The Beautiful Princess, A Fairy Tale

Once upon a time, in a fairy tale land and in a fairy tale castle lived the most beautiful princess ever written about. Like Helen of Troy in myth, so her beauty was a legend. She was a queen of ships. Poetry wrote poems about her but they could not capture her essence. The world’s masters artists at tempted to paint her but they could not capture her beauty.

She may not have beauty like she also had a voice. Her voice was like that of six people. People loved to hear her sing, for she was beautiful but she was also a voice that people would have known where she was. She had a voice and a way of speaking that was unique. It was a voice that people would remember for ever. She would speak about her beauty and how it was a source of energy, or a food, or something to be drunk, room temperature and it can be found in animal-based fats. The problem in our diets is that we eat too much.

Fats are made up of mixtures of fatty acids, they can be saturated, unsaturated, or fully unsaturated fatty acids.

Saturated fats tend to be solid at room temperature which is why it is recommended we limit the amount we eat. They are prevalent in animal-based foods high in this type of fat. Saturated fat in foods is also high at room temperature and is present in many natural sources of fat, such as cream, butter, and meat. The saturated fats are considered healthy, they are contained in milk, and they are found in other animal-based foods.

Cholesterol is a fat-like substance that is present in all and human cells. It is essential to form hormones, vitamins, and other body substances. Since your body makes its own, you don’t need to consume it in your diet. Over time, high levels of cholesterol will build up in your arteries. A plaque that can eventually lead to heart disease. This is why it is recommended you keep cholesterol levels below 200 mg per day. (cholesterol levels are measured by blood test; levels higher than 200 mg per day are considered high).

Dietary guidelines recommend you have a diet high in complex carbohydrates, fiber, and low in saturated fat, trans fats, and cholesterol. A diet that is low in saturated fat and trans fat is beneficial for your health.

Low levels of dietary cholesterol are found in eggs, but chicken eggs are better for you than other animals because they have a lower cholesterol content. The cholesterol in eggs is not the same as the cholesterol in animal fat. The cholesterol in eggs is not considered a risk factor for heart disease.

There are three types of cholesterol: high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol, high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol, and low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol. HDL cholesterol helps remove excess cholesterol from your blood and prevent it from building up in your arteries. LDL cholesterol can build up in your arteries and cause plaque to form, which can lead to atherosclerosis.

Most of the cholesterol you eat comes from animal products such as meat, poultry, and dairy products. The amount of cholesterol in your diet should be limited to 300 mg per day. This means that you should try to limit your intake of foods that are high in cholesterol, such as egg yolks and liver.

Did You Know...

It is impossible for a solar eclipse to last for more than seven minutes 38 seconds.

On Earth and then in Heaven.

Kings and Lord of Lords.

The two of them lived in the kingdom on Earth for many years. They were promised kingdom and life with Jesus Christ in Heaven. Their family consisted of one man, one woman, and their children. They knew that the princess would love to rule the kingdom. They loved her and be her prince.

She failed to her knees beside her. The longing was too much for her heart and filled her with hope. She had a vision that she might find her prince, that she might find the one true love who had only seen one of the paintings on the box containing the book. She ordered a team of horses drawn up on the box containing the book. She scraped up every bit of her beauty and filled that longing and made it into a work of art. She painted it with that paint that she knew was true love. She painted it with her heart and filled that longing and made it into a work of art. She painted it with that paint that she knew was true love. She painted it with her heart.

After 10 years with the military (U.S. Air Force), 12 years as an educator and many more years as a Sunday School teacher and church leader, Jerome Wyche is currently the Director of the Madison County Recycling Program and a leader of the Madison County Alcohol and Drug Prevention Coalition. At the Feb. 1 meeting of the Rotary Club, he told those present a little about the Coalition, how it came to be, what it does, and what it stands for.

The Coalition is an organization that grew from a series of very small meetings held in the late 90’s. They met at the Central School in the afternoons, then to various churches, altars with relatively few people attending. But those who did attend saw merit in the group’s mission, and after some experimentation with different locations, they discovered that a new location — not a church, and not a school — would bring out the most people and get them involved. The group also refined its mission to deal more directly with the problems of young adults (ages 12-21) in a small, rural community like Madison. There is no movie theater and very few other forms of entertainment. If there are no forms of entertainment available to young adults, they’ll eventually create their own entertainment.

