Miami HEAT Wins Second Straight Championship, Defeat San Antonio Spurs in Seven Games

By: Michael Walsh

A champion has been crowned. The Miami Heat defeated the San Antonio Spurs 95-88 Thursday night in Miami to win their second consecutive NBA title. The Spurs had a defensive game plan to slow the Heat, and they stuck with it throughout Game 7.

Unfortunately, LeBron James had an answer for that game plan, hitting nine shots outside the paint. The Spurs were daring James and his teammates to beat them with jumpers, so that is exactly what James did.

Boca Raton's $9.5m Green Downtown Library Opens

"Building this library was like a love story," Mayor Susan Whelchel said after the 30-minute program. "It was the love and affection of the people that brought together this 10-year project."

Whelchel said she was extremely happy with the library and was proud to be a part of such an important project for the community.

At 42,000 square feet, the library, at 400 NW Boca Raton Blvd., is twice as large as the old building, which is two blocks directly to the south.

The $9.5 million library is a perfect destination for children and adults. The youth section is filled with children's books and colorful rooms for the different story-book themes such as adventure and cartoon.

There is even an information center, which is dubbed the "ask center". It will be manned during operating hours.

As one walks into the library, the first thing that catches the eye will be an assortment of pictures on both walls. Further inside, you will find posters and paintings about the books nearby.

In the center, there is a bank of about 70 public access computers with high-speed Wi-Fi services. There are also 10 private study and tutoring rooms.

The library is not only visually appealing, it is also ecologically friendly.

There is the unique drought tolerant landscaping, the roof deflects the light thus keeping the library cooler and conserving energy and almost all the carpet inside is made of recycled carpets.

It also has low-flow plumbing, high-efficiency lighting, and even special parking spots for carpooling and hybrid cars. The library saves about 27% of the energy it would use without all the great ecologically friendly things, officials said.

Plans for a new library have been in the works since 2003, when Boca Raton residents approved a $19.8 million dollar bond to go towards two new libraries.

EverBank Donates $50,000 to Habitat for Humanity of South Palm Beach County

By Jason Schwartz

EverBank Financial Corp. presented Habitat for Humanity of South Palm Beach County a check for $50,000 to support the Ocean Breeze West Community in Boynton Beach recently.

The contribution, presented by Chuck Ivy, EverBank Vice President for Community Development, was EverBank's first to Habitat for Humanity SPBC. However, the Florida-based financial institution is a longtime supporter of Habitat for Humanity in Jacksonville. Since 1996, EverBank has contributed over $2 million and built 57 homes in Jacksonville—the highest number of homes sponsored by a single company in the region. Additionally, EverBank has donated over $7 million to nearly 100 charitable groups since 2006. EverBank's community giving program giving is primarily focused on three critical areas of need, including children's services, affordable housing and education.

Habitat SPBC has been serving Boca Raton, Boynton Beach and Delray Beach since 1991, and has to date completed 103 homes. The Ocean Breeze West project, a 21 home community located in the Heart of Boynton Beach, marks the first multi-house development the organization has constructed.

All Habitat homeowners contribute a minimum of 400 hours of "sweat equity" working on the construction of their home and the homes of others and participate in educational programs designed to strengthen the entire family and help to ensure their success as new homeowners.

The new homeowners will make monthly payments on a low-cost, no-interest mortgage, which in turn will go toward building more Habitat homes for families in need in South Palm Beach County.

Rick Scott Signs SB 1036 into Law

Governor Rick Scott today signed SB 1036, extending the age foster youth can stay in foster care from 18 to 21.

Governor Scott said, "As we continue to put Florida's families first, we have a responsibility to invest in programs and pass legislation to help our vulnerable populations, like our children in foster care. This new law will ensure kids entrusted in our care have the best start possible into adulthood and provide them the opportunity to obtain the life skills necessary so they may live the American Dream."

The bill signed today gives young adults the option to stay in foster care until age 21 and requires a transition plan be made for those who are leaving foster care. In addition, this new law requires the Department of Children and Families to provide 17 year old foster youth with the necessary information, records, and documentation required for self-sufficient independent living.

Governor Scott was joined by bill sponsors Senator Nancy Detert and Representative Keith Perry, Secretary of the Department of Children and Families, David Wilkins, Florida's advocate for Foster and adoption, Tanya Wilkins, as well as foster youth from across the state.

Senator Nancy Detert said, "I was proud to be here today to join Governor Scott in signing this bill that is a result of hard work and collaboration between the House, the Senate and the Department of Children and Families. This bill demonstrates what government should be doing for its citizens and I am proud that Florida is one of the first states to offer this type of support for the foster care community. I will forever be grateful to Senate President Don Gaetz for naming this bill the "Nancy C. Detert Common Sense and Compassion Independent Living Act."

Representative Keith Perry said, "The success of our foster youth is a direct reflection of the resources and care we provide them. I applaud Governor Scott and the Legislature for taking the right steps towards improving our foster care system by passing this legislation and signing it into law today."

DCF Secretary David Wilkins said, "The eyes of the nation are on Florida as we make historic changes to the foster care system, paving the way for brighter futures for the children and young adults entrusted to our care. I am grateful to Governor Scott and the Florida Legislature for making Florida a national model for common sense and compassion, and for giving young adults in foster care the resources and support they need to be successful."

Tanya Wilkins, Florida's Advocate for Foster and Adoption said, "We would not send our own children out into the world on their 18th birthday without a safety net and an option to return home when they need extra support." On behalf of children in foster care, I want to thank Florida's great leaders for giving them a better start in life and the ability to achieve their dreams."

West Palm Beach Lawyer to Lead Florida Bar in 2014

By Jason Schwartz

When the Florida Bar holds its annual convention in Boca Raton next week, among the business will be the swearing in of Gregory W. Coleman as its president-elect.

The West Palm Beach attorney will be sworn in at the General Assembly meeting on Friday, June 28 at 9:30am.

Coleman said he will focus on technology and communication during his tenure as president-elect, and hopes to build on those goals as president, which will start June 2014.

The average lawyer disregards or ignores technology and communication and the impact of both in their daily work life, which is a huge mistake and disadvantage, he said.

“Technology and communication are affecting the practice of law and its time that The Florida Bar acknowledges that and educates and trains our members on best practices in processes as well the newest technology,” said Coleman, who focuses his practice on complex commercial litigation, professional malpractice defense, personal injury, wrongful death and employment litigation at Burman, Critton, Luttier & Coleman.

Coleman has accomplished a lot outside of his busy practice.

He made history last year when he was awarded the Florida Bar President’s Award of Merit for his leadership as a member of the Florida Bar Board of Governors. He was the first three-time winner in The Florida Bar’s history and he received it in a four-year period.

Coleman’s impact on the work of the Bar will be evident through the availability of next week’s convention schedule and materials on a Mobile App. Florida Bar more than 95,000 members can download the app for free on their iPhone, iPad or Android, and have access to daily schedules, meeting locations, and other necessary details.

It’s all part of Coleman’s hope to help lawyers utilize technology as an asset and benefit from its advantages – rather than a detriment as it can also be.

“Technology has definitely negatively affected what we do as lawyers,” Coleman said. “The constant contact from emails and social media has really hurt our ability to spend the necessary time to adequately analyze a case, understand what our clients have gone through, and be able to communicate it during court.”

