BOCC reviews road name change policy

By CECILIA SPEARS

BONIFAY — The Holmes County Board of County Commissioners agreed to review a Road Name Change Policy presented by County Attorney Jeff Goodman during their meeting on Dec. 10.

"The board of county commissioners shouldn't be in the business of hearing why someone thinks their road name needs to be changed and how they're justified over another," said Goodman. "We need a policy so that people know the requirements needed for a road name to be changed."

Some of the requirements included a list of property owners adjacent and on the road, a petition signed by at least 80 percent of property owners adjacent to and on the road, approval from 911 Coordinator to insure 911 compliance, a $500 fee for internal review and advertising, submission of an overview of the road so that the entire road is renamed, followed by two public hearings before it can be approved by the board, followed up by an effective date.

"I piecemealed it together based on the needs of Holmes County," said Goodman. "Here's a draft to be put on the agenda for the first meeting in January and there will be an application drawn up for review. We just need to remain as consistent as possible."

The first hearing was held for an application for a zoning change from residential to commercial to a piece of property on the corner of County Road 81 and Sandy Creek Road located just north of Ponce de Leon, which was approved of and recommended to the Board of County Commissioners by the Holmes County Planning and Zoning Commission on Dec. 3.

"I'm wanting to build a convenience store and gas station," said landowner

CARYVILLE TOWN COUNCIL

Town threatens to remove bodies if bill isn't paid

By CECILIA SPEARS
547-9414 | @WCN_HCT
cspears@chipleypaper.com

CARYVILLE — Caryville Town Council Member Jim Taylor informed the council that there are unpaid graves at the Caryville Town Cemetery during Monday's town council meeting.

The council agreed to send a letter to the deceased persons' next of kin informing them of Caryville Town Attorney Lyndia Spears' advice that the town send a warning that the bodies would be removed if the bill isn't paid.

"It was a tragedy two years ago when a man shot his wife and then himself," Taylor said. "People who lived in the town used to get a plot for free but then it was becoming crowded and people were abusing the right. We need a system."

Taylor explained the couple was placed in the cemetery before their rates were increased, and they placed the bill on the next of kin's water bill.

"You can bill them but you can't put it on their water bill," Spears said. "We need to send a letter stating they had no authority to use the cemetery, and we will have the bodies removed or they can come pay the bill."

Taylor also informed the council that there were several unpaid markers at the cemetery.

"They had no right to mark their plot without paying, and we need to let them know that we're taking it up until they pay," Spears said. "You'll wind up not having a plot for the people of this town because of people taking advantage of the system."

The council approved of reappointing Council Member Henry Chambers as chairman and Taylor as co-chairman.

The council agreed with Chambers' suggestion to come up with fundraising ideas for the town of Caryville

Campaign to impeach Obama comes to Bonifay

By CECILIA SPEARS

cspears@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY — Signs with President Barack Obama's image marked with a Hitler mustache and insisting on the president's impeachment garnered a lot of attention as representatives from the LaRouche Political Action Committee positioned themselves on the corner of State Road 79 and U.S. 90 on Dec. 11 to rally supporters in favor of their campaign to impeach the president.

"The Obama administration is supporting the most criminal institution in the world," said Rick Lopez, political consultant with LaRouche PAC. "His agenda is to cripple America. His agenda must be stopped; he must be stopped."

Lopez said Bonifay was one of many stops on their nationwide campaign.

Paul Fuzell. "Almost every one from that area believes that it will be a service and help to the community."

Resident Lisa Shirley was present to say that her concerns were that if it doesn't become a convenience store that it could potentially become a bar.

"What if he cannot put a store there and it sells as commercial property?" asked Shirley. "What's to stop someone from building a bar there?"

Resident Johnny Brown said that he shared the same uneasiness.

"We aren't interested in a commercial entity that has the potential to become an establishment that can sell alcoholic beverages," said Brown.

David Sanders came before the Board to ask that Sanders' Landfill's franchise be pulled.

"My wife is no longer running the business as she should, in fact she's running it into the ground," said Sanders. "She is pulling trailers of garbage that are open and without tail-lights. We'll honor everyone who paid and eat those expenses."

Goodman said there wasn't anything the board could do at that time because her name is on the company's franchise agreement.

"We don't have the right to terminate it," said Goodman. "We'll request that she join the next meeting so that she can explain why the franchise license shouldn't be pulled."

Commissioner Kenneth Williams said he was concerned for those paying costumers that are being affected by this.

"This is what we discussed when we agreed to the multi-franchise agreement," said Goodman. "We'll hold a special session and give her the chance to show up but whether she does or not we're going to do this the right way."

Rick Davis, Administrator for the Washington County Health Department and Interim Administrator for the Holmes County Health Department, came before the board to announce his retirement and to let them know that the Department of Health plans to combine the two counties' position as one.

The board put it in the form of a motion to show that they approve of the decision for the two counties share one department administrator and approved the motion.

"I don't have any problem with it due to the level of service and dedication you've provided throughout the years," said Williams.

The board approved of Commissioner Bobby Sannett representing the board on the Tri-County Community Council Board.

Kim Teagarden, a representative from Verizon Wireless, came before the board to say that Holmes County was approved for free cell phones, wall chargers and car chargers for all emergency responders.

"It will only be five cents per minute for all devices with a regular fee of 22 cents a day, which is about $4.40 a month and a little over $50 per year," Teagarden said. "We've already been in contact and have supplied phones for the Holmes County Sheriff's Office and the Holmes County School Board."

Williams said that he would look over it, however he would decline.

"Verizon has the best coverage in Holmes County, but it isn't all that good even for being the best," said Williams. "Especially in an emergency it wouldn't get service in a lot of the areas of Holmes County. There are just too many 'dead' zones."

The board approved of a temporary clerical position to help with paperwork filed with the Federal Emergency Management Agency for emergency funding to repair damaged caused by excessive rains earlier in the year.

Mike Reistad, representative with the West Florida Regional Planning Commission, came before the Board to explain the Environmental Protection Agency Brownfield Program.

