New school building not ready yet

By B.C. Manion
bcmanion@lakerlutznews.com

Construction of a new school building at Saint Anthony School in San Antonio should be completed in November, with classes scheduled to move into the structure after the holiday break.

Ground was broken on the new 17,905-square-foot brick structure last November, and initially the structure was supposed to be completed for the start of classes in the fall. However, the building was not ready when classes began on Aug. 18, so four portable classrooms remain on the campus, while construction continues for students in grades five through eight.

Those temporary classrooms are situated between Saint Anthony of Padua Church and the Convent of the Franciscan Sisters of Saint Elizabeth.

Students in kindergarten through fourth grade, as well as the media center, computer lab, cafeteria, Spanish classroom and administrative offices, continue to operate in the school's historic building.

Golf is a favorite pastime of many older players, but it has not really attracted the younger generation. For golfers like Richard Buddy of Wesley Chapel, it might be harder to find golf courses in the future.

Golf courses are in trouble, and Florida — which boasts more golf courses than any other state in the nation — could be hit the hardest.

The latest to experience trouble is Scotland Yards Golf Club on U.S. 301 in Dade City. The bank that holds the mortgage on the course, First National Bank of Pasco, started foreclosure proceedings against the 100-acre course last month. However, course owner David Rinaldo says those problems look worse than they actually are.

"The course has financial issues like every golf course in America," Rinaldo told The Laker/Lutz News in an email. "But it is not shutting down."

Golf courses are suffering financially in different parts of the country, especially Florida, as interest in the sport wanes from its peak over the last few decades. Last year, 160 golf courses shut down in the nation, and 300 have closed in the last few years, the National Golf Foundation reported, according to published reports.

Florida has more than 1,200 courses, enough to have one course for every 16,000 people. That's just too many for the market to sustain, one golf pro says, especially with other recreational activities that may be less time consuming and less expensive competing against the game.

"Golf was in its heyday 20 or 30 years

THE VOTES ARE IN

Arlys Springer, 75, of Zephyrhills, brought her 2-year-old granddaughter, Sophia Douglas, along with her to the polling place.

She has never missed an election. "I'm an American citizen," Springer said. "If I'm going to complain, I'm going to vote."

Spring was a poll worker for 27 years, and was disappointed in the low turnout last week.

"I wish more people would come out to vote," she said. "When my neighbors start to complain, I say, 'Did you vote?'"

Saint Leo unveils cybersecurity masters program

By Michael Murillo
mmurillo@lakerlutznews.com

Providing personal information on the Internet can save time and offer convenience, but it also carries well-known risks.

Hackers, identity thieves and malicious software can jeopardize someone's financial and personal well-being with just a few clicks of a mouse.

Even if you try not to share your information online, companies that have your data and store it on their computers can make you susceptible if they become a target of hackers.

As a result, cybersecurity — the efforts of organizations to thwart attacks on networks and sensitive data — has become an important focal point for information technology professionals.

At Saint Leo University, it's about to be a masters degree program. And according to Vyas Krishnan, a professor with the department of computer science and information systems as well as the lead academic technologist, it couldn't come at a better time.

"You hear in the news about so many data breaches, and hackers getting onto corporations' networks and stealing either customers information or stealing their proprietary information," Krishnan said. "This problem has been worsening over the past five years."

Because of increased demand, the industry is seeing a shortage of trained cybersecurity professionals, he said, making the program valuable to prospective students.

Krishnan will oversee the new 36-credit hour program beginning this fall. The first offerings will be on-campus only, with online availability coming early next year.

A combination of five existing courses offered at the university and seven new courses make up the program, which attempts to cover the areas of vulnerability that exist in systems run by corporations or government agencies. And those systems, Krishnan said, are getting more complicated and more vulnerable as time goes on.

"A lot of the complexity of information technology infrastructure has resulted in multiple points of weakness," he said.

As a result, a professional in that field needs to know the various areas where threats can manifest, how to defend against them, and how to maintain the integrity of the entire system.