Born in Miami and raised in South Florida, he received his bachelors’ and law degrees from Stetson University.

Red Bull Gives You Wings, Straight into the Emergency Room

By: Gina Onori

Large companies such as Red Bull, Monster, 5-hour Energy, and Amp, are the essential necessity for many young adults of today.

"I sometimes need that extra push to get through the last few hours of a shift," said 26-year-old paramedic Mikey Gould. "On some occasions after drinking the plethora of [energy] drinks that are offered I will get a bit jittery and have heart palpitations." This is coming from the same young man who says that he often witnesses young adults coming into the hospital from the intakes of energy drinks.

"One instance was when I was in paramedic school and doing rounds at the various hospitals. We had a few teenagers come in with racing hearts," said Mike. "Come to find out they were drinking Red Bull and vodka."

Another occurrence Mike reported was young children coming into the emergency room exceedingly weak with rapid heartbeats due to energy drink intake before workouts without the consumption of water.

If the paramedic witnesses the hazards of these beverages, yet still guzzles them down, could there possibly be a link to energy drink addiction?

According to nydailynews.com, Dr. Dave Moor says, "Caffeine is a drug of dependence, and withdrawal produces agitation - especially in the developing body of a teenager. They can end up in a hospital emergency room with heart palpitations. Like pot, caffeine is a drug, listed in the therapist's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual as a potentially serious problem at an intake of only 250 mg."

However, energy drink companies are adamant that there are no addictive substances in their products.

"Redbull contains vitamins, taurine, caffeine, sucrose and glucose," said a Redbull employee. "None of which are addictive substances."

While the controversy may be unresolved and contentious for the time being, some of my recent studies show that the effects of these cocktails are paramount.

"I get anxiety after the consumption of energy drinks," said 23-year-old Stephanie Aster.

"I have a racing heart and then become anxious," said 22-year-old Melanie Yates.

26-year old Kristen Ruggiero of Boca Raton developed a heart-murmur after drinking energy drinks for an elapsed period of time.

These are just a few of the many side effects that young adults are experiencing due to consuming these beverages.

"The biggest misconception is that they're okay to drink them just because they are available for sale," said Naturopathic Dr. Brian Yuseum.

Yuseum explains that 95% of North Americans suffer from some type of adrenal fatigue, relating to lower back pain due to energy drinks.

"If you do not have enough amino acids and the proper complex carbohydrates to take you through the day and have balanced energy, you are going to be exhausted," said Yuseum. "If you take an energy drink that further over stimulates the body without the nutrients to recapture your environment you are going to get worse and worse until it is basically poison and becomes a disease state."

Yuseum explains that what you should do is eat a healthy, balanced breakfast to get you through the day without crashing later.

Nonetheless, with brand names and marketing ploys such as Cocaine, Amp, Monster, and Red Bull (which gives you 'wings'), it is no wonder so many young adults are falling into the tactics of these corporations.

In a recent study developed in Boca Raton, forty seven percent of people preferred Red Bull energy drinks, twenty one percent of citizens favored Monster, and thirty percent of the public said they liked miscellaneous drinks such as Amp, Rockstar and 5 Hour Energy Shots.

Not only are these companies damaging the health of our community, but they are targeting our youth, with an array of advertising practices aimed at children and teens, including promotions of their beverages at schools and school-sponsored sporting events.

For instance, on the Florida Atlantic University Press website, the Red Bull skydiving team was promoted for a St. Patrick's Day celebration at The Dubliner Irish Pub.

Furthermore, there are numerous Facebook sites where Red Bull is promoted at FAU to bring forward stimulating events, linked to movies, music, and sports.

What is more, according to the Los Angeles Times, The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating reports that five people have died since 2009 after they consumed Monster energy drinks. The investigation was revealed in consideration of 14-year-old Anais Fournier who's parents sued the company in connection with their daughter's death.

In addition, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration issued a report that discovered a severe rise in the number of emergency department visits associated with the use of non-alcohol energy drinks, from 1,128 visits in 2005, to 13,114 in 2009 (<http://www.samhsa.gov>). The description noted that energy drinks are targeted to appeal to youth, and are consumed by up to half of children, teenagers and young adults.

"The whole idea is to stay balanced," said Naturopathic Dr. Brian Yuseum. "It is a highly addictive substance and it is something that someone needs education on before they start putting into their bodies without knowing anything about."

In recognition of National Dump the Pump Day on Thursday, June 20, South Florida residents are encouraged to make a pledge to join millions of commuters across the country who will ride public transportation.

As an added bonus, all South Florida participants who pledge to ride public transportation on that day will be entered into a drawing to win a FREE monthly pass on Broward County Transit, Miami-Dade Transit, Palm-Tran or Tri-Rail.

Palm Tran, Broward County Transit, Miami-Dade Transit, South Florida Commuter Services, South Florida Regional Transportation

Authority/Tri-Rail and Florida Department of Transportation are working together to promote the benefits of public transportation. Riding public transit is an economical way to save money, particularly when gas prices are high. The latest APTA (American Public Transportation Association) Transit Savings Report shows that a two person household that downsizes to one car can save - on the average - more than $9,700 a year.

"Dump the Pump Day is a great time to check out the many available transit options in your area and find out how easy it is to use to commute to work daily or when needed," said James Udvardy, project director of South Florida Commuter Services. "Plus it provides an opportunity to leave the driving to someone else and be able to do work or catch up on rest while you are on the bus or train."

Commuters who visit www.1800234RIDE.com and make the pledge to ride public transit on that day will be automatically entered to win a monthly pass on Palm Tran, Broward County Transit, Miami-Dade Transit or Tri-Rail.

Sponsored by APTA, the 8th Annual National Dump the Pump Day is a day that encourages people to ride public transportation. Started in June 2006, this national day emphasizes that public transportation is a great travel option that also helps people save money. Public transportation use reduces the nation's dependence on foreign oil by 4.2 billion gallons of gasoline a year and it also saves 37 million metric tons of carbon emissions annually.

To make your pledge or plan your trip using public transit on June 20, call 1-800-234-RIDE or visit www.1800234RIDE.com.

EDITORIALBy C. Ron AllenWhere Do You Draw The Line?

I was penning my column for this week on the obvious – the Trayvon Martin trial – but when so many of you wanted to know my thoughts on the Paula Deen saga, I was forced to change directions. I will share my thoughts on the trial later.

Deen whipped up a batch of trouble for herself by admitting that she has used an ugly racial expletive aimed at African-Americans.

Still, there is something about the universal scorn that has been heaped on the 66-year-old celebrity chef in the past few days, and how quickly it was served up, that leaves a bad taste in one's mouth.

At the heart of all this, Deen admitting during a deposition, in a racial and sexual harassment suit against her by Lisa T. Jackson, a former manager of a restaurant in Savannah, Ga., that Deen owns with her brother. Jackson alleges that she had used the "N" word. Deen has insisted there's not a racist bone in her body. During a deposition, Deen was asked if she had ever used the "N-word."

"Yes, of course," she said. However, she added: "I'm sure I have but it's been a very long time."