"Brownfields' are defined as 'real property, the expansion, redevelopment, or reuse of which may be complicated by the presence or potential presence of a hazardous substance, pollutant, or contaminant,'" said Reistad. "Cleaning up and reinvesting in these properties protects the environment, reduces blight, and takes development pressures off green-spaces and working lands. What I propose is that the county submit a response, which we'll draft, for a community assessment grant which will be followed by a clean up grant and a revolving loan fund."

Goodman asked that if the assessment grant went through, would it be guaranteed that the county would receive a clean-up grant and Reistad said there wasn't.

"Let's say this guy has a site and it's not common knowledge and then an assessment is done and there's something wrong," said Williams. "Red-flags are brought up all over his property but then it's too much to fix it and now he's black-balled as a contaminated site."

Goodman explained that the program was a good idea, however to rural areas it isn't practical.

"The problem is money," said Goodman. "There's no guaranteed money for the reclamation. They're just using their money so these places can stay on their radar but it doesn't help illuminate the problem; it's a good program, but it just doesn't help rural areas."

The board agreed to Williams' proposal that an ordinance be written to ensure space on local towers for county use.

The board also approved of County Engineer Whitney Nelson to contact the Department of Transportation about doing an assessment of Sutter Creek Bridge.

"It's retained some damage and it is on the list of emergency items, however the government is moving very slow and this is steadily becoming a matter of public safety," Nelson said.

The board agreed to Commissioner Bill Parish and David Whitaker taking the place of Merchant and Williams on the 2014 Canvassing Board.

"Normally it would be done by the chair and vice chair; however, this year both of their seats are up for re-election," Goodman said.

There are two special called meetings planned for a later time, which is to be announced and the regularly scheduled meeting is set for 9 a.m. on Jan. 14.

at the first of the year.

"We need something for this town to raise funds in this town," Chambers said. "As of the first of the year we've got to do something."

The council approved of each council member having a ham as a Christmas bonus this year and Fire Chief Gene Forehand recognized the senior citizens of Caryville with a fruit basket.

Supervisor of Caryville Flea Market Paron Beeco informed the council that there were four months left until the next Flea Across Florida, that he's charging people $5 extra for using heaters and that vendors were upset because people were using the flea market as a parking lot.

"We need a sign that informs them that there will be no parking on Friday and Saturday where they can block the view of the flea market," Chambers said. "I'm proud to see that the flea market is growing steadily. I'm seeing new faces each time at the flea market."

Beeco said there were still complaints about the Middlebrooks portable toilet.

"We had one man out in the middle of a field relieving himself

I'm sure he was a little in the spirits too," Beeco said.

Council Member Millard French said he was told that Middlebrooks was instructed not to pump the portable toilet but once a month.

"Tomorrow we'll check out that porta potty together and see what is what," Chambers said. "I'm saying when we get someone here to help the town you treat him with some respect and you're going to flip over on someone over $10."

The next scheduled meeting of the Caryville Town Council is set for 6 p.m. on Jan. 14.

LaRouche PAC is an organization began by founded and headed by political activist Lyndon LaRouche, who claims to want to rebuild America and the first thing on his agenda is to impeach Obama.

"A lot of private insurance companies received millions of dollars because of Obamacare, and the large corporation banks have made millions because they have stock in those insurance companies," Lopez said. "I'm working with LaRouche because he is an American patriot, a military veteran, and he is one of the few remaining staunch patriots who lives in the tradition of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the American System of Political Economy."

The LaRouche PAC was in Washington County as well on Dec. 11, and they had visited the area back in April. The Chipley City Council was not amused by the LaRouche PAC setting up in front of the Post Office back in the spring.

In April, Frank Mathis, a LaRouche PAC representative from New Jersey, said they were touring the Panhandle. "This is where (U.S. Representatives) Jeff Miller and Steve Southerland are," Mathis said. "In 2011, Miller said he would not support restoring the Glass-Steagall Act. We want to know what he thinks now."

Mathis said the Glass-Steagall Act was enacted in the '30s and protected banks and bank customers, but it was overturned in 1999 by President Bill Clinton and a Republican Congress.

The group's platform supports reinstating the Glass-Steagall Act, which limited commercial banks' investment activities. HR 129, if approved, will bring that back and protect Americans, Mathis said.

On their first visit to Chipley, the LaRouche PAC was selling memberships.

"I just want the people of Chipley to know that this council does not support anyone degrading the President of the United States," Mayor Linda Cain said at the April council meeting.

Fountain man arrested after traffic stop

From Staff Reports

CHIPLEY — The Washington County Sheriff's Office arrested a Fountain man in connection with narcotics charges following a traffic stop on Dec. 13, according to a sheriff's office news release.

Arrested was Gregory Eugene Edmondson, 46, of Fountain on charges of Driving While License Is Suspended or Revoked; Possession of Controlled Substance Without Prescription; Trafficking in Controlled Substance Hydrocodone;

GREGORY EDMONDSON

Tampering with Evidence; and Possession of Harmful and New Legend Drug.

Deputies observed a vehicle traveling on Orange Hill Road with non-working lights and proceeded to stop the vehicle, according to the release. During the traffic stop, the deputy observed the driver exhibiting behavior consistent with being involved in illegal activity.

The deputy asked for and received consent to search the vehicle. During the search, a pill bottle filled with several pills, a cigarette pack that contained pills, a baggy containing a substance that tested positive as methamphetamines, and rolling papers were discovered, according to the sheriff's office.

During the search, Edmondson was observed, on camera, attempting to dispose of evidence found by the deputies, according to the release. The evidence was recovered and the suspect was arrested.

Sheriff Bobby Haddock asks that anyone with information on illegal drug activity contact us at 638-TIPS (8477) or by email at tips@wco.us.

Vernon considers seeking $600,000 grant

Library agreement tabled for further discussion

By RANDAL SEYLER
638-0212 | @WCN_HCT
rseyler@chippypaper.com

CHIPLEY — The Vernon City Council held a public hearing and fair housing workshop Monday prior to their regular council meeting to start the grant ball rolling.

