FRUITLAND PARK: With apartments on agenda, council meeting could be crowded, A3

WASHINGTON — With outrage mounting over veterans’ health-care troubles, President Barack Obama declared Wednesday that mismanagement within the VA could be a threat to the administration, with the House easily approving a measure that would give the VA secretary more authority to fire or demote the 40,000 senior employees who serve as top managers at 118 hospitals in the 21 regions. The vote was 390 to 33.

Rep. Jeff Miller, R-Fla., chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, sponsored the legislation, saying VA officials who have presided over mismanagement or negligence are more likely to receive bonuses or glowing performance reviews than any sort of punishment. He declared that a “widespread and systemic lack of accountability is exacerbating” the department’s problems.

The White House said it supported the goal of seeking greater accountability at the VA, but it was unable to confirm that a bill similar to the one in the House would have the same effect.

Small-town post offices reflect folks of yesteryear

YALAHAA, Florida — The post office is a little out of the way for Stephany Flores, who works downtown in Leesburg. But she says she enjoys the small-town feel of the post office where she drops off her mail and picks up hers.

“The people in here are really nice,” she said. “They always try to help you.”

Flores, a 34-year-old mother of two, said she appreciates the personal touch of the post office, which is located in a small building in the town square.

“I feel like I’m part of the community here,” she said. “It’s not like a big city where you just get your mail and go.”

Stephany Flores stands outside the Yalaha Post Office. The small-town post office is staffed with one clerk and one carrier.

FRUITLAND PARK

Apartment project faces more opposition

STEVE FORD
Neighbors who live near a proposed 110-unit apartment site on Spring Lake Road in Fruitland Park plan to turn out in force tonight when the city commissioners take up the highly-debated issue for the fifth time.

Resident Richard Rood, 71, said he expects commissioners will be looking at a parked house when Mayor Chris Bell announced the meeting at 7 p.m.

“This is the wrong project in the wrong place at the wrong time,” Rood said. “It’s going to destroy a nice, open rural family neighborhood of large lots with older homes and older people living here.

“Opponents have the ear of Commissioner Chris Chisholm. ‘I’m not sure the city needs more apartments than,’ Chisholm said. ‘It’s not 2008 anymore. We don’t have to approve every project that comes before city commissioners.’

City Council to discuss partnership registry

MILLARD IVES | Daily Commercial Staff Writer

City Council members will be looking at a parked house when Mayor Chris Bell announced the meeting at 7 p.m.

“My concern or comment or question about this is that they say it’s most useful for hospital visits, medical videos, and medical records, and funeral arrangements and such, but at this time, we have none of those facilities in our city,” Councilman Steven Sheffield said.

“So, what benefit are we going to have for our residents or non-residents on this and how much is it going to cost the city to set this up? Do we have the staff to do it? The people know that we’re going to have a separate registry. “If it’s available, I would prefer the city taking on more of a burden, just to get the benefits of it,” she added.

By the end of the meeting, staff was direct-

At least four people were arrested in separate incidents by law enforcement between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning in Lake County, including a motorcycle traveler who allegedly told deputies he just wanted to see how fast he could go.

esults of an online, double-blind, placebo-controlled study suggest that soy protein supplementation can be a significant addition to the dietary intake of children with autism spectrum disorder (ASD).

A team of researchers from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas and the Children’s Health Clinical Research Institute at Scottish Rite for Children in Dallas, Texas, conducted a study that aimed to assess the impact of soy protein supplementation on various aspects of behavior and quality of life in children with ASD.

The study enrolled 60 children with ASD aged 5 to 18 years old, who were randomly assigned to receive either soy protein or placebo supplementation for 6 months. The primary outcome measure was the Autism Behavior Checklist (ABC), a well-validated tool for assessing the severity of challenging behaviors in children with ASD.

The results showed a significant reduction in the total ABC score for the soy protein group compared to the placebo group. The improvement in behavior was observed across multiple domains, including hyperactivity, self-harm, and repetitive behaviors.

In addition to the ABC, the researchers also assessed other outcomes such as quality of life, anxiety, and depression levels. They found that the soy protein supplementation had a positive impact on these domains as well.

The study also included a parent-reported questionnaire assessing the child’s daily life activities, which showed improvements in the soy protein group compared to the placebo group.

The findings of this study suggest that soy protein supplementation may be a beneficial addition to the dietary management of children with ASD, although more research is needed to confirm these results.

The study was funded by the Autism Society of America and the National Institutes of Health. The researchers reported no conflicts of interest.

