WHAT NEXT AT LITTLE BAY HOTEL? EMPLOYEE FIRED FOR ASKING TO BE CALLED BY NAME!

For sometime now the employees of the Little Bay Hotel have been complaining about the manner in which they are sometimes treated by certain members of the management.

The wages for which they are forced to work (though a little better than other places on the island) is still inadequate, and the working conditions are deplorable.

On Thursday of this week a bartender was "fired" by Mr. Loonstra, one of the Directors of this hotel because he (the bartender) told Mr. Loonstra that his name was Neville. The story is as follows:

Mr. Loonstra was sitting in the bar with a guest of the hotel, he wanted service, but instead of calling the bartender on duty he made a "Siiit" sound. The bartender went over to his table and after taking the order; said to Mr. Loonstra: "Sir, my name is Neville", after he had served the drinks, Mr. Loonstra asked him (the bartender) "Why did you tell me that your name is Neville, do you expect me to call you Neville, at all times". Neville replied in a calm manner: "I feel that while I am on duty I should be called by my name, and if my name is not known, then I should be called, "bartender" or waiter", but I
