Bonifay man charged for child porn

Staff Report

BONIFAY – A Bonifay man was arrested Monday after law enforcement discovered 288 videos of child pornography at his residence.

According to a news release from Holmes County Sheriff's Office, a search warrant was served at the 1486 N. Highway 79 residence of Mark Jay Ashcroft, 55. During the execution of the search, a computer was observed running a file sharing program, actively downloading and transferring numerous files.

A secure preview of the active device revealed 288 videos depicting explicit imagery of numerous children between the ages of 7 and 15, the release stated. Numerous other hard drives and electronic devices were also seized at the home.

Ashcroft

Law enforcement officials believe the bust is one of the largest online distribution hubs of child pornography in the area, according to the release.

Ashcroft, who admitted to downloading and distributing the images, was arrested and charged with 288 counts of possession of child pornography and distribution of child pornography transmitted via an electronic device, the release stated. Forensic examination of other items seized is ongoing with investigators anticipating the discovery of more illicit images related to child exploitation.

The arrest came as a cooperative effort between Holmes County Sheriff's Office, Walton County Sheriff's Office, U.S. Department of Homeland Security, and the North Florida Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force (ICACT).

The six-week operation began after investigators with WCSO observed videos and images of child pornography being downloaded and distributed through a file-sharing network from a hub first thought to be located in Walton County. Further investigation revealed the activity to be taking place at Ashcroft's residence.

Ashcroft is currently being held at the Holmes County Jail on a $2.8 million bond for 288 counts related to possession and distribution of child pornography.

Holmes County Sheriff John Tate stated in the release that he would like to thank WCSO, ICACT, and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security for their assistance in the investigation.

PDL approves tentative budget

PONCE DE LEON – Ponce de Leon Town Council approved its tentative 2018-2019 budget when they met in regular session September 6.

The $1,050,810 tentative budget shows utility fees as the largest revenue source for the town totaling $247,000 and the largest expense being salaries totaling $158,800.

The town also received a clean audit result although the town is still in deteriorating condition. By definition, deteriorating condition means a circumstance as of the end of the fiscal year that significantly impairs a county, municipality or special district's ability to generate enough revenues to meet its expenditures. While the town has improved since last year's audit, should revenues go down again, the town could face more deteriorating financial conditions according to Accountant Adam Nelson.

"Ponce de Leon is still in deteriorating condition but is moving away from that," said Nelson. "With no new debt having been incurred this year, it is a move in the right direction. Should your revenues go down, you could find yourselves back in the same position."

Rachel Montgomery was unanimously appointed to be the new council member to fill the seat left vacant by Larry Coaker who left due to health

Escaped inmate caught in Dothan

By Diane M. Robinson
Times Advertiser | @HCTA_Diane

Olson

BONIFAY – An escaped inmate from the Holmes County Jail has been apprehended and is awaiting extradition to Okaloosa County according to Holmes County Sheriff John Tate.

Michael Jeffrey Scott Olson, 27, of Crestview, was apprehended in Esto on September 5, where according to HCSO he was hiding in a shed. Olson gave law enforcement the alias Michael

Aaron Stephens as well the false age of 24. After being transported to the Holmes County Jail where he was placed in a holding cell to await transport by the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office to face charges of sexual battery on a child under the age of 12.

During rounds late on September 6, officers found a hole in the ceiling of the holding cell which led upwards into the attic. Sheriff Tate was notified and a search of the attic and perimeter began in an attempt to locate the inmate.

According to HCSO, Olson was seen at the Tom Thumb by Interstate 10 asking customers for a ride north. Olson went to the Holiday Inn behind the store where he began to knock on doors to ask for clothes. He changed into black sweat pants and a white t-shirt. His inmate clothing was discovered in a nearby wooded area.

Eventually, an older couple driving a dark colored truck with a trailer hauling a green van, gave Olson a ride, HCSO used businesses with cameras along Highway 79 to track the fugitive. Found to be traveling through Esto and into Alabama, HCSO advised Alabama authorities of the situation and to be on the look out for Olson.

The search ultimately came to an end at a truck stop where a Dothan Police Officer found the suspect and took him into custody.

Olson will be extradited to Okaloosa County to face his previous charges and will then face charges in Holmes County for the escape.

Tate says Olson was able to break through the ceiling in the holding cell due to an engineering flaw.

"There is only plywood and sheetrock above the cell," said Tate. "There needs to be some sort of metal up there to prevent this from happening again. It is an engineering flaw in my opinion. I will be speaking to the Holmes County Board of County Commissioners and maintenance people to address the issue and how to fix it."

SETTING IT STRAIGHT

A story in the Sept. 5 edition of Holmes County Times-Advertiser read misleadingly regarding who won for Holmes County School Board District 1. The winner for the District 1 seat will be decided in November. Non-partisan races require at least 50 percent plus one vote for determination. Kaci Johnson received 34-percent of the vote, while two of her competitors for the vacated seat - J. Wayne Marsh and Milton "Tad" Wilson filed-in in a near tie at 756 and 760 votes, respectively.

issues. Montgomery is expected to be sworn in next month.

