Once the students wrapped production, librarians uploaded the videos to YouTube. The videos are archived in the UF Institutional Repository for preservation. Library staff embedded the videos into subject guides to supplement face-to-face instruction.

The first year experience course at UF, First-Year Florida, integrated the videos into their library instruction sessions. These students took surveys to help us determine the videos’ value as learning objects and as products of peers teaching peers library skills.