Ignacio Rueda, the lead author of the study, stated: “Our findings suggest that soy protein supplementation may be a promising intervention for children with ASD, and further research is needed to explore the mechanisms underlying these effects.”

Dr. Rueda added that future studies should focus on determining the optimal dose, duration, and timing of soy protein supplementation for individuals with ASD.

The study was published in the journal Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. The full text of the article can be accessed at this link.
U.S. Gov’t urges citizens to carry cell phones

Cell phones prove to be safety net in case of emergency

When it comes to personal safety, every one should have a cell phone. They can save your life. The U.S. Department of Interior’s "Safe and Secure" means even the most urban citizens are required to have a cell phone somewhere on their person at all times.

In real emergencies, cell phones provide people with a lifeline of communication if hurt, stranded, or to report a crime. No matter where or what kind of emergency a person finds themselves in—especially if they’re alone—they have a cell phone to reach out and be heard.

Cell phones act as life-lines in health-related issues, too. At the very least, they provide an easier way to keep in touch with family and friends, and fire and rescue personnel can be easy to get and consumers may even find special deals that require no contracts, deposits or monthly service charges.

There’s no question that everyone should have a cell phone for safety. But there’s no need to have one that plays games, takes pictures or goes on the Internet. It’s important to make sure the phone can be programmed or has a touch of emergency safety button that instantly alerts emergency help when needed.

It should also be easy to use with big buttons, a large display screen and big numbers so it’s easy to see. And last of all, the phone should be hearing aid compatible with an extra loud speaker that makes it easy to hear. But remember, a cell phone can’t help you unless you have one.

Cell phones provide significant value for low-income American households.

Clermont Landing may see 104 homes

A national homebuilder has purchased about 4 acres of undeveloped land on Steve's Road in Clermont, just west of the Clermont Landing retail complex, for $2.5 million. According to Lake County Property Appraiser Office records, the Honorer Nicholas Alkin Charitable Trust of Clermont sold the tract to Beazer Homes Corp.

The Tennessee-based corporation, which has an office in Orlando, has built more than 170,000 homes in 38 states. The property noted in the transaction calls for a home for every three stores. Mike Lew, Beazer's vice president of corporate communications, said the company has purchased the property to enter into Asia’s gas market, “to keep the world’s energy needs well supplied.”

Fed now weighing options for rate rise

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve has begun warning investors that it could use its final pullback in bond purchases as an opportunity to tighten policy and it asked bond traders to prepare for the dramatic change in monetary policy. The restraint is a violation of Fed's bond market purchase program, which is designed to slow the pace of economic growth.

Why AT&T now wants DirecTV

Does its bid to buy DirecTV make sense in the long run for AT&T?

Less than three years after the Justice Department put the kibosh on AT&T's proposed $95 billion purchase of T-Mobile, the erstwhile Ma Bell is tugging up a larger deal: a $48 billion acquisition of satellite broadcast-er DirecTV. The new merger raises some of the same concerns about reduced competition, but the worries aren't nearly as pronounced as in the T-Mobile deal and the potential benefits for consumers are more obvious. A more fun-damental question is whether the deal makes sense in the long run for AT&T, but that's an issue for the investors to mull, not regulators.

No longer divided into separate product si-los, telecommunications companies operate competing packages of phone, video and data services. Their ability to offer bundles, however, is handicapped by the geography and technological limits of their investments. AT&T, for example, has a nationwide wireless phone network but local phone lines in only 22 states, and its fiber optic-based video service reaches only part of that area. And while DirecTV blankets the country with its pay-TV service, its satellites don't deliver high-speed broadband services. For that, it partners with other companies.

By purchasing DirecTV, AT&T would immedi-ately pick up 20 million pay-TV subscribers, vaulting it from the eighth-largest pay-TV service to the second, surpassing even existing leader Vi-vo. AT&T’s new television service might be able to extend broadband to communities where it had previously been ill-suited to the burgeoning demand for con-nections whenever, wherever people want it.

SCOTT, Elliott join NASCAR HoF

PETE BURSTALL / Staff Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Wendell Scott earned a miss­ed NASCAR First on Wednesday: He became the first African-American driver to be elected to the NASCAR Hall of Fame.

The late driver from Virginia was among the latest group of five — all drivers, another first — voted into the hall on Wednesday. Scott joins popular NASCAR champions Bill Elliott, two-time series champ Joe Weatherly, 1960 champ Ron White and 20-time race winner Fred Lorenzen.