Fred Fox, president of Fred Fox Enterprises of St. Augustine, was at the meeting to conduct the fair housing workshop and the public meeting required before the city can begin the process of seeking a $600,000 Community Development Block Grant for the city.

Fox explained the process of applying for a 2013 CDBG grant, and said the deadline for applying is March 2014. "There will probably be a second round of 2014 grants in the fall," Fox said. He noted that the 2013 application process had been postponed until 2014 by the Legislature.

Fox also ran through a Fair Housing workshop for the audience, which discussed the history of the Fair Housing Act of 1968. The Fair Housing workshop was also one of the requirements en route to applying for a CDBG grant.

"The first step is for the council to form a citizens' advisory task force, and have them meet and come up with some possible projects," Fox said.

The CDBG grants can be used for infrastructure, housing renovations or even economic development, Fox said, but the projects must be of benefit to low income residents.

"In the case of economic development, the city has to have a business pretty much in its pocket, ready to make jobs," Fox said. The grants for economic development can go up to $3 million based on the number of jobs the new business would bring.

"Most of the time, these grants are used for housing or infrastructure," Fox said. "One of the projects we are looking at with the engineers involves sewer and water line improvements."

Following the public meeting, the regular meeting began and the council discussed approving the interlocal agreement with the Washington County Library.

"One thing in here that concerns me is the agreement says we'll clean the library," Council President Tina Sloan said.

At the time the interlocal agreement was being struck, the city had an extra employee, but that position is no longer filled, Mayor Michelle Cook said.

The council agreed to table the agreement until the county could be contacted and the cleaning situation discussed.

The council also discussed the city's Gulf Power franchise fee of 3 percent, which the council decided to leave as is during the Dec. 9 workshop.

Councilman Tray Hawkins noted that when he had said he would like one day to see the city enact a 1-cent sales tax, he had meant for that sales tax to take the place of the franchise fee. The franchise fee is tacked onto the power bills of Vernon residents and a portion of the money is paid back to the city.

"Having a sales tax instead of a franchise fee would spread that burden out over more people," Hawkins said.

The council also approved $500 Christmas bonuses for the city's three employees for a total expense of $1,500.

"Thank you for all the work you do for the city," Hawkins told Deputy Clerk Karen Dodd and Public Works Director Gerald Ward, both of whom were at the meeting. The city's third employee, Ronald Wood, was not in attendance. "Tell Ronald thank you for us as well," Hawkins said.

Man killed in wreck on I-10

From Staff Reports

DEFUNIACK SPRINGS — A North Carolina resident was killed Sunday morning when he drove into the path of an oncoming truck on I-10 in Walton County, according to the Florida Highway Patrol.

FHP is withholding the name of the victim pending notification of next of kin.

The 1994 Honda Civic had been stopped in the emergency lane of the westbound lane at 3:10 a.m.; when the driver tried to re-enter to highway, he drove into the path of a semi-truck driven by Francis Warren Roberts II, 39, of Vero Beach.

The collision forced both vehicles off the road and into some trees.

The car driver was pronounced dead at the scene.

Roberts received minor injuries, but a passenger, Edwin Moreno of Falls Church, Va., was seriously injured and taken to Bay Medical Center Sacred Heart Health System, FHP said.

Did the president sleep here?

By JULIE HATFIELD
Halifax Media Group

SHALIMAR — Kay Shipp has one tall, heavy piece of history in her guest bedroom.

The mahogany, four-poster bed belonged to her mother, and her mother before that, and her mother before that, and maybe even one more mother before that.

But first, family lore says it belonged in the childhood home of Grover Cleveland, America's president from 1885 to 1889 and 1893 to 1897.

"She lived next door to Mrs. Cleveland and she didn't want it anymore," Shipp says of her ancestor. "So she got it."

Shipp's grandparents slept in the bed until her grandfather died in it when her mother was a child. Then, Shipp's mother and her sister shared it in their room.

At that time it had a feather mattress. The antique also is an off size: smaller than a queen but larger than a full.

Her mother had painted it white, but Shipp had it stripped and restored.

"I've had several people sleep in the bed and they got scared," Shipp said. "They heard moaning, groaning or breathing, and they'd swear it's coming from the bed."

Shipp doesn't have any documentation on the bed's ownership, so she can't be positive of its history.

"I wish I could find out for sure, but that was the story in our family forever," she said.

She has never had a historian or appraiser research the bed because that costs money. And she wouldn't dream of selling it unless she found out it was worth "a couple million dollars or something."

"Everybody has their price, honey!"

MARK KULAW | Daily News

Kay Shipp sits in front of the four-poster bed that has been in her family for generations. It might have belonged to President Grover Cleveland's mother.

Our VIEW

Bipartisan gimmickry

As with most things to come out of Washington these days, the budget deal negotiated by Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., and Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., is more of a political fix than a policy solution.

Although Ryan touts it as modest deficit reduction, "a firm step in the right direction," in truth its initial move is to increase spending and fees, then promises to tip-toe toward cutting spending years off in the future. That's the price many Republicans appear willing to pay for a bipartisan agreement that ensures there will be no government shutdown drama for the next two years.

The debt crisis will have to take a back seat to the GOP's election crisis. Avoiding yet another shutdown battle removes one large, potential distraction from focusing exclusively on Obamacare leading up to the 2014 midterms. Republicans hope to ride the health insurance law's current historically high public disapproval ratings to a Senate majority next year.

Clearly, their minority status, along with a Democrat in the White House, limits Republicans' ability at this time to make the necessary substantial changes to federal spending, especially on entitlement programs. Repeated brinkmanship has won them precious little except widespread blame for the shutdowns and for damaging the economy, most recently in October.

They can't enact real spending reform unless they have more votes in Washington. To achieve that, they have to win more elections. The GOP

Sometimes a bargain is not such a bargain

Sitting at my new desk in my new high-backed chair I am so comfortable, I may fall asleep writing this. When I came home from Office Max with my new corner desk in a four foot X four foot flat box, my husband knew he was in trouble. The Salesman managed to get it into my Ford Edge with the seats folded down (with the help of a passing customer.) I assured the salesman that I could get it unloaded with the help of my former NFL football player neighbor, Brad Baxter. The chair wasn't quite as flat so I thought it wouldn't be too big a deal. Husband Jack tackled it right away and got it together in a few hours.

