Parents question school board employee decisions

By Diane M. Robinson

BONIFAY – Controversial recommendations made by Superintendent Terry Mears were met with dismay concerning a coach and an administrator at Poplar Springs School not being asked to return for next school year in their respective positions.

Holmes County School Board met in regular session May 15.

Vice Principal Stacey Thompson was not asked to return to the position but instead as that of a teacher for the 2018-2019 school year. Parent, Teri McPhail, addressed the board concerning this issue saying that after losing long-time Principal Gordon Wells last year they will now be have two more losses in Thompson and Coach Eric Smith. “My children have faced two major losses this year, and you mean to tell me that more may be ripped from them,” said McPhail. “School board members, our children have been scarred by the events that have transpired already. We implore you to hear our voice, we want our coach back.”

Benny Bollon Jr.

Another parent, Benny Bollon Jr., spoke of trying to understand why people who are doing excellent jobs are being removed from their positions.

Bollon took the opportunity to remind Mears of one of his campaign statements.

“If elected, I promise to place the students above politics,” Mears quoted to a newspaper,” said Bollon. “I’m not saying that politics are playing a role but I would like to remind the superintendent that this was a promise he made to us.”

According to Chairperson Shirley Owens, Thompson was not asked to come back as vice principal because of lack of leadership certifications, not because of job performance.

“The superintendent can require administrators to have certain levels of leadership certifications for an administrative position,” said Owens. “Should one not have that, they may not be asked to return to that position. Mr. Thompson has done an outstanding job as Vice Principal, he simply doesn’t hold the certifications Mears wants his administrators to hold.”

Poplar Springs Basketball Coach Eric Smith was suspended without pay for 30 in April for misconduct stemming from a verbal altercation between him and Principal Matt Tate.

Smith has not been asked to return for next school year; however, if he undergoes a psychological evaluation, he will have another opportunity to return, according to Owens.

“Any teacher that shows any signs of aggression is asked to undergo an evaluation for the safety of the students,” said Owens. “It is a standard practice.”

Smith has appealed the decision and the board approved moving forward with an administrative judge to hear the case.

In other business, the board approved payment of annual Florida School Board Association dues of $10,000. The funds will come from the general fund.

Holmes County School Board will meet again in regular session at 6 p.m. on June 5.

Juveniles to be charged as adults

Youth face charges of grand theft, arson, and burglary

By Staff Report

BETHLEHEM – Three juveniles are facing multiple charges following a string of burglary and vandalism occurrences that culminated Wednesday, May 16 with the theft and arson of a Holmes School District van, according to the Holmes County Sheriff’s Office.

Ethan Riley Lewis, 17, Dillon Travis Leavins, 16, and Cameron Lassiter, 17, are charged in connection to the most recent series of incidents, which began Sunday, May 13, after deputies responded to the report of criminal mischief at Union Hill Baptist Church, where two doors had been damaged in an apparent failed burglary attempt, according to the report.

On May 17, Holmes County Sheriff’s Office responded to Bethlehem School, where a school van had been burglarized, taken, and returned over the weekend, according to surveillance footage. School officials recovered a small amount of marijuana from the van and noted the vehicle had logged 90 miles more than what had been recorded at end of day, May 11, stated a release from HCSO.

FPL parent to buy gulf power in multibillion-dollar deal

By Jim Saunders
News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE – In a major move in the state’s utility industry, the parent company of Florida Power & Light said Monday it will buy Northwest Florida’s Gulf Power as part of a $6.475 billion deal.

NextEra Energy Inc. plans to buy Gulf Power, the Florida City Gas natural-gas company and ownership interests in two power plants from The Southern Company. The purchase of Gulf Power and the stakes in the power plants, which are subject to federal approval, are expected to close during the first half of 2019, while the Florida City Gas purchase is slated for the third quarter of 2018, according to a NextEra Energy announcement.

“This transaction was just announced today and with any transaction of this type, there will be many questions that will be answered as we as a company and our employees move through this process,” said Rick Delahya, spokesperson at Gulf Power.

Eight people were rescued after a 30-foot Hydrocat struck the east side of the jetties around 8:45 p.m. Sunday night, prompting responses from BCSO, US Coast Guard, Bay County Fire and Panama City Police. [SPECIAL TO TIMES-ADVERTISER]

St. Andrews State Park boat wreck under investigation

By Eryn Dion
News Herald Reporter

PANAMA CITY BEACH — A dramatic water rescue followed a late night boat crash at the St. Andrews State Park jetties the night of May 13 with Florida Fish and Wildlife Officers still trying to piece together the details a day later.

Eight people were rescued after a 30-foot Hydrocat owned by Logan and Megan Dezan of Westville, Fla. struck the east side of the jetties around 8:45 p.m. with enough force to cut down through the fiberglass plating and splinter the wooden hull, sinking the vessel shortly after emergency crews arrived.

Also rescued were Brandon Donaldson, Jacob Martin, Joshua Waite and Hannah Waite of Bonifay, Travis Fondren of Slocomb, Ala., and Jonathon Griffin of Westville. Martin and two other passengers were transported to local hospitals, according to the U.S. Coast Guard, and their conditions were not immediately known.

Bay County Sheriff's Deputy Alex Young was one of the first on scene, according to the BCSO incident report, arriving on the park's beach and climbing over the jetty rocks to find several passengers clinging to the jetty rocks, as well as several more passengers on board the quickly sinking vessel.

Young helped pull some of the passengers up over the rocks, moving them toward land, noting that one was sporting a laceration on their head and two more had other minor injuries.

While Young helped the passengers on the jetties, the U.S. Coast Guard dispatched a 45-foot response boat and crew, pulling five of the passengers off the boat before it sank down into the pass.

Back on the jetties,

Young and a Bay County firefighter that had joined him spotted Martin on the last rock before the jetties give way to open water. With a noticeable arm injury, Young wrote that the firefighter determined Martin to be a critical patient and his condition was deteriorating rapidly to the point where he couldn't support himself on the rock any longer.

At 50-yards away, the Coast Guard boat couldn't move in any closer because of the shallow water, and Young yelled for them to toss a rope, which unfortunately fell short of Young's position.

Handing over a duty belt, Young then "deployed" into the water, according to the report, grabbing the rope and swimming to Martin's location on the rock. Young then adjusted Martin's life jacket so it was on him correctly and "advised him I had him as he gained trust in me," Young wrote.

Life jacket on and trust established, the two went back into the water, Young holding Martin's body close to the surface and his head above water until they could be pulled out of the water by the Coast Guard crew.

"It should be noted throughout the incident my agency uniform, boots and bullet proof vest were completely submerged in water," Young wrote at the closing of the report. "As my duty belt was possibly submerged in water, which resulted in my radio and taser getting wet."

The five passengers on the Coast Guard boat were brought back to the Panama City Marina, while the remaining three were brought back to shore by BCSO. The boat was retrieved by Sea Tow and brought to the Treasure Island Marina.

The cause of the crash remains under investigation.

POWER

"We want our customers to know that our people will continue to be focused on serving our customers who are our friends, family and neighbors and serving our communities in Northwest Florida," he later added in a statement Monday.

The deal would expand NextEra Energy's already-massive footprint in the state. Its Florida Power & Light subsidiary is by far the largest electric utility in Florida, serving nearly 5 million customers. Gulf Power, with about 450,000 customers in eight counties, is the largest utility in the Panhandle.

Florida City Gas has about 110,000 residential and commercial natural-gas customers in Miami-Dade, Brevard, St. Lucie and Indian River counties.

NextEra said it will buy a 100 percent ownership interest in a power plant near Cocoa known as Plant Oleander, which has contracts to sell electricity to the Florida Municipal Power Agency and Seminole Electric Cooperative. It also will buy a 65 percent stake in a generating unit, known as Stanton A, at the Stanton Energy Center complex near Orlando. The unit is jointly owned by The Southern Company, the Orlando Utilities Commission, the Kissimmee Utility Authority and the Florida Municipal Power Agency, according to information on The Southern Company website.

"These transactions will provide meaningful benefits for the state of Florida, and Gulf Power and Florida City Gas customers, as well as NextEra Energy shareholders," Jim Robo, chairman and chief executive officer of NextEra Energy, said in a prepared statement. "Importantly, these transactions are consistent with our long-standing, disciplined approach of maintaining the strength of our balance sheet and credit ratings, both of which are among the strongest in the industry."

NextEra Energy plans to finance the deal through the issuance of new debt, according to the announcement. The $6.475 billion total includes NextEra Energy assuming $1.4 billion of Gulf Power debt.

Subsidiaries of The Southern Company, which is based in Atlanta, operate in numerous states. In addition to Gulf Power, the subsidiaries include Alabama Power, Georgia Power and Mississippi Power. The Florida Public Service Commission last year approved a settlement agreement that set base rates for Gulf Power.

In the announcement, NextEra Energy said that with the addition of Gulf Power, Florida City Gas and the power plants, the Juno Beach-based company "will be even better positioned to generate long-term shareholder value through a more robust financial profile, greater scale and an expanded platform for growth."

But the Southern Alliance for Clean Energy, which frequently intervenes in utility cases in Florida, expressed concern Monday about the purchase.

"While Southern Alliance for Clean Energy is still reviewing this deal, it raises concerns that any one monopoly utility would control such a significant percentage of Florida's energy market," the Southern Alliance for Clean Energy said in a prepared statement. "Such consolidation of control may limit competition at a time when we need more and not less."

The Sheriff's Office again responded to the theft of the van, this time gaining an admission from two of the boys that they had taken the van from school property and drove down several dirt roads until stopping at a JJ Whitaker residence on May 16.

