Homestead property values on the rise

By CECILIA SPEARS
658-4038 | @WCN_HCT
Cspears@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY — Property taxes might have remained the same for the past several years, but the value of homestead property is on a steady rise, according to Property Appraiser Otis Corbin Jr.

“This year homestead has increased by one and a half percent,” Corbin said. “There is an increase to 10-12 newly constructed houses per year in Holmes County. New houses have doubled this year compared to prior years; however that is because of a law that passed for all homestead property values to increase no more than three percent each year.”

That law is the Save Our Homes Amendment, which was approved in 1992 as an assessment limitation on increases to protect assessed value, regardless how high the market values might increase. Corbin explained the intent is to protect homestead property owners from being “taxed out of their homes” when the market is increasing substantially.

He also said the benefit of SOH is that, over time, a homestead property owner will save a significant amount of money on taxes.

WESTVILLE — Community members came in by the dozens to show their support for one of their own, as Pittman Volunteer Fire Department hosted a Christian Sing Benefit on Aug. 2 to help raise money to help local resident Susan Harris in her ongoing battle against Stage 2 Colon Cancer.

“We wanted to help Mrs. Susan out by raising money for medical expenses, transportation, food, lodging and co-payments as she travels back and forth to Birmingham, Alabama for treatment,” said Chief Alfred Sellers. “I just want to thank everyone for their support.”

Entertainment for the evening were Ron French, The Drummonds, Neal and Courtney Reeves and other local talent. Along with entertainment, the fire department sold barbecue plates and hosted an auction, as well as collected donations. Emcee of the event was Gary Newell. He informed he was free to all nonprofit organizations’ fundraising events. For more information, call him at 850-956-2707.

“I never thought there would be this many people,” said Harris, choked with emotion and eyes tearing up. “You never know until it happens to you; I only hope that by doing this it will help someone else down the line. Most of these people I’ve known for 35 years living in Florida and I want you to know they are more like family; we all care for one another here.”

From staff reports

Holmes County School Board member Jason Motley formally has announced he is seeking re-election to his District 3 seat.

Motley says his experience has a teacher gave him a “unique perspective” to the Homes County school system that his opponent doesn’t have.

New franchise agreement to ‘clean up’ waste management

By CECILIA SPEARS

BONIFAY — After putting the final touches “to put teeth” in the latest franchise agreement between Holmes County and garbage service franchise holders for Holmes County, the county approved of the agreement and letter to franchise holders explaining updates during the July 29 meeting of the Holmes County Board of County Commissioners.

“We’ve put a little more teeth in the agreement for our protection,” County Attorney Jeff Goodman said. “It is still a year to year agreement, franchise fees remain at $500, the insurance requirements remain the same; it is the day-to-day operations that have changed and that’s where the meat is. The agreement basically says that the franchise holder agrees to properly cover all waste trucks with a tarp, we’ll take all necessary steps to insure that all operations are in compliance with Holmes County ordinances; which means we’re holding them to our code of cleanliness and upkeep.”

Goodman added the franchise holders also are responsible for training staff, provide the county with a list of vehicles with tags, required to provide a list of employees with updated driver’s licenses, required to update the county quarterly in respect to the insurance, franchisees must keep their facilities open and keep their property in “good, clean condition.”

“We retain the right to inspect the franchisees facility, equipment and operations at any time to determine whether they’ve fulfilled our requirements,” Goodman said. “It is in our discretion as to whether or not they are and if they are an eye-sore or a nuisance we can revoke their franchise. Those are really the bulk of the issues we have heard from our constituents but I will remind the board that we have this set up to where every year if someone pays us $500 they can set up a franchise within the Political call heats up judicial race

By CHRIS OLWELL
747-5079 | @PCNHchriso
colwell@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — In 2013, incumbent 14th Judicial Circuit Judge James Fensom made a couple of lightning-rod decisions that upset some members of the legal and law enforcement communities.

Now he is being challenged for his seat by Panama City attorney Gerard Virga and Bonifay attorney Shalene Grover. Incumbent judges generally run unopposed for re-election, and races for contested seats are usually staid and somber compared to other races because the Florida Bar sets stringent limits on what judges can say and do in a campaign.

So a recent telephone message targeting Fensom struck some people as out of place. Fensom's all mobbed-up, according to a robocall from a short-lived political committee with ties to one of Virga's biggest supporters.

WHO IS 'VINNIE BAGADONUTS'?

In the recording (available online at newsherald.com) a mobster with an Italian affect and a name — “Vinnie Bagadonuts” — straight out of “The Sopranos” thanks Fensom for calling Bay County Sheriff Frank McKeithen “a dirty rat.”

Bagadonuts is likely referencing Fensom's 2013 order to dismiss drug charges brought against a defendant by the Sheriff's Office.

In his written order dismissing the case, Fensom didn't mince words. He called investigators' conduct “outrageous” and described them as acting with a “clear intent to mislead and deceive” for secretly using a GPS tracking device on the suspect's vehicle without a warrant or court order.

McKeithen called Fensom's order an unwarranted attack.

The mobster doesn't explicitly support or oppose any candidate, but the in-situation is Fensom is soft on crime.

“We goodfellas are struggling to sell drugs and steal stuff — you know, working hard — so thanks Judge Fensom. You're a goodfella, too,” the voice in the recording says in a stereotypical mobster accent.

The recording ends with a declaration that the ad was paid for by “Veterans for the Vote.”

Attorney Waylon Graham came home to it on his voicemail, and he's heard it several times since then as it has spread through the local legal and political community “like fire,” Graham said.

He said most of the attorneys he's talked to about the recording are appalled by it, particularly because judicial candidates are held to Florida Bar standards that are more restrictive than those set forth in Florida's election laws.

Judicial candidates, for instance, can't personally

Congressional race tightens in Panhandle

By MARGIE MENZEL

The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — The race between Republican incumbent Steve Southerland and Democratic challenger Gwen Graham in a North Florida congressional district continues to tighten. With money pouring in, the race is one of a handful nationally that Democrats are targeting.

Steve Israel, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, told Politico on Tuesday the district was one of three his party could pick up in 2014, a year in which Republicans are expected to gain several seats in the U.S. House. The nonpartisan Rothenberg Political Report switched its ranking of the race from “Leans Republican” to “Toss Up/Tilt Republican” in mid-July.

Now Graham, D-Tallahassee, is deploying her family — including her father, former Florida governor and U.S. Sen. Bob Graham — in a series of ads and events aimed at countering Southerland's advantage in conservative parts of the Panhandle.

Southerland, R-Panama City, is fighting back, challenging Graham to identify the issues on which she disagrees with the embattled Obama administration.

“She's been given invitation after invitation after invitation to go on the record and make public statements of where she differs in the policy positions of Barack Obama and Nancy Pelosi,” Southerland told reporters this month at the opening of his Tallahassee campaign office. “There's only so much you can do on the air, on TV and through commercials and through third-party groups. At some point in time, I think the people want to see you and they want to hear you make a definitive statement on what you believe regarding policy.”

Graham, for her part, has been using her father's strategy of “workdays,” in which the candidate helps perform the jobs of ordinary Floridians. As Southerland was opening his Tallahassee headquarters, Graham, an attorney, was heading for Fades, a barbershop across town, to sweep the floor and answer the phone.

“We are most definitely in a position to win this,” she said. “We're getting not only Democratic support but Republican support. This is a bipartisan campaign. It's not about being a Democrat or a Republican; it's about having someone in Washington that's going to be looking out for everyone in this district.”

The sprawling Congressional District 2 includes Bay, Calhoun, Franklin, Gadsden, Gulf, Jackson, Jefferson Leon, Liberty, Taylor, Wakulla, Washington, and parts of Madison and Holmes counties. Tallahassee and Gadsden County, in the eastern part of the district, are heavily Democratic, while the Panama City area to the west is heavily Republican.

Southerland, who runs his family's funeral home, was first elected in the tea party wave of 2010, vowing to oppose the Affordable Care Act. He swept out seven-term incumbent Allen Boyd, a Blue Dog Democrat from Monticello who had voted for the controversial health care law.

In 2012, Southerland defeated former state Sen. Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee. Lawson racked up votes in Leon and Gadsden counties, but Southerland swept the small, rural counties to the west.

“I'm running a 14-county strategy,” Graham said. “From the very beginning, we have been.”

On Wednesday, she kicked off eight “Grilling with the Grahams” cookouts across the district, along with appearances in Apalachicola on Friday, at the Possum Festival in Wausau this weekend and the opening of her third campaign office in Marianna on Monday.

Graham has outraised Southerland. As of June 30, she'd collected $2,353,864 in contributions and had $1,574,520 on hand, while the incumbent had raised $1,916,651 and had $1,394,748 on hand.

But it's difficult to track all the dollars flowing into the race, given the outside groups involved. Graham's allies include the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee and Emily's List, which funds pro-choice Democratic women. Southerland's include the National Republican Congressional Committee and the Koch brothers-backed group Americans for Prosperity, which paid for TV ads praising the congressman's policy positions in October and February.

Southerland said his campaign would need to raise $2.5 million and predicted the cost of the race would be $10 million to $12 million.

He said the two candidates are “only about $150,000 apart” in cash on hand.

“There still are quite a few foreclosures in Holmes County,” Corbin said. “Houses on the market are selling pretty quickly, especially if they are lower priced. Values have come back some, sales have increased and things are definitely better than what they were.”

Commercial property, he explained, have not moved much at all in the last year.