That's when her goose was cooked. Deen apologized three times, via YouTube. And still, experts say that her media empire -- TV, books, speeches and all the rest -- may not survive.

Deen's been sacked by the Food Network and dumped by one of her biggest sponsors simply because she was honest.

I raise the question to you, should any of us be punished or lose our job, or our family, our life - this is how she seems to have been so deeply affected by it - by conduct, actions that happened so far in the past? (Share your thoughts at editor@delraybeachtribune.com).

There's never enough time that passes to make up for something like that. Or you can say, I'm looking at my own life, there's things I have done or said I would like to take back -- maybe not that bad, but nevertheless, you have to also look at the other things she's done in life, and try to balance it out. I mean, she's done a lot of things for charity as well. After all, she supported candidate Barack Obama.

The N-word was once heard in every corner of white America. We're a better country because it's so rarely heard today -- unless you listen to rap or watch bad Quentin Tarantino movies.

Before young people started using it, it was a casual, demeaning, violent, dehumanizing word that was used. I just can't quite wrap my head around the fact that she used it once when a black guy had a gun pointed to her head and then the other time she was just quoting other young people who really should stop using it.

If merely ever speaking the N-word in your lifetime is cause for losing your job today, then kiss half of Congress and the news media goodbye.

I don't condone it. I condemn the use of the "N-word" by anyone. But, as someone who has written about race and ethnicity for more than two decades, I'm not the least bit surprised that a white woman who was born in Georgia in 1947, and probably had much of her worldview shaped long before Martin Luther King Jr. gave his "I Have A Dream" speech, might use the "N-word" in polite company.

What bothers me is there are people who delight in this sort of thing, about watching a woman cry because she did something wrong. We are in this kind of strange cycle of forcing people to be embarrassed, then apologize, go through rehabilitation. And I'm wondering if we're just getting sick of this, maybe there's the era of the mulligan. Yes, you made a mistake and let's forget about it, and let's move on. But I just don't get the glee that people get throwing somebody into a volcano because they made a mistake.

So, the moral of my story, "If we're talking about something she said 20 or 30 years ago, then I don't think that's something - all of us have said or done things we have regretted."

Until, next time, be careful what you say even among private company.

THOUGHTS FROM THE PUBLISHER

By Douglas Heizer

Aligning Actions With Words

By: Robert J. Tamasy

Over the past several years I have had the privilege of writing books about two companies with well thought-out, clearly articulated mission statements. They communicate corporate goals, their vision for the future, and values they desire for all of their employees to embrace. These are not just words on paper, but principles and precepts reviewed regularly with their teams. It is no coincidence, I believe, both of these organizations have reached the fourth generation of family ownership, an extremely rare feat.

When I told a friend about the value of drafting a mission statement for his own company, he expressed reluctance and a bit of skepticism. Too often, he has encountered businesses with lofty-sounding mission statements that consistently fail to live up to the values and principles they espouse. Even if the mission statements are displayed publicly, he said, they amount to little more than wall decorations.

I did not argue with my friend because, unfortunately, I have sometimes observed the same thing. Even the most eloquently crafted mission statement means nothing without the commitment to live up to it. As someone has said, "If your actions do not speak louder than your words, the less you say the better!"

If you are a top executive, you might receive this as a challenge: What is the true mission of your company? Do your leadership team and employees know and understand this mission? What steps have you taken to ensure that everyone is striving to live up to and carry out your mission statement? Even if you are not a high-ranking leader, the concept of a mission statement applies to you. For instance, what would you say is your own mission in life? Stated another way, what is your purpose – why are you here?

Is it merely to fulfill your personal desires, or is there a higher, greater calling on your life?

Many people have never considered such questions, but that does not mean they are not valid. In fact, when we stop rushing through our days long enough to evaluate our professional and personal progress, a mission statement can be invaluable for answering questions like, "How are we doing?" or "How am I doing?" If you wonder how to even draft a mission statement, here are some helpful suggestions from the ancient manual for the workplace – the Bible:

Know who you are working for. Are you working just to achieve your own goals? Are you willing to give it enough effort only as long as you feel you are progressing toward those goals? A commitment to quality and excellence will elevate your standing in the eyes of those you interact with in business, whether superiors, peers, customers or suppliers. "Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for men.... It is the Lord Christ you are serving" (Colossians 3:23-24).

Always put customers/others first. Today many businesses are downgrading customer service to save costs. But one way to ensure return business is for customers to feel valued and well cared-for. "So in everything, do to others what you would have them do to you..." (Matthew 7:12).

Cultivate an attitude of humility in service. When a person senses you have their best interests at heart, they cannot help but trust you and feel they can rely on your judgment and recommendations. "Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit, but in humility consider others better than yourselves. Each of you should look not only to your own interests, but also to the interests of others" (Philippians 2:3-4).

Until next week!

POSITIVE LIVING

By Dr. Synesio Lyra, Jr.

Be Your Own Best Product!

People who sell the best products usually get ahead! They show carefulness in their selection, in the advertising they provide, and in the manner they publically display and distribute those goods! Because the intensity of competition, whoever wishes to succeed devotes an enormous amount of time and effort to project what's for sale in the best possible light!

Although all the above is true of material, perishable items and services, the significance increases far more when the product you offer is yourself. Not that your person is for sale in a monetary way, but your person, your credibility, your personal qualities need to be well-established before true value is ascribed to you for whatever you have to offer!

Therefore, everything you say and do has a cumulative impact, for better or for worse, regarding who you are and whatever you desire to offer. Your past, however distant, can and does make a difference in establishing your credibility or detracting from it.

Your previous or current pronouncements on many issues also cast a bright light or a dark shadow on your integrity; they are portraits of your personality as exhibited in different contexts, and in varied times of ease, or at pressured moments in your daily schedule.

Who you truly are needs to be manifested equally in the open as in hiding; in the presence of multitudes, or in the absence of any individual; when conditions are favorable or when advantages are lacking!

To such ends, one needs to be in constant renewal; who you are today should be better than the you of yesterday and of the day before. A life of full transparency is the only quality worth maintaining; your legitimate right to privacy does not include hiding what must be in the open to validate who you say you are!

The gift of yourself, or the selling of your own self are basically the same thing, and in both instances your total integrity is the only ingredient which can ensure success, insofar as what you are offering exceeds the expectations of those seeking to benefit from it!

Armed Robber Sought

By CRA News Service

Authorities are seeking the public's assistance in finding the man who robbed another man outside a Bank of America in Royal Palm Beach on May 21.

At about 1240 p.m., an employee of a Murphy's Gas Station was about to make a deposit at the drive through when a red older model Honda Accord, similar to the one pictured, bumped his car from behind, Palm Beach Sheriff's Office detectives said.

A black man, armed with a semi-automatic handgun, exited the Honda Accord and demanded the money bag. The victim fearing for his life handed the suspect the money, detectives said. The suspect returned to the Honda and drove out of the parking lot.

The victim provided information for the above composite.

Anyone with information on the suspect is asked to contact CrimeStoppers at 1-800-458-TIPS (8477) or PBSO at 561-688-3400.