Brad easily pulled the boxed desk out and got it into my middle bed room which I call my office and rested it there until Tuesday when Jack got up the nerve to cut away the box and looked at the overwhelming number of parts. (The salesman had suggested that I might want to contact the company and have someone sent out to assemble it.) I can't say that Mr. Tison was undaunted.

HAPPY CORNER
Hazel Wells Tison

Resigned to his fate might be a better description. I helpfully got a plastic tub for him to put all the pegs, screws, wing nuts, drawer pulls, etc. into. He tentatively began to lay out the numbered boards and planks being careful not to overturn the one-piece desk top leaning in the open closet doorway. That 60 pound piece is the only thing that didn't require assembly.

That night he studied the instruction manual like he was going to take the GRE. The next morning he grimly found a place to sit on the floor and began studying, "step one place glue on pegs and insert one into each of the 12 holes in piece number 8. Set aside to dry." These instructions go on through step thirteen and then as you are to the point of placing the top on the attached cabinet and desk top, step A1 starts and goes through A15, whereupon Step B1 starts and goes through B15.

How an 88 year old man can sit in that position for hours on end and still manage to get up off the floor is a major feat. At the end of the day, most of the pegs and cam screws, and cam locks had been identified and placed in the directed holes. He informed me that with the help of possibly 3 or 4 four more people, he might get it done in 3 weeks.

The next morning, conveniently, I had to be at the church early to help setup and serve a meal for the family of Avonelle Sims Hagan whose funeral was Thursday at First Baptist Church. Meanwhile, back at the farm, son Glen arrived and rescued his dad. His airplane and boat modeling building days from childhood came in handy and when I got home around 3:00, lo and behold, they were ready to place the top on the assembled cabinet.

Not only was Glen able to help with the assembly, but he was able to set up my computer again so that I can once again write these wonderfully inspiring bits of drivel. He also informed me that my book shelf above has far too much weight on it, and one day it will come crashing down and I'd better get rid of something. I intend to do that just as soon as I finish decorating the living room and put all the boxes from all the decorations back in the shelves. I could give away my 10 volume set of Master Plots and my two volume American College Encyclopedic Dictionary. My husband suggested that I throw away my "antique" jars. Certainly, I can't throw away fifteen or so photo albums and some books I can't part with though I'll never reread them. Have you ever noticed in the magazines how book shelves always look so neat and bare? They will have maybe half dozen books, some art work, and a few trinkets or keep sakes! Why do they call them book shelves?

Anyway, I am happy to have a more comfortable desk and chair and am indebted to Brad Baxter, my husband, and my youngest son for making it happen.

Soon I'll have this place so organized my family won't recognize it when they all gather here for Christmas which is coming faster than we can comprehend. My next column will be for Christmas week.

Post Script: My friend Paula Waters arrived and tackled the book shelves while "urging" me to throw away or give away a lot of stuff. So now my book shelves look like something out of a magazine (almost). I am so organized!

and other individuals in our county surely must be familiar with that admonition as today's "Prattle" will reveal.

My readers will remember that the Thanksgiving holidays brought on a hub of activity in the Perry and Hester Wells household. Out son, Grant, wife, Lynn, son Mac and daughter Virginia were among the visitors in our home. They elected to come from their Houston, Texas home for Thanksgiving as other demands were being made on their time for a visit with Lynn's parents in Arizona during the Christmas holidays.

Grant has lived in Houston since his release from the U.S. Air Force and has been on the same job for 31 years. The two children are fast approaching the top level of the teenage years, thus trips to Florida have leveled off to one per year with each family.

Granddaughter Courtney Wells, Emory's daughter, has narrowed her visits home since graduation from the University of Georgia and she is now employed in Atlanta and living in that general area. She had not been to Florida since last Christmas. We all take solace in the fact that she loves her job and has found a group of wonderful people as fellow employees.

Courtney departed our home on Nov. 30. Grant's family made their departure for Houston the following day after a hefty breakfast was served by the chef on duty, which many in our home call "daddy," or "granddaddy." Serving the food the "Waffle House way" was fun for the cook who fed a host of people a hot breakfast in a relatively short time.

On Monday after observing that "not a creature was stirring—not even a mouse," a telephone call came from my friend, James Guy. His request was for me to speak for a few minutes at the well established quarterly fish-fry at Daniels Lake Pavilion on Saturday Dec. 7.

Inasmuch as this was Pearl Harbor Day, Preacher Guy asked that my remarks be of a patriotic theme, bringing anything that I could personally relate to the actual attack on our U.S. Naval Fleet, plus any other comments I desired to make. I told him that I had been the speaker at the Veteran Day program at Poplar Springs School on Nov. 11, covering my personal memory of the incident and that I had also reported my experience of active duty as a Military Escort in the American Graves Registration and Reburial Program, making 25 escorts in late 1948 into mid 1949. That didn't let me off the hook, so I agreed to do it again at the requested time. Frederick Kolmetz was in the gathering at Daniels Lake and was present at Vernon High School Dec. 8, 1941 and heard President ask congress to declare war on Japan.

Soon after his call, another longtime friend, Hollis Savelle, called and after a short conversation, he told me that the Washington County Cattlemen's Association was extending an invitation for me to speak at their annual banquet on Dec. 3. Never finding it easy to say "no," I found myself agreeing to undertake Hollis' request.

After his call, Hester asked: "Where is that man that vows to be slowing down?"

After the presentation with the Cattlemen's Association, which I enjoyed immensely — while devouring a delicious steak, which I valued at least $23.95 in top restaurants. This was while reminiscing and visiting with Jim Clemmons, who admits being older than I am. He was accompanied by his son, Dr. James Clemmons, and wife, Angela. A second perk was winning a door prize — a jar of Florida honey, donated by the Florida

Farm Bureau, which sells in stores for at least $12. A third consideration came when the group gave the old speaker, called out moth balls, a monetary gratuity for his efforts, which may be a "first" for me.