“Coastal counties have changed a lot as far as sharp increases and declines,” said Corbin. “It's just not the same case for inland counties. I'd also like to add that it is the county and school board who set the taxes; we just assess the value.”

game changing. I also understand that education is, and always has been, a pendulum to which we as educators must do our very best to keep up with and still provide the best quality education possible for our children. Holmes County has some of the best teachers in the state and we need to do everything we can to provide them with the support and materials that they need to ensure the success of every student.”

During his school board tenure, Motley has been a part of the financial planning process during some of the country's most difficult economic times, during which he was involved in the building process of Poplar Springs School and an active participant in pursuing funding and planning for the new K-8 school in Bonifay. He also chaired the board for four years.

He has also been vocal about what he feels is “the importance of getting away from Common Core and government bailouts of any kind with strings attached.”

Motley and his wife, Sonya, have four children, two of whom are Holmes County High School graduates, and two others who are current students.

Jordan Nedeau remembered for love of family, those in need

By CAROL KENT

CHIPLEY — Jordan Rae Nedeau is being remembered by friends and family this week as a woman whose life mission was to help others.

The Chipley High School graduate died after a fellow Tallahassee Community College student drove into the Ochlockonee River, reportedly leaving the scene and his passenger, 20-year-old Nedeau in his submerged 2001 Isuzu Rodeo.

The driver, Jeffrey Rushing, 20, has been arrested on charges of vehicular homicide but was released on bond Monday. Rushing is believed to have been intoxicated at the time of the incident.

Though the investigation is still ongoing, Nedeau's family believes she died trying to ensure her classmate made it home safely.

"I was told the reason why she was in the car was to help someone back home who was intoxicated," said her father, John Nedeau. "That was so like her to try to help someone; she had a heart for helping people. Whatever transpired that night, there are still a lot of questions for which we don't have answers."

Nedeau, who graduated Summa Cum Laude from CHS in 2012, had hopes of

SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

Jordan Rae Nedeau, 20, was known for her love of her family, the outdoors, animals and helping others becoming a math teacher and often combined her love for others with her natural knack for mathematics.

Nedeau's fellow 2012 CHS grad and recent college roommate, Shelby Joiner, says Nedeau spent many late nights helping her with higher maths.

"I had a hard time with trigonometry, and she would stay up to tutor me and make sure I understood the work," Joiner said. "But more than that, she was always there when I needed her. I could call at three in the morning if I needed to talk. She just really loved people and treated everyone equally without judging them. Her happiness just rubbed off on you, and you wanted to be a better person just because she was near you. She just loved."

Another close friend and classmate, Paige Harrell of Chipley, agrees.

"She came to everyone with a warm heart," Harrell said. "She called me Princess because I like to do pageants, and I called her Sunflower because she was so bright. She didn't care who you were or where she came from; she was going to be good to you."

John Nedeau said his daughter was simply someone who loved her friends and family.

"She really was close to her mom and looked at her as a role model," he said. "And she was very close to her younger brother (Josh) and sister (Jenna). When her brother was little, she would literally drag him around because she wanted to be close to him."

Josh Nedeau said not much has changed since they were children, that he still wanted to be close to his big sister.

"She was my best friend," he told The News.

Meanwhile, the family said they are touched by the outpouring of support they've received from Washington County.

"There's a lot of good people over there who have known us for a long time," John Nedeau said. "They've been good to us."

Esto Volunteer Fire Department receives money for new equipment

Special to the Times-Advertiser

ESTO — The Esto Volunteer Fire Department recently received a $1,000 donation from First Federal Bank to help purchase new protective gloves for their firefighters. First Federal's Regional Sales Manager Sandy Spear, and First Federal's Financial Center Manager Wesley Whitaker, recently presented Esto Fire Chief Thomas Murphy and Lieutenant Chris Jones with the funds.

"Volunteer firefighters are the heroes of our small communities," Spear said. "In smaller communities and towns, there aren't always enough resources to provide a city or county fire department. This is where our volunteer firefighters step in."

"Becoming a volunteer firefighter requires extensive training, hard work and dedication," she said. "As with many volunteer organizations, adequate funding is a major concern. Money is always needed to update gear, tools and equipment, and new gear is exactly what the Esto Volunteer Fire Department needed when they asked to participate in First Federal Bank's Community Rewards Program."

The donation was made possible through the support of First Federal Bank customers.

"We are grateful for the service and dedication that these brave firefighters provide to the Esto community and hope this donation can inspire others to become involved," Spear said.

Take 10 minutes to save a life

Like many, I'm not a fan of needles. Therefore, the first time I was reporting on a local blood drive, I was prepared to snap a few photos, but not to extend my arm to donate.

The donation line was long, and while I stood around, asking for permission to take photos of those giving blood, I was inspired by my neighbors who seemed willing and ready to literally roll up their sleeves and get to work saving lives.

"That's nice," I thought. "Too bad I'm a wimp."

But then, I heard something that changed my mind, giving me the push I needed to get over my fear of needles and make myself useful.

A mother and father were waiting in line outside, clearly giving blood as a couple – and as a teaching moment for their son.

"This is our way of helping to save people who are sick or hurt," the father explained. "We should help all we can, when we can."

The exchange got me thinking about the horrific devastation left by the record making F-5 tornado that had torn through the area of Moore, Oklahoma just eight days before.

The images of the tragedy replayed like newsreels in my mind's eye. Scenes of mothers desperately searching the frightened, bloody faces of children amid the rubble of Briarwood Elementary School

CAROL KENT
Editor

- and the knowledge that parents of numerous children from Plaza Towers Elementary School would only see their children again to give positive identifications - tormented me.

Thoughts of firefighters killed in the fertilizer plant explosion that same year in West, Texas and those hurt and killed in the Boston Marathon bombing also came to mind. So much human suffering took place in such a short span of our nation's history.

I longed to give comfort in some way.

I rolled up my own sleeves and joined those giving something no amount of money can buy:

precious, life saving blood.

Yes, it was scary at first. Yes, it took the use of three technicians and two arms to retrieve the pint of blood from my reluctant body — but it was worth it.

The donation process itself from the time a donor arrives until the time they leave doesn't take long.

Donors complete donor registration, which includes information such name, address, and phone number; and answering questions during a private interview about their health history. After a quick check of their temperature, hemoglobin, blood pressure and pulse checked, the donor gives blood in a sterilized donation area. The donation itself is only about eight-10 minutes on average.

If we can each help save a life by killing 10 minutes, why not do it?

Here's your chance.

The Oneblood blood mobile will soon be in Holmes and Washington counties to take donations. The unit will be at Walmart in Chipley from noon to 5 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 7 and again from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 15. It will also be on scene at the Bonifay Nursing and Rehab Center from 10 a.m. to noon, Friday, Aug. 8 and at Doctors Memorial Hospital from 1 to 4:30 p.m. that same day.

For more information on blood donation sites, contact the Central Panhandle Chapter of the American Red Cross at 850-763-6587.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Short changing our most valuable resource

Dear Editor,
There should always be a live teacher in the classroom. The teacher should be able to tell if a student is having a problem with the lesson by body language, lack of response to a question, etc. With the right words of encouragement, the teacher may give that student the only encouragement they get, showing someone does care. Video can't do that.

It was reported that Holmes County Schools are operating in the red.

Cut something else. Not anything in the educational process. Already, there is a lack of emphasis on spelling and penmanship. This will hinder those students for a lifetime.

So many times, the programs for the young people are cut to fund something else. That's wrong; you are dealing with our most valuable resource, the young people, our future leaders.

A few of my favorite things

It began with the wondrous cold snap sometime last week.

I don't know if anyone else has ever experienced it, but I could smell Autumn, and it filled my heart and mind with wonderful thoughts, thoughts of cool weather, desserts, candies and drinks made from spices, family gatherings, festivals, and my birthday, which is next month.

CECILIA SPEARS
Cecilia's Sit Down

I decided to share with you a few of my favorite things:

Machines — I'm fascinated by the creativity and ingenuity that comes with machines. There can be many small, seemingly insignificant parts working together in beautiful harmony to create a functional unit. I have quite a few friends and mentors who were "gear heads" or "grease monkeys," people who spend most of their time with oil on their clothes and spare parts in their pockets. They are why I became interested in automobiles and the classic Transformers characters.

Crafts — I love making things with my hands. It doesn't matter the medium, though I am more familiar with some than others. I like to acquaint with as many ways to use art as possible.

Painting is one of my favorite pastimes. It opens so many possibilities. I feel so serene when I knit, sew, paint, glue and mold. It makes me happy when I can use what I learn to help with fun activities for the youth at church or charity events. I enjoy the happiness that my work can bring almost as much as I enjoy making it.

Autumn — I get so excited when I feel the cool air and smell a hint of burning leaves. The cool weather has revitalized me and made me feel full of energy. It reminds me of the first day of school, which was always such an amazing new opportunity, and my favorite flavors, ginger and cloves, which are used in pretty much everything around the Thanksgiving holidays. It's time of reflection on the things for which we're grateful, and I'm grateful for good food, friends, family, and loved ones.

Festivals/Amusement

"Woman with Parasol," a portrait of Madam Monet and son, was painted by Claude Monet, one of my favorite painters.

Parks — I love to hear the happy music and see happy people. I think it's amazing to see how people can come together to enjoy outdoor festivities. Washington County has the Watermelon Festival and Possum Festival, and Holmes County has the Down Home Street Festival, which always give me a feeling of adventure - not to mention the gobs and gobs of cotton candy.

I feel like Templeton from Charlotte's Web when he was describing the fair as being a "veritable smorgasbord."