Scott competed in NASCAR’s top series from 1961-73. He won his only race at Speedway Park in Jacksonville, Florida, in 1962, taking the checkered flag in the 100-mile feature after leading 15th. Scott started 48th in Sprint Cup events and had a 147 top 10 finishes.

“I just felt that his time was coming and he would say that one day it’s go­ing to hap­pen,” said Scott’s son, Franklin.

When Scott’s name was called there were enthusiastic shouts and applause from fans, of­ficials and family mem­bers gathered at the NASCAR Hall of Fame rotunda. He was the second-leading vote getter behind Elliott from a 54-member panel, including current Sprint Cup champion Jimmie Johnson.

Scott, who died in 1990, was the first African-American driver to race fulltime in NA­SCAR’s top series. He had won more than 100 races at local tracks before stepping up to race against NASCAR’s best. Among Scott’s legacy to his sport is the sport’s Drive for Diversity ini­tia­tive, one of the top youth development programs for multi­cul­tural and female drivers across the motorsports industry that’s been in place since 2004.

Price said he didn’t remember seeing Price’s score from Tuesday, main­ly because the group changes its format on a weekly basis. On Tues­day, he said the Nif­ty-Niners used a mod­i­fied best ball format.

The group would play their second shots from the location of the best drive and then play their own ball for the rest of the hole.

And I’m not happy about it!

It’s extremely truthful, I am glad he’s going back to his roots in North Carolina to be near his family and other members of his family. He’s earned it, but I think he could definitely be their gain. Still, many of us in Lake County aren’t really into this.

The student-athletes whose lives he impacted certainly don’t want him to go.

We’re the friends in the community who don’t want him to drive away.

As one of those local sportswriters in particular is ready to begin him.

Please coach, don’t go.

Lake County is a better place as a whole without a part of it.

As one of his many friends, former South Lake basketball coach Bob Banks — said earlier this week, “It’s just with the basketball on the map”.

Prior to Oates taking over the Yellow Jackers program, 11 years ago, Lake County wasn’t exactly known for being a haven for girls basketball. Many games were played in front of a handful of fans and the quality of play was several notches below the top pro programs in the state. But that was about to change, with a plan and a few gifted coaches creating a blueprint for success. He built his team on a foundation of sweat equity and hardwood.

Under Oates’ tutelage, Lake County became the hardest-working team in the area. It took a lot of grit and grime to get there. The Hawks didn’t hesitate to do whatever it took to win, and the kind of coach you want to be around.

No matter how old you are, or how smart you think you are, you will learn something positive if you spend time around Mark Oates.

Slive expects autonomy to be hot topic for SEC

HOOVER, Ala. — Autonomy will be the hot topic when Southeastern Conference officials, coaches and athletic directors gather for spring meetings.

Commissioner Mike Slive said Wednesday during an interview with The Associated Press that the SEC wants to ensure that the five big football conferences can decide how their own legislative process works in many areas affecting their athletes. The NCAA board of directors is expected to vote on a restructuring in early August.

The current proposal would require a two-thirds vote by the 65 schools at those power conferences to pass legislation. Slive said that threshold and the interpretation of that legislation are concerns for the SEC, but didn’t specify any changes.

“Our presidents and chancellors have unanimously supported this effort to create autonomy in these areas that are related to student-athletes, so I anticipate that we will continue to support it,” he said Wednesday in an interview with The Associated Press.

And again, Slive said that we will also want to see that the proposed model is modified so that autonomy really means autonomy, that the five conferences can determine how their own legislative process will work.

“This isn’t about five commissioners, this is about 65 institutions and their presidents. I’m optimistic that these changes will occur and that we will be able to fully support the model going forward.”

The SEC’s spring meetings are next week in Decatur, Florida, and convene without hot-button issues like expansion and football scheduling to worry about. That leaves plenty of time for the bid for autonomy by the ACC, Big Ten, Big 12, Pac-12 and SEC.

They’re seeking decision-making powers in funding the full cost of scholarships, handling health care and other areas involving their athletes. Other changes under consideration include providing money for families to travel to NCAA tournaments, more resources for academic and career counseling and creating mandatory break times from sports and overhauling transfer rules.

Pac-12 university presidents sent a letter to the other five presidents at the five conferences last week proposing new rules that appear to be in line with what major conferences perceive as the changes that appear to be in line with what major conferences perceives have been occurring in recent times.