Before either of above speaking dates took place, I had learned of the death of Estelle Hewett Scott, my lifelong friend, neighbor and classmate in the 1944 Vernon High School Graduating Class. With that news came the request from the family that I had been selected to do a eulogy as a representative of our class. Of course, I agreed to "do my best" and participated along with minister, Rev. J. E. Hodges, who was pastor at Vernon Baptist Church beginning in 1955. The funeral was in Panama City on Thursday, Dec. 5, and I drove to the visitation the previous night also.

All went very well on the speaking engagements with many accolades for my efforts. But busy, busy was still the order of day for ole Perry. Friday, Dec. 6, found the Prattler in Panama City once again as a guest of the Judges of the 14th Judicial Circuit as we celebrated the annual Christmas Party and Luncheon at the luxurious Bay Yacht Club House, located on prestigious Bunkers Cove Road on the beautiful St. Andrew Bay Front. Among the vast numbers of active and retired county and circuit judges, I was happy to see and enjoy a short visit with Judge Warren Edwards, who came out of retirement to serve as county judge in Holmes County upon the untimely death of Judge Louis K. Hutchinson.

Sandwiched into the busy week was concluded when Hester and I attended the annual Chipley Country Christmas program, produced this year by Jimmy Miller. He planned, practiced and presented a

Gaetz backs statewide vote on casinos

By DARA KAM

The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Senate President Don Gaetz said Thursday that voters should probably weigh in on whether the state opens the door to Las Vegas-style casinos, posing another hurdle for out-of-state operators eager to do business in South Florida.

“I think you can make an argument that that’s a systemic change that the people of Florida ought to have a say about,” Gaetz said during a free-wheeling breakfast meeting with reporters.

Gaetz’s comments make it more likely that voters will play a role in any gaming expansion next year.

House Speaker Will Weatherford told The News Service of Florida last week that he is “warming up to” a constitutional amendment that would require statewide voter approval for any gambling expansion. But Weatherford, R-Wesley Chapel, was unclear about whether any changes approved by the Legislature next year also would need voters’ blessing.

FILE PHOTO

“Those details have to be worked out in the future,” Weatherford said.

What is clear is that the House and the Senate are considering a constitutional amendment — or possibly more — as part of the solution to the thorny issue of reshaping the state’s gambling landscape.

The Senate Committee on Gaming recently concluded four public hearings across the state.

Gaetz said a common theme coming from both proponents and opponents was that individual communities should be able to have a say on proposals that would affect their area.

“That fits with my views,” said Gaetz, who added that a major casino proposal would change an area’s “law enforcement environment, the cultural environment and perhaps the economic environment.”

He indicated that destination gambling resorts, one of the myriad components being considered by lawmakers, would be a sweeping enough change in state policy to require a statewide referendum. That could mean a second question for voters to decide in November.

Gaetz said “localized issues” might not necessarily require a statewide referendum. A destination resort in Miami-Dade County could be considered a local matter, he said.

But he conceded that even a single hotel casino in a lone county could represent a marked shift in the state’s gambling policy.

“I think it could be. We don’t have destination casinos other than on Native American land right now. So if we opened up to two or three or ... I don’t know. It’s hard then to say we’re going to do it in Miami but nobody else need apply. So in effect you’ve made a decision to get in the destination casino business. I think you can make an argument that that’s a systemic change that the people of Florida ought to have a say about,” he said. “I tend to sit on the side of asking people what they think.”

Lawmakers drew fire for placing 11 proposed constitutional amendments, many of them politically charged, on the 2012 ballot.

Gaetz said he and Weatherford last year pledged not to “litter up the constitution or the ballot with a bunch of crap, a bunch of issues de jour, a bunch of political stuff.”

“But the gambling proposals are different, he said.

“This is not like a political issue where you’ve got one side using a constitutional issue to try to posture and get people to the polls or something like that. If we did a major expansion of gambling, that’s a significant change,” Gaetz said.

Tyndall to hold forum on waters

TYNDALL AIR FORCE BASE

Tyndall Air Force Base officials want to hear from Bay County residents on the possibility of waterways surrounding the base being subjected to periods of closure to the public.

Tyndall Air Force Base has scheduled a town hall meeting to discuss the “Tyndall Waterway Security Proposal,” which would close some waterways in the instance of a terrorist attack and other times of heightened security. Tyndall is unveiling its updated proposal Thursday at 6 p.m. in the Sarzin Lecture Hall of Gulf Coast State College.

The original proposal, released in May, aimed to create a 500-foot buffer zone to all waterways around the Air Force base perimeter. Local groups raised red flags because the proposal designated 129 miles along Tyndall’s coastline as areas of “permanent public restriction.”

Maj. Anthony McCarty, 325th Fighter Wing commander, said language has been removed from the revised proposal.

“Based upon feedback received from our community, we realized the original verbiage was confusing and caused some misinterpretations,” McCarty said. “Therefore, we adjusted the verbiage within the proposal to ensure it is clear that any threat-driven restricted areas enacted by the wing commander would be temporary in nature.”

Maintained from the original proposal is a request giving Tyndall jurisdiction over the 129 miles of coastline that border the base along East Bay, St. Andrew Bay, St. Andrew Sound and the Gulf of Mexico. Tyndall also would have the authority to close four bayous within the base, including Fred Bayou, Little Cedar Bayou, Military Point and Baker Bayou, but only during times of heightened security.

Tyndall officials sought feedback from elected officials and concerned citizen groups after the original request from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Jacksonville, the agency responsible for facilitating the process, called for requiring amending the Code of Federal Regulations. The Army Corps of Engineers alerted a local nonprofit group named Friends of Shell Island, who were concerned Tyndall would permanently restrict the public from Shell Island.

“Tyndall Air Force Base is surrounded by 129 miles of waterway that could make the installation vulnerable to an incident that would affect our ability to generate our nation’s airpower,” McCarty said. “We are attempting to better protect the base to guarantee that ability.”