Class subjects include database security, risk management, cloud computing security, systems security management, network se-

Vyas Krishnan will oversee Saint Leo University's new cybersecurity masters program, which was 18 months in the making.

Protecting yourself from cyber threats

While no system is 100 percent safe, there are some common sense steps individuals can take to keep themselves better protected from threats, said Vyas Krishnan, who oversees the new cybersecurity masters program at Saint Leo University.

- Make sure your computer has an antivirus program and firewall installed. These tools help identify existing threats and prevent them from getting through to your computer.

- Keep your operating system up to date, and let it update automatically if possible. "It's a complex piece of software, and when it's initially released in the market, there could be some vulnerabilities that they may not be aware of," Krishnan said. Updates allow the company to close potential holes in the system, but they can't fix the problems if the user doesn't allow it to be updated.

- Make sure any website where you give personal information is secure. A website where you have to type in personal information should have "https://" instead of "http://" in the address bar. That extra 's' means the information is encrypted and better protected.

- Be careful about responding to emails that look like they're from companies you know. Legitimate correspondence from a company won't ask you to provide sensitive information. If it does, it could be a scam designed to look like a real email from a known company.

Wells makes history, Moore ready for November

By Michael Hinman
mhinman@lakerlutznews.com

The Pasco County Commission has had its share of lopsided victories in the last 30 or so years. But there's never been one like the District 4 race last week between current commissioner Henry Wilson Jr., and Mike Wells Jr.

More than 36 percentage points separated Wells from Wilson, the largest margin of victory since 2010 when Commissioner Pat Mulieri defeated independent candidate Clay Colson to keep her seat on District 2 by 40 percentage points.

Winners who pick up more than 60 percent of the vote in races typically are incumbents like Mulieri, who captured 61 percent of the vote in 1998, and 62 percent in 2002. But rarely, if ever, is the candidate who hits that milestone the challenger looking to unseat the incumbent.

Wilson won his seat in an upset win over Mike Cox in 2010, surprising nearly everyone with 52 percent of the vote. This time around, with most of the attention on the open seat left by Mulieri's retirement in District 2, there was a question on whether or not Wilson would even be challenged by anyone else.

That is until early April when Wells, the son of former county commissioner and current county property appraiser Mike

B.C. MANION/STAFF PHOTOS

Last week's primary election attracted less than 15 percent of registered voters. But that's all that was needed to elect one county commissioner, and nominate another one for the November election.

Wells Sr., decided it was time to run.

"We need leadership there, and we need it right now," Wells told The Laker/Lutz News last month ahead of the primary. "We lost Ann Hildebrand on the commission a few years back, and now Ted Schrader says he is retiring in a couple years. Quite frankly, that creates a vacuum that needs to be fixed."

Wells would take the seat with 68 percent of the vote, the biggest win of any commission candidate over an incumbent since at least 1980. The former Enterprise Rent-A-Car area manager and current real estate agent won every precinct in the county, and never trailed Wilson as the results were tabulated last week.

"When I started this journey very late into the campaign season, I did so because I wanted the opportunity to help as many people in Pasco County as I could," Wells wrote on his Facebook page after the election. "So I went into the community and met with you. We met, we talked, you talked, and I listened. I'm still holding on to all of our conversations, and all of your stories."

Because this seat was decided during primary season, Wilson will continue as a commissioner until November. He told The Laker/Lutz News that he will spend that time doing what he has done all along: serving the people of Pasco County, and "looking out for their best interests."

"As far as my future, right now we are trusting God for what he has planned ahead of myself and my family, and am excited to see where that journey will take us."

One other commission seat remains up for grabs, and that's the one being vacated by Mulieri, who is retiring after 20 years. Mike Moore, who raised far more money than his opponents, took a first step toward that seat with a primary win.

"I am humbled by the support our campaign has received from so many people from across Pasco County," Moore said. "I also deeply appreciate all the volunteers who have worked very hard toward our victory this evening."

Moore won a little more than 50 percent of the vote in a campaign where he raised more than $100,000, and received support from outside political groups that purchased airtime on local television stations featuring Pasco County Sheriff Chris Nocco.