Four Broward teens charged with burglary

Boca Raton, FL – On Wednesday, June 12, at about 10:25 a.m., Boca Raton Police officers responded to a report of several suspicious males and a suspicious vehicle in the area of 300 SW 17th Street. The caller, who was working in the neighborhood, said the males were asking for directions and he observed two of the males coming out of a nearby backyard.

Arriving officers observed the suspect vehicle leaving the community and followed it. The driver of the vehicle committed several traffic infractions and was stopped. Officers made contact with the driver, Jaquan Johnson, and the three passengers, Givante Evans, Brandon Allen and Aquarian Moore. The officer immediately smelled the odor of marijuana emanating from the interior of the car. Officers searched the occupants and the car and found a small baggie of marijuana in Johnson's shoe, the remains of a marijuana cigarette in the center cup holder, and a small amount of loose marijuana scattered throughout the car. Officers also found a pair of white socks in Johnson's pocket and a lug wrench in the trunk of the car. All four teens gave officers differing accounts of why they were in Boca Raton.

Officers met with the caller and checked the house where he said he saw the males exiting the backyard. They found a rear patio screen which had been pried. The caller identified Allen and Moore as the males he saw coming out of the backyard.

Officers arrested the four teens and charged them with burglary, possession of burglary tools, loitering and prowling, and possession of marijuana. Evans is also on probation for robbery.

Woman arrested for providing Botox without a license

Boca Raton, FL – On June 6, an anonymous complainant reported to the Boca Raton Police that she purchased a Groupon for skin-tightening treatments from Beauty & Balance Aesthetic Skin Solutions. The complainant said she made an appointment and met with Sheri Goldman. During the consultation, Goldman suggested she get Botox and fillers. The complainant agreed and made an appointment for the following week. She subsequently researched Goldman and discovered Goldman had been arrested in 2012 for practicing without a license. The officer confirmed with the Department of Health that Goldman does not have a license.

On June 10, detectives began their investigation. They discovered Goldman had been arrested on July 12, 2012 for unlicensed practice of medicine and unlicensed practice of nursing. Goldman was issued a cease and desist order on August 2, 2012. On August 13, 2012, the company name of Beauty and Balance was filed with the State of Florida by Sheri Goldman. The official business website, balancemybeauty.com, lists Sheri Heller (Goldman's maiden name) as the managing director with 30 years of experience working as a surgical nurse.

Detectives set up an undercover operation utilizing an undercover detective (UC). The UC posed as a prospective customer looking for a consultation. Goldman told the UC she is an OR nurse and had been working with a plastic surgeon for 15 years before going off on her own. She further said that a nurse practitioner named Robin would be doing the Botox injections. She also said she employs a plastic surgeon who supervises the esthetician and Robin. During the consultation Goldman placed her hands on the UC's face, as if to examine her features, prior to the discussion of the different types of procedures.

On Tuesday, June 18, detectives, working with investigators from the Florida Department of Health, arrested and charged Goldman for unlicensed practice of a health care professional and practicing nursing without a license. Goldman was also charged with violating her probation.

Motorcycle Crash Leaves Two Injured

Two people were injured in a motorcycle crash Monday night, authorities said.

The crash occurred around 9:40 p.m. at SW 18th Street and Powerline Road.

Upon their arrival, Palm Beach County Fire-Rescue emergency crews found two patients in the roadway, said Capt. Albert Borroto, spokesman for Palm Beach County Fire Rescue.

One patient was rushed to Delray Medical Center's Trauma Center and the second patient was transported to West Boca Medical Center with non-life threatening injuries.

Everyone Loves a "Wedding Singer"

By Skip Sheffield

The low-budget magic continues through this Sunday, June 30 at West Boca Raton High School with the Slow Burn Theatre production of "Wedding Singer The Musical."

"The Wedding Singer" was the slightest piffle of a 1996 Adam Sandler movie comedy.

"Wedding Singer the Musical" is no deeper or more profound, but as performed by Slow Burn it has heart, chutzpah, and it is a heck of a lot of fun.

Robbie Hart (versatile Clay Cartland) is the wedding singer of the title.

No one sets out to be part of a "wedding band." It's one of those things that happens to young, struggling bands. Wedding receptions pay big bucks. In theory you take advantage of the opportunity to earn money attain more lofty goals, such as recording original music. In practice this rarely happens. Few things are as sad as an aging wedding band made up of middle-aged guys and girls who have given up on their dreams.

But as I stated, "Wedding Singer" is not profound or even poignant. It's a comedy pure and simple, set in Ridgefield, NJ in 1985 at the peak of the big-hair boy-band era.

What makes "Wedding Singer" shine is its young, enthusiastic cast directed and choreographed by young, enthusiastic Patrick Fitzwater and backed by a note-perfect musical combo that is not too loud, not too soft.

The book of "Wedding Singer" by Chad Beguelin and Tim Herlihy with music and lyrics by Matthew Sklar and Chad Beguelin, reminds me for all the world of an updated Judy Garland-Mickey Rooney romantic comedy.

Clay Cartland is the Mickey Rooney striving but under-achieving young man Robbie and winsome Courtney Poston is the downtrodden Judy Garland heroine, Julia Sullivan.

Julia is engaged to be married to the vain, greedy, unfaithful Wall Street shark Glen Gulia (Rick Hvizdak) but really she is destined to be with poor but true-blue Robbie Hart. It just takes two acts and a little under two hours for destiny to happen.

Playing Robbie's band mates are Conor Walton as the flamboyant, way out of the closet George and Dominic Servidio as the mullet-haired bassist Sammy. The live onstage band led by music director Manny Schwartzman consists of Nick Trotogett, Rupert Ziawinski and Freg Chance.

Stand-out players include Nicole Piro as Robbie's shallow, insincere fiancée Linda, Penny Mandel as Robbie's rocking Grandma Rosie, Jerel Brown as a hilariously huge Tina Turner lookalike and Erica Mendez as the sexy, hot-to-trot Holly, who spurns the affections of sincere Sammy.

The musical score is so forgettable it is unlikely you will be humming a recognizable tune as you exit, but it sure is fun while it is happening.

Perhaps I am biased in favor of this merry romp, for I have played many a wedding reception and I know firsthand the pitfalls of performance. But it seemed like everyone in the audience got into the brash, goofy spirit of this show whether or not they have ever been part of this business called show.

Tickets are $20 students, $30 seniors and $35 general admission. Call 866-811-4111 or go to www.slowburntheatre.org.

"The Kings of Summer" a Funny and Poignant Coming-of-Age

By Skip Sheffield

Have you ever watched a movie and thought "This is my story. This could have been me."

I'll wager a lot of grownup boys and girls will feel that way about "The Kings of Summer."

"Kings" was a hit at this year's Sundance Film Festival and I can see why. It is fresh yet timeless; funny yet poignant- and pretty much universal.

"Kings" is directed by Jordan Vogt-Roberts, who is mostly known for TV work such as "Mash Up" and "Funny or Die." The screenplay is by Chris Galletta, who has been a staff writer for David Letterman.

The story is a coming-of-age fable set in northeastern Ohio, but it could be anywhere.

Joe Toy (Nick Robinson) has a crabby, unreasonable and sarcastic father Frank (Nick Offerman), who has not gotten over the death of his wife.

Patrick (Gabriel Basso) has a mother and father who are pushing him in directions he does not want to go.