The three juveniles allegedly entered the residence and took an unknown amount of paint, which they poured into the van before setting it on fire, according to the news release.

The teens were arrested and charged with arson, grand theft, multiple counts of burglary, and criminal mischief. They have been transported to a juvenile detention facility but are expected to face the charges as adults.

Two of the juveniles were also previously arrested and transported to a juvenile detention facility in Panama City after being charged in connection with the April 27 burglary of Bethlehem School.

The third juvenile will additionally be charged in connection with that same burglary, according to the Holmes County Sheriff's Office.

Make education a bigger priority

We love football here in the South. Really love it. And that's only fitting, because the "State of the South" dossier by MDC, a North Carolina-based nonprofit, is like reading an extensive scouting report on a football team. The areas of strength are noted:

- The South is more racially and ethnically diverse than ever before in history, and has "shifted from a biracial to a multi-ethnic region."
- The South has been able to reinvent itself as a region with "hubs of excellence and innovation in medicine, health and science, providing the benefits of modern medicine."
- The South "has more affluence, a more diverse economy with a potent corporate sector, a stronger middle class (blacks and Latinos as well as whites) ... than it did 50 years ago."
- Major Southern cities Charleston, South Carolina, Biloxi, Mississippi, and New Orleans have all "largely recovered" from massive weather-related devastation during the last 15 years; meanwhile, Houston has made strides rebuilding after Hurricane Harvey last fall.

But just as a football scouting report also focuses on a team's weaknesses, "State of the South" identifies the region's vulnerabilities, too. And this one clearly stands out in the MDC report: "Most Southern states still lag the national average in K-12 achievement. ..."

Ignoring it could have stark consequence for the South: "(The) pattern of increasing divestment in public institutions could affect long-term upward economic mobility prospects in the region."

This is no trivial area of vulnerability, but it's clear how we in the South should be addressing it:

- Southern states — including Florida — must make investing in education an equally high priority for all students, instead of pitting public schools against charters, urban districts vs. rural ones, etc., in some Hunger Games-style "survival of the fittest" battle for funding and resources.

- As the "State of the South" report suggests, our region will need the talents of all of our residents to achieve sustainable prosperity. That means all Southern states have to provide levels of funding that will enable all Southern students to flourish.

- Stop rewarding the buffoonish anti-intellectualism embraced by many of our lawmakers and power brokers to justify starving educational systems of needed money. They justify it by throwing around pander words and phrases like "elitist," "snowflakes," "failing urban schools," "so-called experts" and "powerful teachers' unions."

And they get away with it because we let them. Clearly, that's a big reason why there isn't a single state in the South where native residents have as many bachelor's degrees as fellow residents who were born elsewhere.

If we want tomorrow's South to keep moving the chains and putting up the points, we need to demand that our leaders make education a bigger part of the playbook.

Happy Corner: Harris family connection to black irish

Hazel Tison

This is a reprint (mostly) of an article that appeared in my column December 6, 2006

At a recent family funeral, my sister Muriel and I were discussing family with our cousin, Judy Harris Erinfield. She had recently done the Ancestry.com DNA test which showed a strong Irish influence. Our granddaughter had done it last year and found an Irish link in her DNA. That brought to mind this article which I was able to resurrect.

All my Harris uncles are deceased now, but in 2006 my Mama's half brother Arlie was still living. I asked him if he remembered his grandfather Harris who would of course have been my great-grandfather, John Wesley Harris. He remembered his grandfather setting him on his lap and singing him a little song. He even remembered a couple of lines of the song. (I wish I had recorded them.) It sounded Irish to me and I asked my uncle if he knew whether the Harrises were Irish. He replied, "Yes, Black Irish." I don't recall ever hearing that term, but it struck a chord with me because my mother said that her Grandmother Cook called her fathers people "them old Black Harrisses."

I had just assumed that she called them that because they were dark skinned, dark eyed and dark haired and she hated them since her daughter, Minnie Eliza Cook Harris had died from "neglect" following childbirth. So I went in search of information on the Black Irish. My Google search turned up a lot about the "Black Irish" myth. There are several explanations. One is that they are offspring from African slaves either shipwrecked or

My Canadian Brother-in-law Roy Turner knew about the Donnelly massacre which Mrs. Werkheiser also knew about. The Donnellys had managed to save seed potatoes before the British introduced the potato blight in an attempt to starve the Catholics. He shared seed with other Catholics saving their lives. As a result the whole Donnelly family were massacred. Don't know what this has to do with Black Irish and my Harris family. Probably I will never know if we have an Irish connection run-aways from ships who fathered children with Irish peasant women. The late Mrs. Jean Werkheiser a native of Ireland who emigrated here when her daughter Eileen married a Bonifay citizen, Dr. Jeff Swindle, disagrees.

She said that Black Irish are the descendants of Spanish sailors who were shipwrecked off the southern coast of the Emerald Isle. Historians offer numerous reasons why Spanish-Irish progeny from the Spanish Armada of the 1500's is more popular with poor Irish than with anyone else.

The Spanish would have been of royal background, fighting to preserve the Catholic Church in Ireland against the Protestantism of the English Crown. The Irish peasants would have also been loyal to the church and hating the English, but having no social standing. Finding ties with the Royal Spanish Navy would certainly raise the status of the coastal Irishmen who were little more than barbarians. Today, according to Mrs. Werkheiser, they are still considered renegades. Over the centuries, many were taken from prison and deported.

My Canadian Brother-in-law Roy Turner knew about the Donnelly massacre which Mrs. Werkheiser also knew about. The Donnellys had managed to save seed potatoes before the British introduced the potato blight in an attempt to starve the Catholics. He shared seed with other Catholics saving their lives. As a result the whole Donnelly family were massacred. Don't know what this has to do with Black Irish and my Harris family. Probably I will never know if we have an Irish connection.

I never knew my great-grandfather and never heard my mother mention him. But Mr. Turl Creel told me a story about him. A local myth, back in that time according to Mr. Creel, was that if a person ate a quail a day for 30 days it would kill him. Great-grandpa Harris owed a large bill to the N.D. Miller Company. Mr. Miller wanted to prove whether or not the myth was true. So he told Mr. Harris that if he ate a quail a day for 30 days and lived, he'd cancel his debt. Mr. Miller provided the quail and Mr. Harris ate it every day for 30 days. At the end of the time, he became very ill, but overcame it and his debt was cancelled.

Mr. Creel also told me that John Wesley Harris was the one who planted the oaks that lined Waukesha St for so many years. He said the city paid him $15 each and he went into the surrounding woods, dug them up and planted them. I don't know what year that was, but I seriously doubt that Bonifay had a water system at that time, so somebody had to do a lot of watering.

John Harris came to Holmes County about the same time as Mr. Yarborough Chance the father of Jim and John Chance. Harris had two sons near the same age, my grandfather Jim and his brother Henry. They became good friends with the Chance family. Jim is a former Holmes County Sheriff and the father of J.N. (Son) Chance that we all know and John is the father of John Yarborough, local minister.

Whether or not we trace our roots back to the Black Irish of Ireland, it is interesting to speculate where our ancestors may have come from.

One arrested in connection to PC Mall bomb threat

PANAMA CITY — As K-9 units swept through the Panama City Mall looking for what would turn out to be a non-existent bomb, several dozen employees from various stores waited in patches of shade at the perimeter of the parking lot.

“They told us to get the hell out,” said Isaac Loberger, an employee at Bennigans. “I hope they let us in soon, I left sandwich stuff on the counter.”

“All my stuff is in there. I don’t even have my cell phone,” added co-worker Ashley Wilhite. “I don’t even think there is a bomb.”

Panama City Police later arrested Nicholas Whitehead, 31, in connection with the threat and charged him with making a hoax bomb threat, a second degree felony.

Several law enforcement agencies responded to a bomb threat at the Panama City Mall on Sunday.

At 10:40 a.m., an anonymous threat was called into the Bay County Emergency Operations Center about a bomb located in the Panama City Mall. The threat was vague, triggering a massive multi-agency search as law enforcement officials combed through one of the largest public buildings in the city.

The search — which was run by Panama City Police Department and included the Florida Highway Patrol, Bay County Sheriff’s Department, Bay County EMS and Panama City Fire Department — took over two hours. The entire mall parking lot, as well as Red Lobster and Best Buy, was cordoned off by police, but some employees worried about being late for work kept slipping in through the nearby Starbucks parking lot.

Most were shocked when they learned was going on. While they found it hard to believe there was a bomb in the mall, many were unsettled.

“This happens everywhere else, but you never expect it to happen here,” said Katlyn Davis, an employee at Dillards.

“I don’t want to go in later,” said Autumn Barlow. “What if it’s in the one shoebox they didn’t search?”

Senator Bill Nelson leads effort to repeal tariffs on newsprint

Florida Press Association

Nelson (D-Florida)

Senator Bill Nelson (D-Florida) and a group of bipartisan legislators have asked Secretary Ross of the U.S. Department of Commerce for a review of the pending antidumping and countervailing duty case involving imports of uncoated groundwood paper (newsprint) from Canada. The letter states the damaging effects of the tariffs on Florida’s economy and public discourse, and asks the secretary to take these concerns into consideration as a final decision is made.

“The severity of the tariffs, ranging from a combined total of 28.25 to 32.09 percent, could eviscerate the newspaper industry and dry up demand for the product, making it harder for domestic newsprint papers to stay afloat,” Nelson wrote.

“At a time when credible and responsible reporting is needed most, devastating new tax on the newspaper industry would be a grave mistake,” he later stated in the letter.

The antidumping and countervailing duty has increased the cost of newsprint up to 32 percent. As newsprint prices have also been increasing recently, the impact of these tariffs has been significant.