The town hall is the first of several public forums being scheduled to discuss the proposal before beginning the official coordination process with the Army Corps of Engineers. A hard date is not set to resubmit the proposal and Tyndall officials said they will schedule additional town halls concerning the proposal during the coming months at various locations within the community.

leadership believes this deal clears an obstacle on that path.

From a voters’ standpoint, though, one has to wonder whether Republican promises of “Put us in charge again and we’ll cut spending, honest, we mean it this time” ring hollow.

Even factoring in political realities, the Ryan-Murray deal doesn’t inspire much confidence.

Under this proposed budget, spending will increase $63 billion in 2014-15, and various “fees,” such as on air travel, also will go up. Income taxes won’t, but make no mistake — several parts of American life will become a little more expensive.

What’s particularly galling about the spending hike is that it undermines the sequester spending caps. Although they are a blunt instrument that sometimes causes collateral damage, they also are the first real cuts in spending in ages. Hey, after being on the wagon for several months, one little nip from the bottle can’t hurt, right? For old times’ sake?

To see a supposed budget hawk like Ryan become willing to chip away at the sequester after only two years gives little hope for his deal’s promise to return to cutting spending by 2023. Even that is a paltry $23 billion spread over 10 years, with half supposedly coming in the last year.

Neither this nor any deal binds future Congresses or presidents to spending cuts promised today. This is the old spending increases now, spending cuts later dance that Washington has been performing for decades. Charlie Brown has a better chance of finally kicking that football.

That is the principled case against the bill. In practical terms, though, the fiscal difference between it passing and failing is marginal — thimblefuls of red ink either bailed from or tossed into a crimson ocean. This is what passes for bipartisan progress in Washington these days.

Airport board uses tour to visualize future expansion

By VALERIE GARMAN

747-5076 | @valeriegarman
vgarman@pcnh.com

WEST BAY — Following a tour of the terminal building Friday, officials at the Northwest Florida Beaches International Airport (ECP) narrowed down a list of terminal expansion concepts, positioning baggage area and security checkpoint expansion at the top of the priority list.

The tour and subsequent workshop was a continuation of the airport’s master planning process, which will provide staff with five-, 10- and 20-year planning horizons for ECP once completed.

A master plan is needed for airports to be eligible to receive state and federal funding for improvement projects.

During the workshop, board members scrapped three out of the six concepts presented by airport planners that they said did not complement growth plans far enough into the future.

“Short-term is kind of an oxymoron for what we’re trying to accomplish here,” said board chairman John Pilcher. “Anything you do now should complement what you do in the future.”

In addition to providing additional space for baggage handling and security, the plans selected would address other critical deficiencies in public and concession space.

The concepts also map out two new terminal gates and reconfigure the seven existing gates, focusing on accommodations for large, narrow-body jets that hold roughly 130 passengers.

“Most all of these concepts are focused on narrow-body gates,” said architect Robert Fuller, who noted that 2,000 square feet would be an ideal gate size to comfortably accommodate passengers.

A majority of future terminal expansion will need to be to the north of the existing building, with minimal expansion to the east.

Board members also wrestled with the best way to utilize a large, empty space officials plan to use to someday process international passengers.

Pilcher and board member Till Bruett both contested international flights are still a long way off for ECP.

“That space is going to sit there like that at least for five years, maybe 10,” said Bruett, who suggested the space be used for retailers until it is needed.

Executive Director Parker McClellan said he doesn’t anticipate any scheduled international traffic at ECP for a long time, but international charters may be a possibility.

“The TDCs (tourist development councils) are actively marketing this as a destination internationally in Europe, so we have to have that in mind,” he said.

Airport planners also advised officials to preserve the area if possible.

“It’s a tantalizing space because it’s here, but it’s also an international facility,” Fuller said. “If you erode your international space, you’re eroding your capacity to handle these passengers.”

Airport planners will re-examine the three concepts and come back with a plan for the board to discuss at its February meeting.

“I think those three probably make the most sense with the vision in mind of moving north and also preserving that customs and border patrol area,” airport planner Paul Puckli said. “There’s no reason why in the future you couldn’t go back and change this.”

Bay pays demolition expenses on condemned properties

By MATTHEW BEATON
522-5114 | @matthewbeaton
mbeaton@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — As many as 15 houses bit the dust in the county this year — not by fire or act of God, but because they fell into disrepair, and the county had them razed.

When that happens, Bay County eats those costs. Though they are applied to the property as a lien, county building official Larry Carnley has never seen the demolition expense recouped in his three years on the job.

“I don’t know of any that we’ve ever recovered,” he said.

One such property set for demolition sits at 6422 Beach Drive in unincorporated Panama City Beach. The county has already taken bids to demolish the two-story, 1,984-square-foot house. The low bid was $4,329, submitted by a Co-co demolition company. The county usually performs around 10 demolitions a year.

One roadblock to recouping the money is the county is low on the property’s creditor list, Carnley said.

“If there’s a mortgage on the property, the county would be the last in line to get any money,” he said.

The lien is not applied through taxes to the property; it attaches to the property itself, Carnley said. That’s a roadblock, but it gives the county a unique option. If it carries no mortgage, the County Commission could foreclose on it and take ownership of it to recover demolition costs.

“But I don’t know that they have ever foreclosed on one,” Carnley said.

The county tries to avoid executing the demolition itself. It posts multiple violation notices on the property and is willing to work with owners who make a good-faith attempt to correct the problems, Carnley said.

The county doesn’t go looking for these dilapidated homes either; it reviews possible violations on a complaint-generated basis, often driven by calls to county commissioners.

“We look at the worst case scenarios first,” Carnley said.

The demolition process will be halted if the homeowner can bring in an engineer to show the building is structurally sound.

Generally, the demolition process takes 45-60 days. For the Beach Drive house, the county’s attempts to contact the homeowner, formerly Desiree H. Landers, now Desiree Miller, were unsuccessful.

The county has sent regular and certified mail notices, which came back return-to-sender. Likely that’s because she lives in Woodstock, Ga. Electronic records on the Tax Collector and Property Appraiser websites list that address and show the property is not under homestead exemption.