The oak tree, also known as "the love tree," located at the old gym was severely damaged in the storm in July and is to be torn down because of safety issues. Town Clerk Tammy Melerine advised the council that donations are being taken to replace the tree.

Melerine also advised the council that Town Christmas Pole Lights are now available for purchase for the upcoming holiday season. For more information on the tree or lights contact town hall at 850-836-4361.

Ponce de Leon Town Council will meet again in regular session at 6 p.m. on October 4.

Court rejects school proposal, keeps dog-racing ban on ballot

By Lloyd Dunklebrger
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE – Florida voters will get a chance in November to ban commercial greyhound racing but will not vote on a measure that could have led to the expansion of charter schools, the Florida Supreme Court decided in a series of rulings on Friday.

In all, the state's highest court decided the fate of four proposed constitutional amendments slated for the Nov. 6 general-election ballot.

The court: – Approved Amendment 13, which would ban commercial greyhound racing in the state after Dec. 31, 2020.

– Rejected Amendment 8, which would have imposed term limits on school board members, required civic literacy to be taught in schools and taken away the exclusive power of local school boards to oversee charter schools.

– Approved Amendment

6, known as "Marsy's Law," that would create a series of constitutional rights for crime victims and would also increase the retirement age for judges.

– Approved Amendment 10, which would require all local constitutional officers, including sheriffs, to be elected, and would remove the ability of charter counties to modify those offices.

All of the proposed amendments under scrutiny were approved by the Florida Constitution Revision Commission, a 37-member panel that meets every 20 years and has the unique power to place constitutional changes directly on the ballot.

The most significant ruling came in a 4-3 decision removing Amendment 8 from the ballot.

Without issuing an immediate opinion, the divided court upheld a ruling from Leon County Circuit Judge John Cooper that found the school-related ballot measure was misleading because it failed to inform voters of the "chief purpose and effect" of the proposal.

The proposal was challenged by the League of Women Voters of Florida, which argued that a provision in the amendment that would allow the state to operate and control public schools "not established by the school board" would have led to the expansion of charter schools.

Supporters of the measure said it would expand educational choices in Florida and was aimed at overturning a 2008 appellate court decision that found the Legislature's creation of a statewide commission to authorize charter schools was unconstitutional.

The court will issue a full opinion later. But in Friday's split decision, justices Barbara Pariente, R. Fred Lewis, Peggy Quince and Jorge Labarga voted to affirm Cooper's ruling. Chief Justice Charles Canady and justices Ricky Polston and Alan Lawson voted to overturn the lower court's decision.

Patricia Brigham, president of the League of Women Voters, praised Friday's court ruling, saying it removed "a proposal that was blatantly and intentionally misleading."

"The backers of this proposal on the CRC went to great lengths to hide the ball because they realized that Floridians would never knowingly forfeit their right to local control over their local public schools," she said.

But Erika Donalds, a CRC member and Collier County School Board member who helped craft the measure, said students and parents "lost today."

"Florida voters deserved to decide on Amendment 8, not activist judges," she tweeted. "Defenders of the education monopoly prevailed this time, but we will continue to fight for education."

In a separate 6-1 decision, the Supreme Court upheld the placement of a greyhound-racing ban on the ballot, overturning a ruling by Leon County Circuit Judge Karen Gievers, who found Amendment 13's ballot title and summary – which is what voters see – was misleading.

The justices rejected the argument that the proposed amendment was deceptive since it would not actually ban all dog racing because it would allow non-commercial racing, and off-track wagering on dog races in other states, to continue.

Decline of bees a major threat

Researchers and government officials have pondered the unfortunate decline in “pollinators,” the term that applies to honeybees and other types of bees as well as birds, butterflies, lizards and other creatures we tend to not think about but are vitally important to our survival.

In May 2016, the National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) noted in a report that pollinators are a $24 billion cog in the U.S. economy, with some $15 billion attributable just to honey bees. Roughly one of every three mouthfuls we take results in some way from honey bee production, the report said.

Yet the population of these important links in the food chain is declining. The NCSL reported the number of bee colonies has plunged from 6 million colonies in 1947 to 2.5 million now.

The decrease, according to the NCSL, is blamed on a number of factors — with insufficient diets, mites, habitat loss, disease and pesticides topping the list. A phenomenon known as colony collapse disorder — wherein worker bees suddenly left the hive — also was pegged as a culprit.

But the U.S. Department of Agriculture said it has waned within the last five years. Skeptics also point out, citing USDA data, that managed honey bee colony populations have remained stable for the past two decades.

Still, as the NCSL notes, “The health of bees and other pollinators is an important and growing concern among state legislatures. At least 18 states have enacted legislation on this topic in recent years. Legislation generally falls into one of five categories: research, pesticides, habitat protection, awareness and beekeeping.”

Florida is not among them, but perhaps it should be.

Agriculture, of course, is a critical component of our economy, and bees are important to sustain it. But beekeeping also is rapidly becoming a pastime. In July 2017, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel reported there were 4,400 state-registered “backyard” beekeepers, which was five times the number of a decade earlier, and that the number of managed colonies had rocketed from 158,000 to 520,000.

More bees are good for all, and we need to make sure they remain healthy.