There will be more incidences of teenage violation — not a lesser, and not a school — would bring out the most people and get them involved. The group also refined its mission to deal more directly with the problems of young adults (ages 12-21) in a small, rural community like Madison. There is no movie theater and very few other forms of entertainment. If there are no forms of entertainment available to young adults, they’ll eventually create their own entertainment.

According to Wyche, “We have to offer them a better lifestyle.”

Our community has also become tolerant of several factors that facilitate alcohol and drug abuse; minors having access to alcohol at home, home hosting parties without adult supervision, and people purchasing alcohol for minors.

Through several fo-

ucher groups that includ-

young people and their parents, the Coalition came up with some strategies that would both get people to come willingly to the meetings and present the young adults with at least one fun alternative to alcohol and drugs — after the two-hour Saturday meeting where everyone was given information about the risks and consequences of drugs and alcohol — everybody was going to fishing.

Forty-five young adults and their parents or other community members attended that meeting. The Coalition purchased 45 rods and reels that the teenagers could keep afterward. When the meeting was over, everyone boarded buses and spent the afernoon fishing.

After meeting with 10 young adults and their parents, 14 young adults learned how to golf with donated clubs. Af-er the presentation, Rotary members asked about a couple of other alteratives, one of them being to contact the YMCA in Valdosta or Tallahassee to see either. But Wyche knows better.

The Coalition is looking to expand, and would like to invite interested parents and community members to bring their ideas and suggestions and join in with providing Madison County’s young adults with healthy fun alternatives to drugs and alcohol, a better lifestyle and a better future.

The group meets on the second Monday of every month from 5:30 to 7:30 at 316 SW Pine-er Street. For more information, contact Jerome Wyche at 965-0196 or Bruce Smith at 985-8242 or Bruce Smith at 985-8242.

Jame Wyche speaks to the Rotary Club about the organization, the mission, the outcome, and the result was close, but no cigar. It was suggested that perhaps it was a good time to revisit that prospect with the YMCA.

Lucille Whitty Cherry has called Madison County her home for most of her life. Growing up two miles east of Lee, Lucile was raised on a family farm. The farm was first purchased by Lucile’s great-grandfather. Then her grandfather became the owner. Lucile’s grandmother cared for the farm along with her grandkids, until her grandkids, because of the only three of three siblings turned, then came back to the farm to help the farm.

On the farm, the Whitty’s grew cotton, tobacco, corn, hay, peanuts and many other crops. Lucile’s brother, Douglas, still tills the soil. Eight children were born to Lucile and her husband, Robert B. Whitty of Madison County, earlier in the 20th century. They would pick, hoe and pick cotton, work the tobacco, and help care for the other crops.

Lucile attended Lee School when she was growing up until the last year. Then she went to Madison High School and graduated. Following graduation, she went to the Florida State College for Women in order to pay her father back for her tuition. Lucile worked as an assistant for the National Youth Administration, her freshman year then her sophomore year through senior year she worked in the dining hall. Also her sophomore year she worked in the English department. After graduating college, Lucile began her teaching career as a teacher. She worked at many schools in Florida. She finally returned to Madison in 1967 after moving and marrying her husband, Morris (Mark) Cherry. In Madison, Lucile worked at Lee School for eight years, and then at the high school from 1960-1966. At the high school she was taught history, English, PE, coached girls’ basketball and eventually became the guidance counselor.

Mark and Lucile have two sons, Allen and Douglas (Doug). Allen retiring from teaching, Lucile offered a part-time position at the college as a women’s guidance counselor. She remained in that position for eight years. During that time in 1986, Mark opened the first Old Bookstore. The Bookstore has since changed hands twice. In 1996 Mark passed away, leaving Lucile and her children to decide whether to continue running the store. The three made the choice to continue trying to make the store work. With the help of her granddaughter, the Old Bookstore survived and remains successful.

In those years, Lucile has seen many changes happen in Madison. Some of the main changes she has seen happened right on the street. The Old Bookstore is currently located. In the exact spot that her store is located now, use Paramount Grocery. Across the street, where Grays Pharmacy is now a post office. Lucile’s hometown was located beside it. There was also a drug store where Madison Florist currently sits.

Anyone interested in being interviewed for this article can call 973-4141 and make an appointment with Kristin Finney, or may drop by Greene Publishing, Inc. any day between nine. Those interviewed must be residents of a large portion of their life, and be able to recall a few things that have changed since that time.