Art — I can get lost in art. It's someone's creative representation of how they see things, so it's almost like you have a slight glimpse into the thoughts and feelings of someone else. Feelings can be displayed in almost any shape or form. What some can imagine can be wondrous, exciting, and sometimes even disturbing, but it's always an adventure.

Animals — When I was younger, I dreamt of becoming a veterinarian. I loved animals, not just because they were cute or impressive, but because there was a different culture that came with learning about each one. They all have different social orders and behave differently, which is fascinating.

Nature — I love being surrounded by nature. It fills me with a sense of peace to sit by a babbling brook, a sense of wonder to occupy a moon-lit beach, and a sense of adventure when I take to uncharted hills during a hike.

Music — From classical to classic rock, there's something about a good melody that can alter the mood. When I was young, I practically slept with my Walkman. I couldn't seem to function without music.

Books — Books are portable worlds. With the turn of a page, you could be somewhere where mystery, adventure or intrigue abound. A wealth of knowledge is at the fingertips, with no batteries required. I have been on so many adventures and have met so many characters, that it feels as though I've lived a thousand lifetimes.

People — Without people, most of my favorite things would be unable to exist. What marvels people are! There's always a story — some are sad, some are joyous, and most are bound to make you cry either way.

There's always a smile that can be passed on. I've the great fortune meet some great people, and I look forward to the opportunity to meet more. Friends, family and community are sometimes one and the same. I've found that here.

Thank you again for the opportunity to sit with you; see you next time.

solicit donations, let alone attack their opponents.

Graham, who knew Fensom growing up in Gulf County and has donated to his campaign, thought he recognized the voice of Vinnie Bagadonuts.

"It certainly sounds like Bill Price, and if it's not Bill Price, it's someone who does a great impersonation of him," Graham said.

PRICE V. FENSOM

Panama City attorney Bill Price did not respond to repeated requests for comment over the last week. No other attorney has clashed with the judge so publicly, though, including a comment Price made in a News Herald story in which he said it would be Fensom's last term in office, "God willing," and asked people to support Virga.

This was after Fensom charged Price with criminal contempt of court for his behavior during a criminal trial in 2013. Fensom said Price violated several provisions of a pretrial order during an emotionally charged trial in a case that involved the death of a young woman.

Price, against Fensom's order, referred to a transgendered witness who was born a man but self-identifies and lives as a woman as "mister" in front of the jury and questioned whether she had psychological problems. He also referred to the possible sentence his client might receive if the jury returned with a guilty verdict — another no-no.

The charge against Price was a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail, so he was not entitled to a jury trial. Fensom refused Price's attorney's request to recuse himself, and some attorneys were concerned Fensom's determination to decide charges he initiated violated Price's right to due process.

But the 1st District Court of Appeal gave Fensom its approval, and Price ultimately entered a no contest plea as the trial was about to begin. Fensom sentenced him to probation and required a letter of apology along with community service and legal evidence and ethics training.

In June 2013, a commenter on a News Herald story about the case wondered about the possibility of unseating Fensom in the election. Nine months later, after the case was resolved, Price responded.

"I believe it's time to answer that question," Price wrote. "Gerard Virga is running against Judge Fensom, and with your support, he'll defeat the judge."

COMMITTEE TIES TO CAMPAIGN?

Veterans for the Votes Chairman John Furr and treasurer Kathryn Furr listed the address of the organization as 2615 Canal St. in Panama City. That's the address for Gears Transmission and Auto Repair, in which John Furr and Kathryn Furr are listed as president and vice president, respectively.

Price is listed as the business' registered agent. He also represents John Furr in an ongoing civil court case, and he also has represented Kathryn Furr previously.

Price has been perhaps Virga's most visible supporter. He and his business have both made the maximum financial contribution to Virga's campaign, and Price has distributed campaign signs and handled fund-raiser invitations on social media.

He co-hosted a campaign event and has appeared at many others, and he was with the candidate on the steps of the courthouse when Virga officially announced his candidacy.

Price is so close to the campaign a News Herald journalist mistakenly reported Price was Virga's campaign manager because he was sending the paper announcements about the campaign kickoff and other events. But Price only is a volunteer — although, because no one on the campaign staff is paid, everyone is a volunteer — and he's never had any decision-making authority, Virga said.

Price and the Furrs have not explained their relationship or the recording, so it's unclear if Price is the voice of Vinnie Bagadonuts.

Political committees are free to spend whatever they want on calls or ads. It doesn't count as a campaign contribution, but if they coordinate with a candidate it counts as a campaign contribution, and political committees' contributions are limited to $1,000, according to the Florida Division of Elections Political Committee Handbook.

Price is not officially connected to the campaign, so any coordination between him and Veterans for the Votes is "probably" lawful, said T. Wayne Bailey, a political science professor at Stetson University.

"But sometimes you have to say, 'Give me a break,'" Bailey said. "There's volunteering, and then there's volunteering."

OPEN AND SHUT

Several attempts to reach John and Kathryn Furr were unsuccessful, and they did not respond to messages left at their business. Their foray into the world of political action committees was brief, according to the Division of Elections, they had never formed a political committee prior to forming Veterans for the Votes.

Veterans for the Votes was a political committee for less than two weeks, and the only action the committee took appears to be the creation of the Bagadonuts recording. It disbanded July 21.

It's not clear who was involved in the creation of the recording or how many people heard it.

Political committees are required to disclose spending, just like candidates, but only if they spend more than $500. On the Internet, at least, robocalling services are pretty cheap: one Internet service quoted a price of $372 to robocall 5,000 phones with a 30-second message.

If Veterans for the Votes limited the number of phones it called and didn't spend any money on voice actors, the political committee might not be required to file any spending disclosures. The deadline for Veterans for the Vote to file any final disclosures was Friday.

'TOTALLY UNACCEPTABLE'

Fensom didn't want to discuss the recording.

"I'm just trying to run my campaign based on my qualifications," Fensom said.

Virga said neither he nor anyone involved in an official capacity with his campaign authorized the recording or had any interaction with Veterans for the Votes aside from accepting a $25 donation from a Kathy Furr. His campaign will return the donation if it hadn't already, he said.

He publicly denounced the recording immediately. In a post on Facebook that appears to have been removed, Virga urged civility in the campaign.

"Moments ago I learned of a voice recording that is being circulated. The voice recording is offensive, and in my opinion totally unacceptable. The voice recording depicts a judicial candidate in an unflattering light.

"How one wins or loses a races speaks volumes about their character. There is no place for character assassination in these races. Our campaign slogan has been 'fairness, courtesy and respect.' Any tactics such as the ones described above does not comport with the fundamental principles of the campaign."

Virga said he hadn't heard the recording until The News Herald provided him with a copy. Virga said the clichéd stereotype of the Italian as a criminal offended him personally, and judges should not be attacked for making controversial decisions.

He said he had not spoken to Price since he heard the recording, and he doesn't know what role, if any, Price played in its dissemination. Virga said he has lots of supporters, and he can't control what they do.

"All you can do is tell people to comport with the message," he said.

county and most counties don't operate that way."

Goodman explained that most counties agree on one waste collection franchise for the residents, however the county has "opened up" the options for residents to decide who they feel is best suited for the task. With that choice it also leaves the liability between the resident and the franchise holder, making the county unable to become involved if a dispute occurs.

Goodman added that this also requires a lot of time and effort on the county's part to insure that all franchise holders are in compliance with the agreement.

Board member Bill Parish motioned to increase the franchise fee to $750 to offset county costs and the motion died due to lack of second.

IN OTHER BUSINESS:

- Goodman informed the board that negotiations with the Holmes County District School Board went well and an agreement was reached. The agreement was that the school board purchase the land previously used as the Holmes County Fair Grounds in the amount of $225,000 in order to build the new elementary and middle schools for Bonifay. Goodman explained that there was agreed flexibility to allow the county to remove any items on the property by Nov. 1 and set the close out date for Nov. 3, which would finalize the property as then belonging to the school board. Board agreed to set a special meeting during the following week to approve after reviewing all facets of the contract.
- Goodman informed the board that after extensive review with the business owner requesting to extend his liquor store to a bar he found out that the owner was "nowhere near complying" with the ordinance and explained the matter never should have been presented before the board.

ALSO APPROVED:

- Set the proposed millage rate by keeping it the current rate of 9.6605 with a vote of three to two, with board member Kenneth Williams and Chairman Monty Merchant voting "no." Goodman informed the board that the millage rate will not be officially approved until after proper process of publicizing and holding a public hearing, which would take 60 days.
- Budget workshop for 5 p.m. Aug. 5.
- Tentative budget hearing to be at 5:01 p.m. Sept. 8.
- Set up a committee to select a candidate from the 19 applicants for the position of Holmes County Emergency Management Services Director.
- Not to fill the position of Holmes County Public Works Director at this time.
- Holmes County Sheriff's Office Capt. Michael Railey's request to purchase a new air conditioning unit for the Holmes County Jail, assuring the board it was within the sheriff's office's budget.
- Clerk of Court Kyle Hudson's request to gather bids to put new carpeting in the Holmes County Courtroom, informing the Board that there could be a 50/50 cost share between the county and the judge. He agreed to present the bids to the Board at the next meeting.
- Nominate Board members Parish and David Whitaker as members of the Value Adjustment Board.
- Holmes County Emergency Management Services request to purchase a new ambulance that includes the trade-in of an old one in the amount of $148,000 divided into three payments of $50,000 per year for three years.
- To set a public hearing for a Road Abandonment Application submitted by landowner Billy Jackson. Goodman informed the board that Jackson followed all the requirements and confirmed that Jackson owns all the property around the road. Jackson informed the Board that the purpose was to close access due to trespassers "dumping garbage and engaging in nefarious activities."