That is what the actor Chuck Norris, himself a beekeeper, is trying to do. In recent pieces about the fate of bees, Norris points out that hobbyists like himself are helping augment an increasingly threatened wild bee population. He noted the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is reviewing the use of certain insecticides to determine their effect on bee population decline, and that Monsanto and Walmart seek to corner the robotic bee market in anticipation of the trend continuing.

We don’t need to overreact. But all of us, including our policymakers, should take more of an interest in bee health. Albeit important to the livelihood of folks who manage bees and sell honey from their hives, bees make life better for all of us. Let’s keep it that way.

Ninety-six year old still cuts grass

Hazel Tison

Not many of us live to be ninety-six years old, but if we do, it is doubtful that we’ll spend our birthday cutting grass. That is exactly what “Grandpa” Paramore did on September 6, 2018 on his 96 birthday. He and his son, Scotty Paramore have a lawn care business and since the older of this father/son enterprise has developed some arthritis in his shoulders, he is riding the lawn mower and cutting the grass and leaving the pruning and hedge trimming to his son. Well, he does keep the lawn mowers tuned up as his mechanical skills surpass those of Scotty’s.

Born in Ozark, Alabama on September 6, 1922 he grew up on a farm there and except for a stint in the U.S. Army following WWII he lived there until 1950. He remained in the Army Reserves following discharge and worried that he would be called back into service during the Korean Conflict.

Because of the critical nature of farming during the war, he received a deferment until 1946 when he was drafted. He was stationed at Ft. Knox, Ky until his shipment overseas to Osaka, Japan to help demilitarize that country following their defeat by the allied forces. He said he always liked farm work and had a strong desire to work. His dad cut a plow down to his size when he was twelve so that he could help with the farm work. Growing up in a large farm family, there was plenty of work to be done. His mother died after giving birth to eight children. Later his father remarried and from that union, six additional children were born. The youngest of them is now 85. He has one sister who is 98. She lives alone and is up and about, but does live next door to one of her daughters.

In 1950, Paramore moved to Sylvester, Ga where he became a logger of timber for lumber and pulpwood and later owned his own sawmill. Son Scotty was involved with him in that endeavor. They moved to Bonifay after the death of Scotty’s mother in 2002. He has another son who lives in Camilla, Ga.

When I asked him to what he attributed his long healthy life, he said it was partially genetics. His paternal grandmother lived to be 103 and one of her sons lived to be 102. On his mother’s side, however, there was a genetic kidney disease. His mother died with it at 36 and a sister at 32.

He said he smoked for a number of years when he was younger, but gave it up in 1960. He started smoking when his tobacco came in a cloth bag with a drawstring and some tissue papers cut to size. You rolled your own cigarettes. Now he chews tobacco. In fact, his son showed me his supply, several cases which they purchased from Tates’ in Hartford, Alabama.

Mr Paramore said his grandmother told him one time she wished he’d quit chewing. He told her he couldn’t quit, otherwise he’d be perfect.

When asked about any ailments that trouble him, Mr. Paramore replied that he has few complaints. He has a bad shoulder which pains him especially at night so he has trouble sleeping. He takes pain medication. He also has a fib and takes medication for that. He doesn’t attend church anywhere, but definitely believes in God. He looks back with pleasure on a time when he drove his pick-up truck around and gathered a lot of his black neighbors and carried them to the Dewy Williams sing near Ozark. He enjoyed their singing.

He is proud, also, of his Indian (Native American) heritage. His Great Grandma born in 1828 was Indian. She died in 1904. His Great-Grandpa (1822 – 1885) Was also Indian. Perhaps this gave him a strong constitution, if not his longevity. Son Scotty was born on New Year’s Day in 1956. The two of them live a quiet life next door to Mrs. Velma Whitaker on highway 173. I didn’t see any evidence of a Birthday Cake nor any kind of celebration. My friend Sarah Smith, Mrs. Velma’s caregiver, told me that I should write about Mr. Paramore. Thanks for the tip, Sarah. I didn’t know, however, that it was his birthday.

Are we headed for a constitutional crisis

By Mark L. Hopkins

Every week that passes it seems that we read yet another major issue with our president and the operation of our government. This past week, we had the publication of Bob Woodward’s book, “Fear,” that called activities in the White House chaotic and the president, “unbalanced.” Many top officials were quoted, lending credence to Woodward’s findings.

Later in the week there was an op-ed published in the New York Times that was supposedly written by a White House insider who said there were several close to the president who were attempting to deal with the erratic actions of the president in order to protect the country.

The talking heads on the TV news shows say that (choose one) 1) such behavior by White House staff personnel is treasonous; 2) The groundwork is being laid for impeachment by Congress; 3) We are headed for a major “Constitutional crisis.” The crisis they are talking about is a direct confrontation between the Executive branch of the government with the Legislative and Judicial branches.

So, are we headed for a Constitutional crisis? The answer is a resounding “YES.” However, it won’t be as debilitating as the talking heads think. This isn’t a “first” for us. We have had many Constitutional crises over the years and have weathered every one. Our Constitution was born in crisis. It was written in secret and in violation of the existing document, the Articles of Confederation, at a time when we didn’t even have a president.