The Tax Collector’s website shows taxes have been paid on the property on time, and in full, since 2005. The most recent payment, of $1,231, was made Nov. 25.

When contacted by The News Herald, Miller said she had received no notice from the county and the mail should have forwarded from the beach house to her home near Atlanta.

“I haven’t been sent anything by the county,” she said.

Miller said the property was being taken over by the bank, a process that’s been going on since February, 2011. She bought it in 1998 while working at WJHG Channel 7, but a fire gutted the inside of the house.

“Honestly I haven’t been able to go back to Panama City since the fire,” she said. “It just emotionally destroyed me. It was going to be my retirement home and — yeah it was devastating.”

The county opened the case on the property in August, 2012. The notices are sent to the owner’s address listed on the Property Appraiser’s website, and back then the Beach Drive address was listed, Carnley said.

There’s no requirement to look “two or three times,” he said, for a new mailing address.

Carnley said no notices will be sent to the new owner address now that he is aware of it. He noted the process has taken over a year.

Carnley also said the county uses a private company to search for any other entities that have interests on the property. It found a mortgage company and sent it a letter, but nothing resulted from that.

The address was changed on Sept. 20, 2012, according to Pam Maloy, a clerk at the Property Appraiser’s office. Tax Collector records also show the address changed in 2012.

From the exterior, the house doesn’t look unfit, but the fire damage is the reason it’s been condemned.

When the county moves forward on a demolition, it takes bids from private contractors. Roy D. Smiley just missed getting the bid for the Beach Drive house by about $100.

He owns Smiley’s Lawn & Tractor in Panama City and regularly wins bids for county demolition work. He said the house would require at least a couple of days to raze for him and a crew of three or four. Once demolished, the land must be also cleaned.

“All the debris has to be gone ... so if somebody else buys the land, it’s ready to build (on) — all they would need is dirt,” Smiley said.

MARIANNA — In November, Chipola president Dr. Gene Prough announced his intention to retire in 2014.

Four members of the Chipola College District Board of Trustees — chairman Gary Clark, Gina Stuart, Danny Ryals and Tommy Lassman — volunteered to serve on a search committee, which met Dec. 9 to evaluate internal candidates. The committee agreed to recommend Chipola Executive Vice President Dr. Jason Hurst to the board as Prough's successor. Dr. Bryan Craven, Chipola director of public relations, was the only other internal candidate.

"The committee was very impressed with both candidates," Clark said. Clark was to submit the committee's recommendation of Hurst for the president's job at a special called meeting of the full Board of Trustees on Dec. 12.

College attorney Jeff Goodman outlined the board's three options at Hurst came to Chipola in November 2011 as vice president of baccalaureate and workforce development. He was promoted to executive vice president in 2013.

Before coming to Chipola, Hurst was vice president for workforce education and academic support at Pensacola State College from July 2010 to November 2011. A bed for Fluffy and Fido

Just as we desire to curl up in bed after a long day at work, our pets enjoy a comfortable place to rest from an afternoon of guarding the house or chasing squirrels in the backyard. With so many types of elaborate bedding to choose from, selecting the right one for Fluffy and Fido can be a bit daunting. Here are some tips to make the bedding hunt a little easier.

The best bedding for your dog or cat is one tailored to their specific needs and preferences. First, observe how they prefer to sleep. Does Fido like to sprawl out on the floor, cuddle on the couch or rest on a big pillow? This can give you a good idea of what exactly they would enjoy in their own bedding. Next, factor in their age, size, and any specific health requirements they might have.

"Puppies and kittens cannot regulate their body temperature, so for them, additional heat support to roughly a temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit is necessary for the first couple weeks of life," said Dr. Medora Pashmakova, a Clinical Assistant Professor in Emergency and Critical Care at the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences. "If newborns are wet or placed next to cold objects (such as metal cages or concrete floors), in drafts, or in outdoor enclosures, they can lose considerable amounts of heat." Because of this, all puppies and kittens should be kept indoors where the temperature can be controlled and they have access to additional heat if needed.

If your pet has an allergy to a particular material, by all means try to avoid it. "Beddings these days are made of many different materials: cotton, polyester, wool — so find what's right for your pet and what allows for easy cleaning," said Dr. Pashmakova. "Dogs and cats can have sensitive skin and airways, so using perfume and dye-free detergents can keep irritation to a minimum." It is also recommended that if your pet has had or currently has a flea infestation, paying special attention to bedding and its appropriate care, such as bleaching or just replacing altogether, is important to prevent future infestations.

When selecting the perfect bed, you should also consider any medical conditions, such as arthritis, that your pet has. "Many manufacturers now make heated beds, which is particularly useful for older dogs and cats that have orthopedic diseases," Pashmakova said. "Keeping their joints warm and on soft padding will make them a lot more comfortable in the winter months." Alternatively, a simple plush bed with soft sides is usually more than adequate for the remainder of the year.

To help prevent your dog or cat from the catching diseases, washing Fluffy's bed on a regular basis is recommended to keep the bed and surrounding environment clean and germ free. "The most important aspect of bedding is your ability to keep it clean and dry, which will help to keep your pet free of disease and more comfortable," said Dr. Pashmakova.

With the weather becoming colder and the nights becoming longer, out wandering the streets is no place for a cat or dog.

If you decide to take in a stray animal for a night, there are ways to make them as comfortable as possible without exerting too much effort. "You don't need to go out and find anything special, sometimes a cardboard box lined with towels can be perfectly comfortable," said Dr. Pashmakova.

"Both can be thrown away once the pet is no longer in your possession to prevent the transmission of disease or parasites that may have been on the homeless pet." Pashmakova explains that the space for the animal doesn't need to be very large, just enough to provide them with enough room to sit, lie down, and turn around comfortably.