Report says changes will increase health premiums

Christine Sexton
News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Premiums for health insurance plans sold on the federal marketplace are expected to increase by nearly 16.9 percent in Florida next year due to changes in the Affordable Care Act, according to a new analysis released Friday.

Released by the Center for American Progress, the analysis estimates that a decision by Congress and President Donald Trump to repeal the mandate that people buy health insurance, coupled with proposed changes to the types of policies that can be sold, will increase premiums for Floridians by $1,011.

The report by the left-leaning group estimates that the average unsubsidized health insurance premium for a 40-year-old male buying a marketplace policy in 2019 will be $6,995.

The Affordable Care Act has provided subsidies for many people buying coverage, reducing their costs. More than 1.7 million Floridians enrolled in the health insurance marketplace this year, with more than 1.5 million receiving subsidies either in the form of advanced premium tax credits or additional cost-sharing reductions that help lower co-payments and co-insurance requirements.

The new analysis accounts for the impact of repealing the Affordable Care Act’s requirement that individuals buy health insurance policies as well as a Trump administration proposed rule to rescind limits on the sale of short-term insurance plans.

The individual mandate, one of the most-controversial parts of the federal health-care law commonly known as Obamacare, was repealed as part of a tax overhaul that passed in December.

In a prepared statement, Topher Spiro, vice president for health policy at the Center for American Progress, blasted Trump and Congress for what he called “sabotage of the insurance marketplaces.”

“First they passed massive tax cuts for the wealthy and corporations, and now they’re asking middle-class Americans and people with pre-existing conditions to pick up the tab,” Spiro said. “They should be focused on lowering health care costs, not increasing them and intentionally undermining the stability of the insurance marketplaces that millions of Americans benefit from.”

Divided Supreme Court sides with businesses over workers

By Mark Sherman
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A divided Supreme Court ruled Monday that businesses can prohibit their workers from banding together in disputes over pay and conditions in the workplace, a decision that affects an estimated 25 million non-unionized employees.

With the court's five conservative members in the majority, the justices held that individual employees can be forced to use arbitration, not the courts, to air complaints about wages and overtime. Four dissenting liberal justices said the decision will hit low-wage, vulnerable workers especially hard.

While the complaints in Monday's decision involved pay issues, the outcome also might extend to workplace discrimination and other disputes if employee contracts specify that they must be dealt with in one-on-one arbitration.

Workers who want to take action against sexual harassment, pay discrimination, pregnancy discrimination and racial discrimination "may now be forced behind closed doors into an individual, costly — and often secret — arbitration process," said Fatima Goss Graves, president and CEO of the National Women's Law Center.

Lawyers representing management said the decision protects businesses from endless, costly litigation.

The outcome does not affect people represented by labor unions, but an estimated 25 million employees work under contracts that prohibit collective action by employees who want to raise claims about some aspect of their employment.

The ruling reflected a years-long pattern at the Supreme Court of limiting class actions and favoring employer-favored arbitration over lawsuits in the courts, generally preferred by workers.

The Trump administration backed the businesses, reversing the position the Obama administration took in favor of employees.

The court's task was to reconcile federal laws that seemed to point in different directions. On the one hand, New Deal labor laws explicitly give workers the right to band together. On the other, the older Federal Arbitration Act encourages the use of arbitration, instead of the courts.

Justice Neil Gorsuch, writing for the majority, said the contracts are valid under the arbitration law. "As a matter of policy these questions are surely debatable. But as a matter of law the answer is clear," Gorsuch wrote.

Monday's ruling is in line with earlier decisions, he said. "In many cases over many years, this court has heard and rejected efforts to conjure conflicts between the Arbitration Act and other federal statutes. In fact, this court has rejected every such effort to date (save one temporary exception since overruled)," Gorsuch wrote.

In dissent for the court's liberals, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg called the decision "egregiously wrong" and likely to lead to "huge underenforcement of federal and state statutes designed to advance the well-being of vulnerable workers." Ginsburg said that the individual complaints can be very small in dollar terms, "scarcely of a size warranting the expense of seeking redress alone."

Ginsburg, who read a summary of her dissent aloud to stress her disagreement, said employees do not really have a choice about whether to sign such agreements, labeling them "arm-twisted, take-it-or-leave-it contracts."

She said "congressional action is urgently in order," echoing her call in 2007 for Congress to address pay discrimination following a high court ruling from which she dissented.

Kristen Clarke, president of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, said she fears the decision will have far-reaching effects. "Today's decision will make it easier for employers to escape liability for widespread discrimination and harassment. No American should be forced to sign away their right to invoke the meaningful protections afforded by our nation's critical civil rights laws," Clarke said.

The National Labor Relations Board, breaking with the administration, argued that contracts requiring employees to waive their right to collective action violate the labor laws.

Business interests were united in favor of the contracts. Gregory Jacob, a former high-ranking Labor Department official in the Bush administration, said the court got it right Monday.

"This decision thus will not see a huge increase in the use of such provisions, but it does protect employers' settled expectations and avoids placing our nation's job providers under the threat of additional burdensome litigation drain," Jacob said.

Lower courts had split over the issue. The high court considered three cases — two in which appeals courts ruled that such agreements can't be enforced and a third in which an appeals court said they are valid.

Syrian government declares capital fully under its control

By Zeina Karam
The Associated Press

BEIRUT — Syria's military on Monday captured an enclave in southern Damascus from Islamic State militants following a ruinous monthlong battle, bringing the entire capital and its far-flung suburbs under full government control for the first time since the civil war began in 2011.

The gains freed President Bashar Assad's forces to move with allied militiamen on remaining rebel-held territory in the south near the border with Israel, as Syria's chief ally Iran comes under growing pressure from the Trump administration to withdraw its troops from the country.

Iranian-backed militias, including the Lebanese group Hezbollah, have been instrumental in helping Assad's over-stretched forces recapture huge areas around Damascus and in the country's center and north, building a military presence that has alarmed Israel and its U.S. ally, which is now looking to constrain Iran's activities.

Iranian officials have vowed to stay on in Syria for as long as needed, setting the stage for a potential confrontation as Washington seeks to tighten the screws on Tehran following the U.S. withdrawal from the 2015 Iran nuclear deal brokered with Iran under President Barack Obama and world powers.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo threatened Iran with the "strongest sanctions in history" if Tehran doesn't change course. In his first major foreign policy speech since taking the post as the top U.S. diplomat, he issued a list of demands that he said should be included in any new nuclear treaty with Iran, including that it "withdraw all forces" from Syria, halt support for Hezbollah and stop threatening Israel.

Iran and Russia have joined forces in Syria, providing crucial military support to Assad's forces and giving them the upper hand in the civil war.

Russian President Vladimir Putin told Assad at a meeting last week that a political settlement in Syria should encourage foreign countries to withdraw their troops from Syria. Putin's envoy to Syria, Alexander Lavrentyev, said Putin was referring to Iranian forces, among others.

Iran says it is in Syria at the behest of the Assad government and says it is fighting "terrorism" in the form of Islamic extremists, including the Islamic State group and al-Qaida.

Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Bahram Ghasemi told reporters that no one can force Tehran to do anything it doesn't want to do.

"Our presence in Syria has been based on a request by the Syrian government and Iran will continue its support as long as the Syrian government wants," he said, speaking shortly before Pompeo made his remarks.

The recapture of IS-held pockets in the Palestinian refugee camp of Yarmouk and the nearby Hajar al-Aswad district in southern Damascus came after a massive bombing campaign that has all but decimated what was left of the residential area on the edge of the capital, once home to about 200,000 Palestinian refugees.

The camp has been deserted by most of its inhabitants following years of siege, and the few remaining residents fled to nearby areas in the last days of the bombardment.

The last push on the Yarmouk camp came after a group of civilians was evacuated overnight.

State TV showed images of troops moving in, waving the Syrian flag and flashing victory signs atop wrecked buildings in the destroyed neighborhood. Some fired in the air in celebration.

The move boosts morale and security in Assad's seat of power, putting it out of range of insurgents' mortar fire and shells for the first time in nearly seven years.

SRDs take part in active shooter training

Special to Times-Advertiser

BONIFAY - The former Bonifay Elementary School campus recently served as an ideal site for Holmes County Sheriff's Office to hold active shooter training for School Resource Deputies (SRDs).

The training consisted of classroom hours, as well as time spent in simulated active shooter scenarios.

Major Michael Raley led the training, stating that while HCSO has held similar training for years, the Sheriff's Office implemented the most recent training to ensure both quality and consistency.

"With the recent addition of two new SRDs within Holmes County District Schools, we just want to be sure that everyone is on the same page with our procedures," said Major Raley.

Cook's Corner

Grilled Banana Splits With Candied Peanuts

You'll need:

- 1/2 cup dry-roasted, salted peanuts
- 1 tablespoon light brown sugar
- cooking spray
- 4 medium bananas (slightly underripe)

- 2 cups light ice cream of your choice
- 1 cup whipped cream or whipped topping

What to do:

1. Combine peanuts and brown sugar in large skillet over medium heat. Cook for 3 to 5 minutes, stirring frequently, until sugar melts and coats peanuts. Remove from heat.
2. Coat stovetop grill pan with cooking spray and preheat over medium-high. Leaving skin on bananas, cut them in half lengthwise. Place bananas cut side down in hot pan. Grill for 30 seconds to 1 minute, until flesh is golden brown.
3. Peel bananas and transfer to dessert plates. Top with ice cream, peanuts and whipped cream. Serves 4.