Many of our founding fathers were skeptical that this new democracy could even exist for more than a few years. After all, this was a government without precedent in the history of the world. It was just a theory advanced by the ancient Greeks. Benjamin Franklin wasn’t sure it could work at all. Alexander Hamilton wondered whether Washington should be appointed King. Thomas Jefferson, our first Secretary of State and third president, wasn’t even sure of the constitutionality of his own Louisiana Purchase. The wheels of government had just started to turn when the details of running a government reared their ugly heads. Somehow the devil is always in the details.

The current crisis has its foundation in the limitation of the power of the presidency. From time to time in our history, a president will be elected who envisions himself as having more power than the office is allowed by the Constitution. When that occurs trouble quickly follows.

The framers of the Constitution did not envision an all-powerful presidency. When they were writing our Constitution, they looked closely at the monarchies of Europe and decided they did not want a king like George of England or Louis XVI of France.

Settling in America

These immigrants became citizens during a naturalization ceremony at the National Archives in Washington, D.C., in 2015.

These words are on a plaque inside the base of the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor. They were written by Emma Lazarus in 1883. Her family came to the United States from Portugal.

Lazarus' poem was meant as a welcome for people coming to America — people who wanted to be free, who had to leave their native lands, and who had traveled a long way.

America's immigrants

Immigrants are people who come to a new place to live permanently. Most experts agree that the earliest immigrants to North America probably came across a land bridge between northeast Asia and Alaska about 13,000 years ago. These people are believed to be the ancestors of Native Americans.

Since then, at different times, large groups of people have come to North America from Europe, Asia, Africa, and Central and South America.

In fact, even if you and your parents were born in the United States, your family may be able to trace its roots to another country.

Why immigrate?

Immigrants have come to the United States for many reasons. Some were looking for land to farm or better jobs. Others wanted to freely practice their religion, or they were unhappy with the government in their homeland.

Today, immigrants may be trying to escape harsh governments or military organizations in their home countries. In some parts of the world, people are persecuted, or treated in a harmful way, because of their religion or race.

Immigration's effects

Immigration adds a lot to the culture of a nation. People from other countries bring new ideas, customs, foods and languages to our communities.

But immigration also puts pressure on a country. Sometimes it's difficult for people of different backgrounds to get along. Added people can strain a nation's resources, such as energy, water and food supplies, housing, jobs, health care and education.

A former member of the U.S. Air Force cooks Thai food at Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho.

Becoming a citizen

If a lawful permanent resident wants to become a citizen, he or she must apply for naturalization. The U.S. government will check the immigrant's history and make sure he or she is eligible.

Naturalized citizens have the same rights and responsibilities as native citizens, except they cannot be president of the United States.

Solving a problem

Some immigrants arrive in the U.S. illegally. In other words, they come into the country without permission, called a visa, from the government.

The problem of illegal immigration is a big one that presidents and Congress have not been able to solve. Recently, you may have heard about families being detained, or held, on our border with Mexico after trying to enter the U.S. illegally. This is just one part of the problem.

Lawmakers have many different ideas about how to solve our immigration issues,

from building a wall on the border between the U.S. and Mexico to refusing to allow any immigrants at all.

It will take a lot of cooperation and creative new ideas to solve this challenge for our country.

Eco Note

At the bottom of the ocean are small underwater volcanoes spewing scalding hot water, gases and chemicals like methane and ammonia. They're called hydrothermal vents. It's a dark place to live, but some animals love it there. Giant tube worms over 6 feet long, clams and shrimp call these vents home. The tube worms have bacteria inside them that make food out of the methane and ammonia from the vents.

Blocked punt dooms Bucks

Bozeman loses 14-13 in a hard fought battle against Holmes County

The News Herald

BONIFAY — Andrew Guynn produced Holmes County's second blocked punt of the game with 3 minutes left in the game and the Blue Devils rallied to edge Bozeman 14-13 on Friday in Class 1A football.

Bozeman was attempting to open its season 2-0 for the first time 2012, and led 13-7 after rallying from a halftime deficit.

But the Bucks were hurt by special teams throughout the game and Guynn's block led to Tyler Lee's touchdown on a quarterback sneak with less than 2 minutes remaining. Zaveion Matthews kicked the deciding extra point and the Blue Devils held on to win.

The outcome evened both teams records at 1-1. Holmes County had lost 42-0 to Baker in its opener.

"We came out this week and just tried to make the focus on us and correcting some of the mistakes we made," Holmes County coach Kevin Womble said.

"A lot of it was how we handle adversity. We really didn't respond too well (at Baker). We had trouble tackling (Hunter Kruger) all night, but our defense was able to make a stand and our offense did enough to win it."

Bozeman lost its first game under head coach Jason Griffin, and it was a tough defeat.

"We had an awesome defensive effort but offensively couldn't get much done," Griffin said. "Our defense was just outstanding."

Michael Duncan's short run and Matthews' extra point gave Holmes County a 7-0 halftime lead. Bozeman tied it in the third quarter when Jordan Rosalis made a one-handed interception and returned 50 yards. Tommy Benjamin's extra point made it 7-7.