Finishing as the runner-up for the second time in the primary is former state Rep. Ken Littlefield, who earned 28 percent of the vote.

"It was an impressive win by Mike Moore," Littlefield said. "To prevail in a three-candidate primary with over 50 percent of the vote is a notable feat and deserves congratulations."

Littlefield will continue to do what he has done the last five years, he said: "Get up early, put a tie on, and go work for Hodges Family Funeral Home."

"I enjoy the work, and at this time, have no plans to run for public office," he said.

Bob Robertson, a financial analyst who lives in Lake Bernadette in Zephyrhills, left the door slightly more open for a possible future run.

"It was important to me to offer myself without accepting funds from anyone that might compromise me later," he said. "Hopefully now, life returns to some sense of normal. As to future plans, impossible to know at this point."

Moore now faces Erika Remsberg, who won the Democratic nomination for the District 2 commission seat without opposition.

Community voices at the polls for the primaries

Insurance agent Linda Spence, 63, of Zephyrhills said she headed to the polls on Aug. 26 because she wanted to show her support for Gov. Rick Scott in his bid for re-election.

Spence had just moved to Zephyrhills from Brandon.

"This is my first time voting in Pasco County," she said. "It was very easy. I'm used to a longer line in Hillsborough County."

Lavinia Pascariu Gollapudi and Victor Gollapudi pulled up to the polling place at the Land O' Lakes Community Center shortly after 6 p.m., to be sure to beat the closing time an hour later.

The couple recently moved to the area from the St. Louis metro area, and said they didn't know much about the candidates.

Victor noted that it wouldn't matter who was on the ballot because they consider voting to be their civic duty.

Diane Baumann, a nurse from Zephyrhills, said she came out to vote as part of her civic duty.

Baumann, who said she's "50-plus" years old, added that she casts her ballot because she appreciates the sacrifices that others have made to enable her to enjoy that right.

Debra Townsend, a 60-year-old kindergarten aide who works in Hillsborough County, was casting her first vote in Pasco because her family just moved to Wesley Chapel.

She came out to vote against Gov. Rick Scott.

"I don't like our governor, she said. "I don't like him at all. I made sure I was here."

Her dad emphasized the importance of voting, and that stuck with her.

Amos Davis, 68, of Wesley Chapel, is a retired vehicle glass installer, who wanted to support the governor.

"I voted for Scott," he said.

Davis came to the polls bearing a list of suggested candidates from his wife.

"She knows more about this than I do," he said. "I'm just an old redneck hillbilly."

Elizabeth Beck, 34, a Land O' Lakes kindergarten teacher, said she wanted to be sure to vote to cast her ballot in the race for governor.

"I want to vote for the candidate who will best support our schools, my students and my profession," she said.

She also wanted to set a good example for the students she teaches at Pine View Elementary School.

Pasco EDC honors local businesses for creating jobs

By Michael Hinman
mhinman@lakerlutznews.com

One day nearly a decade ago, Marcus and Erin Meyer realized their dream of opening their own business, kickstarting Gator Cleaning Solutions out of their garage. Not long after, it would move to a new home the couple bought in Land O' Lakes, before finally taking up 2,500 square feet of warehouse space in Odessa.

They employ eight people in their corporate office, and more than 80 people on cleaning crews that now include restoration services, carpet and grout cleaning.

They have provided plenty of jobs in the cleaning industry, and because of that, they are one of eight companies honored by the Pasco County Economic Development Council at its Industry of the Year Awards at Saddlebrook Resort.

"The reason why we were nominated in the first place is because there was a lot of focus on job creation, which is great, because we've created a lot of jobs," Erin Meyer said. "And we're still growing. It's exciting — a little nerve-wracking at times, but it's fun. There are days I'm pulling my hair out, and days I'm doing a dance."

Pasco EDC honored Gator Cleaning with one of two service and distribution awards, the second going to A&K Energy Conservation in Dade City. They both were chosen from more than 30 nominees, who were judged based on growth in areas like technology, innovation, job creation, capital investment and community service.