If Fido is an outdoor-only dog, his bed requirements might be a bit more particular. "Outdoor bedding should include a shelter and non-porous bed that can be easily cleaned," said Dr. Pashmakova. "Warm and dry bedding should be provided in the winter, and cool shade and plenty of water in the summer." However, your pet really should not be left outside without shelter in extreme weather conditions. If in doubt, always bring your pet inside. "A good rule of thumb is, 'If it's uncomfortable for you, it's probably even more uncomfortable for your dog or cat,'" said Dr. Pashmakova.

Taking these tips into consideration will undoubtedly help you find the perfect snoozing spot for Fido and Fluffy. Whether it's a plush, heated bed or simply a cardboard box lined with old blankets, just remember that they don't require elaborate, expensive furnishings to be happy; all they really need is you.

If you like your snow, you can keep it

Memory is a very wonderful thing, at times. It seems the older I get the more I remember things that never happened. I do not know how that takes place, but I guess it is just old age creeping up on me. With me, old age has ceased creeping and has started a fast sprint to some finish line. I just wish it would slow down just a wee bit.

Christmas, however, is the time to indulge ourselves in memories. Some people can go back in time and remember things when they were two or three years old years old.

Me, I cannot remember what I had for breakfast this morning. I have a strong suspicion that those remembering things back that far are remembering things that really did not take place but who in the world is going to prove them wrong.

To me, one of the delightful things about Christmas is getting to see family and friends that you have not seen all year long. I remember those old-fashioned family reunions we used to have when all of our relatives would get together. It was at those reunions that I remembered why I did not see my relatives the rest of the year. Once a year was quite enough, thank you.

If insanity is hereditary, I am in deep trouble. I am only thankful my wife did not meet my relatives prior to our wedding.

Of course, after I met her relatives I began realizing that after all, families are relative, and some more relative than others.

I was thinking about some Christmases in the past and the good times we had. I remembered our first Christmas as a married couple. That was probably the cheapest Christmas we ever had. Then I got to thinking about the Christmases as the kids began dropping into our family and taking up permanent residence. When the kids arrived, it changed Christmas forever and not just the cost.

This week I got a couple Christmas cards from some relatives who live up north. All of them had pictures of snow.

Watching the weather reports this week I knew many of them were having snowstorms and I chuckled to myself thinking about it. In one Christmas card, was the familiar title, "I'm dreaming of a white Christmas." Then at the bottom of the card, they scribbled, "Don't you miss all the snow this time of the year?" Then they drew a series of smiley faces.

I smiled and for a few moments, one brief moment, I did miss all that snow.

The Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage saw me smiling and asked, "Who sent the Christmas cards?"

I told her who the cards were from and added, "They think we miss all that snow." We then shared a hearty laugh together and went about our own business.

I just could not get it out of my mind. Did I miss all that snow? What a question.

I put my thinking machine in gear and began processing the Christmases we celebrated up north where there was plenty of snow. As I begin thinking, I did begin missing all that snow.

Then it dawned on me what snow was all about.

At times, we forget some details of our memories and only think of the positive and good aspects. Do not get me wrong. Snow looks wonderful on a Christmas card. I do not mind watching a TV program where plenty of snow is falling and people are singing Christmas carols. I rather enjoy it in those venues.

The question is, did I miss all that snow?

My answer goes something like this. Yes, I do miss all that snow! Furthermore, I plan to miss all that snow for the rest of my life.

The basic reason I moved to Florida when I did was that I do not like snow. I like looking at snow on a Christmas card but I do not like looking at snow through my car window.

It is not so much that I do not like driving in snow; it is the other idiots coming at me who do not know how to drive in snow and do not know how to stay in their own lane.

I remember the last time I did any driving in snow I ended up almost a complete nervous wreck. People drive in snow as though they do not know how to drive in snow.

Yes, I do miss the snow, and the cold and being snowed in, did I mention the cold. I do miss all that and I plan to miss it the rest of my life. Period. Some things you can live without and as far as I am concerned this is one.

To all those who love snow and cannot get enough of it, please enjoy it this year for me because I do not plan to.

Only one Bible character seemed to enjoy snow. God said to Job, "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? Or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?" (Job 38:22).

When God was trying to get Job to see is that no matter what your circumstances are, that is not the end. Look beyond your problems and difficulties and see the hand of God who created all things and then called them "good." In every circumstance you will find some treasure of God's amazing grace.

I'm a Pack Mule!
We've all been at that point where we were at our capacity. We looked around and discovered we were carrying not only our own stuff, but everyone else's as well. How about emotionally? Do you carry a burden until it breaks you? Does the load get so heavy that even the strongest of us pack mules can't get up the slightest hill? God's arms are strong and His back is broad. He waits to take your burdens.

dela Rosa named director of GCRMC Pediatric ICU

Special to Extra

PANAMA CITY — Gulf Coast Regional Medical Center announced on Monday the appointment of Reynaldo dela Rosa, MD, FAAP as Medical Director of its new Pediatric Intensive Care Unit (PICU). He also served as PICU Medical Director/Pediatric Intensivist at Lafayette General Medical Center in Lafayette, LA. He also worked as Pediatric Intensivist at Batson Children's Hospital in Jackson, MS; Riley Children's Hospital in Indianapolis, IN; and Cook Children's Medical Center in Fort Worth, TX. He had academic appointments from Tulane Medical School, University of Mississippi School of Medicine, Indiana University School of Medicine and Harvard Medical School. Hereceivedhismedicaldegree at Far Eastern University Institute of Medicine in Manila, Philippines. Care Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital-Harvard Medical School in Boston, MA. He is board-certified in Pediatrics and Pediatric Critical Care. "Sickness brings a tremendous amount of stress to the lives of every individual, more so if it involves children. Having the first and only PICU here in Bay County offers a place where critically-ill children can receive medical care from highly-trained doctors and staff using advanced medical equipment without having to drive long distances. It also gives the community peace of mind knowing that in the event something bad will happen to their kids, they can always receive the appropriate care they need in a short period of time. I am excited to share my extensive experience and, in the process, help bring back the smiles on the faces of the children of Panama City," said dela Rosa. "We're truly excited with the recent critical care expansion and the addition of Dr. dela Rosa," said Carlton Ulmer, president and CEO at Gulf Coast Regional Medical Center.