The Bucks took their only lead when Kruger ran 25 yards to set up his 2-yard scoring run early in the fourth quarter. Griffin said a bobbled snap on the extra point prevented Benjamin from extending the lead. It proved crucial.

"Our special teams did us in," Griffin said.

Holmes County travels to Freeport next week. Bozeman hosts Chipley.

Chipola Baseball opens fall season

Chipola hits the road for a number of games in September and October, before returning home to host Coastal Alabama South, at 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Thursday, October 25.

The Indians play 20 games during the Fall, pre-conference season including

Blue Devils stick it to Bulldogs

By Tina Harbuck

tharbuck@thedestinlog.com

FREEPORT — After an hour and five minute weather delay, the Freeport Bulldogs and Holmes County Blue Devils did battle with the Blue Devils taking the win 26-18.

The Blue Devils struck first on a safety when the Bulldogs had a high snap on a punt attempt and Ashton Saults was taken down in the end zone. The second Blue Devil score came midway of the first period. The Bulldogs were on the move with picking up three first downs before fumbling it away. Holmes County took over deep in Freeport territory and scored in three plays with Kalen Evans connecting with EJ Reddick for a 26-yard strike and an 8-0 lead.

Early in the third quarter, Freeport forced a fumble with David Ramshur making the recovery for the Bulldogs. Five plays later Freeport was in the end zone on a 16-yard run by Justin Clark. The 2-point try was no good.

After stopping Holmes County on a four-and-out, Freeport put together a four-play series with Clark finishing it off with a 1-yard run up the middle for the TD and a Freeport 12-8 lead. The lead didn't last long as Holmes' Zaveion Mathews returned the kickoff 75-yards for the touchdown and a 14-12 advantage.

Holmes put another touchdown on the board early in the fourth with Bubba Duncan capping off a 50-yard drive on a 1-yard plunge up the middle.

Holmes struck again with Josiah Farrow scoring on a 1-yard run for a 26-12 game. Freeport came back with Brandon Siples breaking loose for a 71 yard run. Clark finished it up with a 1-yard drive up the middle for the TD and a 26-18 game.

Freeport made one last drive in the final minutes and got it down to the 1-yard line before Holmes took the ball away with no time left on the clock.

Colorado outside linebacker Davion Taylor (5) waits for a play in the first half of a game against Colorado State on Aug. 31 in Denver. [ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE PHOTOS]

Finding the way

Colorado linebacker finds balance between football and faith

By Pat Graham
The Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Davion Taylor might have been great in high school, if he had played in games, rather than just practiced with his team.

Hard to really know. The hints of the hybrid linebacker's talent, however, may just be presenting themselves at Colorado this season.

As a Seventh-day Adventist, Taylor observed the Sabbath from sundown on Fridays to sundown on Saturdays during his high school days by resting and worshipping. Meaning, he didn't play in Friday night games. So he didn't star at South Pike High in Mississippi and instead helped fill water bottles before games, then headed home for prayer.

He didn't give up on his dream, though.

Taylor adjusted his religious observances once he turned 18, attended Coahoma Community College, caught the eye of Colorado, and now everyone's seeing what South Pike High's best practice player looks like in the big time.

"I sometimes doubt myself since I didn't play high school ball. But I know I'm good enough," said the 6-foot-2, 220-pound Taylor, who had a fumble recovery in a win at Nebraska on Saturday as the Buffaloes moved to 2-0. "I know I made it here for a reason."

Taylor hails from Magnolia, Mississippi. He's the son of Stephanie Taylor, who was drawn to the Seventh-day Adventist Church in her early 20s and raised Davion and his older brother Ladarris on the teachings of the religion. Friday nights were for tranquility of mind in keeping the Sabbath. The family prayed, studied the bible and watched Christian programming.

And Saturdays were reserved for church.

"This was a way to keep us spiritually fed," his mother said.

As a kid, Taylor frequently attended the youth practices of his friends — just to watch and study the game.

He eventually went out for the middle school football team. His coach, John Culpepper, can still recall the first time he spotted Taylor, who was all of 120 pounds at the time.

"A little bitty fella," said Culpepper, who would later be his varsity coach his senior year at South Pike. "You sometimes overlooked them when they're that small. But not him. You could see he had all the talent in the world."

At South Pike High, he prepared like he was a starter and went through all the drills, even if he wasn't going to see the field. He was like another coach out there.

For Friday night home games, the routine was pretty much the same: Prepare the Gatorade, help line the field and set up the equipment. He would have the pregame meal with the team, wish them luck and head home before sundown.

His friends texted updates. When he had a chance, he'd watch the game film.

"I know," he said, "that I could've helped get us a win or make plays."

In his senior season, Taylor suited up in one game, since it was an early kickoff and well before sunset. From his safety position, he remembers having an interception and 10 tackles.

Mostly, though, it was just the grind of drills.

"As I was practicing, I just kept thinking, 'This will just make my story even better,'" said Taylor, a state champion sprinter and triple jumper in high school who missed the state meet his junior year because it was held on a Saturday. "I was like, 'I'm going to try out somewhere.'"

When he turned 18, his mom left his path up to him — his decisions were his to make, she said. He wanted to play football on the next level even if that meant playing on a Friday or Saturday.