Eco Note

Several species of amphibians that were nearly sent into extinction by a killer fungus appear to have evolved to develop resistance to the pathogen. Their populations in Panama have now rebounded to previous levels. The deep croaks of frogs and toads are returning to some of the once-quiet streams in Panama, according to researchers from the University of Pittsburgh.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

The Daytona Beach News-Journal's Godwin Kelly & Ken Willis have covered NASCAR for nearly 60 years combined. godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com
ken.willis@news-jrnl.com

ALL-STAR RACE THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. When you're hot

Don't look now, but Kevin Harvick is riding another three-race winning streak following his All-Star Race victory. Harvick needed a push from Joey Logano to notch this win since the Cup cars were running restrictor plates. "That is just the way that most of us do it from Ford," Harvick said.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

2. Charlotte plates

There was very little blow-back from the garage area after the All-Star Race was staged with a restrictor-plate package. "Yeah, I actually had some fun, really," said Chase Elliott, driver of the No. 9 Hendrick Motorsports Chevrolet. "It was different for sure, but it wasn't all bad."

3. No carry-over

In years past, the savvy crew chiefs would use the All-Star Race as a test run for the Coke 600. Since NASCAR used a plate setup Saturday night, there was nothing for the mechanics' notebooks. "We will come back next week to a normal program and go for it there," Jimmie Johnson said.

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Defending champ

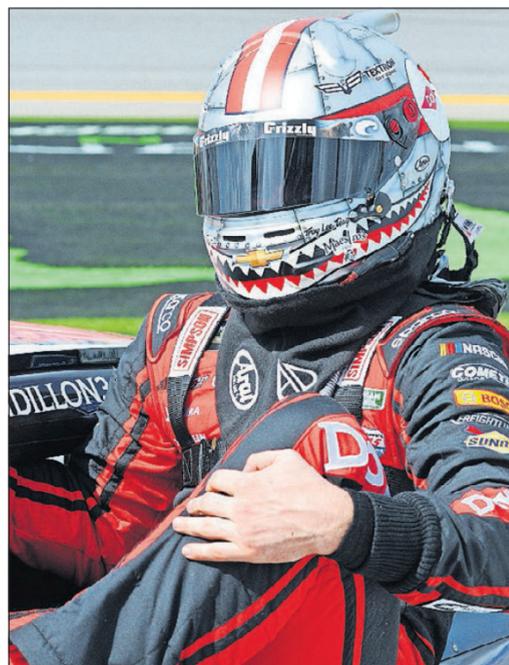

Oddly enough, Austin Dillon's first two NASCAR Cup Series wins came in crown-jewel events — last year's Coca-Cola 600 and this season's Daytona 500. Now it is time to defend his Charlotte title. "I'm really pumped about the 600," said Dillon, who won on one of them "fuel-mileage deals" in 2017. "If fuel mileage is the way we do it, we will do it that way again, it doesn't matter," he said.

2. Plate debate

Steve O'Donnell, who carries the title of executive vice president and chief racing development officer, made an appearance after the All-Star Race. Apparently, NASCAR hopes to use this same package at some tracks next season. "For us, we've got to take the time, be smart about this, really look at it, see where we can go from here," he said. "But I think it's fair to say that this is something we absolutely want to look at."

3. No. 47 sparked?

AJ Allmendinger won

Austin Dillon climbs from the No. 3 Chevrolet. He hopes to take that team back to Victory Lane in Sunday's Coca-Cola 600. [NEWS-JOURNAL/PETER BAUER]

the NASCAR Cup Series race that everyone soon forgets about — the Monster Energy Open. The victory got Allmendinger into the spotlight All-Star Race, but may have also sparked up the No. 47 Chevrolet team and driver. "The first stage was pretty awesome to go 18th to fourth in a couple of laps," Allmendinger said of All-Star Segment 1. "Really competitive and proud of the guys."

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Who's Jonathan Marshall, why should I know him?

interests of the RTA member teams forward."

Marshall is the guy just hired by the NASCAR team owners who make up the Race Team Alliance. As the new executive director, he will obviously be a key figure in upcoming discussions (battles?) with NASCAR leadership over the direction of the sport. RTA chairman Robert Kauffman said "it was time to have a full-time executive who wakes up every day thinking of how to move the collective Should we care?

Only in the eventual changes to the business model, as it pertains to future schedules, race-day logistics, etc. It's somewhat interesting that Marshall was formerly an upper executive with the World Surf League, so if there's anyone who knows how to get back on the wave, it should be him.

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

Was slower better at All-Star Race?

GODSPEAK: There was passing, side-by-side racing, and the field could see the winner at the finish. It worked.
KEN'S CALL: The general consensus says yes, so who am I to argue? Prepare for more blue-plate specials in 2019.

Where does Danica finish at Indy?

GODSPEAK: Maybe a bit cautious at first, then she sneaks up through the field for a top-10 finish.
KEN'S CALL: If she doesn't find a wreck, I'll say a solid 12th.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

JOEY LOGANO VS. KYLE LARSON: Near the end of the All-Star Race, Larson bumped into Logano, who skimmed the wall, then immediately turned Larson around off Turn 4.
GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: Since this was a no-points race, both drivers shrugged it off. As Larson said: "He got into the wall, got mad at me and retaliated. It is what it is."

SPORTS TICKER

IN BRIEF

Goodell details NFL's stance on sports gambling

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell says Congress should enact uniform standards for any states that plan to legislate sports betting.

Goodell detailed the league's position in a statement Monday that reiterated the NFL's stance that legalized sports gambling in the United States should be governed by federal law rather than state law. The Supreme Court ruled last week to strike down a 1992 law that barred most state-authorized sports gambling.

In suggesting four core principles that should be maintained for any form of legalized sports betting, Goodell stressed that leagues can "protect our content and intellectual property from those who attempt to steal or misuse it." He also said guidelines must provide substantial consumer protections; ensure fans will have access to official, reliable league data; and that law enforcement will have the resources, monitoring and enforcement tools necessary "to protect our fans and penalize bad actors here at home and abroad."

'Welcome to Impossible'

Stanley Cup-bound Vegas turning impossible into possible

By W.G. Ramirez
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Welcome to Impossible.

Those words have been projected onto the ice in big, bold letters at T-Mobile Arena before each game during the Stanley Cup Playoffs. Well, the Vegas Golden Knights are turning impossible into possible.

The stunningly successful expansion squad is headed to the Stanley Cup Final after beating the Winnipeg Jets 2-1 on Sunday to win the Western Conference final series in five games.

"I remember eight months ago, when we won against Dallas (in the season opener), we had that unbelievable feeling," Vegas center Pierre-Edouard Bellemare said. "Doesn't feel like we're satisfied. It's a good feeling when you know the guys are excited for the next one."

The Golden Knights are the third franchise in NHL history to clinch a berth in the Stanley Cup Final in its inaugural season, joining the Toronto Arenas in 1918 in the league's early days, and St. Louis Blues in 1968, when all six expansion teams were in the same division and one of them had to make the final round.

Vegas will play either

Vegas Golden Knights' James Neal (18), Deryk Engelland (5), goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury (29) and the rest of the team celebrate after defeating the Winnipeg Jets during NHL Western Conference Finals, game 5, on Sunday in Winnipeg. [PHOTOS BY TREVOR HAGAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS VIA THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Tampa Bay or Washington on hockey's biggest stage. The Lightning lead the Eastern Conference final 3-2, but the Capitals host Game 6 on Monday night.

"Either way, we're not going to be favorites," said Jonathan Marchessault, who leads Vegas with 18 points in the postseason. "That's been the case all year. Tampa has been the best team all year. Washington, (they're) playing great hockey right now. Either way, we're not going to be favorites, and that's fine with us. We went all year like that and we're going to keep going."

Hence, "The Golden Misfits" tag.

Nobody could have scripted Vegas, a 500-1 long shot at the start of the season, making the playoffs — let alone earning a shot at Lord Stanley's Cup.

But the Golden Knights, who finished fifth in the league during the regular season, just knocked off the No. 2 team in the regular season in Winnipeg, which in the conference semifinals knocked off the No. 1 team in the regular season, Nashville.

Vegas clinched all three of its Western Conference series on the road, becoming the seventh team in NHL history to accomplish such a feat.

"Everybody on this team has something to prove," said Winnipeg native Ryan Reaves, who scored the winning goal Sunday in his hometown. "We call ourselves 'The Golden Misfits' for a reason. We're doing a good job of proving everybody wrong."

Just as they have all season, they are living in the moment.

Vegas, which had just two players under contract at this time last year, heads into the final round with a 12-3 playoff record after outscoring its Western Conference opponents 42-27.

It's a credit to coach Gerard Gallant's philosophy of having a well-conditioned, confident group of forwards who work well together, focus on short effective shifts, and exude confidence on the ice — all while, as he reiterates it daily, playing 200 feet of hockey.

And while the Golden Knights haven't necessarily been a high-scoring threat, scoring just three or fewer goals in 12 of their 15 playoff games, their defensemen have played exceptional to this point. Vegas has allowed the least amount of goals in the playoffs, among teams that have played 10 games. It was a stifling and disruptive defense that helped propel the Golden Knights past the Jets on Sunday, with their sixth win in eight road games during the postseason.

"Everybody's stepping up at different times during the season," said goalie Marc-Andre Fleury, who has 12 wins, four shutouts, a .947 save percentage and

1.68 goals against average. "That's a big reason why we've been playing consistently."

The key cog in Vegas' engine has been Fleury, whose remarkable play has translated into a career-best postseason. He has allowed two or fewer goals in 10 of 15 playoff games, and is heading to the Stanley Cup final for a third consecutive year. And whether he admits it or not, the 14-year veteran still bears the scars of being left exposed by Pittsburgh last summer after spending the first 13 years of his career with the Penguins.