“They believe need to be addressed. We have not gotten into any more detail about that,” SEC football coaches who tout their off-season conditioning programs and the volunteer summer workouts that typical draw plenty could be 100-percent participation might be especially interested in the prospect of more changes around the sports-related demands on athletes in and out of season.

Clearly it’s time for us to have serious conversations about the transfer rule and how it applies,” Slive said. “I anticipate that there’ll be some spirited conversations about that once we get the autonomy to deal with that. We have been dealing with areas that we believe need to be addressed.

“We anticipate that there’ll be some spirited conversations about that once we get the autonomy to deal with that.”

The SEC’s spring meetings is intended to be a means of discussion about the autonomy process and what it applies,” Slive said. “We believe need to be addressed.

“We have been dealing with areas that we believe need to be addressed. We are hopeful that the focus is on the student-athlete for the 21st century, so we’ll start from there.”

“We’ve discussed at our last three or four AD meetings and we’ll discuss it again,” Slive said. “I think we’re beginning to see the fruits of our labor in this area.”

The league has already decided to stick with its eight-game format for football schedules, where players can turn pro after one season.

Mike Slive said that topic comes up occasionally but “I don’t have any agenda that I’m aware of.”

Other topics that Slive expects at spring meetings include:

■ The SEC Network.

Mike Slive said he’s optimistic that the network due to launch in August will line up other distributors beyond AT&T’s U-verse and Dish, but adds that “whether it comes before or after we launch is another question.”

Slive is among those who don’t use either of those outlets for his TV programming. “I will have the distributor or distributors that carry the SEC Network, which for me will require a change,” he said.

Basketball schedules:

The league began reviewing all SEC conference schedules in March but “it’s not on anyone’s agenda” before last season in an effort to beef up NCAA tournament resumés. He said he expects the current rotation of permanent opponents within the SEC’s 18-game, 16-SEC schedules to be resolved at the spring meetings.

“We’ve discussed at our last three or four AD meetings and we’ll discuss it again,” Slive said. “I think we’re beginning to see the fruits of our labor in this area.”

Cleveland’s David Murphy watches his ball after hitting a two-run home run off Detroit relief pitcher Joe Nathan in the ninth inning of Wednesday’s game in Cleveland. Eager catcher Bryan Holaday watches. Cleveland won the game in the 13th inning on a bases-loaded walk.

Michael Jackson, Justin Timberlake own Billboard Music Awards

The King of Pop and a likely successor, prince of pop, Justin Timberlake, ruled the Billboard Music Awards — though Michael Jackson made a splash via hologram and Timberlake accepted his awards via video from overseas.

A hologram of Jackson made its debut Sunday,outing the late icon’s signature slick dance moves as some members of the audience became emotional, while Timberlake won seven en-prizes, including top artist and Billboard 200 album, and accepted the honors outside of the country where he was born on tour.

“All the other finalists, Michael, Imagine Dragons, Bruno, Katy, I love you guys, it’s not a competition, but if it is, I won,” Timberlake exclaimed, dancing with his band. “I want to thank everybody on Earth, everybody on Earth, except, except Donald Sterling.”

Timberlake’s idol was featured in hologram form, and it performed “Slave to the Rhythm,” a song from Jackson’s new posthumous album “Xscape,” along with a plethora of background dancers, beaming lights and fire blasts. It was easily the biggest moment at the awards show at the MGM Grand Garden Arena in Las Vegas.

“We tried to do as best we could what we thought Michael would have loved, and those of us who knew Michael really well, we had a good perspective on it,” Epic Records CEO L.A. Reid said backstage. Reid worked on the album and released it. ‘But the truth is, you can’t

"Underneath the trees," performed by a young woman

This year's event was marked by a homoc- ing song that was written for the band. The Las Vegas-based rock- ers were honored for their sup- port and for putting the "Billboard 200," which they achieved with "This Is How We Roll." The performance was dedicated to their late mother.

Barry said: "It wears it around the office all the time, and it's funny." He then thanked the audience for making this possible. The songwriter added: "I'm an ABC. son," which she said, accepting top stream- ing artist,-stout looking woman that believes in making this possible. She's wearing the head- tongue at the end.

Miley Cyrus performed The Beatles' "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds" with Wyane Coyne of the Flaming Lips remotely from the United Kingdom, where she was on tour. "I have to of course thank all of my amazing fans — thank you ever- lastingly for putting the "Billboard 200," which they achieved with "This Is How We Roll." The performance was dedicated to their late mother.