"You have to give them rope," his mom said. "I always wanted to see him strive to be the best."

Taylor wants this to be clear: He wasn't choosing football over his faith. His religion remains of utmost importance to him. He was trying to make both fit harmoniously into his life.

"If I'm doing this good and making it this far, I felt like God is on my side when it comes to this," Taylor said. "He wouldn't bring me this far just to let me fail and not be on my side."

The dilemma: Getting recruiters to take notice with basically no game film. Culpepper put in a good word for him at Coahoma, a school that was featured in an episode of the football documentary "Last Chance U" for a losing streak.

"I told coaches, 'He's an athlete. Teach him to play, he'll be great,'" Culpepper said.

As a walk-on at Coahoma, Taylor was nearly cut. He said he earned one of the last spots.

His freshman season he started the final three games as he moved to linebacker. His sprinter's speed and raw ability attracted the attention of the Buffaloes, who told him they were interested.

Taylor turned in a monster sophomore season with 87 tackles. He was rated the top junior college outside linebacker in the country.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

Who might make a surprising run to the finale at Homestead?

GODSPEAK: Give me Kyle Larson. He's been over-driving his race cars all season. Maybe he will overachieve, too.

KEN'S CALL: I think Erik Jones survives the first two rounds and, with a little luck, is among the Final Four at Homestead.

Which current non-playoff track would you like to see among the final 10 races?

GODSPEAK: Atlanta Motor Speedway and its old track surface might be a good fit. It gives most drivers fits.

KEN'S CALL: Daytona's 400-miler, of course, because it would relieve us of that July weather.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

DENNY HAMLIN VS. JEFFREY EARNHARDT:

Earnhardt got into Landon Cassill on Lap 154 (of 160), bringing out the final yellow flag, which ultimately led to Hamlin losing the Brickyard 400.

GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE:

Hamlin didn't call Earnhardt out by name but described him as one of those "meaningless guys" who spoiled his day. On the final restart, Hamlin was passed for the win by Brad Keselowski.

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR LAS VEGAS

WINNER:

Kevin Harvick

REST OF TOP 5:

Kyle Busch, Martin Truex Jr., Chase Elliott, Brad Keselowski

FIRST ONE OUT:

William Byron

DARK HORSE:

DON'T BE SURPRISED IF:

Harvick becomes the first driver to sweep both Las Vegas races in one season.

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Sweet 16

The NASCAR Cup Series regular season ended a day late because of rain at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, but produced a 16-driver playoff field. The drivers going through are: Kyle Busch, Kevin Harvick, Martin Truex Jr., Brad Keselowski, Clint Bowyer, Joey Logano, Kurt Busch, Chase Elliott, Ryan Blaney, Erik Jones, Austin Dillon, Kyle Larson, Denny Hamlin, Aric Almirola, Jimmie Johnson and Alex Bowman.

2. Rising, falling

After winning back-to-back NASCAR "crown jewel" events with the Southern 500 and Brickyard 400, Keselowski has suddenly emerged as a championship contender. Crew chief Paul Wolfe used pit strategy to help secure the wins. "He (Wolfe) gave me the ball, and I had to make a play," Keselowski said. Truex finished last at Indy. "Hopefully we'll get this bad luck out of the way before the playoffs start next week," he said.

3. Stewart's four

Of all the teams in the NASCAR

Brad Keselowski will surge into the NASCAR playoffs after capping the regular season with two huge victories. [AP/AJ MAST]

Cup Series, Stewart-Haas Racing has the edge as far as pure numbers. SHR saw all four of its drivers make the playoffs, led by Kevin Harvick, who has a series-high eight wins. As a team, SHR scooped up 11 regular-season victories. Almirola advanced into the playoffs on points. Joe Gibbs Racing and Hendrick Motorsports each pushed three drivers into the postseason.

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. Kyle's championship

Kyle Busch captured the NASCAR Cup Series regular-season title, 15 bonus points, and got a trophy. He was not happy finishing eighth at Indy. "Ugly day," Busch said before the award presentation. "That's not what we were hoping for; grand scheme, cool to get bonus points."

2. Late cautions

Two cautions over the last 16 laps helped Brad Keselowski overtake Denny Hamlin for the win. Hamlin was not happy. He said the yellow flags were shown for "meaningless guys who wrecked." Hamlin got into the playoffs on points.

3. Tough brakes

It's rare to see multiple brake-system failures, but Indy

Kyle Busch, who drives the No. 18 Toyota, had a rough day at Indianapolis but earned NASCAR's regular-season title. [AP/AJ MAST] produced two that caused the yellow flag to come out of the holster. Martin Truex Jr. and Bubba Wallace each had brakes come apart. Truex maintained control of his car, but Wallace crashed hard into the outside wall.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Is Kasey Kahne done, and how big of an issue is it?

Kahne already announced this would be his last full-time Cup season, but then he skipped the Indy weekend after suffering dehydration during the previous week's race at Darlington. "I don't want to create any more damage to myself, to my body, until I understand it better," he said last week. He's lucky in a sense, because he has built the type of bankroll that allows him to walk away without financial worries.

Will dehydration join concussions as a modern issue?