Gallant, who remained coy about his team's aspirations during the regular season, made it clear the Golden Knights haven't reached their goal.

"It's been an awesome ride so far," said Gallant, who some might also consider a "misfit" after Florida fired him following a road game at Carolina last season, then left him and his luggage on the curb outside PNC Arena. "We're going to the Stanley Cup Final, but again, this isn't what we want. We want to win."

"It's great to win tonight and it's great to be the (conference) champions," Gallant added, "but that's not what we're here for."

Even as impossible as that all seemed just a few months ago.

SOYBEANS AMONG TOP EXPORTS

Soybeans, which are among the top five agricultural exports from the U.S., are the largest source of protein in agriculture. They are also used to make a variety of non-food products, including crayons, candles and hair-care products. The U.S. exports about half of its soybeans to other countries.

Wild Australia

Succulents and scenery Down Under

The famed Barossa Valley wine region of Australia is about an hour's drive from the exotic and bustling city of Adelaide. As expected, I was captivated by the beauty of rolling hills covered in rows of green and yellowing grape leaves, telltale colors to signal the end of harvest season. But what I didn't expect was to see a kangaroo hopping through the vineyard at St. Hugo winery. Wow.

Kangaroo-spotting was not on my itinerary for another three days, pending a half-hour flight over to Kangaroo Island. Yet, there one was, right before my eyes. That's Australia. Now, on to Kangaroo Island.

In 1802, British explorer Matthew Flinders landed on this island 70 miles southwest of Adelaide and named it for its primary inhabitants, kangaroos. This third-largest island off the Australian coast attracted European seal hunters and whalers in the early 19th century. Back on land, these seamen were on a mission to prevent the extinction of an Australian icon, the koala. They introduced 18 koalas to the island and planted 100 species of eucalyptus trees.

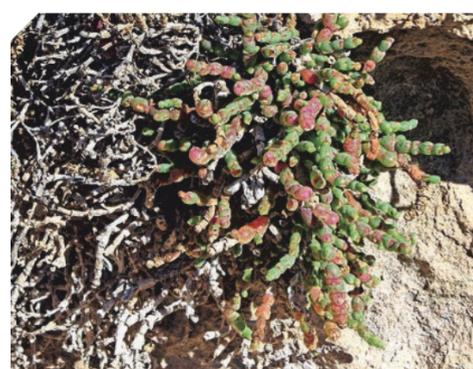

Today, the koala population is a robust 30,000, and the fuzzy creatures choose to dine on only five types of eucalyptus. I became so obsessed with koala-spotting that I almost forgot about seeing kangaroos, but that would soon change.

On this island, kangaroos far outnumber the human population of 4,500. This place is almost a zoo without cages.

I soon arrived at the remote and ultra-luxurious Southern Ocean Lodge, 21 modern rooms located "in the bush" and on the water's edge where the South Pacific and Indian oceans meet, with views (and amenities) to die for. I enjoyed a lunch of crisped local garfish with a caper and dill emulsion, accompanied by fried potatoes, while sipping a crisp Corirole Chenin Blanc from the McLaren Vale wine region.

As a post-lunch workout, I signed up for the hotel's afternoon exploration of the cliffs overlooking the beach. Spectacular crashing waves illustrate why the island has a long history of shipwrecks on this spot. I also got a lesson on bush plants surrounding and leading to the hotel's curved, panoramic lobby. I was fascinated with samphire, or sea bean, which grows as beaded shoots in shades of green, purple and red. This salty succulent is prized by southern Australian chefs, who add it as a topping to many dishes.

Samphire Spaghetti

Serves 4

- 2/3 cup samphire (order online if you can't find in a local specialty store)
- 2 cups spaghetti
- Sea salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste
- Olive oil
- A few knobs of butter
- 2 salmon fillets
- 1/2 red pepper, finely chopped (more or less, to taste)
- 1-2 cloves garlic (to taste), crushed
- 1 lemon, juice and zest

Plunge your spaghetti into a pot of boiling water. Add a good pinch of salt and a splash of olive oil. Cook for 12 minutes or until al dente.

While it cooks, get a frying pan hot. Season your fish. Add a knob of butter. Lower heat to medium. Cook skin side down until you can see the fish starting to cook through a little, about 5 minutes. Flip. Cook for another 3-5 minutes. The flesh will easily flake away from the skin when it's done.

Toss the red pepper and the garlic in the pan to cook a little in the residual heat.

Add the samphire to the pasta water right before draining it. Toss drained pasta and samphire with a knob of butter. Flake the salmon away from the skin and toss the flesh and the garlic and red pepper in with the pasta.

Add a good hit of fresh pepper and the juice and zest of the lemon. Taste. Adjust seasoning as needed. Serve warm.

Science, senses find nuances in coffee

Marion Renault

At one time, food chemist Sichaya Sittipod paid little mind to what was in her coffee cup.

"I would just go to Starbucks and get the same thing," she said. "I'm much more in tune to the different flavors and the small nuances now."

The fourth-year doctoral student in food science at Ohio State University uses the chemical makeup of green coffee beans to predict their flavor when brewed into coffee.

It's possible, she said, to read a bean's composition like a book and learn what chemical markers correlate with, say, bitter, sweet, fresh or fruity flavors.

"It's not just aroma; it's not just taste," Sittipod said. "It's a nuanced combination."

"We get a chemical fingerprint off each of these beans."

The chemical identity of specialty coffee beans also can predict the score of a coffee's grade on the Specialty Coffee Association of America's 100-point "cupping" scale.

Wyatt Burk, owner of the Bitter Barista and Little Ghost Coffee Roaster in Columbus, Ohio, is a trained and certified professional cupper.

To maintain consistent grading, the association lays out specific guidelines for cuppers about the "golden" grounds-to-water ratio to use, how best to sip, and the ideal temperature and timing for roasting, brewing and sampling the coffee.

Cupping is one of many measures used to grade a coffee's sweetness, body, cleanliness, acidity flavor and fragrance, said Burk, who uses it regularly to experiment with new roasts.

"If you were trying to develop a new cookie recipe, you'd try out new recipes and tweak it every time," he said. "It's the same with coffee."

Through her research,

Sittipod said she has learned to consider how different techniques — French press, drip, espresso, for example — achieve different flavors.

Burk said coffee drinkers have, in the past decade, begun to understand and appreciate the chemical complexity of a cup of joe.

The optimally roasted bean, ground to an ideal size and steeped in water of a certain temperature for a specific number of minutes, is as special as any high-falutin' craft cocktail, he said.

"We view coffee as a beverage, not a drink," Burk said. "You can't drive around and sip on a cocktail. That's the difference. But there is a growing appreciation."

Avoid brain freeze

A brain freeze is what happens when cold food touches a bundle of nerves in the back of the palate. To avoid brain freeze, eat cold food much more slowly so that your mouth can warm up the food. Keep it in the front of your mouth: The further-back stimulation is what triggers the brain freeze.

Pay less at the MOVIES

8 ways to get cheap tickets

By Courtney Jespersen
NerdWallet.com

Grab a movie ticket, snacks and a seat. As the lights dim in the theater, take a look around. Spoiler alert: The person sitting next to you might have paid less to see the same movie. How did they do it? Here are eight ways to lower the price of going to the movies.

Before you go

1. JOIN A LOYALTY PROGRAM

Movie theater loyalty programs reward frequent patrons with discounts. For example, for $15 a year, AMC Stubs Premiere members enjoy benefits like $5 Ticket Tuesdays and free upgrades on popcorn and fountain drinks. You'll also earn points that can be redeemed for monetary rewards: Get a $5 reward for every 5,000 points. Rewards can be redeemed on things like food and tickets.

Many theater chains offer rewards programs. Check with your local theater to see the cost of a membership, then do some quick calculations to figure out how many movies you would have to see each year to make up the cost of joining.

When you sign up for a membership, fill in personal information like your birthday, and some theaters will send you celebratory deals to use during your birthday month. You could get a free tub of popcorn, for example.

2. CHECK OUT COSTCO

Did you know Costco sells movie tickets and gift cards for movie tickets? We found a pack of four $25 gift cards to MovieTickets.com for $74.99 (a $100 value).

3. LEVERAGE YOUR DINNER

Restaurant.com has a movie section on its website with special gift card deals. We spotted a bundle with a $25 Regal Cinemas gift card and a $25 Restaurant.com e-gift card for $30. That's $20 in savings.

4. JOIN MOVIEPASS

MoviePass is a subscription service that currently costs $9.95 a month for one person (the price can change, so check online before you sign up). This unlimited plan allows you to see a movie every day.

Once you register, you'll receive a debit card in the mail that you'll use to purchase your ticket at the box office. Use the MoviePass app to find participating theaters near you. Note: Only select theaters allow you to reserve a same-day ticket in the app before you arrive.

At the box office

5. GO ON THE RIGHT DAY

You could save money simply by seeing a movie on a certain day of the week. Go online and find the theaters near you, then browse any available discount days. We've seen several theaters that offer cheaper prices on Tuesdays, for example.

6. CASH IN ON SENIOR AND MILITARY DISCOUNTS

At Cinemark, for example, discounts include military, student, senior and early bird (for the first matinee of the day that starts before 1 p.m.). Go to cinemark.com/discounts to see if there is a theater near you that participates.

Discounts typically apply only on certain days, for specific showtimes or at certain theaters, so plan your visit accordingly.

