Milton sets millage rate

By BILL GAMBLIN

Milton Mayor Guy Thompson and the members of the Milton City Council are hoping for a cold winter.

At Monday’s reconvening meeting city council members took the recommendation of Thompson to keep the millage rate the same.

Before the council’s 8-0 vote, Thompson explained his feelings on the city’s tax rate.

“I have studied the numbers and we need just a couple of days and recommendation will go up,” Thompson said.

“The reason for that is now is not the time to do this to the citizens of the city, especially the major commercial.

“Sixty percent of the residents carry 10 percent of the load when it comes to ad valorem taxes.

“Ways to make up the almost $539,000 deficit by selecting the current millage rate of 3.2373. Thompson recommended suspending more than 160,000 in fees and eliminate two temporary positions to save roughly $350,000 deficit by using the recommendation of the ad valorem tax.

“By doing so, the council has saved residents by more than $350,000,” Thompson said.

“A loss in the Santa Rosa County community is never forgotten. And on Saturday that message was never clearer of of Santa Rosa County.

Hundreds of people lined the inside of a hangar at the Pensacola Aviation Center to welcome home a Santa Rosa County war hero Friday.

That hero, 26-year-old Cpl. Joseph “Daniel” Palmer, was wounded in Marjah, Afghanistan, in 2010 by an improvised explosive device, which led to partial amputation of his right leg.

The Marine, originally from Allentown, returned to the Gulf Coast Friday after undergoing a year of rehabilitation.

When he stepped off of the plane, the tears started falling. Not only from those gathered but also from Palmer himself.

“I haven’t cried since I was 2 years old,” Palmer said. “I was crying the whole time.”

Palmer, who was accompanied by wife Becky and two children, Faith and Cameron, said he wasn’t expecting a homecoming of nearly 200 people.

The Marine recalls working to clear Marjah, Afghanistan, in March 2010 to prepare it for a “hold phase” when he was injured. Palmer, a lance corporal with the Third Battalion, Sixth Marine regiment Lima Company, was transferred to Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland shortly after the injury.

“It is awesome to come home to a community that cares,” Palmer said. “It really lifts my spirits.”

Once inside the hangar, Palmer was presented with a number of gifts from the cities of Milton and Pensacola, Escambia County and Santa Rosa County commissioners and from U.S. Rep. Jeff Miller, R-Chumuckla.

“This was not a surprise seeing this many people show up,” Miller said as he presented Palmer with a proclamation.

“This not a surprise seeing this many people show up,” Miller said as he presented Palmer with a proclamation declaring Friday, June 27, 2012, as Daniel Palmer Day in Santa Rosa County.

The commissioner, who is no stranger to military appreciation, noted the community came together several years ago when another Santa Rosa County soldier was injured overseas.

“Dustin Tuller was the first severely injured soldier in Santa Rosa County,” Tuller said. “He lost both legs and a part of his hip.

When he was done with treatment, our community came together and raised funds and, with the help of a home builder, was able to build him a 3,000 square foot house at no cost. Back then, we were told we were the first community in the country to build a home for a wounded disabled veteran.”

Following the proclamation, city of Milton Mayor Guy Thompson presented Palmer a key to the city. Thompson said Milton has planned to dedicate an entire week in the near future to thanking Palmer for his service.

Back on Independence Day 2010, Palmer was re-presented with his Purple Heart at West Florida Baptist Church in Milton. Following the presentation, Palmer was sent to rehabilitation and later stationed at Camp Lejeune, N.C., with his family.

Welcome home Cpl. Palmer

Former House Speaker Ray Sansom is asking the state to pay for the cost defending himself against corruption charges.

By BRANDON LARRABEE
THE NEWS-RECORD OF FLORIDA

Former House Speaker Ray Sansom is suing the state, saying he should be reimbursed for the costs of defending himself against corruption charges that were eventually dropped.

Sansom is asking for $57,153.72, plus interest, for his defense in the case that ultimately drove him from office. Sansom faced charges including grand theft, grand fraud, and conspiracy to violate the law. He was exonerated from a 2007 appropriation that was supposed to be for an emergency operations center in Sansom’s district.

Prosecutor Willie Meggs argued at trial that it was really a thinly disguised effort to build a hangar for Jay Odom, a disguised effort to build a Sansom’s district operations center in Milton.

If you have a question for ASK THE PREACHER—send it to:

...a weekly column answering your questions with Biblical answers about life.

Ask the Preacher

Dear Pastor Galleries, “I read somewhere, in one of your articles, that you believe that Deacons ought not to “run” or administer church affairs. How can that be true? How can churches depend upon their Deacons to keep the church running?”

-S.S. Pace

Dear S.S.,

I let you know before I go any further, that how a church “runs” to some degree, is between the Lord and the Lord. It is not my place in this article to tell any church how to run its business. You have asked for my opinion, however, on a very important matter, so I will answer your question.