While some companies were born and grown up in Pasco, others were attracted by what the county had to offer and relocated here. DataMentors LLC started 15 years ago in Tampa, but relocated to Wesley Chapel seven years ago on land they purchased on Oak Myrtle Lane.

"It's kind of nice looking out the window and seeing trees instead of concrete," said Bob Orf, the chief executive of DataMentors, which was honored with the technology award Tuesday night. "We took a little bit of a risk when we bought the land. There was no road to it when we purchased the property. We were the first building in this area, and it's worked out terrifically."

DataMentors is a data management company that requires a secure location for its many servers. The company started with five employees, but now has 36, working in areas like programmers and technicians.

"We do a lot of recruiting right out of colleges like the University of South Florida and the University of Central Florida," Orf said. "There are not a lot of high-tech companies in Pasco, but you know, we're happy to be here, and be one of the pioneers here."

Half the employee base lives in Pasco, while the other half commutes in from Hillsborough County, Orf said. That's great DataMentors LLC, one of the Pasco Economic Development Council Industry of the Year winners, has maintained strong employee retention by finding ways to keep them motivated. for him, however, because the "reverse commute" — driving in the opposite direction of rush-hour traffic — makes working in Pasco quite appealing.

"We don't have a lot of turnover here," he said. "Almost a third of our employees have been with us at least 10 years. And, you know, we try to do what's right for our employees, because that's a win-win for us."

Other winners at the Pasco EDC event included:

- MedActive Oral Pharmaceuticals of Odessa won the new business award.
- Rochester Electro-Medical Inc., of Lutz, and Seaway Plastics Engineering Inc., of Port Richey, both won manufacturer of the year.
- Pasco-Hernando State College in New Port Richey was given the special contribution award.
- Withlacoochee River Electric Cooperative of Shady Hills was given the special recognition award.

Construction projects to yield big changes

By B.C. Manion
bcmanion@lakerlutznews.com

Pasco County Schools has taken on an ambitious construction schedule that will result in significant changes for thousands of students across Central and East Pasco County in the next few years.

Projects now underway will result in re-opening Quail Hollow Elementary School in Wesley Chapel and Sanders Memorial Elementary School in Land O' Lakes next year.

Quail Hollow will have enclosed classrooms, updated building systems and new technology, said John Petrashek, director of construction services for Pasco County Schools. The technology will be the same as any new elementary school in the district.

Quail Hollow also will be larger. The district is adding eight classrooms there to accommodate 160 additional students, increasing the total capacity to 800.

The additional space at Quail Hollow will result in a boundary change to bring more students there, said Chris Williams, director of planning for Pasco County Schools. Sanders will be a magnet school for science, technology, engineering, arts and mathematics.

The school will not have boundaries and it will enroll its students through the district's School Choice program.

The district does not want to reduce crowding at Oakstead and Connerton elementary schools, so students from those schools likely will be given a higher priority for admission to Sanders.

The district has been working for months on the design for High School GGG, which is slated to open in August 2017 on the west side of Old Pasco Road near Overpass Road. The school will have a capacity of 1,900 students.

"It's going to be built as a high school," Petrashek said, but it will open serving students beginning in sixth grade.

The new school will affect existing boundaries for Wiregrass Ranch and Wesley Chapel high schools, as well as Weightman and Long middle schools, Williams said.

"We don't have the money to build the Construction crews have a long way to go to get Sanders Memorial Elementary School ready to become a magnet school for science, technology, engineering, art and mathematics. District officials say the school in Land O' Lakes will be ready for the upcoming school year.

full middle school and the full high school. This will provide us relief," he said. "Then, as the population continues to grow, and the demand is there, we'll build a full-blown middle school next door to it."

"We have it master planned and master designed for both," Petrashek said.

The site is a couple hundred acres, so it can easily accommodate a high school and a middle school, Williams said. And the district also is planning to add some other district facilities there as well.

Middle School HH, which will eventually be built there, is not yet included on a district timetable because no funding is yet available, Petrashek said. The school is being designed with two large classroom buildings, with one to be used by middle school students, and the other to be used by high school students.