7. REDEEM A COUPON

Just like you can find coupons for retail stores, you can use coupon websites and apps to find deals for movie theaters. Just search for "movies" or by theater name. Deals could include offers such as a dollar amount off, a percentage off or a free concession with purchase.

8. TAKE KIDS TO SUMMER MOVIES

For example, Cinemark offers Summer Movie Clubhouse, a "10-week program of recently released G and PG films for kids," according to James Meredith, senior vice president for Marketing and Communications at Cinemark.

The cost is $5 for 10 movies or $1 per movie. And while the movies are tailored to kids, the price is the same for guests of all ages. Timing of the series is determined by local theaters.

Holmes County Library hosts 'Libraries Rock'

By Diane M. Robinson

Drobinson@chipleypaper.com

BONIFAY - The Holmes County Public Library will be hosting its annual summer program starting June 14.

The Florida Youth Program theme for this year is "Libraries Rock" with each program showing how libraries rock and teaching children the importance of the library system by way of music.

Each week will see various groups using music encourage children to utilize their local library. Atlantic Coastal Theatre will use plays drawn from books to do just that, just as Mrs. Kate Singin' and Smilin' will do the same.

The finale of the program

The following is the schedule of events:

- June 14 - Mrs. Kate Singin' and Smilin'
- June 21 - Atlanta Coastal Theatre
- June 28 - Holmes County High School Band
- July 5 - Animal Tales
- July 12 - Battle of the Bands will have a Battle of the Bands which is exactly what it sounds like. Bands from local high schools will gather at Bonifay K-8 to battle each other for the children.

The programs are open to the public and completely free of charge. Signing up is not a requirement and parents are asked to stay with their children for the programs. Local daycare centers will bring their students to the events as well.

Holmes County Public Library Assistant Director Becky Marsh says this program is for the community and for kids to have something to do with their time.

"We give them something to do for entertainment when some of them can't afford other activities," said Marsh. "We support the children and the parents by giving them something to do."

Starting on June 7 with a movie at the library, every Thursday from June 14 until July 12, programs will be held at Bonifay K-8. The programs begin at 9 a.m.

"We encourage everyone to come out and enjoy," said Marsh.

Data confirmation

From airlines to pizza parlors, EU businesses adopt info retention law

By Danica Kirka
The Associated Press

LONDON — Lisa Meyer's hair salon is a cozy place where her mother serves homemade macaroons, children climb on chairs and customers chat above the whirr of hairdryers.

Most of the time Meyer is focused on hairstyles, color trends and keeping up with appointments. But now she's worried about how the European Union's new data protection law will affect her business as she contacts customers to seek permission to store their details. Even though she supports the law, Meyer fears it may cut her mailing list by 90 percent as people choose to withhold their data or simply overlook her emails.

"It will be difficult to market upcoming events," she said at her shop, Lisa Hauck Hair & Beauty in London.

Businesses from pizza parlors to airlines across the EU's 28 countries are bombarding customers with emails seeking consent to use personal data as they rush to comply with the bloc's General Data Protection Regulation, which takes effect Friday.

The new rules, called GDPR for short, are

Lisa Meyer blow dries the hair of a client at her Hair and Beauty shop Wednesday in London. (FRANK AUGSTEIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS) designed to make it easier for EU residents to give and withdraw permission for companies to use personal information, requiring consent forms that are written in simple language and no more than one page long. Companies that already hold such data have to reach out to customers and ask for permission to retain it. Authorities can fine companies up to 4 percent of annual revenue or 20 million euros ($23.6 million), whichever is higher, for breaching the rules.

Regulators say the law applies to anyone who collects, uses or stores personal data. That can be a burden for small businesses that are forced to hire outside lawyers or consultants because they don't have the staff or expertise to deal with the law.

The EU's one-size-fits-all approach is one of the flaws in the law, according to Max Schrems, an Austrian privacy advocate who has formed a non-profit to take action against big companies that deliberately violate the new rules.

When the rules were being discussed, industry lobbyists sought to weaken the law by creating uncertainty, and as a result there are no clear guidelines that exempt small companies, Schrems told the BBC recently.

"GDPR is a prime example of corporate law gone wrong, because it's helpful for big companies," he said. "They have to do all of this anyways and they can use the uncertainty in the law to kind of get around things. But it leaves small companies that don't ... have a law department, or something like that, in a situation with a lot of uncertainty."

Meyer falls under the new rules' jurisdiction because she keeps data. Like many hair colorists, she keeps a card on each of her clients that notes whether they are allergic to any chemicals used in the dyes. That's considered personal medical information that must be protected.

"I find it actually quite scary how data is being used so carelessly," Meyer said. "It's a good wake-up call. It's made me more aware."

Zuckerberg meeting with EU parliament leaders to be webcast

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS — Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg has agreed to have his meeting Tuesday with the leaders of the European parliament about data privacy be broadcast publicly through web streaming.

The evening meeting with leaders of the political groups and a justice and civil rights expert was long expected to be private.

But many in the European Parliament had been calling for an on-air grilling for Zuckerberg to explain his company's role in a scandal about the misuse of customer data.

European Parliament President Antonio Tajani said in a statement Monday that after discussing the issue with Zuckerberg "I am glad to announce that he has accepted this new request."

Tajani called it "great news for EU citizens. I thank him for the respect" shown for the EU legislature.

Hope for US-China progress boosts stocks

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Industrial and technology companies led stocks to solid gains Monday after the U.S. and China appeared to make significant progress in trade talks. That helped ease concerns among investors that the world's two biggest economies might be headed for a trade war.

After another round of talks, the two countries agreed not to place tariffs on goods imported from the other. The Chinese government said it will buy more U.S. goods, including energy and agricultural products, while Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said the U.S. postponed its proposal to put tariffs on up to $150 billion in goods from China. The two sides gave no indication of how much progress they had made toward ending their dispute entirely and both said hostilities could increase again.

Mark Hackett, chief of investment research at Nationwide Investment Management, said investors overreacted to the possibility of a trade war and they may be slowly learning to take a more patient approach with statements by the Trump administration and other nations, which is a good thing, Hackett says, because future administrations may borrow from Trump's aggressive style.

"Treating Trump literally is destructive for investors," he said. "There's a lot of these issues where there are going to be hyperbolic statements made in the public sphere by both sides."

The S&P 500 index climbed 20.04 points, or 0.7 percent, to 2,733.01. The Dow Jones industrial average rose as much as 371 points during the morning and finished with a gain of 298.20 points, or 1.2 percent, to 25,013.29. The Nasdaq composite gained 39.70 points, or 0.5 percent, to 7,394.04. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks set another record close as it jumped 10.81 points, or 0.7 percent, to 1,637.44.

All 11 sectors in the S&P 500 index finished higher. Among industrials, Boeing gained 3.6 percent to $363.92 and construction equipment maker Caterpillar rose 2.1 percent to $158.92. In the financial sector, Bank of New York Mellon added 1.3 percent to $57.72 and JPMorgan Chase rose 0.9 percent to $112.15.

Trade disputes have occupied a lot of investors' attention for the last two months. Stocks have rallied on signs progress was being made, only to fall back when the situation appeared to worsen. Hackett said Wall Street could get over its trade worries relatively quickly if talks go well.

If that happens, he said stocks could be set for further gains because they are still below their early 2018 highs and analysts expect stronger earnings growth, which makes stock prices seem less expensive.

General Electric rose 1.9 percent to $15.26 after announcing that its train engine division will combine with railroad equipment maker Westinghouse Air Brake Technologies in deal worth $11.1 billion. It's the latest step by GE's CEO, John Flannery, to break off parts of the conglomerate. GE will get $2.9 billion in cash and will own 50.1 percent of the combined company, and the deal will help it narrow its business down to the aviation, health care and energy industries.

Ameren Missouri plans 400-megawatt wind farm

Ameren Missouri announced plans Monday for a 400-megawatt wind farm in rural northeast Missouri, creating enough power to serve 120,000 homes within two years.

St. Louis-based Ameren said its High Prairie Wind Farm near Kirksville will be the largest in the state. Ajay Arora, vice president of power operations and energy management at Ameren Missouri, called it a significant step toward Ameren's goal of reducing carbon emissions 80 percent by 2050.

"What's most important for our customers is to have a balanced energy mix," Arora said in an interview. "That would be a combination of hydro, nuclear, natural gas, coal, wind, solar. Our portfolio has it all. And that provides the affordability and reliability that our customers expect."

Study finds athletic activity makes for better teen drivers

Melissa Erickson

If you want your teen to be a better driver, skip the video games and get them involved in organized sports, according to a new study.

That was one of a few surprises in a University of California Los Angeles study that also found that new, male teen drivers handle the car better than do new male drivers in their 20s.

In the study novice drivers; each with less than five hours of driving experience before their first driving lesson; participated in a two-hour lesson focused on car control and traffic maneuvers. Students drove in Los Angeles, ranked by the 2017 INRIX Global Traffic Scorecard as having the worst traffic in the world.

The group was evenly split by gender, and the students' average age was 18. Instructors considered students' driving skills against four factors: age, gender, sports participation and video game experience.

The results were surprising, said Nancy Wayne, associate vice chancellor for research and a professor of physiology at the David Geffen School of Medicine at University of California Los Angeles.

Among the findings was that new female students on average reported feeling less confident than did their male counterparts, but the male and female groups received almost the same driving scores from instructors.

Also, a history of playing any kind of organized sport was linked to better driving skills among both men and women.

"We were surprised at how robust the impact of organized athletics; any type of athletic activity; was on driving skills. It didn't matter if it was sports involving a ball or yoga. It didn't matter if the driving students were currently involved in athletics or had been in the past. Compared to driving students who were not ever involved in an organized athletic activity, their driving skills were significantly greater," Wayne said.