- Sign the Letter of Commitment to Opportunity Florida for another year's membership in the amount of $2,000. At the request of Commissioner Bill Parish the Board pulled Consent Item: Opportunity Florida Letter of Commitment to discuss the annual membership dues of $2,000 during the meeting of June 8. Commissioner Kenneth Williams explained that it afforded the county opportunities to expand that they would not have had otherwise, using the latest tower agreement as an example. Opportunity Florida has an agreement with the County to build a new tower and gave it to the County under the condition that as payment Opportunity Florida is allowed to use it for a certain amount of years, leaving a space for County usage. Chair Monty Merchant suggested inviting the Holmes County Development Commissioner to the next meeting to inquire about the benefits Holmes County is receiving from being a member of Opportunity Florida. Board approved to table the matter until the next meeting. Visiting was Jim Brook of Opportunity Florida, explaining that the basis of Opportunity Florida was to provide a network of opportunity which includes "efforts to rehabilitate the railroad" and Project Broadband, which was projected to be "up and running" by Oct. 28.
- Start the bid process for Catastrophic Inmate Medical Insurance, which expires in October.
- Move Aug. 26 meeting to Aug. 19 in light of elections; move Nov. 11 meeting to Nov. 18 because of Veteran's Day and cancel Nov. 25 meeting for Thanksgiving holidays.

The next regularly scheduled meeting of the Holmes County Board of County Commissioners is at 9 a.m. Aug. 12.

Bertha weakens to tropical storm

MIAMI (AP) — Bertha has weakened to a tropical storm just a day after becoming a hurricane as it moves northward in the Atlantic, posing no direct threat to the U.S. East Coast.

"There's no direct impact that will be felt on the U.S. East Coast. However, there could be added surf and rip current conditions," said Dennis Feltgen, spokesman for the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami.

That doesn't mean coastal residents should let their guard down, however. "We've still got the peak of the season to go on the Atlantic side, mid-August to mid-October," Feltgen said.

The storm's maximum sustained winds decreased to near 65 mph early Tuesday with gradual weakening expected during the next two days.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center said Bertha is forecast to pass midway between the East Coast and Bermuda later in the morning.

The storm is centered about 475 miles west of Bermuda and is moving north-northeast near 22 mph.

On Sunday, the storm buffeted parts of the Bahamas and the Turks & Caicos with rain and gusty winds, after passing over the Dominican Republic. Earlier, it dumped rain on Puerto Rico.

Before Bertha reached the Turks & Caicos, residents pulled boats ashore or moored them at marinas in the tourism-dependent archipelago that has little natural protection from strong storm surges. Tourism Director Ralph Higgs said hotels were "taking the threat of the storm seriously."

Ex-GalleyCat ed Jason Boog on raising bookworms

By LEANNE ITALIE
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Boog was immersed in publishing for five years as editor of the MediaBistro blog GalleyCat. When he became a dad, he was curious how best to foster a love of books in his newborn daughter.

His solution was — what else? — writing a book about raising bookworms, “Born Reading,” out in July from Touchstone. Boog, 37, lives in Los Angeles with his wife and now nearly 4-year-old daughter, Olive. He works for a film production company, connecting screenwriters with experts to assist story development.

Boog's book coincides with a policy issued Tuesday from the American Academy of Pediatrics asking doctors to stress that parents should read to kids every day, beginning in infancy.

Four questions for Jason Boog:

AP: Isn't there enough guidance out there on fostering a love of reading in babies and young children?

Boog: When I was just starting to introduce my daughter to books, the iPad, lots of digital devices, were swamping the market. They entered the marketplace so quickly that I don't think we as parents, or even the child development experts — no one really — had enough time to process the whole change. There was this rapid shift in the way we read, so I set out in the book to speak to scientists, child development experts on how best to handle the new landscape.

AP: Are parents too exhausted in their child's first year to read to them?

Boog: I started to read to my daughter from the very first few days of her life. On the one hand it's boring to have these newborns. They don't do very much. They kind of just sit there and you kind of need something to do to entertain them and entertain yourself.

Then when I started speaking to the experts about it, that act of reading, even if your child is not speaking and not pointing to things in a book, but the act and the sound of your voice is turning on switches in their brain constantly in those first two years of life. I didn't realize that.

So I would set her up in her bouncy chair and as she drank her bottle I would pull out a board book and read it to her. Every single day you would see a little bit more light in those eyes and you would see her start to follow the story a little bit.

AP: How do you feel about the recommendation of no screen time for children under 2?

Boog: Some parents ban it completely during those first two years. We definitely let Olive grab the iPhone or the iPad when we were on airplanes or in long lines. We kind of used it as the pacifier of last resort. I still struggle on a daily basis with my daughter to balance my need for making her lunch, for doing my work or getting dressed.

She would play with the iPad all day if I let her, until she fell over and fell asleep. She has nothing in her brain that tells her to turn it off. It's a constant struggle for 21st-century parents to

Realistically, you can't have zero screen time the way the world works now, with parents using devices every day and children seeing them every day. They're going to be curious. They're going to want to touch them.

AP: Do you think parents, pediatricians, day care providers and others do enough to read to or expose babies and young children to reading?

Boog: Over the last 30 years we've developed this very rich body of research about the science of interactive reading. That is reading to your child in a way where you're asking questions, where you're having them compare it to their own experiences, where it's a very active, participatory experience. You can use a device, you can do it while watching ‘Sesame Street,’ with a song, but it's you and your child and not your child and a device.

So we've had 30 years of research telling us it's just crucial for a developing brain to do this. I feel like at a time when books, maybe, are receding a little bit from the public imagination, it's almost a public health issue to know this. People should be handing something out at the hospital saying it's really important that you do this with your child, have this interactive experience. It doesn't have to be an either-or proposition — book over device.

It would be a terrible tragedy if the art of reading to your child is lost in the digital transition.

A 75-Year Enchantment

'The Wizard of Oz'

Can you finish these famous movie lines?

- "Toto, I've a feeling we're not in _____ anymore!"
- "There's no place like _____."
- "I'll get you, my pretty, and your little _____, too!"
- "Follow the _____ Road."

"The Wizard of Oz" movie first lit up movie screens in August 1939. Seventy-five years later, it is still one of the most beloved movies of all time. Say one of the movie lines above, and people know exactly what you mean.

The Mini Page talked with an Oz historian to celebrate the lasting power of "The Wizard of Oz."

Magical story

The magic of "The Wizard of Oz" starts with the great story. The movie is based on "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," written by L. Frank Baum in 1900. He had written three other books for kids before that, but the Oz books made him famous.

L. Frank Baum wrote 14 Oz books in all.

The Scarecrow (Ray Bolger), the Cowardly Lion (Bert Lahr), Dorothy (Judy Garland) and the Tin Man (Jack Haley) eagerly approach the Wizard.

Actor Buddy Ebsen was cast as the first Tin Man. He inhaled the silver aluminum crystals dusted on his face and suffered a severe reaction. He had to be in an iron lung, a machine to help him breathe, for two weeks. The role of the Tin Man was taken over by Jack Haley. The aluminum crystals were mixed with Haley's makeup to form a paste. That way, he would not inhale the crystals.

American adventure

"The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" was America's first fairy tale, experts say. Until that book, most kids' books were by European authors, and lessons were more important than the story.

Oz characters are independent and work to reach their dreams. Readers can understand what the characters are going through. They know about caring for a pet and how scary it would be to be lost far from home.

In the early 1900s, American girls were not usually the heroes of books. But Baum believed girls could be just as strong as boys. Girls are often the heroes of his stories.

Changing the story

The movie directors thought kids in 1939 would not like magical worlds, so they turned Dorothy's adventures into a dream. In the books, Oz wasn't a dream. It was real, and Dorothy returns to Oz in later adventures.

In the book, Dorothy's magical slippers are silver. But the movie's producers changed them to ruby so they would shine out in color.

Meet Judy Garland

Although Judy Garland was a star of many movies, she is best known for her role as Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz." She was 16 years old when she made the film, and by then, she had already been acting and singing for 14 years.

Judy Garland was born as Frances Ethel Gumm in 1922. Her parents were both vaudeville performers. (Vaudeville (VAHD-vil) was a type of live variety show that appeared throughout the U.S. in the early 1900s.)

Judy and her two older sisters sang and danced in vaudeville. When she was 13, Judy was hired by the MGM movie studio. She starred in many movies, including "Meet Me in St. Louis," "Easter Parade" and "In the Good Old Summertime." She died in 1969.

Lucy Li

It is often said that "good things come in small packages." Amateur golfer Lucy Li, an 11-year-old sixth-grader, proved to be a "good thing" when she became the youngest-ever qualifier for the U.S. Women's Open Championship — one of the five major tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour.

Lucy was able to play in the Open after qualifying in her home state of California. She's been participating in golf events since she began training at age 7. When she was 9, Lucy won the California Women's Amateur Championship.

When she's not smashing 230-yard drives or ending her playing round with some ice cream, Lucy does her best to enjoy the moment on the golf course. "I just want to go out there and have fun and play the best I can, and I really don't care about the outcome," she said in an interview. "I can learn a lot from these great players."

The Rainbow Dream

Colors of the rainbow

The bright, deep colors of "The Wizard of Oz" dazzled audiences in 1939. The movie was filmed with an advanced type of Technicolor, a process that made richer colors than ever before.

Walt Disney was one of the first to use the new Technicolor process, in the cartoon movie "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It helped make that movie super successful.