They'll share the cafeteria and athletic facilities, but there will be separate locker rooms for the younger and older students, Petrashek said.

The school will operate much like a school within a school, with one principal overseeing assistant principals who specialize in high school and middle school students.

The district also is planning to add an elementary school, known as Elementary School B, on land within a new residential development, Bexley Ranch, now beginning to take shape near State Road 54 and the Suncoast Parkway in Land O' Lakes, Williams said.

"That's going to be a huge reliever for Oakstead and Odessa elementary," Williams said.

Unlike other district elementary schools, which have been designed for 762 students, Elementary School B could be built to accommodate nearly 1,000 students, he said, although that approach is still in the discussion phase.

The district is looking at opening that school in 2017.

Elementary W, another school planned to open in August 2016, would be built next to Long Middle not far from which is next to Wiregrass Ranch High, and Pasco-Hernando State College's Porter Campus at Wiregrass Ranch. The school aims to reduce crowding at Double Branch and Sand Pine elementary schools, as well as provide some relief for Seven Oaks Elementary School, Williams said.

"Seven Oaks really popped this year," he said.

The relief for Seven Oaks may involve sending some of those students to Sand Pine or shifting them to Elementary W, Williams said, noting its not yet clear what path officials will take.

"In the future we'll have a school in the Northwood development," he said. "That's south of Seven Oaks. Ultimately, that's going to provide the relief for Seven Oaks."

While the district looks ahead to these projects, it also has completed work on a number of improvements in other schools.

The new gym at Stewart Middle School in Zephyrhills was finished at the end of last school year just in time for the eighth-grade graduation exercises, Petrashek said. But students are just now getting full use of the new facility.

"It's still brand new," Petrashek said.

The renovation of the weight room and locker rooms at Zephyrhills High School also is now complete, Petrashek said. Crews completed the renovation of the school clinic at Cox Elementary School in Dade City over the summer.

"It was simply outdated. It wasn't functioning, so we redid that," Petrashek said.

Now, the district is working on the design for a $5 million construction project at Cox that will add a new cafeteria and improve parking and the drop-off loop, Petrashek said, which could be completed by August 2016.

The district also is at the design stage of a campus renovation project at Pasco Elementary School in Dade City. The project, expected to be completed by August 2016, involves renovating classrooms, which will include infrastructure upgrades, new technology and fire sprinklers.

Portable classrooms will be brought in to enable construction work to be done while the campus is occupied.

Sister Alice Ottapurackal is the principal of Saint Anthony School.

which was built in 1922, said Sister Alice Ottapurackal, the school's principal.

The building that's under construction represents a new chapter in the school's history. Not only is Saint Anthony School the oldest parochial school in the diocese, it's also one of the oldest Catholic schools in Florida.

San Antonio was founded in 1882 as a Catholic colony. A year later, a widowed woman named Cecilia Morse moved into the community with her six children.

When she inquired about a school for the children, she was told it could wait until there were more settlers. So she began teaching 14 children, including her children, in her kitchen.

In April 1884, the classes were moved into the church. Then that November, they moved into a frame building.

The new building is the fourth in the school's history. Unlike previous structures constructed on the school campus, this one is an additional building, not a replacement.

The existing historic brick structure replaced a two-story structure built in 1899, which replaced the original frame structure built in 1884.

The historic brick building will remain and will be used for some school functions.

The school began the 2014-15 academic year with an enrollment of 210, with students coming from nearby places such as San Antonio and Dade City, and farther away, from Zephyrhills, Brooksville, Land O' Lakes, New Tampa and other communities.

The school emphasizes academic excellence, while teaching the Catholic faith.

ago, when that was the thing to do, both socially and sports wise," said Laura Sanderson, a pro at Meadow Oaks Golf & Country Club in Hudson. "Everyone built a bunch of golf courses because, back then, we could keep them full. But now people's interests have changed, especially the younger generation. People just have better things to do with their time and money."

The summer season hasn't helped, when many seasonal residents are in their northern homes, and those remaining finding it too hot to hit the links. Even Meadow Oaks, which averages 275 golfers a day during the peak season, is seeing just a little more than 100 during the summer months.