Biaggio (Moises Arias) is a strange little guy who attaches himself to Joe and Patrick when they decide to make the bold move of running away and building a fort out in the woods and living by their wits. It is summertime and the boys are all around 15. It's a precarious age between childhood and adulthood when hormones are raging and goals are uncertain.

Many kids build forts and create their own myths. The forts may just be in the back yard, but they are away to get away from the "oppression" of parents. When individuals grow up and become parents themselves they begin to understand why mom and dad were so "mean" and unreasonable.

But it is impossible for a 15-year-old to understand this when he or she are in the moment. That's why ages 12-16 are the most dangerous in a child's life. Emotions are felt immediately and more deeply than in a mature adult.

Often these emotions are stirred by the opposite sex. In this case it is a very pretty girl named Kelly (Erin Moriarty). It is not her fault that two guys fall for her and she has to choose one over the other.

If you are still plugged into the angst of adolescence the recollection of pain is inevitable. You win some, you lose some, and it is all part of gaining wisdom and maturity.

Director Vogt-Roberts brilliantly cast virtual unknowns to fill these volatile, fragile roles. Nick Robinson's Joe is an everyman: a good guy, good-looking and loyal to his friends. Gabriel Basso is a lucky guy blessed with even better looks and natural athletic ability.

Moises Arias' Biaggio is an unpredictable goofball who is equal parts hilarious and profound in an out-there way.

Put all this together and you have an irresistible summer treat devoid of car crashes, explosions, wanton sex or aliens. If you made it through adolescence sadder but wiser and grateful, this is a film for you. I know it was for me.

Four stars

World War Z

This week's big release is "World War Z," but due to a scheduling mix-up, I missed the advance screening. I'm not so sure I'm crazy about the idea of a zombie apocalypse, even if it does have Brad Pitt in it, but I'll just have to pay admission like anyone else to see if it has merit.

Much Ado About Nothing

Also out is a contemporary version of Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," shot in 12 days in Los Angeles sparkling black-and-white by director Joss Whedon. The young, attractive cast include Amy Acker and Alexis Denisof as sparring reluctant lovers Beatrice and Benedick; Clark Gregg as Governor Leonato; Nathan Fillian as the comic Dogberry; Fran Kranz as noble officer Claudio; Sean Maher as his villainous brother Don John, and Jillian Morgese as beautiful Hero, whom Claudio falls for immediately.

As Always – Superior Dining At La Cigale

It has been three years since we were privileged to sample and review of the magnificent offerings at Francis Touboul's La Cigale in Deerfield Beach. We returned to review a few old delights and to sample new ones, assisted by Andrea, our waitperson.

Sue, Frank and this reviewer selected a jumbo sized artichoke, steamed and cored, served chilled with a delightful sherry vinaigrette. We also tasted the chicken liver pate, smooth and delicious with its mesclun lettuce, baby pickles, croutons and very hot Dijon mustard. There are 5 additional items on the cold appetizer menu.

Now offering 7 salads, we chose a classic iceberg wedge with crumbled bacon + tomato and a fine gorgonzola blue cheese dressing. The Caesar salad was also perfect with trimmed romaine, garlic croutons, shaved parmesan in a superior Caesar dressing – anchovy optional! Both salads were crisp, fresh and a delight.

Of the 4 hot appetizers, we elected to try the out-of-shell escargots with wild mushrooms, nicely sauteed, plus puff pastry and a light, great garlic butter cream sauce. Do try the duck foi gras- a most requested offering – as is the char grilled jumbo artichoke.

Turning to fish and shellfish, we shared a portion of mussels marinieres with white wine, garlic, tomatoes, fresh chives...excellent plump bi-valves in a sweet sauce. This was served with a side of pommes frites...twice cooked fries for a crisp, delicious taste. Imagine the seafood paella – saffron Spanish rice with mussels, shrimp, scallops, calamari and then sliced chorizo plus peas and peppers – a fantastic dish! There are 8 other selections on the menu. Also ask about their signature dish – Dover Sole...the Finest!

Meat and poultry listings include a delightful dish of 2 petite Osso Bucco, slowly braised and served with a luscious creamy polenta in a natural au jus – enjoy the marrow in these taste treats! We had enjoyed La Cigale's New York strip and lamb chops in the past as well as their veal sweetbreads – we'll try the roasted half duck, Coq au Vin and Mossaka Cassoletta in the future.

There is the Plateau Mediterranean which serves up to 4 people and contains artichokes from Provence, Prosciutto di Parma or if you prefer- smoked salmon. Add Spanish sweet roasted peppers, Moroccan style chick pea humus, Greek marinated feta cheese, Kalamata olives and grape leaves...all this at a cost of $24!

The 9 desserts stared a light, flavorful peach melba with a scoop of vanilla ice cream, sliced cling peaches, raspberry flavored Kirsch coulis, topped with toasted almonds and whipped cream. The super rich chocolate "Molten" cake is served warm with a hot liquid core and served with vanilla ice cream. Both excellent ways to end a perfect meal. Next time, we'll sample the crème Brule, tiramisu, bread pudding and lemon tart.

Seating 160 diners at 253 SE 5th Avenue in Delray Beach (561-265-0600), hours and from 5PM to closing at 9PM – or so, from Monday thru Saturday, there is a full bar and an extensive wine list featuring 36 whites both European and domestic and 40 reds as well – pricing , by bottle or glass is conservative. The menu changes seasonally and there is a child's menu at this 14 year old standard. We were very impressed with every dish we sampled. We urge you to... Go and Enjoy!

New Chapter as Library Prepares to Open Downtown

More than 100 people formed a line and passed books from Boca Raton's old library to the new main library this week.

The symbolic gesture featured mostly children from summer programs across the city.

An official ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday to mark the opening of the city's flagship Downtown Library.

The spacious new main library, on the corner of NW Boca Raton Boulevard and NW 4th Street, is twice as large as the current library, will have 70 public access computers with high-speed Wi-Fi services, and 10 private study and tutoring rooms.

The building is directly north of the old library at 200 NW Boca Raton Blvd.

FAITH

By Casey Cleveland

The Agenda of Freedom

Freedom has an agenda. We all know that it is not free, but rather quite costly to attain and ensure. May I first express my deep and humble gratitude to those who have served, are currently serving, or are yet to serve for the sake of freedom. I realize this has or will cost you and your family deeply, and I as one who lives in this freedom as an American truly appreciate the sacrifice.

But what about the agenda of freedom? What are we supposed to do with our freedom? Express it, explore it, enjoy it...yes. But there is more. There has to be. To understand the agenda of freedom, we must understand the author of freedom. Freedom is not a new American idea, it is a God idea. And the way that God has most beautifully expressed his full character and nature is in the person of Jesus Christ. This leaves us with the opportunity of exploring what Jesus said about freedom to fully understand the agenda of freedom.