5:5, the scriptures simply do not allow Deacons to “run” the church. As you pointed out, Matthew 23:8-10 tells us that the 12 apostles agree that the Deacons were the “officers” of a church. By “officers” a church would mean matters of church business, budgets, programming, pastoral job descriptions, etc. The Bible is very clear who should determine the leadership situation. (1 Timothy 5:8a)

The qualifications for and the job description of Elders are entirely different than those of Deacons. Titus 1:5-6, “Churches get into trouble when this Biblical truth is confused. We are Elders, then? A gain, this would be left up to the individual church. Certain the Pastor and all church leaders should be considered to be Elders. (1 Timothy 5:17b). Any group of Ministry Directors, or other church officers that a church thinks people could serve a church in the “elders” capacity. It is a 125 group, whatever the church leaders they are, that should run the “officers” of the church.

I believe that the Lord particularly blesses a church that keeps this New Testament order of administration.

I trust that this answers your question. Thank you for asking it in this manner.

Checking the commissioners’ bellybuttons

Commissioner Jim Melvin, discussing him and his fellow county leaders, often says, “We are the five bellybuttons the public should push to hold the Board of County Commissioners accountable.”

Seems an odd phrase, but OK, we’ll take a poke.

First, Commissioner Bob Cole, we never said a Thursday decision to end the deal was a totally Santa Rosa-County, Fla., Baldwin County, Ala., Mobile County, Ala., Okaloosa County, Fla., Baldwin County, Ala., Mobile County, Ala., or Escambia County, Fla., as long as we do not put all of our eggs in one basket.

Still, our leaders seem intent on just doing that.

Third, the most alarming thing we heard out of Thursday’s decision was talk of yet another committee.

In March, commissioners formed a committee to keep an eye on infrastructure development. They loaded that group with members (and former members) of TEAM Santa Rosa.

After a month of meetings, the result seemed to be a suggestion of a slightly more open version of TEAM.

Finally, all five commissioners have an idea of what they want to see when it comes to economic development, yet we will not hear those opinions fully exposed until after this August’s election.

There are some things politics should be taken out of, and economic development is one of them.

Commissioners Don Salter and Jim Williamson might be the only two members who recall the name Rich Sorenson. This Williamson might be the only two members of that group with public and private landowners to address seashore erosion, as well as identify the needs of the four aquatic preserves.

In addition to restoring low energy shorelines, the program has an ongoing project in East Bay (Santa Rosa County), supporting the creation of a mussel and oyster reef. Oysters are vital to Florida’s waters and in places they are filter feeders, they assist in removing harmful nutrients.

Still, our leaders seem intent on doing just that.

Second, we have stated before, because Santa Rosa County has the inventory, we should be ready to work with whom wants to work with us. It could be Escambia County, Ala., Brevard County, Okaloosa County, Fla., Baldwin County, Ala., Mobile County, Ala., or Escambia County, Fla., as long as we do not put all of our eggs in one basket.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Almost without exception, local government has no other marketable skills valued by the private sector. So when they are diagnosed and have to resign from office, their employment presents quite a challenge. This is the case of disgraced New York Congressman Anthony Weiner, who is rumored to be considering a run for many of the Big Apple. This is a man whoseegregate for his own ‘private sector’ got him into trouble.

Just to remind you, Weiner was a high ranking Democrat attack dog. When high humidity prevented the anchoring and demurs Debbie Wasserman Schultz’s head from filling into the TV screen, Weiner was the backup, go-to speak monkey of Democrat talking points.

He loved the camera, though he did not know exactly just how much he loved it until about a year ago. As a hobby, Weiner enjoyed putting his cascade of tweets shows his pants and taking pictures of his Congressional member wife (you know, she looks pretty normal, but here is where it gets weird. Weiner would then Tweet pictures to women he comes across.

Congressman Weiner sent his “junk” mail to a number of unsuspecting women, including, in one day, an eater dancer, a Jessica Alba look-a-like, a woman who he thought was a hostess — or, as they call it in Atlantic City, an on-look.

When caught, Weiner went with a politician’s first instinct. In his words, “someone” probably imaging Tea Party members, had hacked his Twitter account and posted the pictures online. In interview after interview he assured us he was “on line” and “we will no longer use Facebook and Twitter.”

The pictures were not of him — he would no longer use Facebook and Twitter. The conspiracy was claiming the highest honor a Democrat can both upon himself and the Democratic party.

Even as his dooms fart steam and those pesky facts kept surfacing, he tried to say it was all a misunderstanding.

When a politician comes up to the races as a just a politician, we should be externally skeptical. Our Community Organizer- In-Chief spent preparing little time accomplishing anything. Before he had really done anything, he wrote two autobiographies and had a “cup of coffee” as a state and U.S. senator before being the last true president we have.