Anything is possible, but this seems like a case-by-case deal. Everyone's body reacts differently to stressful conditions. But like the modern focus on concussions, it does make you wonder just how many guys, over the years, toughed it out when their bodies seriously needed a break. Back when "men were men," sure, but how many physical prices were paid in later life? We'll never know.

Not just cows, plows and sows anymore

4-H teaches life skills through interactive learning

Drobinson@chipleypaper.com

HOLMES COUNTY – 4-H was been known for teaching cows, plows and sows. However, with a growing focus on youth development, UF/IFAS Extension Office 4-H Youth Development Program is teaching life skills through experiential learning.

Holmes County 4-H Agent Niki Crawson says 4-H isn't what it used to be and that is what makes them unique.

"This isn't about barns and animals anymore," said Crawson. "We're unique because we learn by doing. With us, there's no mistakes. You don't know if you don't try and if you don't get it just right then, we've just learned something else."

There are many programs for kids to choose from such as: Dead Center Archery Club, Sewing Club and United Clovers Club and activities like the 4-H Camp Timpoochee, 4-H Food, Fun and Reading, 4-H/Tropicana Public Speaking Contest and more.

There is also Air Rifle Club, Shotgun Club, SeaPerch Underwater Robotics, and Cooking Masters.

Instructors and volunteers are always needed Crawson said.

"We always need volunteers and instructors," she said. "Those interested in certain areas will need specialized training that we will provide to be an instructor, but anyone can be a volunteer."

Those who were members last year will need to reapply for this year. There is a $20 membership fee, but scholarships are available to help cover the cost for those in need.

Applications can be picked up at the UF/IFAS Extension office at 1169 East Highway 90 in Bonifay or online at <https://florida.4online.com>.

Eye of the beholder

After Moonves, CBS takeover possible in new media landscape

By Mae Anderson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The resignation of longtime CBS chief Les Moonves won't likely lead to drastic changes in network programs, but it could make the company ripe for a takeover as traditional media companies compete with upstarts such as Netflix and Amazon.

Moonves was ousted Sunday, just hours after the New Yorker detailed more sexual misconduct allegations against him. A dozen women have alleged mistreatment, including forced oral sex, groping and retaliation if they resisted him. CBS is on the hook for $120 million in severance if its investigation, being conducted by two outside law firms, finds no evidence of wrongdoing. Moonves has denied wrongdoing.

CBS also shook up its board and settled a larger fight with its parent company, National Amusements Inc. As part of the settlement, National Amusements agreed not to push for a merger between CBS and sibling company Viacom for at least two years. As CEO, Moonves had opposed such a merger

On Sunday, CBS said longtime CEO Les Moonves has resigned, just hours after more sexual harassment allegations involving the network's longtime leader surfaced. [CHRIS PIZZELLO/INVISION/AP] on grounds CBS was doing well, while Viacom was not.

The network was struggling when Moonves took over as entertainment chief in 1995. He quickly turned things around and churned out shows appealing to the older, more tradition-bound CBS audience — broad-appeal sitcoms such as “Two and a Half Men” and “The Big Bang Theory” and procedural dramas such as “CSI: Crime Scene Investigation” and “NCIS.” “Survivor” was an early reality show hit, and continues to this day. Moonves became CEO of CBS Television in 1998 and CEO of the newly created CBS Corp. in 2006 after it split from Viacom.

Moonves' temporary replacement, Chief Operating Officer Joseph Ianniello, has steered top projects such as stand-alone streaming services for CBS and the Showtime cable channel. But he doesn't have a creative or sales background, which might make him an awkward long-term leader for the company.

For now, Ianniello is unlikely to make drastic changes in programming, particularly since CBS' formula has been working. Programming changes could be more substantial if CBS chooses someone outside the company as a permanent replacement.

B. Riley FBR analyst Barton Crockett said CBS could remain successful without Moonves. He noted the continued success of other networks that have lost top executives to sexual misconduct claims, including Roger Ailes and Bill O'Reilly at Fox News and Matt Lauer at NBC News.

“Strong performance can continue even when a vaunted, tainted star departs,” Crockett said. “These groups have deep talent pools.”

A broader question is whether CBS will remain standalone company at all.

To better compete with tech companies such as Netflix, companies that have traditionally distributed TV shows and movies have been buying the producers of such programs. The producers, themselves, have been consolidating as well. AT&T bought Time Warner for $85 billion in June, while Disney is in the process of acquiring the entertainment assets of Fox for $71.3 billion.

That makes CBS a hot commodity. With the shake-up of its board, there are 11 independent directors and two affiliated with National Amusements, down from three. One of the new directors, Candace Beinecke, is a lawyer with expertise in mergers and acquisitions. National Amusements agreed to give “good faith consideration” to any offer the new board deems good for shareholders.

News Herald publisher's role expands west

Tim Thompson given regional duties over GateHouse's 2 daily and 8 weekly Panhandle properties

News Herald staff report

PANAMA CITY — News Herald Publisher Tim Thompson is taking on additional duties as publisher of the Northwest Florida Daily News and now will oversee the Panhandle's two dailies and eight weeklies in a move expected to bring even more collaboration between the properties.

