Train strikes disabled truck hauling watermelons in Sumter

LEESBURG

A 130-car train plowed through a semi-truck hauling watermelons in Sumter County Wednesday night after the truck stalled on a railroad track.

The accident left watermelon debris scattered throughout the tracks, including a crate of the fruit plastered to the front of the CSX locomotive.

But the truck driver was able to hop out before the collision and no injuries were reported, said Sgt. Steve Gaskins, a spokesman with the Florida Highway Patrol.

According to an FHP report, the crash occurred about 6:50 p.m. Wednesday in Oxford at Vincent Young Train, 45, of Garden Grove, Calif., was hauling watermelons west on Country Road 104 and crossing over County Road 104.

A 130-car CSX train collided with a trailer hauling watermelons that was stuck on railroad tracks in Sumter County late Wednesday evening.

there is probably a lot of people in Las Vegas that don’t know that we are here,” he said.

The company’s red-white-and-blue aircraft fleet operates under the name “Firehawks” and features four Sikorsky S-70 Black Hawks and four Eurocopter A109 B3 Astars. One of its most famous premier-owned helicopters formerly belonged to the Sultan of Brunei, and came complete with gold-plated door handles, Brainerd said.

The Firehawks assist from the air as firefighters battle forest fires from the air. From an aerial view, pilots can see a wider perspective of what is happening on the ground.

“We work with some real great people all over the United States, and there are days when you are just saving trees, and there are days when you are saving people’s houses and livelihoods, and that feels good,” said Brainerd, a resident of Bart, a pilot, vice president of the company’s sales and director of operations.

“Helicopters that extra set of eyes for them, to give them an idea of how to attack the fire and how to get to it, and that can be part of our job,” he said of assisting firefighters. “We are just there to provide them support, back-up and get to the scene and make it so that they can get to their objectives.”

Brainerd said that the company, which flies out of the air base in Bart, worked with the FHP when he was called to west of De Land to fight forest fires in Oregon and Washington and California. He said that they called dry lightning out the day before they went out, and they carried with them and had to run with it was raining. It was during Labor Day and election in November, the chairman of lawmakers as his departure grew by the hour.

Democrats Mark Warner and Tim Kaine of Virginia, Mary Landrieu of Louisiana, and Rep. Steve Israel of New York, are among the nine senators who have called for Shinseki to resign, including Jeff Flake of Arizona, John McCain of Arizona, and Tim Kaine of Virginia, Mary Burton of Maryland, and Charles Schumer of New York. The advocates believe the VA has undergone a dramatic change in the past few years under Shinseki’s leadership.

The military is using a new technology that allows for real-time tracking of wildfires, which has led to the VA assisting in the fire-fighting efforts.

Black Hawks are currently in use in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Kuwait.

“We have been working on Black Hawks since 1985 and we have a lot of experience, and we would like to work with some that is real,” Brainerd said.

The company varies between 27 full-time and a peak of 45. “We climb the highest peak, our elevator is the busiest peak,” said Brainerd.

One of the most important things for military personnel is to know what is coming.

Town hall meeting about Partnership set for July 21

The Leesburg Partnership has agreed to host a townhall meeting on July 21 at the Leesburg Community Center, 307 E. Donnelly St., according to an announcement made by Mayor John Clinton at the city commission meeting held this week.

Prior to the Leesburg Bikefest last month, the Mount Dora Lakeside Primary School Teacher Barbara Cook, had publicly ap-propically announced the committee and requested a town hall meeting in which to talk more about how the partnership operates, its finances and tax records, and the partnerships effect on the city.

Cook previously told the board that her social media group had questions about the partnership, which sponsors Bikefest and other downtown Leesburg events.

“Many citizens are unclear as to the vision of the partnership, and wish to have some clarity as to their role to the city and the community as a whole,” Cook said in a letter.

FL zip codes determine who gets unsearched bags of old U.S. Gov't issued coins

Bag of unsearched Gov’t-issued coins are actually being handed over to FL residents who find their zip code listed below, but only those callers who beat the 45-hour order deadline are getting the Vault Bags loaded with rarely seen U.S. coins dating back to the 1900s.

Who gets the money: Listed below are the Leesburg area zip codes that get to claim the Unsearched Vault Bags. If you find the first two digits of your zip code below immediately call: 1-888-745-2589

> It’s like finding buried treasure.
> That’s because for the next 48 hours Unsearched Vault Bags loaded with rarely seen coins issued by the U.S. Gov’t dating back to the 1900s are actually being handed over to Leesburg area residents who find their zip code listed in today’s publication.
> “It’s hard to tell how many these beauty Unsearched Vault Bags could be worth some day. That’s because after the Vault Bags were loaded with over 300 valuable coins issued by the U.S. Gov’t the dates were never searched! The Vault Bags are not sold, it’s possible that each bag is worth at least $150,000!” said Timothy J. Shalizer, Director of Vault Operations for the private World Reserve.