Previous studies focused on elite athletes such as members of a Division I sports team.

"Our study showed that you don't have to be one of the elite to get benefits of athletics; any kind of organized athletic activity is associated with better driving skills in novice drivers," Wayne said.

If you want your son or daughter to be a better driver, "encourage your children and teens to get involved in any athletic activity they enjoy.

There are many benefits to athletics, including that it is associated with better driving skills in novice drivers.

Second, don't put off those driving lessons until your children are in their late teens or older. Waiting too long just makes it harder for novice drivers to reach a solid level of competence," said Greg Miller, an instructor at Westwood Driving School, near the UCLA campus.

Playing video games showed no relationship to driving abilities. The authors expected the opposite, because earlier research had shown that playing action video games improves spatial cognition.

PUZZLE SOLUTION

Fighting the heart

By Kalyrn Brazeal

As I have taken the first few steps on my journey of parenting an adult, I have realized that my spirit and my heart are fighting a constant battle. The heart wants to make it all better. I tend to lead with my heart which I'm learning is not necessarily in alignment with what the Bible tells me.

Mercy and grace are some things that I want in my everyday life, that I have in my everyday life. God's mercy and grace is upon us. That said, I struggle with smoothing everything over in the name of mercy and grace.

An episode of "That 70 s Show" comes to mind. In it, the parents finally catch the kids behaving inappropriately and the father brings down the hammer.

Nailing windows shut, doing bed checks, sitting guard over curfew at the doors. The whole process brings about absolute misery in the house. Finally the mother announces that she wants her house back, her life back, and to do that they are going to pretend like nothing wrong happened and everyone is going back to normal. Then within a few seconds, everything goes back to normal and the credits run.

How I wish my life was like a television show.

Except you can't pretend like nothing happened. You can't parent with your eyes closed and you certainly can't force everything to go back the way it was.

In Jesus' parable of The Prodigal Son, we are reminded that it is always possible to come home. The father held his arms open wide and with such devotion and love announced a feast to celebrate the homecoming of his wayward child. A true testimony to God's love for us and his grace.

Notice however that when the father addressed his other son, who was upset and concerned, the father assured him that he remembered that he was always with him. That he had never left him and that all the father had was his. While the father welcomed home his wayward son, he wasn't ignoring the consequences of the son's actions.

This is a reminder that regardless of what choices we make, we can always go home, we can always get a fresh start, but we aren't free from the consequences of our actions.

When I dig into the subject, it's hard as a parent. Having one child come to you and demand their inheritance, which is given upon one's death typically, must hurt. I can't imagine standing before my parent and basically wishing they were dead so that I could have money to do as I wanted. But this is the reality that the father had.

Instead of saying, "no, go clean out the camel shed and think twice about being rude," the father gave his son what he asked for. Again I can't imagine that father watching as his son left — my heart breaks just thinking of it.

Yet we are all that son in one way or another. We have all stood before God, our Father, and shamed him. We have asked for things that aren't ours, done things that we knew better than to do... and yet his arms are wide open and his grace is good.

We will constantly find ourselves on the wrong side of this parable. Because while God gave us free will and forgiveness... he does not protect us from the consequences of our actions. We reap what we sow.

These are the battles we face in life. So as a parent, I have to base my approach on how our Father deals with us when we are wayward and disobedient... I need to follow what my spirit tells me versus what my heart says. My spirit says to hold strong to the Lord in my time of need. That everyone has to learn their own path. That you can love someone and not approve or accept their current path. Just like the father in the parable, you can send one out with love and know that one day, they will repent and return to the fold.

My spirit says that one day we come to our senses and return to our Father's fold... just like the Prodigal Son.

University graduate allowed to mention Jesus, Bible in commencement speech

WEEK IN RELIGION

A recent college graduate won her battle to mention Jesus and the Bible in her graduation speech last week.

Colorado Mesa University student Karissa

Erickson was initially told by the university that "speeches should be free of any one religious slant." But thanks to a letter sent to the university by the Alliance Defending Freedom to appeal the rule prohibiting religious content in school-related speeches, Erickson was allowed to give her speech on May 11. Despite the school allowing Erickson to give her speech, some university officials said she could face "repercussions" by leaving the references to Jesus and the Bible in her speech.

QUIT SMOKING

FIND HELP ONLINE

More than 12 million U.S. adults — a third of all smokers — turn to the internet for help quitting each year, according to a new Truth Initiative study. Published in Nicotine & Tobacco Research, the study found that the number of smokers who searched online for information on quitting tobacco more than doubled over the past 12 years, from 16.5 percent in 2005 to 35.9 percent in 2017.

BecomeAnEX.org, a digital quit-smoking program developed by Truth Initiative in collaboration with Mayo Clinic, demonstrates the effectiveness of online programs — research shows that following the EX program quadruples a smoker's chance of quitting.

Dealing with grief

Resiliency, hope key to overcoming loss of all kinds

By JoAnne Viviano

More Content Now

Kristy Whaley was grieving. Her 25-year-old son, Kyle, had been struggling for years to fight the grip that opioids had on his life.

Whaley was mourning the loss of the dreams and hopes she had held for her son.

The pain led the Westerville, Ohio, woman to a grief recovery program, where she found support from others and learned techniques to manage the loss.

She finished the program on Aug. 31.

Sixteen days later, Kyle died of a drug overdose.

Since then, Whaley, 49, has turned to those grief-recovery tools to help cope with the devastation.

"I don't buy into the notion that Kyle died before his time," she told people gathered at his funeral. "Our stories and journeys are written before we are born, and this was Kyle's journey."

Lois Hall taught the Grief Recovery Method course that Whaley attended. She has seen more and more people coming to the courses after being affected by the opioid crisis.

A public health issue

But grief recovery isn't just for coping with the death of loved ones, she said. It can help after any loss, including divorce or retirement, the deployment or incarceration of a loved one or the diagnosis of a serious illness.

"One hundred percent of us are grievors, and nothing is being done to address this," said Hall, who was certified in the Grief Recovery Method by the Oregon-based Grief Recovery Institute in 1998. "The whole community needs to be involved in teaching people tools to get hope back in their lives."

People living with unresolved grief, Hall said, might turn to unhealthy habits that can lead to premature deaths — smoking, overeating, gambling, violence and, increasingly, drugs.

As such, she contends that addressing grief — essentially building resiliency and hope — is a growing public health issue as the overdose death count continues to rise.

Hall references a report issued in November by the Trust for America's Health, a Washington, D.C.-based health policy group.

Its authors refer to fatalities caused by drugs, alcohol and suicide as "deaths of desperation," with 1 million from 2006 to 2015, and an expected 1.6 million more from 2016 to 2025.

Hall, former executive director of the Ohio Public Health Association, also points to the Franklin County Public Health Department, where the concept of hope provides a framework for a Community Health Improvement Plan expected to be released soon.

The department also has submitted a proposal to the philanthropic Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to fund a project that would seek to determine whether certain communication and empathy skills and strategies will increase community resiliency in the face of natural disasters or ongoing stress.

Post-traumatic growth

Resiliency can also be referred to as post-traumatic growth, said Ken Yeager, clinical director of the Stress, Trauma and Resilience Program at Ohio State University's Wexner Medical Center in Columbus, Ohio.

While some people might be paralyzed by a loss such as a job layoff, others will look at it as an opportunity for positive change.

Connecting people with their coping mechanisms and helping them put together action plans is possible, Yeager said. But implementing that in the public health arena will take the creation of a network that connects people in crisis to those who can help them work through it.

Sarah Barnett of Mount Sterling, Ohio, attended a grief-recovery course after the December 2016 overdose death of her longtime partner, 33-year-old Joe Kuhn. He was the father of her three children, now ages 6, 5 and 3. She is now raising the children on her own.

Hall said the program transformed Barnett from a woman who was broken to one who has plans to foster change in her community.

Barnett, 30, was so struck by the grief-recovery courses that she became certified as a Grief Recovery Method facilitator.

"I knew how much it helped me and I knew how much I've been through," she said.

Whaley, as part of her grief journey, turned to Facebook to connect with groups of parents who also had lost children. She's working to create awareness about the opioid epidemic and to get a sober home opened. She's also part of a group of addicts' parents who put together "blessing bags" of toiletries for people who are homeless or entering rehab.

What is complicated grief?

According to Psychology Today, when acute grief gains a foothold and becomes a chronic, debilitating mental health condition that worsens over time, rather than gets better, it becomes complicated grief. An estimated 12-15 percent of bereaved people develop this condition.

Congratulations, graduate, you did it! Don't stop now

Charita Goshay

No matter how much the world changes, putting on a cap and gown and marching in formation to pick up your high school diploma is still a big deal.

If you are one of millions of high school graduates crossing the threshold into adulthood this spring, know that completing your high school education means something.

Every day, local newspapers, including ours, extol extraordinary teens who did well all the way through school with help from stable and supportive families. They have their lives and goals mapped out.

The odds are better-than-even they will go on to do well. Experts have said if a person can manage to graduate from high school and can avoid having a child before turning 20, then the chances for a good life increase substantially.

But perhaps we need to expand our definition of "extraordinary" to include those of you who had to dodge a lot of shrapnel to get to graduation day. You persisted.

You, who persisted through the trauma of poverty and chaos it can bring; who often had more responsibility than a kid should have; who had to ignore the naysayers and doubters in your own families who have nothing to show for their cynicism.

There ought to be recognition of those of you who never told even your closest friends of the struggles and abuse you've endured yet still managed to graduate.

You, who put up with being bullied almost every day because you look, think, act or see the world differently than the herd.