Thompson is filling the void created with the retirement of Diane Winnemuller as publisher of the NWFND in Fort Walton Beach.

“Tim is a passionate leader committed to strong and direct community engagement and excellence across all our platforms and services,” said Patrick Dorsey, regional vice president of GateHouse Media's Coastal Publishing Group. “He knows the Panhandle very well and will be a strong leader for all our Northwest Florida properties. Tim is a long-time publisher and has excelled everywhere he has been. I know his lively and engaging personality will be well received in Fort Walton Beach as it has been in Panama City.”

Thompson said he is excited at the new opportunity but made it clear his heart and calendar have room for both properties and he isn't leaving Panama City.

“Our role in the communities we serve has never been more important and I have tremendous respect for the hard work our staffs are doing,” Thompson said. “Northwest Florida has obviously become a very important footprint for our company — with eight weeklies and two dailies stretching from Apalachicola to Santa Rosa — and GateHouse Media takes great pride in our connection to all the communities we serve.”

Dorsey called Winnemuller “one of the most creative advertising minds” and noted her dedication to the Emerald Coast since her arrival.

“She has become deeply involved in the Fort Walton Beach area and has ensured the Daily News remains an integral part of the community,” Dorsey said, paving the way for Thompson's new role.

Thompson joined The News Herald in 2014 as publisher and also oversees the region's four “eastern weeklies” in Chipley, Bonifay, Port St. Joe and Apalachicola. In addition to taking over at the NWFND he also will oversee weeklies in Destin, Walton County, Crestview and Santa Rosa.

“I wish Diane the very best in her well-deserved retirement,” Thompson said. “We moved to Fort Walton Beach and Panama City at about the same time, and early on I realized just how important this community was — and is, to Diane.”

“I'm excited about taking on these additional responsibilities. We are fortunate to have so many outstanding leaders at our weekly and daily news organizations in the Panhandle. I consider it a privilege to offer my support on all the efforts at hand.”

The transition, however, does not mean Thompson will be difficult to find in Panama City.

“I'm not going anywhere,” he said. “I love living in Panama City and hold dear so many special relationships here, both business and personal.”

Thompson's fondness for the surf, sand, food and lifestyle of the area extends beyond him, he said, noting this slice of the coast is simply unique.

“I've moved to the top of the list for destinations when the voting takes place on where this year's family reunion will be held,” he said.

The pastor has a special house

By Adrienne Greene

Q: Dear Pastor, I've heard people say, "parsonage" or "rectory" when discussing a pastor's place of residence. Which is it?

A: Thankfully, centuries ago, church people decided to build houses for their spiritual leaders to live in while they ministered to their congregations. In the Christian church we call this designated building by several different names: parsonage, manse, vicarage and rectory to name a few.

The pastors of the Methodist, Baptist and Nazarene churches all live in parsonages while Presbyterians are housed in a manse. In England, the spiritual leader resides in a vicarage. And almost always, the Catholic or Episcopal priest's home is referred to as the rectory. They all mean the same thing: the dwelling place of the working minister. The idea of housing the minister began when Jesus traveled around the Jordan River regions in need of a temporary place to dwell. Many hospitable souls opened their doors to honor and provide shelter for him as he journeyed.

After Christ's crucifixion, as Christianity spread via the 12 disciples, the early church exploded into every surrounding nation, eventually jumping borders then continents and bringing the "good news" of the Savior Jesus all over the world. But the masses and their leaders didn't embrace the message with joy at first, so the early Church spent its infancy quietly preaching, teaching and praising God underground in the catacombs and secret meeting places beneath the streets of the cities. These early ministers relied on the kindness of new converts to supply a dwelling place for them — often risking intense persecution and death.

Yet the Christian church persevered and the faithful kept the message moving forward. Some of these ancient saints set down their packs in foreign lands and bravely built houses of worship. In those days, a room was then set aside for the attending man of God. (Women were not invited into pulpits until around 1850.) Many times those primitive churches blossomed into abbeys and convents containing numerous buildings to house the devoted clergy who made it their life's work to serve people and the Lord. The idea behind the pastor's house rooted into the blueprints of church construction and soon it became a standard.

First Timothy 5:17 informs us, "The elders who rule well are to be considered worthy of double honor, especially those who work hard at preaching and teaching." First Thessalonians 5:12 explains, "But we request of you, brethren, that you appreciate those who diligently labor among you, and have charge over you in the Lord and give you instruction." I quote those scriptures not to validate myself or my housing needs, but to remind us all that the Bible does urge us to honor the working ministers. Providing shelter for them, like helping Jesus with housing along his journey, is indeed biblical. It is also helpful: There are many occasions of crisis or need when the commute to the sanctuary must be short.

Before my turn came in the pulpit, while God was refining me for the office I now hold, I wasn't a good church member. Often frustrated with my pastoral care, overly critical of biblical instruction and downright hard on the people who tried to minister to me, I scoffed that pastors were imperfect and often unfit. I've since deeply regretted my attitude, now understanding the price paid by the hard-working pastor. Thank God my immaturity and ignorance of the profession didn't translate to the level of God's grace for me. And he even gave me a congregation who provides me with a beautiful home to live in.