But getting through those times means knowing that it's coming, and being ready for it. Quail Hollow Golf Course in Wesley Chapel, for example, has focused on attracting a lot of non-golf events like motorcycle shows and big band performances, Sanderson said.

Others, however, would likely struggle no matter what they tried to do. And all of that goes back to how golf courses were originally financed.

Mortgages — typically in the millions of dollars — were structured in a way that a course could pay its note and still make a profit by charging $70 a round, for example.

"People don't have that kind of excess money anymore, or if they do, they are not really willing to put it toward golf," Sanderson said.

Instead, many have to cut fees, and then find ways to save expenses. More often than not, golf courses choose to skimp on maintenance — which could drive away even more golfers, and make their financial situation worse.

—Laura Sanderson, golf pro at Meadow Oaks

Even after Plantation Palms Golf Club in Land O' Lakes shut down in May, maintenance crews kept the course in mostly good shape. However, when the workers stopped coming, the course fell into disrepair.

"After a matter of a couple months of that, it becomes completely unplayable," Sanderson said. "You'll lose the greens, and it's not that you can just go back and mow it. You'll have to replace it, and that could cost you $1 million right there."

Plantation Palms was put up for sale last month for $1.2 million, considerably down from the $2.2 million MJS Golf Club LLC paid for it in 2011.

Plantation Palms was one of many communities in the region, and in the country, anchored by golf courses. But that's not happening anymore. Some homeowners in Plantation Palms complained about the loss of home value, and many golf course designers have turned to Europe and Asia to build new courses, not finding any market in the United States.

But is golf fighting for its life? Sanderson doesn't think so. It's more about "righting the ship."

"Golf is still strong, we just have too much product out there, too many courses out there," she said. "We definitely need to grow the industry from the standpoint of the younger generation, but we're just shaking out some of the excess courses. The ones that survive are going to end up being good in the long run."

curity, strategic planning, and legal and compliance issues. The latter is important because different business sectors such as health and finance have different requirements, and a skilled cybersecurity professional needs to know the nuances of their particular industry, Krishnan said.

Graduation results in earning a master's degree, but there's more to it than that. Industry certifications are an important part of the information technology field, Krishnan said, and the program is designed to help graduates qualify for them.

The new program, which is open to students with some previous information technology education or work experience, was 18 months in the making. The university already is pleased with the initial interest, officials said. Around 20 students will take part when the degree is first offered, which exceeds Saint Leo's original goals.

The online offering in 2015 will allow them to increase capacity as well.

Krishnan, who has been with the university for five years and played an integral role in getting this program off the ground, also is satisfied with the program's development and course offerings.

"I feel very good about it," he said. "I think we've done a great job in putting together a very sophisticated, technically advanced, state-of-the-art program."

Activities picking up as residents head back

By Helene Rubenstein
Grand Horizons

The summer months continue and activities are starting to pick up. They are still going strong with the many card games, bingo, dominoes, mahjong and much more.

In a short time, art, pinocle and other activities also will be on the agenda.

The summer months bring so many of the people from Grand Horizons to the pool to cool off and refresh themselves. We had a pool party a little while ago, and that was a huge success. From what I heard, they had Wii Bowling in the community center after the party.

They also are continuing taking the photos of the residents to put in the new directory that will be coming out shortly. They took several photos during the summer months, and from what I understand, they will be taking more in the following months. So, for the people who have gone elsewhere during the summer, your chance is coming. Do not despair, as you will also get an opportunity to have your picture taken and put in the brand new telephone directory.

They still have the lunch connoisseurs once a month, and for the month of August they went to the Olive Garden. Bill and Pidge Elliott were the host and hostess for this gathering, and they did a superb job.

I spoke to Bill and he mentioned that while they were there previously, they knew what to ask for in the seating so people could be comfortable and, therefore, get to mingle with everyone else. So, they ended up having several booths with about 26 people altogether.

Everyone had a good time. I have gone to the Olive Garden before and they have delicious dinners.