But filming live actors with the new Technicolor was still in the testing process. At that time, only about seven other full-length, live-action movies had been made with the new process. When "The Wizard of Oz" was made, only nine Technicolor cameras existed in the world.

Technicolor needed a lot of light, which made the set very hot. The costumes, especially the Cowardly Lion's, made the actors even hotter. Filming often had to stop until the sets had cooled down.

For the scenes where Emerald City shines in the distance, the city was drawn onto a large piece of cardboard and filmed separately. That film was then combined with the film of the actors. Lights shining through holes in the art made the city sparkle. For other scenes, sets of Emerald City were built. All of Munchkin Land and parts of the witch's castle were built.

In the Horse of a Different Color scene, horses were coated with different flavors of Jell-O mix. Horses kept trying to lick off the sweet powder.

Technicolor

The first Technicolor process was invented in 1916. This early system had a limited range of colors. It basically worked by mixing negative strips of green and red.

In 1932, a new Technicolor process was developed that used three colors. These three colors could be used to produce every color of the rainbow. They were: cyan (SIGH-an), a greenish-blue; magenta (muh-JEN-tuh), a purplish-red; and yellow.

Over the rainbow

About the first 18 minutes of the movie were in sepia (SEE-pea-yuh), a soft brown color.

When Dorothy opens the door to Oz, everything bursts into color. The contrast between the sepia and the rich colors really did feel like magic to the audiences of 1939.

When Dorothy opened the door to the bright colors, early audiences gasped, and many stood up and applauded.

A Magical Mixture

Magical music

Harold Arlen composed the music for the movie, and E.Y. Harburg wrote the lyrics (LEER-iks), or words to the songs. These artists were already known for their songs, but this movie made them famous. Many others worked on the music as well.

In 1903, the first musical of "The Wizard of Oz" was a huge success on Broadway. But its music did not really help tell the story, and entirely new music was composed for the movie. A new script was written, too.

The most beloved song is "Over the Rainbow." Associate producer Arthur Freed was impressed by how well the song "Someday My Prince Will Come" showed Snow White's dreams in that movie. He wanted a song that showed what Dorothy longed for.

Today, we can't imagine the movie without "Over the Rainbow." But studio executives considered cutting it from the movie. They believed it slowed down the story.

"Over the Rainbow" was composed partly to show off Judy Garland's lovely voice. It won the Academy Award for Best Song.

Margaret Hamilton, who played the Wicked Witch of the West, caught on fire in the scene where she disappears from Munchkin Land. During filming, the fire started before she was safely through the floor, and she suffered serious burns. She recovered after six weeks and was able to return to the filming.

Making up the magic

Movie techniques were so new that experts had to invent all the special effects for the movie. There were no computers. Everything had to be done the hard way.

Makeup artists figured out how to make prosthetic (prahs-THEH-tik), or artificial, body pieces to turn actors into the scary flying monkeys. They did such a good job that about 30 years later, they used the same process for the first "Planet of the Apes" movie.

Battery packs in the monkeys' wings made them flap. The actors flew hanging from thin piano wire.

In the movie, it looked as if hundreds of flying monkeys filled the sky. But there were really only 12 actors. The rest were miniature rubber puppets run by hundreds of other wires. Remember, it wasn't like it is today, when computers can just copy images.

Awesome special effects

The terrifying tornado was made with a 35-foot-long muslin, or lightweight cotton, stocking hanging from the top of the soundstage. A tiny motorized car was placed below the set, at the bottom of the tornado stocking. Technicians moved the car to make it look as if the tornado were sweeping across the prairie.

They filmed the scene with lots of wind machines, blowing dust and a miniature farm. The tornado footage was projected behind Dorothy as she tried to run to safety.

In all the scenes with fire, such as the flames surrounding the Wizard's head and the Wicked Witch disappearing in flame, movie makers used real fire. The throne room set caught on fire, but everyone was prepared and no one was hurt.

To make the witch appear to melt, the actress was lowered on an elevator platform. Technicians tacked the hem of her dress to the outside of the platform. When the elevator lowered, air from the elevator shaft puffed out her dress. She wore a larger-size witch's hat, so it looked as if she were shrinking.

Hooked on Outdoors

If you went to Capt. Anderson's Marina last weekend you saw all the lionfish that divers had killed. The state is in a panic to see as many of these fish killed as possible, because according to some people they will soon eat up all the snapper and grouper in the Gulf of Mexico.

On Saturday divers knocked a pretty good hole in the lionfish population if you believe some people. They got big ones and little ones and coolers full of lionfish. I'm sure you could hold one of these tournaments next weekend and they could bring back to the dock just as many as last week. The state said it was going to drop the limit on lionfish so a fisherman could kill or catch as many as they possibly could. Of course the limit is 100, and only one diver came to the docks with a stringer of more than that. Actually the number 100 is a limit the state puts on all marine life that doesn't have a posted limit, so saying the limit on lionfish was dropped is sort of silly since not many people can kill that many.

Life

Scott Lindsey

The desire now is for every diver who can to take a day off to go into the Gulf and burn up large amounts of gasoline and time and air and kill lionfish for the fun of it. The state has gone so far as allowing divers to spearfish in areas that previously were out of bounds to spear fishing.

Spear fishing is too strong a word when you consider they're trying to kill a fish that may weigh 1/4 pound. Most lionfish actually are gigged. Instead of using a spear gun with three bands, the same gun you would kill a snapper or grouper, they are instead using what is called a punch pole, which is a three-prong gig.

It has been reported that lobster fishermen in the Keys are getting more money selling lionfish to the markets than they are selling lobster. Lionfish are very tasty, as long as you avoid their poisonous spines when cleaning one.

If the state really is serious about knocking a hole in the lionfish population, it would allow spear fisherman to sell their lionfish to the local seafood markets without having to buy a license to sell fish. By doing so, the state would show that it truly is serious about eliminating their threat.

Dog days redfish

Juvenile reds are found inshore, in bays and back country, until they're about four years old. This fish is at the age where it is about to mature and move offshore.

Hot weather, hotter fishing

By FRANK SARGEANT

franksargeant@charter.net

Yep, it's much like fishing in a sauna, except with occasional bolts of lightning thrown in.

But August marks the beginning of the fall redfish run on the west coast, and that makes it well worth deserting the air-conditioning for a few hours to get in on the action.

Most anglers pursue redfish in the 18 to 27 inch slot; these fish are just under spawning size, which is the reason for the upper limit — those which reach adulthood about age 4 become the spawners which renew the population. But the big attraction of slot reds is that they spend much of their time in water anywhere from ankle deep to about 4 feet, making them ideal sight-fishing targets.

"Tailers" are a special attraction; on low tides, reds often tip up to root crabs and shrimp out of the bottom, causing their tails to wave above the surface. Alert anglers can spot a tail at a hundred yards, and this allows them to pole, paddle or wade into range and make a presentation to a visible fish.

Shallow-water reds are extremely wary and it's a test of skill to make the cast accurately, work the lure just right and fool the fish as you watch it, but for many this is the most exciting type of angling. Plastic jerkbaits rigged weedless are the favorite lure for this action, but topwaters and weedless spoons also work well, as do flyrod streamers. Some of the vast flats of the western Panhandle are ideal for this type of action, and the back side of many of the barrier islands all the way from Apalach to Pensacola have good areas.

Good flats typically have lots of turtle grass, with slightly deeper sloughs of grassy area between shallower white sand bars. Fishing is often best on the lowest low tides, which occur on the new and full moons each month. On Panhandle waters, a strong north or northwest wind on a falling tide during one of these strong moon periods is prime time; it pushes the water out and makes for extreme low water where redfish tails are easy to see.

In shallow flats, reds often "tail" or tip up to expose the tips of tail and dorsal fin as they feed, typically at depths of 12 inches or so. Below, wading is one of the best ways to approach reds on the flats, which tend to spook from even quietly approaching boats.

Reds often settle into potholes in the flats and around docks, as well as over rockpiles and wrecks in the open bays, as well, and in these locations live bait is the ticket; a live pinfish or shrimp under a popping cork often draws an instant strike. And some anglers do well with cut threadfins or ladyfish, using pieces of the baitfish both as chum and as bait — reds home in on the scent, particularly when they cruise marshy shorelines on high tide. The Berkley artificial bait known as "Gulp!" also does the job, again through scent attraction — it's a favorite among tournament

Expect changes for hunting zones A, D this fall

If you hunt in Zone D, there are several major changes this year to fall hunting regulations that you need to know about. And, if your hunting spot was in the northern portion of Zone A, you might be hunting in Zone C now. If you hunt in southern Manatee County, Sarasota County, southwest DeSoto County, west Charlotte County, southeast Okeechobee County, south St. Lucie County, Martin County or north Palm Beach County, you now have fall hunting season dates that you're used to, because the boundary line between the two zones has been adjusted.

The boundary line used to be State Road 70, but hunters had noted, and recent biological surveys have confirmed, that deer living in the above-mentioned areas have a breeding period that occurs later than that of most of the deer in Zone A. These deer actually have a breeding period more in line with deer living in Zone C.

It is because of this that a number of local hunters asked the Florida

TONY YOUNG
Outta' The Woods

Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) to move the boundary line between hunting zones A and C, so that all or parts of these counties would instead be included in Zone C, which has the later hunting season dates that better align with when the rut occurs in these areas.