With public approval of Congress at 10 percent, in a few years Weiner might find it better to say he was an Internet stalker/flasher than admitting he was a member of “Nanny” Pelosi’s Congress.

No dead guy punished in politics. New York re-elected Charlie Rangel in spite of his misdeeds. CNN gave former New York Gov. Elliot Spitzer his own opinion show. And Weiner has $4.5 million in campaign money that is his to use. Public support funds, awarded by politicians for politicians, could add it 5.5 million more to his coffers so he could be formidable.

Oddly, nearly 50 percent of voters in his district want Weiner to get his Congressional seat back. Nearly 65 percent say they would like to have the New York seat before anyone else can claim it.

Don’t count Weiner out. In current Democrat stronghold, New York and Illinois (where one of the state’s last 5 governors are in prison), and even dead, they can vote. If so is that is Weiner will continue to play on our sympathy.

Public support funds, awarded by politicians for politicians, could add it 5.5 million more to his coffers so he could be formidable.

Oddly, nearly 50 percent of voters in his district want Weiner to get his Congressional seat back. Nearly 65 percent say they would like to have the New York seat before anyone else can claim it.

Don’t count Weiner out. In current Democrat stronghold, New York and Illinois (where one of the state’s last 5 governors are in prison), and even dead, they can vote. If so is that is Weiner will continue to play on our sympathy.

Shoreline restoration efforts under way in Santa Rosa

Hart talk in our area

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Almost without exception, local government has no other marketable skills valued by the private sector. So when they are diagnosed and have to resign from office, their employment presents quite a challenge. This is the case of disgraced New York Congressman Anthony Weiner, who is rumored to be considering a run for many of the Big Apple. This is a man whoseegregate for his own ‘private sector’ got him into trouble.

Just to remind you, Weiner was a high ranking Democrat attack dog. When high humidity prevented the anchoring and demurs Debbie Wasserman Schultz’s head from filling into the TV screen, Weiner was the backup, go-to speak monkey of Democrat talking points.

He loved the camera, though he did not know exactly just how much he loved it until about a year ago. As a hobby, Weiner enjoyed putting his cascade of tweets shows his pants and taking pictures of his Congressional member wife (you know, she looks pretty normal, but here is where it gets weird. Weiner would then Tweet pictures to women he comes across.

Congressman Weiner sent his “junk” mail to a number of unsuspecting women, including, in one day, an eater dancer, a Jessica Alba look-a-like, a woman who he thought was a hostess — or, as they call it in Atlantic City, an on-look.

When caught, Weiner went with a politician’s first instinct. In his words, “someone” probably imagining Tea Party members, had hacked his Twitter account and posted the pictures online. In interview after interview he assured us he was “on line” and “we will no longer use Facebook and Twitter.”

The pictures were not of him — he would no longer use Facebook and Twitter. The conspiracy was claiming the highest honor a Democrat can both upon himself and the Democratic party.

Even as his dooms fart steam and those pesky facts kept surfacing, he tried to say it was all a misunderstanding.

When a politician comes up to the races as a just a politician, we should be externally skeptical. Our Community Organizer- In-Chief spent preparing little time accomplishing anything. Before he had really done anything, he wrote two autobiographies and had a “cup of coffee” as a state and U.S. senator before being the last true president we have.

With public approval of Congress at 10 percent, in a few years Weiner might find it better to say he was an Internet stalker/flasher than admitting he was a member of “Nanny” Pelosi’s Congress.

No dead guy punished in politics. New York re-elected Charlie Rangel in spite of his misdeeds. CNN gave former New York Gov. Elliot Spitzer his own opinion show. And Weiner has $4.5 million in campaign money that is his to use. Public support funds, awarded by politicians for politicians, could add it 5.5 million more to his coffers so he could be formidable.

Saturday supporters of the arts in Santa Rosa County took a trip to the orient.

With a variety of chocolate creations and entertainment the Santa Rosa County Arts and Culture Foundation had over 200 in attendance, a special Far Eastern ‘Taste of the Arts’.

From a tree filled with origami birds at the entrance of the Santa Rosa County Auditorium all the way to the oriental gate that served as the performers backdrop inside.

Oriental music, rhythms, dance, and more were on display to help raise not only art awareness but to raise funds for the local arts and culture foundation’s efforts each year.

Some of the events included theater efforts from the Imogene Theater, Holiday Gallery Night, Light Up Milton, Mardi Gras, Riverwalk Arts Festival, and Moonshine Creek Productions.

Davetta Florence-Bristow performed selections of Madam Butterfly while Wako-Kai Dancer Pat Bush performed the Seasons of Kyoto, and Florida Okinawa Kenjin-Kai Heritage Culture Dancers Akiko Daniels and Anna-Morton performed the Okinawa Flower Dance “Nuchibana.”

