't always practical, but can sometimes be done by sending someone an anonymous gift through the mail or by arranging for an intermediary to give the gift for you, perhaps even allowing the intermediary to take credit for the gift. Wanting to be thanked for a gift is all about our ego, and while it is only natural to desire thanks, it is better to give expecting nothing in return.

"So when you give to the needy, do not announce it with trumpets, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and on the streets, to be honored by others. . . . But when you give to the needy, do not let your left hand know what your right hand is doing, so that your giving may be in secret."
Matthew 6:2-4

Palestinians: UN heritage nod is political victory

BETHLEHEM, West Bank (AP) — The Palestinians on Friday persuaded the U.N. cultural agency to list the Church of the Nativity — the place where Christians believe Jesus was born — as an endangered World Heritage site despite misgivings by churches in charge of the basilica.

The Palestinians hailed the nod by UNESCO as a step forward in their quest for global recognition of an independent Palestine in the West Bank, Gaza and east Jerusalem, captured by Israel in 1967.

The centuries-old basilica is located in a part of the Israeli-occupied West Bank where the Palestinians have self-rule. UNESCO's decision was seen by them as validation of their rights to the territory.

"We are ecstatic," Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said of Friday's 13-6 decision by UNESCO's World Heritage Committee meeting in St. Petersburg, Russia.

The Palestinians had argued that the shrine faces imminent danger, both because of overdue repairs and Israel's continued occupation of the West Bank.

Israel and the U.S. strongly opposed the emergency bid, arguing that the church is not under threat, a position backed by a U.N. experts committee.

Israeli officials have said they don't object to the church being listed, but reject the "endangered" label that implies culpability of Israel, which in practice remains the ultimate sovereign in the West Bank.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the Palestinians are "engaging in unilateral actions that only distance peace" and that UNESCO is driven by political considerations.

Palestinian Foreign Minister Riad Malki said the Palestinians now plan to submit more sites in the West Bank, Gaza and east Jerusalem. The new bids could stir more political tensions, particularly in east Jerusalem, which Israel annexed to its capital after the 1967 war.

Ashrawi said Friday's vote is the beginning of a process.

"Our identity, our place in civilization, in history, are being recognized, are beginning to be safeguarded in the face of the Israeli occupation's encroachment, the confiscation of our land, our culture," she said.

The U.S. ambassador to UNESCO, David Killion, said Washington was "profoundly disappointed" by the vote.

The U.S. has been trying to block the Palestinian recognition campaign, and withdrew tens of millions of dollars in funding from UNESCO after the Paris-based agency accepted the Palestinians as a state member last year.

Joining UNESCO was part of a wider Palestinian recognition to win global recognition for a state of Palestine in the territories Israel occupied in 1967.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, who heads a self-rule government in charge of 38 percent of the West Bank, says negotiations with Israel remain his preferred choice but wants global recognition to improve his leverage. An attempt to win full U.N. membership has stalled, but meanwhile Palestinians are pushing for membership in U.N. agencies.

In their first move at

SPECIAL TO EXTRA

The designation of the Church of the Nativity as an endangered World Heritage site is a disappointment to the U.S.

UNESCO, they submitted the Nativity Church and a nearby pilgrimage route as endangered heritage sites, asking to fast-track the nomination rather than go through the normal 18-month procedure.

They argued that the church is in urgent need of repairs, particularly a leaky wooden roof. Palestinian officials said foreign donors promised $20 million for the work but so far have paid only $3 million, not enough to get started.

Palestinians argued that Israel's continued control over the area also threatens the site.

A decade ago, when Israel launched a major offensive against Palestinian militants, the church was caught in the crossfire: Palestinian gunmen holed up inside for more than a month, with Israeli tanks and troops surrounding the shrine.

Referring to the violent standoff in Friday's statement, Netanyahu put the blame on the Palestinians.

"The world needs to remember that the Church of the Nativity that is so sacred to Christianity was desecrated in the past by Palestinian terrorists," he said.

Today, Bethlehem is ringed on three sides by walls of cement slabs and fences of Israel's separation barrier — to Israel a defense against Palestinian militants, and to Palestinians a blatant land grab disguised as a security measure.

A U.N. experts committee recommended that the Palestinians go through the normal procedure, instead of seeking the "endangered" label, but the Palestinians refused to withdraw the bid.

The churches in charge of the shrine — Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and Armenian — also expressed concern, apparently fearing a World Heritage designation would lead to interference by the Palestinian government and the U.N.

The church is run according to a 19th century codex, known as the Status Quo, which assigns responsibilities for upkeep that are jealously guarded by each denomination.

Palestinian officials say they've addressed the concerns by the churches.

Regional Workforce Boards Accountability Act in effect

New law advances Florida workforce system's jobs focus

Special To The News

TALLAHASSEE — The Regional Workforce Boards Accountability Act of 2012, which took effect July 1, underscores the statewide commitment to maximizing resources that help job seekers get to work and improves the transparency and accountability of Florida's publicly funded workforce development system.

The new law — a major component of Gov. Rick Scott's Jobs and Economic Growth legislative agenda — enhances efforts by Florida's 24 Regional Workforce Boards and the nearly 100 One-Stop Career Centers they direct to provide employment and training services that support job placement, career advancement and business competitiveness.

"The Regional Workforce Boards Accountability Act strengthens our collective focus on our core mission to help Floridians find employment and ensure businesses have the skilled talent they need to retain and create jobs," said Dwayne Ingram, chairman of the Workforce Florida Inc. Board of Directors. "The vital work of Florida's Regional Workforce Boards, which will be further enhanced through this law, continues to make a critical difference in driving our state's economic recovery and growth."

Since January, Regional Workforce Boards have assisted more than 150,000 Floridians who found jobs, including 33,700 job seekers who had been receiving unemployment compensation.

"On the front line in assisting job seekers and employers, Regional Workforce Boards are proud of the work they do through outstanding professional staff and volunteer leaders," said Jay Overman, chairman of Workforce Escarosa and the Florida Workforce Chairs' Alliance, the statewide coalition of volunteer local board leaders. "Together with Gov. Scott, the Florida Legislature, Workforce Florida and the Department of Economic Opportunity as well as our numerous local partners, we look forward to increasing our collaboration and maintaining our leading status for job placements and talent development."

The Regional Workforce Boards Accountability Act was sponsored by Rep. Jason Brodeur of Sanford and Sen. Andy Gardiner of Orlando. Gov. Scott signed the legislation on March 28. The law does the following:

- Requires additional review of Regional Workforce Boards' budgets and expenditures
- Provides a clearer path for the governor to remove appointed board leaders and chief executives of troubled boards for causes including fraud, neglect of duty, misfeasance, malfeasance or lack of performance.
- Requires Workforce Florida to develop a single, statewide brand for the workforce system to enhance job seeker and business access to services.
- Preserves existing local authority to select members of the board of directors for Regional Workforce Boards and for those members to hire — and, if needed, terminate — a regional board chief executive. It also maintains local flexibility to develop workforce strategies and programs that best address the needs of each region.

Florida's workforce system continues to receive national recognition for its efforts. In the recently released annual Enterprising States report, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Chamber Foundation recognized Florida for the second consecutive year for having the nation's top talent development system. Secondary and higher education measures and job-placement proficiency factor into the ranking. The report is available at ncf.uschamber.com/library/2012/06/enterprising-states-2012.