"If you abide in my word, you are truly my disciples, and you will know the truth, and the truth will set you free." Awesome. Thanks Jesus. It is the truth that will set us free. But what is the truth and why are we set free? The truth in Jesus is that we are far worse than we could imagine, and far more loved than we could ever hope. (Tim Keller) The truth is that we have chosen to find our joy outside of worshipping the one true God. The truth is that we have broken his law, design, and heart. The truth is we deserve punishment and that punishment is death. Separation from a holy God for eternity. The truth is that same God has come on a rescue mission for sinners just like me for his glory. The truth is, he broke into humanity, went to a cross where my sins were placed, and received the punishment that was due me. God the Father punishing God the Son on behalf of Casey the runaway. And the truth is, that if I leave my pursuit of joy outside of Jesus, trust in his work done for me, and pursue life in him... that is exactly what he will give me. The good news of the gospel is that I am free! Free from the penalty of sin. Free from the power of sin. Free one day from the presence of sin. But free to do what? What is the agenda of freedom?

"For you were called to freedom, brothers. Only do not use your freedom as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love serve one another." Galatians 5:13 Bam. Thanks Paul. There it is, the agenda of freedom. That we are now really and truly free to relentlessly pursue God and others with a real and genuine and refreshing and love. In Jesus, you are free to live a life that is not consumed with you! You are free to experience the unimaginably joyful life that comes with loving God and others. You are free to have Jesus as your treasure and love people like crazy. Thank you Jesus, the author of true freedom.

This Fourth of July I encourage you to pursue the agenda of freedom. Trust me, it will be to your delight.

Much love... Casey

DIVORCE FLORIDA STYLE

By Mike Gora

Broward or Palm Beach County?

Q My wife and I resided in Jacksonville, Duval County, when we separated about ten years ago. We litigated our divorce in Duval County, and had a trial, because we could not settle our case. As a result, I was ordered to pay her permanent alimony and child support.

I re-married, she did not. Coincidentally we both moved to south Florida, me to Boca Raton and the wife to Deerfield Beach. We live minutes away from one another.

Over the last eight months, the good living I made as a car salesman disappeared, as people virtually stopped buying new cars at my dealership.

I got behind in my alimony and child support. My brother is an attorney here and he prepared and filed papers in Broward County to lower my alimony and child support payments.

At the same time, my wife hired a Boca Raton attorney who filed a contempt case against me in Palm Beach County. Coincidentally both cases were filed the same day, and each of the two Summonses was served the same day, yesterday. Do we have to each pursue our own cases in both courts? Is there one court, which will have control over both cases? How do we straighten this out?

A. Unlike original divorce cases, which should only be filed in the county in which a couple last lived as husband and wife, modifications and contempt motions can be filed by either of you in the county where you live, or in the county where the other person lives.

In appellate decisions, the Florida Supreme Court has ruled that jurisdiction in such cases attaches "when the process is first perfected", meaning served upon the other person.

Recently, when a summons was served on you for contempt, and on your former wife for modification the process server not only indicated the day of the service on his or her "return", or notice to the court, but also listed the time of day of the service. It should be easy to determine who actually was served first.

While both courts would have "jurisdiction" over both cases, the "venue" for the case would usually lie in the county in which the process was first served. "Jurisdiction" means the court, which has the power to adjudicate the issues in the case. In your cases this would be either county.

"Venue" means the location where the case should be heard. If neither of your attorneys attempts to consolidate the cases in one county or the other, the cases can both go forward, in separate counties, as both courts have "jurisdiction." That would not be cost effective.

If either counsel seeks to consolidate the cases in one county or the other, the case should go to the county in which process was served first. There is an exception, which probably does not apply here, because the two of you live so close to one another, and grounds for your cases appear to be local in origin.

If you lived far apart, and the records and witnesses who were necessary to prove the cases were, for example in your case, all in Duval County, one of you might seek to have the cases consolidated, and transferred to Duval County.

As the origin of the final judgment, Duval County's circuit court would be a third circuit, which would have jurisdiction, and that forum might be considered "more convenient" because of the location of the witnesses. It appears that the witnesses and documents in your case for modification, and her witnesses and documents in her case for contempt would all be found in south Florida, so no further change of venue would be called for.

The Container Store's new location launches with huge opening weekend and $13,000 donation to the Junior League of Boca Raton

The Container Store, the nation's originator and leading retailer of storage and organization products, debuted its 61st store opening in Town Center at Boca Raton on Saturday, June 15th. As part of the retailer's commitment to its local communities, The Container Store took great pride in donating a percentage of its Grand Opening weekend sales to the Junior League of Boca Raton, making a contribution totaling $13,000.

Saturday's Grand Opening definitely created a buzz as the place to be with shoppers outside the store in anticipation of the doors opening. The first in line was The Container Store's Boca Raton Super Fan duo, Michael & Lisa, who received their own gold shopping cart decorated with Super Fan flags and signs. Michael & Lisa submitted the winning entry for The Container Store's Boca Raton Super Fan contest that asked why they considered themselves worthy of Super Fan status. In addition to being first in the store on Grand Opening day, their Super Fan prize package included a gift card, a box full of products from The Container Store, their own crown and tiara and an invitation to the Private Preview Party on Thursday evening! The weekend continued with thousands of customers filling the store to be amongst the first to shop from Boca Raton's hottest new retail store!

The storage and organization retailer's 21,000 square foot store filled with 10,000 products to organize every area of your life provided the perfect backdrop for a Private Preview Party on Thursday, June 13th in collaboration with the Junior League of Boca Raton supporters. Around 1,500 guests enjoyed perfectly chilled champagne and lavish hors d'oeuvres from Puff 'n Stuff Catering, all of which were served out of The Container Store's products, and they danced to music by The Headliners. Floral arrangements were prepared by In The Name of Flowers.

Among those in attendance were Crystal McMillin, President of The Junior League of Boca Raton, Melissa Whelchel, Vice President of Fund Development of The Junior League of Boca Raton and Nancy Dockerty, former President of The Junior League of Boca Raton. Eva Gordon, Vice President of Stores, Training & Development, & Recruiting for The Container Store, welcomed all attendees and thanked the Junior League of Boca Raton for all of their support and efforts in getting the store ready for its Grand Opening. Crystal followed Eva's opening remarks by welcoming The Container Store to the community. Also in attendance from The Container Store were Garrett Boone, Chairman Emeritus, and other members of the retailer's Vice President team.

The Junior League of Boca Raton includes more than 700 highly motivated, educated and influential women who are transforming South Florida through advocacy, direct service, public education and fundraising.

"Partnering with an organization like The Junior League of Boca Raton is an incredible honor for our company," said Gordon. "They are truly invested in the entire Boca community. We couldn't have found a better match – and it's an organization we know that our customers and employees are passionate about."

Fort Lauderdale Law Firm Wins $2.55 million Verdict Against Big Tobacco

Fort Lauderdale, Florida – (June 17, 2013) – For the second time in as many months, a Palm Beach County jury has found tobacco companies partly responsible for a smoker’s death – and the surviving spouse’s loss.

Late Friday, a jury awarded plaintiffs more than $2.55 million in actual damages and for pain and suffering. The plaintiffs, Beatrice Skolnick as personal representative for the estate of Leo Skolnick, and represented by attorneys from Schlesinger Law Offices, claimed Mr. Skolnick’s addiction to cigarettes caused his lung cancer and eventual death. The jury found R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company and Philip Morris USA Inc., mostly responsible for Mr. Skolnick’s 1993 death – a year after his lung cancer was found.

