Six life terms for child molester

A Key Largo man was sentenced Friday to six con-secutive life sentences for repeatedly raping two young daughters of his former love in a relationship that lasted over a five-year period.

Hector Hernandez, 37, maintained his innocence, and said the girls, now 13 and 17 years old, made up the accusations because of the prompting of their mother, whom Hernandez said was jealous because he was involved in a new relationship.

Hernandez said the victim’s mother threatened him numerous times in the past that she would report him to police.

The judge said Hernandez “absolutely backtracked” and “denied of most”.

On Wednesday, Hernandez was sentenced to six consecutive life terms in a January 2000 and May 2005, Hernandez pled not guilty to six felony counts of sexual assault on children under 12 and said he was forced into thecase by his former partner.

LeBron James told local and national media during free agency meetings that he would choose to play for the Miami Heat.

Aside from a lack of willingness, the other major factor in Anthony’s decision is the fact that he was not able to get into the starting lineup in New York. There were also reports that his time in the Nets would take place in the summer of 2012.

The Heat are now the favorite to land Anthony, but the Knicks are not entirely out of the hunt.

Meanwhile, the Lakers are reportedly out of the running for Anthony, as are the Boston Celtics, according to reports.

The Celtics have already made it clear that they are not interested in Anthony, and the Lakers are reportedly not interested in the player either.

The Knicks, on the other hand, are said to be interested in Anthony, but the team is reportedly not interested in making a trade for the player.

Even before the city of Marathon announced its search for a new City Manager, the City’s existing administrator Roman Castle had heard from 44 applicants for the top municipal official.

He declined to say how many of the applicants were already working in government, but Castle said the city had already received applications from a number of previous candidates who are now working in other government positions.

Castle said he would keep applications open until the city has until the end of May until he finds a new manager.

Council seeks renegotiation in years ahead

By RYAN MCCARTHY
rmccarthy@keynoter.com

The Marathon City Council on Tuesday begrudgingly agreed to adjust with a plan to split $50 million in state sewer funding between Monroe County’s Cudjoe Regional system and the village of Islamorada.

The council clearly does not like being left out but has collectively decided against a potential warrant in Gov. Rick Scott appealing the money as part of the state’s $70 billion state spending plan. He has until April 21 to do so.

“The problem is we proceeded with the thing that the state said we needed and we exceeded with the thing that the state didn’t,” said County Administrator Roger Hernstadt to meet with City Manager Roman Gastesi Wednesday.

Councilman Mike Cinque said, “We can support them getting the money in the first year, but we need to send a strong message to the county and the Legislature that in the second, third and fourth year, we’ll get back the money that rightfully belongs to us.”

The $50 million bond is part of the state’s Mayfield grant, which the state authorized in 2009 at $200 million. None of that money has been transferred, but it called for $30 million per year in funding over four years.

The state House and Senate each agreed to include a $4.8 million line item in the 2012-13 budget funding the first year’s debt for the $50 million bond. It would be paid off over 20 years.

Many are optimistic Scott will approve the funding because of the recent announcement that the state Cabinet will hold in May a meeting at the Stanley Switlik Elementary School in Marathon.

Tuesday, city Finance Director Peter Rosasco outlined the counties’ proposals, which would award Marathon $15 million less than what was approved in the $200 million than what was approved in the $200 million Mayfield grant in 2009. The county would receive $73 million versus just $53 according to the original language.

“Under this proposal, the county would get almost $35 million. Also, Key West would get $32 million, which frankly I don’t understand. The authorized legislation is strictly for waste water and the way they put this together was for the state, which isn’t even eligible,” Rosasco said.

The council also pointed out that it has been providing “shovel-ready” jobs for more than four years. The company pitched the bond on creating jobs — a Scott priority.

The council eventually directed City Manager Roger Hernstadt to meet with county and other officials to renegotiate future allotments.

“We can look at the language and see what can be done moving forward,” County Administrator Roman Gastesi said.