The new boundary line between hunting zones A and C begins at the Gulf of Mexico and runs northeast through Charlotte Harbor and up the Peace River until it intersects with S.R. 70. The line then follows S.R. 70, running east until it meets U.S. 441 north of Lake Okeechobee. It then follows U.S. 441 south, where it proceeds around the eastern shore of Lake Okeechobee. The line then turns off U.S. 441 and onto S.R. 80 and runs just a few miles before turning east and following County Road 880, running just a few miles before joining back up with U.S. 98/441/S.R. 80/Southern Boulevard until it reaches the Atlantic Ocean.

This new line separating hunting zones A and C affects only the fall hunting seasons.

Spring turkey season dates remain unaffected and will continue as they have been. In other words, spring turkey season south of S.R. 70 will continue to open the first Saturday in March, while north of S.R. 70 in the rest of the state, the season will continue to open the third Saturday of March. The daily bag limit for turkeys during the spring and fall hunting seasons has been increased to two on private lands. However, you may still take only one turkey per day on wildlife management areas, and in Holmes County, the daily and season limits remain one turkey during the spring, with no fall season. In the rest of the state, the fall and spring season bag limits have not changed and are still two.

If you hunt in the Panhandle in Zone D, that zone has now been divided into two deer management units (DMUs), each with its own unique set of antler regulations and antlerless deer harvest days.

This new change is part of a larger, statewide project aimed at managing deer on a more local level and providing hunters, landowners and other stakeholders a greater say in deer management.

The FWC conducted a public outreach and input process in northwest Florida during the first quarter of 2013. During that period, the Commission received input and comments from hunters, farmers and the general public regarding how they would like to see deer managed in the newly proposed DMUs. A technical assistance group made up of deer enthusiasts was then formed, and this team developed goals and objectives for the two DMUs.

As a result of this outreach process and ideas provided by the group, the FWC passed rules for both public and private lands in both of the newly created DMUs in Zone D, with Interstate 10 being the dividing line between the two DMUs. North of I-10 is DMU-D2, and south of I-10 is DMU-D1.

The new regulations require that bucks harvested north of I-10 in DMU-D2 must have antlers with at least 3 points (each point having to be at least 1 inch long) on one side OR have an antler with a main beam length of at least 10 inches.

South of I-10 in DMU-D1, the minimum antler requirement is now two points (each point having to be at least 1 inch long) on one side. The antler regulations in each DMU are intended to protect most 1.5-year-old bucks from being shot, while allowing the harvest of most 2.5-year-old and older bucks. Since antler development is different within the units, different antler regulations were needed to accomplish this goal.

However, youth (15 years old and younger) are exempt from these new antler requirements in both DMUs, and they may continue to harvest bucks that have an antler that is at least 5 inches long. This was important to hunters who indicated they wanted to encourage youth to hunt. These new antler regulations and youth exemption apply to both private lands and wildlife management areas within Zone D.

There are also changes to the antlerless deer season ("doe days") on private lands within Zone D.

In DMU-D2 (north of I-10), antlerless deer season is now eight days distributed across four weekends. These weekends are the Saturday-Sunday after Thanksgiving, the first weekend of muzzle loading gun season, the third weekend of general gun season and the weekend after Christmas.

In DMU-D1 (south of I-10), the antlerless season is now four days consisting of two popular holiday weekends – the weekend after Thanksgiving and the one after Christmas.

The purpose of modifying the antlerless deer season is to spread out the hunting opportunity, so that more hunters could participate without reducing deer populations. There are differences in the current deer density between the two DMUs, and that is why there are fewer days to take antlerless deer south of I-10. These changes will be monitored to measure any impacts they may have on the deer harvest and hunter satisfaction within each DMU.

The FWC's Deer Management Program has been working with the public in zones A, B and C to get preferences for DMUs within these hunting zones. Be on the lookout for proposals as a result, and you may keep up with any proposed changes at MyFWC.com/Deer.

pros when the fish are hard to fool with artificials.

Preferred tackle for flats reds is spinning gear loaded with 10-pound-test microfiber line; this allows long casts, and the no-stretch fiber gives plenty of power to handle the hard-running drum. An 18-inch length of 20-pound-test fluorocarbon leader will stiffen the connection and prevent the line from tangling the hooks frequently as you work the lure, as braid often does. Flyrodders typically use 8-weight gear and weight-forward floating lines.

Juvenile reds remain inshore pretty much year around, and there's a good fishery in the coastal rivers and creeks of the Panhandle at times from October into early December as fish gather in deeper holes on the first cold fronts of the year — this action is best on live shrimp, or on shrimp-tipped jigs.

ON THE BEACHES

Much larger redfish typically begin to prowl the beaches and inlets this month, with the run continuing into October as the adults move inshore to spawn.

These are typically fish from 15 to 40 pounds, big bronze giants that are far beyond the legal slot, but that make great gamefish for catch and release.

The fish can be anywhere from right against the sand to out several miles — anglers who walk the beach at dawn and dusk often connect with some of these giants simply by fan casting as they move down the shore, dropping the first cast right in the spindrift at the edge, then working out to deeper water.

DON DINGMAN | Special to Times-Advertiser

Monster reds like this one may be 20 to 30 years old. They're far beyond the slot limit, but make great catch and release gamefish.

Large wobbling plugs or swimbaits are usually a good bet. These are big fish, so lures at least 6 inches long are called for. (I once saw a 40-pounder inhale a 15-inch seatrout on my buddy's Mirrolure so don't be afraid to fish big lures.) They also take big topwaters like the Super Spook at times.

Best gear for handling the fish from the beach is a saltwater duty spinning rig, with a reel in what is known as the 4000 size, capable of holding several hundred yards of 30-pound test microfiber or braided line — the tough, no-stretch braid gives the power needed to control big fish when you can't follow them in a boat.

For shorebound anglers, some areas naturally produce better than others. The beaches for several hundred yards on either side of an inlet are always worth fishing, as is the inlet itself, particularly around jetty rocks. And runouts that form where the wash of the surf pours back into the Gulf can also create feeding areas — look for spits and points, anything that might give the reds a spot to trap bait. Panhandle fishing piers are also fish magnets, and many big reds are caught from them each year.

Big schools of reds also gather just off the beaches from now through fall, and sometimes these gatherings can be enormous, covering several acres. There are so many fish that they literally turn the water red as the sun reflects off their pinkish-red backs, and when you spot one of these aggregations from a boat, it's simply a matter of easing close and throwing any lure or live bait of your choosing into them — hook-ups are instant, and can continue so long as the fish stay near the surface. Heavy tackle is necessary — otherwise the fish run back through the school and the line breaks on the backs of the free-swimming fish.

Some of these fish will also move through the inlets and spawn on the deep edge of flats in the bays in fall, so it's not uncommon for trout and flounder anglers to occasionally get a 40-pound surprise that wrecks their tackle.

RELEASING REDS TO FIGHT AGAIN

Reds are durable fish, and readily survive the handling that goes with catch-and-release fishing. Just remember the usual cautions with fish that are to be released — have long-nosed pliers or hook removers at hand, get the hooks out quickly, leaving the fish in the water if possible, hold her up horizontally for a photo — one hand holding the jaw, the other the tail — and then get her back into the water promptly. Fish that sink to bottom and lie there exhausted can be brought back to life by tapping them lightly with a rod tip — don't leave a worn-out fish upside down on bottom or it will die.

REDFISH ON THE MENU

Reds are excellent table fare, but like many species they taste best if the skin is removed and the red line cut away before cooking. The usual fillet procedure works fine with them, and the fillets, cut into 3 inch pieces, are delicious dusted with seasoned cornmeal and fried in peanut oil.

For reds near the maximum slot size, cooking "in the shell" is a good option — gut the fish but leave the skin, fillets and head in place. Salt the body cavity, then stuff with fresh-cut oranges or lemons. Wrap the fish in heavy duty aluminum foil and place on a low heat grill. Cook until a fork goes into the thick part of the shoulder easily. This cooking method basically steams the flesh, making it exceptionally delicate and tasty, almost like crab meat. Serve with melted butter and lemon slices.

REDFISH RULES

Florida's redfish regulations for Panhandle waters allow two fish per angler per day between 18 and 27 inches long. Fish must be landed in whole condition and no more than six can be possessed by one person away from the water at one time — which is to say loading your cooler for the trip back to Alabama is a no-no. There's no closed season. Commercial harvest is prohibited.

GET GRILLIN' Grill on-the-vine tomatoes for stunning starter

By ELIZABETH KARMEL
Associated Press

Often, the best dishes are the simplest. A common feeling among chefs is that if you use the best-quality ingredients and treat them lightly, you will be rewarded. I couldn't agree more.

This is illustrated perfectly by this recipe for grilled tomatoes on the vine with burrata. Tomatoes with mozzarella is one of my favorite combinations, and I love it even when the tomatoes are less than perfect and the mozzarella is a little bland. But take a bunch of cherry tomatoes on the vine, grill them and serve them with burrata and some grilled bread and you've got an amazing dish!

The hardest part of this recipe is treating the fragile tomatoes carefully so that they don't fall off the vine. You want to brush or rub them with a little olive oil to protect them, then season them lightly with kosher salt. Place the tomatoes vine side up on the cooking grate and do not turn them.

The heat of the grill will intensify the natural juices and sugars, making the sweet tomatoes even more flavorful. The warm tomatoes can be served immediately with the burrata, a touch of extra-virgin olive oil, and a bit of salt and pepper. I like to serve this as a shared plate with grilled ciabatta bread.

Smear a little burrata on the ciabatta and top with a grill-roasted tomato. You can either spread the tomato, breaking the skin and smoothing out the juice on top of the cheese and olive oil, or keep it whole. Personally, I like to smear the two together, making a soft, rich juicy bite!