> The only thing residents need to do is just find their zip code on the list printed in today’s publication. If your zip code is on the list they need to immediately call the Toll Free Hotline before the 48-hour order deadline ends.

> Everyone does not get to get the Unsearched Vault Bags for just ‘49 and shipping per bag which is a real steal since each bag is loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov’t-issued coins including: Indian Head coins, highly collectible Wheat Cents, a rare seen World War Two coin and a bag of Unsearched currently circulating U.S. Gov’t-issued Lincoln Cents spanning the past 100 years. And just one more coin alone, like those shown below, could be worth hundreds of dollars in collector value.

> And here’s the best part! Coin values always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but even one of the scarce U.S. Gov’t-issued coins shown below, regardless of their value, that you’ll buckle down to find inside the Vault Bag you receive are yours to keep.

> That’s why it’s so important that residents call the Toll Free Hotline beginning at precisely 8:00am this morning. These currently circulated coins date clear back to the 1900s and are held in the highly secure vaults of the World Reserve. This means the dates were never searched and the Vault Bags were sealed for good. So when your shipment arrives, you can immediately break the red security seal on the Vault Bag to search for the valuable coins shown below.

> “With all this money up for grabs we’re hearing for all the calls and doing our best to make sure everyone gets through. But it’s important that residents call the Toll Free Hotline set up for Leesburg area residents to get the deadlines ends because when the coins of money are gone, they’re gone!” Shalizer said.

> “We know the phones will be ringing off the hook because we are all claiming to claim up to 30 Unsearched Vault Bags of money. But to make sure all Leesburg area residents have a fair chance to claim the money, we’ll be strictly enforcing the 40 bag limit,” said Shalizer.

> It’s important to note that since this announcement is being made widely advertised dealers and collectors are sure to be grabbing up all the valuable coins the residents can get their hands on, so residents need to call right away.

> Thousands of Leesburg area residents are expected to call beginning at 8:00am this morning to claim the bags of money. So, residents who find their zip code listed in today’s publication need to immediately call the Toll Free Hotline to get the Unsearched Vault Bags before the 48-hour order deadline ends to get the Unsearched Vault Bags. Residents who call late might still get a bag but just keep trying, all calls will be answered.

How to get the bags of Gov’t’s issued coins

If you find the first two digits of your zip code below immediately call the Toll Free Hotline beginning at precisely 8:00am this morning. Leesburg area residents who find their zip code listed below can get the Unsearched Vault Bags for just ‘49 and shipping per bag which is a real steal since each bag is loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov’t-issued coins and just one coin alone could be worth hundreds of dollars in collector value! Here’s the good news. Residents who beat the 48-hour deadline to claim their bags are getting an additional Vault Bag absolutely free as long as they call before the deadline ends with FL Claim Code NTP100 1-888-745-2589.

FREE: Pictured above the Unsearched Vault Bags full of rarely seen coins issued by the U.S. Gov’t dating back back to the 1900s that everyone is rushing to get for just ‘49. That’s because everyone who beats the 45-hour deadline to claim four bags is getting an additional Vault Bag absolutely free.

IMPORTANT: The Vault Bags NEVER BEEN SEARCHED! When your shipment arrives, you can immediately break the red security seal and be sure to save the original box. These coins will always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but any of the scarce U.S. Gov’t-issued coins shown below, REGARDLESS OF THEIR VALUE, that you are lucky enough to find inside the Vault Bags you receive are yours to keep.

If you suffer bouts of acid reflux, heartburn, diarrhea, constipation, bloating, gas or IBS, Chief Medical Officer, Dr. Liza Leal says beware of digestion remedies like Prilosec®, Prevacid® and Nexium®... They can Crip You!

By Daniel Niswander

Healthbeat Reporter

The over-the-counter digestion remedies that people take to help with symptoms such as heartburn tend to mask the problem instead of addressing it.

That’s what many people will tell you if you ask about digestion issues. But if you haven’t stopped talking about it, it’s time to talk about it.

“I’d give anything to know what was going on inside me,” said Vesta, whose name is not her real name, and whose problem led her to seek medical care.

“I just want to stop being sick...I couldn’t eat or sleep, work, or treat my family... I just want to live healthy.”

Family wishes woman would give tanning beds a rest

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is a high schooler and I am afraid she is being harmed by her addiction to tanning. As a former high schooler, I know that the skin is not something you take lightly. It is something you have to protect. As a former daughter of a mother who thinks about the dangers of sun exposure, I feel it is my duty to share my story with others.

You are right to be concerned about your daughter's habits. Tanning beds, even if they are safe, are not a substitute for natural sunlight. Sunburn is not the same as a tan. A tan can be healthy, but a sunburn is a warning sign.