The verdict was similar to that rendered in the case of Helen Cohen. The Delray Beach grandmother’s chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), emphysema and lung cancer killed her following years of suffering. The jury awarded her estate and her husband, David Cohen, more than $2 million in actual damages and for pain and suffering.

“Mr. Skolnick smoked, and smoking caused his cancer. But he trusted the word of tobacco companies who told him over the decades that tobacco was safe. They even sat before Congress and said their product wasn’t addictive,” said Scott Schlesinger, who along with fellow attorneys Jonathan Gdanski, Steven J. Hammer and Brittany Chambers of the Schlesinger Law Offices. “As with the Cohen case a month ago, the jury didn’t buy their lies.”

The two cases are only the latest successful tobacco cases for law firms like Schlesinger. The firm has handled numerous tobacco and cigarette smoking cases, including one the firm lost the same week in the same circuit that the Skolnick case was being tried. The firm also was part of the legal “dream team” that negotiated the landmark $11.3

billion settlement in 1997 for the state of Florida against five tobacco companies.

Both Mrs. Cohen and Mr. Skolnick were members of the Engle class action. The 2006 Florida Supreme Court case found that all Florida citizens and residents and their survivors who have suffered from disease or medical conditions caused by their addiction to cigarettes containing nicotine could bring action. Some 8,000 plaintiffs have sought to protect their rights. In Mr. Skolnick’s and Mrs. Cohen’s cases, the jury agreed they were addicted to the nicotine found in cigarettes.

Mr. Skolnick grew up in the hardscrabble Brownsville neighborhood in Brooklyn, New York. At an early age, he began smoking Camel, Marlboro and Pall Mall brand cigarettes. Defense attorneys tried unsuccessfully to remove Mr. Skolnick from the Engle class. They also tried to link Mr. Skolnick’s lung cancer to other causes, including uranium found in industrial yards nearby, and even colon cancer he successfully beat. Skolnick’s attorneys successfully convinced the jury otherwise.

Following the three week trial, the six-member took six hours to return its verdict before Judge David F. Crow in the 15th Judicial Circuit of Palm Beach County. In its verdict, the jury found R.J. Reynolds and Philip Morris USA Inc. each 30 percent at fault for Mr. Skolnick’s lung cancer and death, and Mr. Skolnick 40 percent at fault.

“In Mr. Skolnick’s case, as in others throughout Florida, it was clear that the jury believed big tobacco played a significant part in convincing plaintiffs that cigarettes were safe to use, and when they were found harmful, that the companies lied to protect their interests,” Hammer said.

“This is a big loss for big tobacco, and Florida has thousands more cases lining up like that of Mr. Skolnick and Mrs. Cohen,” added Gdanski.

HEAT Win Second Championship in Big Three Era

By: Michael Walsh

A champion has been crowned. The Miami Heat defeated the San Antonio Spurs 95-88 Thursday night in Miami to win their second consecutive NBA title. The Spurs had a defensive game plan to slow the Heat, and they stuck with it throughout Game 7.

Unfortunately, LeBron James had an answer for that game plan, hitting nine shots outside the paint. The Spurs were daring James and his teammates to beat them with jumpers, so that is exactly what James did.

San Antonio held serve up until the bitter end, squaring off and keeping pace with the eventual champions. In the end, its execution fell short and the Heat simply hit too many shots.

James finished 12-of-23 from the field for 37 points. He hit five three-pointers, was a perfect 8-of-8 from the free-throw line, and picked up 12 rebounds and four assists.

Joining James with a double-double was Dwyane Wade. Wade played perfect alongside James, picking up 23 points and 10 rebounds. Wade was also hot from mid-range, hitting 6-of-12 from the area. He took what the Spurs gave him all night.

The X-factor for Miami came off the bench and was nearly perfect. After slogging through a tough shooting slump in the series, Shane Battier came up huge Thursday night. Without his 18 points on 6-of-8 threes, the Heat may not have even been in this game. Every time the Spurs saw a light and were ready to go on a run, Battier knocked down a dagger trey.

Tim Duncan was a star in every way, scoring 24 points and grabbing 12 rebounds. Unfortunately, he missed a couple chances at the rim to tie the game in the closing minutes.

The youngster Kawhi Leonard, meanwhile, poured in 19 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in 45 minutes. Manu Ginobili made some costly turnovers, but he chipped in 18 points as well.

Wade got himself going late in the first half. He netted six of his 14 first-half points in the final 3:20, a final jumper putting the Heat up 46-44 at halftime. James led all scorers with 15 points in the first half, and he was the only Miami player to shoot a free throw.

Leonard hit three mid-range jumpers for San Antonio at the second half outset. He was also active defensively, causing a deflection and bodying up James. On offense, he appeared to be the Spurs' No. 1 option at times. Leonard's bucket at 9:07 knotted things up at 52.

After setting the court on fire through the first handful of finals games, Danny Green went 1-of-12 in Game 7. He finally calibrated the range and sank a corner three for San Antonio. Unfortunately, James responded with a pair of his own treys, and he finished 5-of-10 from beyond the arc. His fifth put the Heat up 62-57 with 3:32 remaining.

After 10 straight points from James for Miami, the Spurs' team effort was still leading. Finally, the MVP got some help in the form of two threes—one from Battier, his fourth, and then Mario Chalmers' buzzer-beater from 30 feet. That bomb set the Heat up with a 72-71 lead entering the final quarter.

Nothing came easy through the start of the fourth for either team. Battier hit another three and the Heat got some free throws, but the Spurs defense was packed in and daring them to shoot low-percentage shots. At the other end, Parker lofted a shot/pass to Duncan at the rim for an easy bucket at the 8:34 mark, bringing San Antonio within two at 77-75.

James continued hitting jumpers, which is a usually a death sentence for almost every team in the NBA. His 17-footer with 5:39 to go put the Heat back up 83-77. Chris Bosh, Ray Allen and Mike Miller finished the game scoreless, making James' 31 points at that point all the more impressive.

Having perhaps the most up-and-down game of his career, Ginobili brought the Spurs to within three with a lollipop trey. Luckily for Miami, Battier matched him with another three of his own. Battier's sixth three of the game had the home team up 88-82 with 3:19 to play.

Leonard was doing a little bit of everything in Game 7, so his three-pointer with two minutes left on an assist from Ginobili should come as no surprise. The basket brought San Antonio within two, 90-88.

Chalmers bricked a pair of free throws, and his teammates missed a series of jumpers. At the other end, Duncan couldn't capitalize at the rim to tie. He missed the offensive rebound tip as well, slapping the floor in frustration. James finally connected on a jumper with 27.9 seconds to go, which lifted Miami ahead 92-88.

James and Wade went 3-of-4 from the free-throw line down the stretch, sealing their second championship of the Big Three era.

A Game Six We Will Never Forget

By: Matt Blue

NBA officials were bringing out the Larry O' Brien trophy. That was just how close the San Antonio Spurs were to knocking out the Miami HEAT in Game 6 of the NBA Finals. The Spurs could feel it, taste it, smell it, and visualize it. This was their moment of glory. And then suddenly the HEAT just took it all away from them.

The HEAT just weren't ready to call it quits yet. They weren't ready to begin a long summer of personal self-reflection and second guessing. They weren't ready to listen to all of the ridicule and unyielding criticism that was about to be sparked by a ruthless national media and a HEAT hater society.