GRILLED TOMATOES AND BURRATA

This will become your go-to appetizer of summer. It is delicious and luxurious, but simple to make. The hardest thing about this recipe is making sure that the cherry tomatoes don't fall off the vine! Can't find burrata? Substitute a large ball of fresh mozzarella.

START TO FINISH: 15 minutes
SERVINGS: 6
2 clusters cocktail tomatoes on the vine
Extra-virgin olive oil
Flaked sea salt
16-ounce ball of burrata or fresh mozzarella cheese
Ground black pepper
Artisan bread or ciabatta, to serve
Heat a grill to medium-low. Carefully rinse the tomatoes, but leave them on the vine. Drizzle oil over the tomatoes and lightly rub it in, then sprinkle them lightly with salt. Place the tomatoes, vine side up, directly on the grill's cooking grate. Grill with the lid down for about 5 minutes, or until the tomatoes are warmed through and blackened in spots. Gently remove the tomatoes.

Place the cheese on a serving plate and drizzle with olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; then arrange the tomatoes around it. Serve with bread to sop up the juice from the tomatoes and the burrata.

Vegetables blossom on dessert menus

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Eat your veggies or no dessert? How about eat your vegetables AS dessert?

And we're not talking grandma's zucchini bread. (Not that there's anything wrong with that.)

Maybe you'd like some beetroot ice cream as served by the Sweet Rose Creamery in Santa Monica, California. Or perhaps your fancy runs more to sweet asparagus beignets laced with almonds with green asparagus ice cream, poppy seed crunch and violet syrup, a creation of chef Bart Vandaele at the Belga Cafe in Washington, D.C.

The trend is a natural outgrowth of the emphasis on eating fresh and local, says Kelly Liken, who runs her eponymous restaurant in Vail, Colorado. Serving the same fruit over and over can get a little monotonous and if you have lots of vegetables at your disposal it only makes sense to experiment a little.

Among the desserts she and pastry chef Colleen Carey have come up with are Peas & Carrots. That would be a concoction that includes brown butter financier

In this undated photo shows the Peas & Carrots dish at Kelly Liken in Vail, Colo. Among the desserts Kelly Liken and pastry chef Colleen Carey have come up with are Peas & Carrots, a concoction that includes brown butter financier, with a sauce of English peas alongside carrot sorbet and carrot marmalade.

(a type of cake) with a sauce of English peas alongside carrot sorbet and carrot marmalade.

Those are peas and carrots showing some serious side.

Liken, who appeared on Season 7 of Bravo's "Top Chef," opened her restaurant 10 years ago and "for 10 years we've been really, really focused on our local vegetables," she says. "We're constantly having to come up with new and innovative vegetable ideas."

Some of the new desserts put a twist on old classics, like chef Jamie Bissonette's carrot cake take.

Bissonette, the James Beard Award-winning chef behind Toro and Coppa in Boston and Toro in New York City, adds carrot juice to whipped cream to add a beautiful touch of orange to the dish, served at Coppa in Boston's South End.

"I came up with the idea for carrot whip cream because I love carrot cake and wanted to do a slightly different take on it. It's one of my absolute favorite desserts ever, and this incorporates the flavor of carrots into a sweet cake in a different way," he says. "I serve the carrot whip cream on olive oil cake with some carrot-parsley crumble and it's this beautiful and fresh variation of one of the most classic desserts."

Finding the vegetable sweet spot isn't just for restaurants. At Jamba Juice, the popular chain known for its juices and smoothies, the company saw the interest in vegetables and decided to incorporate them into what had been all-fruit smoothies.

The Apple n' Greens smoothie, for instance combines apple and strawberry juices, kale, peaches, mangos and bananas. "Kale smoothie" might not be the first thing to spring to mind when thinking of delicious drinks. But it's turned out to be a tasty and extremely popular, says Susan Shields, senior vice president and chief innovation officer at Jamba Juice.

There are four fruit-veggie smoothies, including Tropical Harvest, which blends butternut squash, carrots, sweet potatoes and mangos.

"The beauty about these four items is they taste really good," says Shields. "The kids love these. They don't know that they're vegetables."

With the new school year looming, along with the task of packing daily lunches, finding new ways to look at vegetables is something parents can explore. And it doesn't have to be elaborate; Likens recommends tactics such as grating carrots and zucchini or other squashes into oatmeal cookie mix.

"I always tell parents that's definitely a good way to 'stealth health' the dessert," she says.

F.A.R.M. A Faith-based Addiction Regeneration Ministry

Many of you have heard of the Farm, a ministry of First Baptist Church of Bonifay, but a lot of confusion exists about what that is. Actually, the ministry has nothing to do with farming, but will be an addiction recovery program based on the premise that a person addicted to drugs or alcohol needs to be "regenerated" or given a new life. The acronym was coined by Jill McFatter Chester, daughter of one of the board members.

HAPPY CORNER
Hazel Wells Tison

When the Florida Legislature decreed that every judicial circuit in Florida must have a plan for treating those so addicted and that "Faith Based" facilities would be allowed, Pastors Shelly Chandler, Jeep Sullivan and concerned church members began to pray specifically for direction for how we could be involved in such a ministry. Beginning in September 2011, a group met every Tuesday morning to pray for that. As a result, a committee was formed (Baptists always form committees.) consisting of John Braxton (Sody), Tom Jenkins, James Edward McFatter (now deceased), Chm. Dwight Rich, Sandy Spear, and Carlton Treadwell.

Since some of our own young men have found new drug-free lives by going through 10 months of intensive residential care at a place called Dunklin in Okeechobee, it was hoped that the Holmes County facility would be patterned after that. On May 7, 2013, a lease agreement with Holmes Baptist Association for a 10-year lease with option to buy was signed for the camp ground property on Wrights Creek on Highway 177 by the committee which acts as a board of directors. The facility, though fostered by FBC, is separate from the church as far as budget, decision making, etc, and financial support is by individual donations only.

If you wish to be involved in this life-saving ministry, tax deductible donations or other help may be channeled through Jeremiah Guynn at P.O. Box 1128 Bonifay 32425, phone 547-1880 or 321-591-4244. Visit the website at www.thefarmnwf.org. You may also visit the site located on the Bethlehem highway at Wrights Creek known locally as the Chalk Hole.

At its inception, sheriffs from seven counties in the 14th judicial circuit pledged their support and thus far Bay, Washington, and Walton have provided funds for a four-bedroom mobile home now on the property, Jackson County sheriff donated a Ford 150 pick-up truck; also a tractor, a riding lawn mower and other lawn care equipment have been donated. The Bradley, Schmidt and Carn engineering firm of Dothan has donated plans for adapting the old tabernacle building into a dormitory. Earlier this year a hotel in Sandestin, through the influence of Carlton Treadwell, donated 30 rooms of furniture to be auctioned or sold to raise funds. Some of that has been sold and most of the remaining items will be used to furnish dorm rooms and the dining room.

Now, the director Jeremiah Guynn, his wife Christina and their children, Andrew and Briannah, are in residence. Three men are enrolled, but presently are being housed in Tallahassee or Dunklin until renovations on the building are made.

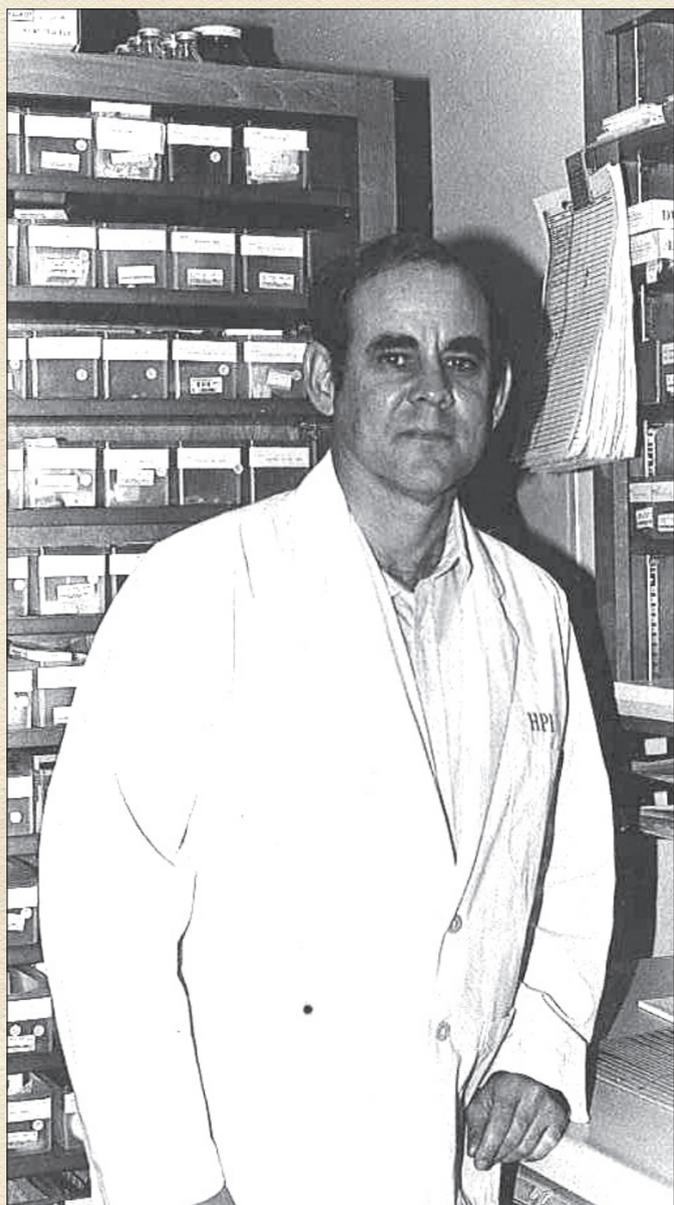

Jeremiah and Christina come from Brevard County but completed Dunklin's life-changing course and their Servant Leadership Training program. He also has an associate degree in pastoral training and will be ordained soon by Dunklin. In partnership with that facility, a SLT intern will be coming to the F.A.R.M. soon. While the building is being completed, four trainees will be housed. At completion, an additional 16 can be accepted. The curriculum will be the same as Dunklin, deep Bible study, prayer, journaling, and counseling, coupled with hard physical labor. If the man is married, the wife's participation in counseling and Bible study is required. At this time, the labor will be the renovation and upkeep of the building and grounds. As things progress, other projects will be found to provide meaningful work. The cost per individual for 10 months stay at the Farm is $4,000, but no one is turned away because of inability to pay. Arrangements can be made.