Those of you who thought about suicide but didn't do it, perhaps because of something a teacher said, or because of a song lyric, or because you saw a pinpoint of hope in the distance. That you made it through to the other side confirms you are extraordinary.

In the days to come, you'll hear a lot of advice about what you should do with the life that awaits you.

For one, don't go into unnecessary debt. It sounds silly, but debt is a form of slavery. Find your tribe.

Secondly, find the courage to be true to who you are, even if it means you must put some distance between yourself and others. You would be amazed at the adults who never embrace who they really are, who have settled for the safety and sameness of days rather than the thrilling uncertainty that comes with the truth.

If you remain faithful to yourself, you will find your tribe.

Everyone has a talent.

Don't let fear, or "what if," or other people talk you out of pursuing yours. Develop and hone it, and make it pay so that you never have to go to "work" a day in your life.

Understand that what you plan and where you end up probably won't be the same destination.

See as much of the world as you can. It will open your mind — putting you ahead of most Americans — and you will find that humans essentially are the same. We're all looking for love, friendship and acceptance.

Lastly, find a way to make the world a better place. Don't let the cares of this world cloud your vision.

Show us how it should be done.

How to start in a skilled trade career

By ZipRecruiter.com

There's a misconception that the only way to make a decent living is to earn a college degree.

But if you can offer a service that most people can't do on their own — repairing and maintaining equipment and appliances, fixing cars or wiring a home — you could stand to make a nice living.

Best of all, most training happens on the job. So rather than going into debt for your education, you're actually earning money.

Here are some tips on getting started in a skilled trade career.

Pick your trade

The great thing about trade careers is that they often correspond with your hobbies. Do you like fixing cars or creating elaborate meals? Consider a career as an auto mechanic or chef. Do you love gardening or working with wood? Perhaps a career as a horticulturist or cabinetmaker will suit you.

After you've narrowed down your choices to three or four, learn more about them by talking to people in the field and researching job opportunities, pay and long-term possibilities for growth.

Many skilled trade jobs are more mentally demanding than physically demanding. Stamina, dexterity and good problem-solving skills are usually more useful than brute strength. If you're someone who prefers being creative and active or working with your hands to sitting at a desk, the skilled trades could be an ideal choice for you.

Become an apprentice

The next step is finding an employer who's interested in hiring and training you. You can find potential contacts through trade unions, professional associations or training institutions, as well as local employment offices, programs and agencies.

Or you can apply for a registered apprenticeship. Operated by the private and public sectors, registered apprenticeship programs combine on-the-job training with theoretical and practical classroom instruction. Sponsors include employers, employer associations and joint labor/management organizations. Program sponsors pay most of the training costs while simultaneously increasing wages as your skill levels increase. These standards-based programs generally range from one to six years depending on the needs of the program sponsor.

A great resource is the U.S.

5 things new grads can do for their careers

By ZipRecruiter.com

You did it. You finally walked across that stage in a goofy looking hat, wrapped your fingers around that diploma, and sprinted off your college campus. Now, you're ready to take that running leap into the "real world" and get started with the career you've been working toward your entire life.

But landing a job right out of college is going to require some serious elbow grease and legwork on your end.

You already know you're going to be spending hours filling out application after application. However, there are plenty of other things you can do to boost your professional reputation and increase your chances of landing a job as soon as possible.

What's one of the first things recruiters and hiring managers do when they see your resume slide across their desk? Chances are, they look you up on social media. You absolutely do not want them to be welcomed by whiny posts complaining about your old boss or sloppy photos of you winning a beer pong competition.

Go through all of your existing social media accounts and remove any posts or photos that could be even remotely incriminating or offensive. Here's some social media advice for you to live by: If you wouldn't want your grandma to see it, you probably shouldn't post it.

2 Dust off your resume and LinkedIn profile

Next, it's time to polish up the materials specifically related to your career. Start with your resume. Ensure that all of the information is current and that it's completely free of any typos or errors. Also, identify any areas where it could be improved.

Next, turn your attention to your LinkedIn profile. If you don't have one, it's time to set one up. Hiring managers will definitely look for it. If you do have one, make sure your profile picture is professional and clearly shows your face, then double-check that your education information and previous job descriptions are updated.

Finally, craft a polished and personality-filled summary. It's your chance to expand on those cut-and-dried facts already in your resume.

3 Schedule informational interviews

What's one of the things that's the most frustrating about the job-hunting and interview process? You feel like you have no control over what happens. You simply submit your information and cross your fingers that you hear back about an interview.

However, with informational interviews, the ball is in your court. Reach out to a few professionals that you admire via email or LinkedIn to see if you could get together for a cup of coffee. It's a great opportunity to meet new people, as well as learn more about a particular company or industry you're interested in. Plus, an expanded network is never a bad thing.

4 Network, network, network

Speaking of an expanded web of professional contacts, networking needs to be toward the top of your priority list after graduating. Meeting new contacts is your chance to get connected with people who could benefit your job search, as well as potentially help you get your foot in the door for some new opportunities.

Volunteer with a local shelter. Attend a community networking event. Join a professional association or organization. Put yourself out there and make an effort to expand your group of connections.

5 Know your career goals

Chances are, you don't just want a job.

You want a job in a specific field or industry. You want a position that makes you feel fulfilled and satisfied. Or, maybe you want experience in order to get to the next rung of the career ladder.

If you have the ability, take the time to sit down and outline your short-term and long-term career goals, and then base your job search decision on those. It'll help you to ensure your first job is a step in the right direction - and not just a hasty decision made out of desperation.

Congratulations!
The diploma you've worked so hard for is in your hands, and so is your future. Keep up the great work, graduates!

Terms to know before applying to school

Stress runs high for both parents and students when thoughts turn to college. According to The Princeton Review's 2017 College Hopes & Dreams Survey, 76 percent of the over 10,000 respondents reported high levels of stress — 4 percent more than last year's survey respondents, and 20 percent more than in the survey's initial year, 2003.

One surefire way to reduce stress and anxiety is through knowledge. Before heading to school this fall, get to know some college lingo and terminology, provided by the U.S. Department of Education's glossary.

✓ Academic year
This is the amount of the academic work you must complete each year, and the time period in which you are expected to complete it, as defined by your school. For example, your school's academic year may be made up of a fall and spring semester, during which a full-time undergraduate student is expected to complete at least 24 semester hours (usually called credits or credit hours) over the course of 30 weeks of instructional time. Academic years may change from school to school and even from educational program to educational program at the same school.

✓ Associate degree
An undergraduate academic degree granted after completion of two years of study. Community colleges and career colleges generally award associate degrees.

✓ Award letter
An offer from a college or career school that states the type and amount of financial aid the school is willing to provide if you accept admission and register to take classes at that school.

✓ Bachelor's degree
An undergraduate academic degree awarded for a course of study that generally lasts four years. Colleges or universities generally award bachelor's degrees.

✓ Early action
A college admission policy that allows applicants to apply and receive notice of their admission early. Applicants accepted under early action are not under a binding agreement to attend that school and may submit applications to other schools.

✓ Early decision
A college admission policy that allows applicants who commit to attend that school to apply and receive notice of their admission early. If the applicant is accepted, he or she agrees to attend that school and must withdraw all other applications.

✓ Elective
A class that is not required for your major or minor. Generally, electives are taken for fun or interest. Examples could be public speaking, art history or a fitness class.

✓ FAFSA
Stands for Free Application for Federal Student Aid and is the form used to apply for grants, loans and work-study.

✓ General education course
"Gen Ed" courses cover the core academic subjects such as science, math and literature. Students must take one or more of these in major academic disciplines.

✓ Merit-based
Based on a student's skill or ability. Example: A merit-based scholarship might be awarded based on a student's high grades.

✓ Need-based
Based on a student's financial need. Example: A need-based grant might be awarded based on a student's low income.

✓ Office hours
These are the times when a professor or teaching assistant is available to discuss material covered in class, related interests or offer guidance.

✓ Room and board
An allowance for the cost of housing and food while attending college or a career school.

How to minimize COLLEGE DEBT

By Melissa Erickson

Except for mortgages, student loans constitute the largest component of household debt for Americans, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Americans owe even more on their student loans than on their credit card debt. Spread out among about 44 million borrowers, national student loan debt is over $1.4 trillion, while credit card debt is $779 billion, according to the New York Fed Consumer Credit Panel and the Federal Reserve. The average Class of 2016 graduate carries a student loan debt of $37,173, up 6 percent from last year, according to student loan expert Mark Kantrowitz and based on federal student-loan data and other factors.

Despite the evidence that income potential rises and chances of joblessness decline with more schooling, many graduates entering the labor market are learning the hard way that a college degree can't guarantee financial security. College grads have an unemployment rate of 5.6 percent compared to 17.9 percent for people with only high school diplomas, according to the Economic Policy Institute.

Student loan debt has huge consequences on the economy, said Frank Kelley, associate dean for undergraduate business programs at the University of Houston's Bauer College of Business.

"At a very micro-level, students who graduate with a large debt may not be able to afford to buy a house for many years, in spite of having a job with a professional wage," Kelley said. To help minimize college debt, Kelley offers the following tips:

Plan ahead

Before you go to college, start an educational savings plan and find out how it may be tax-sheltered. Choose your college or university based on value for the price, and take courses in high school that provide college credit.

Look for the money

Apply for scholarships and grants that do not have to be paid back. Check for external scholarships as well as university scholarships and those through the college of your major. If you take out a loan, only take out what you really need.

Be informed

During your time in college, meet regularly with your academic adviser and career counselor to select a major that is a good fit for your skills and interests and leads to a viable career path or graduate school. Take the courses you need for that major.