On Aug. 10, there was an ice cream social. We have those several times in the winter months, but it seems like it is always on the calendar for the summer months. And I am so glad, as I understand the weather is so hot, humid and sticky they need something like this to cool off and look forward to.

I spoke to Judy Ellsworth, and she mentioned that it was a very rainy day, so not as many attended as had originally signed up. But they still had a nice turnout of 37 residents. I think that sounds like a good number to me.

There was lots of ice cream and homemade hot fudge for all. Just writing this, I can taste the ice cream and the toppings. Yum.

Bill and Judy Ellsworth, and Steve and Nancy Lay hosted the social with Mim and Terry Gardner helping out. So, our thanks go out to everyone who pitched in. It definitely was appreciated.

As previously mentioned, Grand Horizons has a craft class, hosted by Cheryl Leone, once a week. Recently Annmarie Shackewyc stated that in the class, they painted back paver doorstops and most everyone did them as animals. Annmarie created them as cute girls. Two girls were in pink while a third was in blue. The three girls standing together created a nice contrast.

Heat doesn't deter those returning to Gem Estates

By Lee Heffelfinger
Gem Estates

Some of you may remember when I wrote about the alligator we had in the park. Well now we see coyotes roaming through the park, as well.

Several people have seen evidence of the coyotes, and some even took pictures of them during the day. We're warning our residents to keep their pets indoors or to be close at hand when they go outside.

What's next? One of our residents recently returned from a fantastic two-fold trip to Anchorage, Alaska. Caroline Wagoner left from Tampa to Bakersfield, California, where she spent a week visiting her daughter, Yvonne.

From there, Caroline and Yvonne flew to Anchorage. There they were met by Caroline's brother in an authentic 1968 Volkswagen bus restored by her brother, Charles Bates and wife Liz, who lived in Anchorage for many years since his stint in Vietnam.

Caroline was reminiscing about the wonderful time she had sightseeing in that VW bus.

The weather was wonderful with temperatures in the mid 60s, even though it can go as low as in the 20s in winter days, which makes it perfect for skiing, skating or dog mushing. She explained how Anchorage is more affordable than a lot of U.S. cities because they have no sales tax.

Hundreds of bird species call Anchorage home, such as loons, pintail ducks and terns. Potter Marsh also is a good spot for beavers and moose, which can be seen along the Tony Knowles coastal trail that stretches 11 miles along Cook Inlet from downtown to Kincaid Park.

She also saw terrific views along Mount McKinley and Mount Susitna, also known as Sleeping Lady.

The day cruise she took was exciting when she heard a sharp crack followed by a long rumble and suddenly there was a massive piece of ice falling from the face of a glacier into the water below.

Among many of her highlights was the Alaska Native Heritage Center where you can hear storytelling, authentic song and dance routines, and see finely made crafts by skilled natives.

There are so many terrific places to fish in the area, and the drive north to Talkeetna will take you by several good salmon spots. The largest salmon caught in Alaska weighed in at 97 pounds, and the largest halibut was 459 pounds.

There are five kinds of salmon — chub sockeye, king, silver and pink. I knew of only two, the king or red and the pink, because of the cans they come in.

They took a train ride to Talkeetna where they met the honorary mayor, a cat named Mr. Stubbs.

They went through the Whittier tunnel on the way to Kenai Fjords National Park, and took a 6.5-hour cruise and saw otters, five humpback whales, a pod of beluga whales, and lots of bird life. Caroline has told me she already is planning to go back in two years and stay a little longer, but no matter how long you stay, you can't see it all. It's just a beautiful state.

Now that September is here, we're already learning of several of our residents planning to return. It's still mighty hot and August "dog" days were brutal, but you just can't stay away from Zephyrhills.

Loretta Green has returned from visiting family and friends in New York, and our president, Al Bennett, and wife Deanie are returning from Massachusetts in time to oversee construction of the addition to our clubhouse.

I missed a couple of August birthdays for Vicki Bluhm and Brent Slipp. Sorry about that. September birthday wishes go out to Madeline Macomber, Carol Farnsworth and Ron Plummer. Please let me know if I missed anyone.