By Oct.1, here is a list of goals and needs: remodeling of the 1700 square-foot attachment on dorm (the old office area) at a cost of about $6,000. This will enable the facility to house four men plus the leadership man from Dunklin.

After that, work can progress on the old facility to provide the main dorm rooms, a dining room and kitchen, showers, and eventually to full capacity. If you wish to be involved in this life-saving ministry, tax deductible donations or other help may be channeled through Jeremiah Guynn at P.O. Box 1128 Bonifay 32425, phone 547-1880 or 321-591-4244. BONIFAY — If you were at Doctors Memorial Hospital (DMH) Monday, you may have noticed that in spite of the heat, more than one hundred children and guardians were running, sliding and getting soaked at the hospital's first Back to School Bash.

"This is one of the wonderful things about being a community hospital," said DMH Administrator JoAnn Baker. "All that goes into the hospital goes back to the community. This is just one of the many things we do to give back to our community."

Baker gave most of the credit to the volunteer work of Nemours Children's Clinic, Home Respiratory, the Bonifay Fire Department, Holmes County Emergency Management Services, Florida Kid Care, Carla Templeton of Silver Door, beautician volunteers LeAnn Manuel of DMH and Christy French of Calina's Hair Salon as well as the volunteer staff of DMH and DMH Auxiliary.

Baker said more than 150 bags of school supplies were picked up in the first 30 minutes.

"It was such an amazing turn out that next year we'll know to have even more bags to give away," she said. "I love it; this is what I live for."

DMH employee LeAnn Manuel volunteered her 10 years of beautician experience to help children be a cut above the rest with new school 'dos. Manuel's patron is 6-year-old Joshua Treadway.

DMH staff and volunteers welcomed their visitors.

Staff from Florida Kid Care was present to help sign children up for health insurance.

Carla Templeton of the Silver Door offered free face painting during the event. Ava Stewart, 5, received a Hello Kitty makeover compliments of Templeton. Stewart was brought by her aunt, Ashley Foshee, who is also pictured.

$92 million settlement reached against military consumer lender

Special to Extra

Attorney General Pam Bondi's Office, the federal Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and 12 other states obtained $92 million in debt relief from Colfax Capital Corporation and Culver Capital, LLC, also collectively known as Rome Finance, for deceiving about 17,000 service members and other consumers in a predatory lending scheme. Rome Finance, which is based in California and Georgia, allegedly financed consumers' debts for items such as computers, gaming systems, and other goods and services from retailers online or at mall kiosks near military bases. Payments were deducted from the service members' paychecks and were secured with access to bank accounts. Rome Finance allegedly used deceptive lending schemes by promising no money down and instant financing on these products and services without disclosing the amounts the consumers would pay for financing. More than 800 Florida service members were affected in this scheme and will receive more than $4 million in outstanding debt relief.

"Our military members sacrifice so much for us, and we will not allow predatory lenders to deceive them," said Attorney General Pam Bondi. "This settlement provides for more than $4 million in debt relief for Florida's military members."

Hid finance charges when marketing products:

Rome Finance and merchants it worked with masked expensive finance charges by artificially inflating the disclosed price of the consumer goods being sold. As a result, they provided consumers with disclosures that had inaccurately low finance charges and annual percentage rates. Consumers received disclosures, for example, indicating the APR was 16 percent when in fact they were being charged as much as a 100 percent or more APR. That inaccurate information prevented consumers from making informed decisions about whether to take out credit.

Withheld required financial information from billing statements:

Billing statements that Rome Finance sent to consumers failed to include certain disclosures required by law, such as: the annual percentage rate, the balance that was subject to that interest rate, how that balance was determined, the closing date of the billing cycle, and the account balance on the closing date.

Deceptively, unfairly, and abusively collected debt that was not owed:

Rome Finance was not licensed to provide consumer lending in any state and charged annual percentage rates higher than some states allowed, which voided or limited the collectable debt in some states under state lending law. Rome Finance deceived consumers in these states by failing to inform them that some or all of their debt was void or otherwise did not have to be repaid. As a result, many consumers were misled into thinking that they had to repay the entire loan balance and making those payments, when they did not have to.

The settlement liquidates Rome Finance and its successor corporations, provides $92 million in debt relief to United States service members worldwide, marks all outstanding debt paid with consumer finance reporting agencies, and permanently bans the company from doing business in the field of consumer lending. Additionally, all service members will keep all merchandise purchased and the debts associated will be erased and judgments will be vacated upon request.

Gulf Power business customers should remain alert for telephone scams

Special to Extra

In a recent scam, area businesses and residential customers received calls from a person claiming to represent Gulf Power Company and demanding payment, or their electric service will be cut off.

Gulf Power continues to work with law enforcement in reporting these incidents, but the company has received an escalated amount of calls from customers reporting fraudulent calls in the last week. Customers are being told their electric bill is past due and that their electricity will be cut off if the customer does not provide a credit card payment or other forms of immediate payment.

Gulf Power advises customers that:

Gulf Power employees will never call a customer at home or their business seeking any personal information, including credit card numbers.

Gulf Power representatives will never ask a customer for money when they visit a residence.

All Gulf Power representatives carry badges with picture identification that includes the employee's name and the company's name and logo.

Customers should call Gulf Power at 1-800-225-5797 if they have any questions about the identity of anyone representing Gulf Power.

Gulf Power is working with local law enforcement agencies to identify the perpetrators. If anyone has been victimized by one of these schemes, or has any information about suspects, they are asked to call local law enforcement and to contact Gulf Power at 1-800-225-5797.

Gulf Power Company is an investor-owned electric utility with all of its common stock owned by Atlanta-based Southern Company. Gulf Power serves more than 436,000 customers in eight counties throughout Northwest Florida. The company's mission is to safely provide exceptional customer value by delivering reliable, affordable and environmentally responsible electricity while strengthening our communities. Farm Credit of NW Florida shares $4 million in profits with members

To benefit local agriculture and farmers, Farm Credit of Northwest Florida will share $4 million in profits with its members in 2014 through the cooperative's patronage refund program.

FFS sends firefighters to help battle blazes in western states

Special to Extra

As the blazes continue to heat up in the western states, the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Florida Forest Service is sending dozens of firefighters to aid suppression efforts.

"The Florida Forest Service is a talented group of some of the most skilled firefighters in the country," said Florida Commissioner of Agriculture Adam H. Putnam. "Thanks to current low wildfire danger levels in Florida, we are able to lend support to other states for the protection of people, structures and natural resources."

So far this season, the Florida Forest Service has deployed 52 wildland firefighters to western wildfires, including Oregon's 396,000-acre Pine Creek wildfire and Washington's 250,000-acre Carlton Complex of wildfires.

"The Florida Forest Service will continue to fill requests for help as we receive them," said Jim Karels, State Forester. "The experience that our firefighters gain out West will build upon their first-class training and experience fighting wildfires here in Florida."

Deployed wildland firefighters will fill a variety of roles, including front-line firefighting, aviation, safety regulation, logging, heavy equipment management and more.

The Florida Forest Service manages more than 1 million acres of public forest land while protecting 26 million acres of homes, forestland and natural resources from the devastating effects of wildfire. For more information about the Florida Forest Service, go to www.FloridaForestService.com.

Safety No. 1 priority for Gulf Power

Special to extra

While everyone was celebrating the national holiday, Friday, July 4, the Gulf Power Chipley office had another reason to celebrate.

That was the day that the 21 employees who work at the office reached one year of safety. It's called Target Zero and it means no recordable injuries and no preventable vehicle accidents.

"All of our employees are committed to working safely," said Chipley Office Manager Darrin Wall. "They remained focused on working safely every minute of every hour of every day."

Among the groups that work at the office include line crews, engineering, substation, marketing, IT and customer service. The line crews are always working in conditions that include high voltage. Another hazard is driving as traffic continues to build.

The group celebrated recently with a lunch and by raising a Target Zero flag that they plan to keep up for another year and beyond.

"Safety is our No. 1 priority at Gulf Power," Wall said. "It's a part of good business and it's important that all of them go home to their families every day the same way they came to work."

Seeking Peace

"Oh the glorious splendor of thy majesty & on thy wonderful works, I will meditate."
Psalm 145:5

You are made for fellowship with God. Happiness is the union of ourselves with God, and whether we recognize it or not, men and women are incomplete without their daily time with Him. David told us while literally running for his life, "Seek peace and pursue it." He found his quiet center from his time with the Lord. Meditation on the Word of God is the foundation for strong and sustaining faith.