The HEAT had no desire to end their season off mental mistakes and turnovers. They were ready to rise above it all. And they did.

It all began with Ray Allen's shot and ended with Chris Bosh's block on Danny Green in the overtime period. Ray Allen saved a season, a franchise, a fan base, a legacy, an empire, and a city. It wasn't just any old shot. It was a shot that defined everything that the HEAT has set out to achieve since this team's inception. It was a shot that could be heard around the world.

In order to look at this from another angle, it is important to realize that 99 out of 100 times; the San Antonio Spurs would have emphatically closed out the HEAT while they had them on the ropes. 99-100 times the Spurs put teams away in crucial games.

After all, the Spurs are a team that has a championship pedigree. This is an organization that has built a dynasty from the ground up with the league's best front office and with the league's top coach. They just don't lose games like this.

There was just no precedent for what occurred Tuesday night in Miami. The HEAT showed true character, heart, determination and resilience. As the fat lady was beginning to clear her throat, the HEAT abruptly broke the Spurs hearts and ripped it out of their chests. The Spurs were so close and yet they were so far away.

This is the type of game you will tell your grandchildren about. This is the type of game you will remember 20, 30, 40 or 50 years down the road. Game 6 of the 2013 NBA Finals transcended the traditional stats and advanced analytics we tend to marvel at. This game transcended common sense, patterns, emotions and logic. In a historically memorable and magical affair paralleled by ups and downs and twists and turns; the triumph of victory was crystal clear from the HEAT's side while the agony of defeat had a daunting effect on the Spurs.

The HEAT just went into a full out survival mode in the 4th quarter of Game 6. LeBron James abandoned his signature headband and rolled up his sleeves. His workmanlike style in the 4th quarter was impressive to watch. It was like watching him play an outdoor pickup game on a windy day. LeBron was driving to the hole with ferociousness and he was either going to finish with authority at the rim or he was going to draw a foul on a petrified defender. The Spurs had the advantage and all of the momentum until "the headband" went away.

This HEAT team was fighting for their future and existence. The cries to break the team up and end the Big Three era would have been raucous and boisterous. But it just wasn't time yet. This team's future is still in doubt, there is no debating that. However, the HEAT won the right to play another day. They gained time. And there is no single commodity that is more valuable than that.

LeBron James on 2014 'Decision': I don't know

By: Pedro Heizer

As The Back-to-Back NBA Champions celebrate with a parade down Biscayne Bay, some fans and, most media members, are already talking about "The Summer of 2014".

In a sitdown interview with CNN's Rachel Nichols that aired Monday, LeBron was asked about his 2014 opt-out clause, the first of three consecutive offseasons James will have the right to explore free agency.

"I don't know," said the back-to-back regular season and Finals MVP, "because I haven't really even thought about it. So when that moment comes up, I will approach it, like a professional, and we'll see what happens."

As we all know, LeBron joined the Heat as a free agent in July 2010, announcing his free-agency move from the Cleveland Cavaliers, in a nationally televised ESPN hour-long special which was the cause of much backlash from not only media members but longtime fans of "The King".

However, LeBron stated in the CNN interview that he has changed and has learned from his mistakes, "You learn from your mistakes," he said. "That's something I've been able to do."

Talking about how he handled his previous free agency, he said, "That's something I've lived with, and if the opportunity comes [again], if I'm in that position, I'll be able to handle it much better."

LeBron is not the only HEAT player with an opt-out clause in 2014; fellow members of the Big Three, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh, along with Mike Miller, Udonis Haslem and Joel Anthony all have opt-out clauses after the 2013-2014 Season.

LeBron, Bosh, and Wade are set to make over $20,000,000.00 in the 2014-2015 Season if they decide to keep their talents in South Beach, however, with the new NBA Luxury Tax it will be hard for the NBA Champs to keep the same team intact.

HEAT Use Mario Chalmers' Team Option

By: Pedro Heizer

In a quest to "three-peat", Pat Riley and the Miami HEAT will do everything they can to keep the core of their championship winning team together.

Earlier today in Miami, Pat Riley told the media that the two-time defending NBA champions will exercise their option to bring Mario Chalmers back for the 2013-2014 season.

The Heat had a $4 million team option on Chalmers for next season, and in a move that isn't particularly surprising, they opted in Wednesday and have secured the two-time NBA Champion for another year.

In the conference, Riley also indicated that the Heat aren't expected to amnesty Mike Miller, despite the fact that he's set to make $6 million next year.

Chalmers, who was drafted in 2008 alongside Michael Beasley, has spent his entire career with the Heat since being acquired in a draft night deal with Minnesota after winning that year's national championship with Kansas.

As a rookie, Chalmers started and averaged 10 points per game. The 27-year-old has been Miami's starting point guard for the majority of his career.

This season, Chalmers hit a career best 40.9 percent and had some great shooting nights in the playoffs, notably a 20-point effort where he nailed four of five threes in a 103-100 win in Game 6 of the NBA Finals.

Chalmers' ability to hit spot-up three-pointers has increased drastically since his rookie season which makes him more valuable to a HEAT squad which had many sharpshooters to punish teams who leave them open.

Chris "Birdman" Andersen Lands in Boca Raton

By: Pedro Heizer

Chris "Birdman" Andersen's autograph-signing appearance at Celebrity Sports in the Town Center at Boca Raton caused flocks of Miami HEAT fans to go crazy.

"This is the biggest event we've had so far," said Blake Cohen, the Director of Media Relations for Celebrity Sports. "People love Birdman, as soon as we announced that he was going to be in the store, we sold out all 400 tickets in less than a day."

Celebrity Sports has had many other autograph-singing sessions in the past, but before Andersen's appearance, the highest amount of tickets they sold were 40, according to Cohen.

The event was scheduled to start at 6:30, however that didn't stop fans to get there as early as 1:00 p.m. "I wanted to make sure I got to meet Birdman," said one of the fans who got to Town Center at 1:30 p.m.

"Everybody loves him, everybody loves him," said HEAT fan Jonathan of Andersen. "He needs to stay, no matter what."

Lazaro "Baby Birdman" Pereira also appeared at the mall – and got plenty of attention of his own.

"It's crazy out here, it's too many people out here. We're getting mobbed. Everybody wants to see Baby Birdman," his father Ernesto Pereira said.

"This all started when my wife did Lazaro's hair in a mohawk like Chris Andersen," explained Pereira. "I took a photo, sent it to my father who Photoshoped all the tattoos, and from there the rest has been a complete whirlwind."

Andersen, who was an integral part of the Miami HEAT this postseason averaging 6.4 points, and 4.1 rebounds per game on 15.2 minutes per game, is set to become an unrestricted free agent on July 1st.

Andersen had arguably the best regular-season per-minute production of his career, he then followed it with an even better playoff run in which he shot a red-hot 81 percent.

With all the speculation as to what Birdman will do this offseason, support like the one he received Wednesday night in Boca Raton might help keep his nest in South Beach for a few more years.

Celebrity Sports is scheduled to have Mike Miller and Udonis Haslem both in the store on August 10, more information will be released soon, make sure to check back.