The performances were closed out by the Taiko Drum Dance “Eisa” performed by the Florida Okinawa Kenjin-Kai’s Drum Dancers.

During the evening caterers competed in a chocolatier and culinary competition.

Linda’s Treats and More took the chocolatier title, while Nouveau Pastries and Catering won the culinary competition.

Linda’s Treats & More took the chocolate title in Saturday’s competition.

Food and decorations played a part in transforming the Santa Rosa County Auditorium into an escape to the arts and culture of the orient.

Akiko Daniels was one of the strolling Sanshin players who sang songs native to Okinawa.

There are about 400 animals in the shelter and 220 in foster care. More than 2,000 have been placed in four years, said founder-executive director Jodi Polanski.

As a mortgage loan officer, Polanski heard story after story as she started the rescue in her spare time. There was too much work, she became full-time director and now she and four employees: work with 125 volunteers and fosterers.

Lost Our Home runs a food bank and a temporary care transition house for the pets. Last year it was nearly 500; in 2010, some 200; and this year it will be close to 50,000 animals a year. Nearly two-thirds have to be euthanized.

In 2011, Croxson bought a five-bedroom home to use as a transition house for the pets. FUPI also works with the unemployed and those too ill or old to handle their pets, but about 25 percent of these pets are feces. Croxson said.

Real estate agents on driving creases call all the time. Maybe they have found a couple of cats in a closed of a foreclosed home, she said.

NASA plans menu for Mars

HOUSTON — Through a labyrinth of hallways deep inside a 1960s-era building that housed research that dates back to the early years of U.S. space travel, a group of scientists in white coats is staring, mixing, measuring, brushing and, most important, tasting the end result of their cooking.

Their mission: Build a menu for a planned journey to Mars in the 2020s.

The menu must sustain a group of six to eight astronauts, keep them healthy and happy and also offer a breadth of food. That’s no simple feat considering it will likely take six months to get to the Red Planet, astronauts will have to stay there 18 months and then it will take another six months to return to Earth. Imagine having to shop for a family’s three-year supply of groceries at once and having enough meals planned in advance for that length of time.

“Mars is just different because it’s so far away,” said Maya Cooper, senior research specialist with Leading Heart Martin who is leading the efforts to build the menu. “We don’t have the option to send a vehicle every six months and send more food as we do for International Space Station.”

Astronauts who traveled to the space station have a wide variety of foods available to them, some 200 or so different options, in fact. But it is all pre-prepared and frozen-dried with a shelf life of at least two years. And while astronauts make up a panellist that tastes the food and gives it a final OK on Earth before it blasts off, the lack of a laboratory setting — and taste — is impaired. So the food is bland.

But perhaps, there is a little gravity, allowing NASA to consider eight items to be the current space menu. That’s where Cooper’s team comes in. Travel to Mars opens the possibility that astronauts can do things like shop vegetables and do a little cooking of their own. Even though previous evils are different than on Earth, scientists think it will be possible to boil water with a pressure cooker, too.

One senior Cooper and her staff in the Johnson Space Center in Houston are considering, is having the astronauts care for a “Martian greenhouse.” They would have a variety of fruits and vegetables — from carrots to bell peppers — in a hydroponic system, meaning they would be planted in mineral-laced water instead of soil. The astronauts would care for their garden and then use the ingredients, combined with others, such as nuts and spices brought from Earth, to prepare their meals.

That menu is favorable because it allows the astronauts to actually have live plants that are growing, you have optimum nutrient delivery with fresh fruits and vegetables, and it actually allows them to have freedom of choices when they’re actually cooking the menu because the food isn’t all ready pre-prepared into a particular recipe,” Cooper said.

The top priority is to ensure that the astronauts get the proper amount of nutrients, calories and minerals to maintain their physical health and performance for the life of the mission, Cooper said.

The menu also must ensure the psychological health of the astronauts. Cooper explained, noting studies have shown that eating certain foods — such as macaroni and mashed potatoes or turkey on Thanksgiving — improves people’s mood and gives them satisfaction. That “link to home” will be key for astronauts on the Mars mission, and there are currently two ana- lyst studies looking further into the connection between mood and food. Lack of certain vitamins or minerals can also harm the brain, she said.

Jerry Linenger, a retired astron- aut who spent 124 days on the Rus- sian Mir space station in 1997, said food is important for morale and the monotony of eating the same thing day after day is difficult.

“You just wanted something dif- ferent. I didn’t care if it was some- thing I wouldn’t eat in a million years on Earth. It was different,” Linenger said, recalling with a laugh how he would even grab up an Illinois sour milk-like connection for breakfast so drink up some horseradish because it offered variety.