If you think your daughter is being overly critical of her skin, you might consider having a conversation with her. Let her know that you think she is being too hard on herself. Talk to her about the benefits of natural sunlight. You can also suggest that she consider using sunscreens that are labeled "broad spectrum." These contain both UVA and UVB filters, which can help protect her skin from both types of rays.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 16 and a senior in high school. She has a new boyfriend who is 18, and I am concerned about his influence on her. I think he is too young for her and that they are not ready to be together.

It's understandable to be concerned about your daughter's relationship. However, it's important to remember that teenagers need space to explore their own relationships. It's true that your daughter is still young, and it's likely that she will have different relationships in the future. However, at this stage in her life, it's important for her to be able to make her own decisions about who she wants to be with.

You might try to encourage her to think about what she wants for herself. Talk to her about what she values in a relationship. Ask her what she hopes to get out of it. You can also suggest that she consider whether she is ready to be in a serious relationship. It's important for her to consider whether she is ready to make a commitment to someone else.

Long goodbye in Afghanistan

As recently as February, President Obama was signaling that the United States might withdraw all of its military forces from Afghanistan at the end of this year. Whether that so-called zero option was truly under consideration or was simply a tactic to obtain President Hamid Karzai’s signature on a bilateral security agreement, Obama made it clear Tuesday that several thousand U.S. military personnel will remain in the country in 2015, that assumed Karzai’s successor will sign the agreement, but both presidential candidates in next month’s runoff election have indicated that they would.

These welcome developments, and Obama’s plan represents a responsible way to draw down America’s presence in that country.

Americans are understandably weary of the U.S. military engagement in Afghanistan, which has cost the lives of more than 2,300 Americans — without expunging the Taliban or purging Afghan politics of corruption and cynicism. But there have also been accomplishments: in the professionalization of Afghan forces, in progress toward a stronger civil society and in the education and empowerment of women. As Obama acknowledged, the original justification for sending U.S. forces to Afghanistan was to end its use as a staging ground for attacks on Americans by al-Qaida, not to engage in nation-building.

But having overturned the Taliban, the U.S. and its allies rightly saw it as their responsibility to try to undo the effects of that misrule. The residual force Obama announced Tuesday could play an important role in consolidating the progress already achieved — by training Afghan forces and engaging in limited counter-terror operations.

Under the plan, U.S. forces in Afghanistan will decline from the current 32,000 to 10,000 by the beginning of 2015 and will fall to half that number by the end of next year. By the end of 2016, the U.S. military presence will shrink to a size comparable to that of the U.S. security contingent in Iraq.

Are the optimal numbers for a successful transition to a situation in which the government in Kabul can deal with security on its own? No one can be sure, but the forces levels seem reasonable and so does the assumption that most of the remaining U.S. forces won’t be in harm’s way. (American fatalities have declined sharply in the last two years.) Republicans are criticizing Obama for announcing a date for the withdrawal of most the residual force, but a deadline will concentrate the minds of the Afghans on the importance of improving their own readiness.

Afghanistan remains a country with a weak central government, endemic corruption, ethnic tensions and a continuing insurgency. There is no guarantee that the longer good-bye Obama announced Tuesday will enable Afghanistan’s future leaders to those and other obstacles to a peaceful and productive society. But the effort is worth making.

THE TEA PARTY lives — in Europe

While Tea Party candidates underperformed against establishment Republican incumbents in recent U.S. primary elections, in Europe their conservative cousins have just scored some spectacular victories.

Commentators are calling elections for seats in the European Parliament and local council seats in Britain "a political earthquake" and "remarkable," while strongly conservative candidates made significant gains. In Britain, the UK Independent Party (UKIP) outperformed the established Conservatives, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties. Labour hired one of President Obama's top political strategists, David Axelrod, as a consultant. It didn't help.

The significance of the election was summarized by the BBC, which noted that it was "the first time a party other than the Conservatives or Labour has won a national election for 104 years." UKIP won with 23.5 percent of the vote, electing 24 of its members to the European Parliament.

The UKIP Platform resembles that of Tea Party Republicans in the U.S. According to BBC, the party wants to end "mass uncontrolled immigration" and limit future immigrants to those who can "clearly be shown to benefit the British people as a whole and our economy." On taxes, education, health care, energy and even social issues, the policies of UKIP and conservative Republicans are nearly interchangeable.

The far right in France, under the leadership of Marine Le Pen, buried the governing Socialists of President Francois Hollande, whose party won just 14 percent of the vote. Le Pen's National Front party attained a quarter of the vote.

The center-right party of German Chancellor Angela Merkel bucked the trend with their more liberal party platforms.

An indication of how serious British Prime Minister David Cameron is taking the election results came quickly. Cameron, a co-founder of UKIP, has been interviewed on BBC Radio. He pledged not to make any "deals and pacts" with other parties. That is hardly credible since Cameron currently functions in a coalition government with the Conservative party.

Voters will judge Cameron's rhetoric in next year's general election. If he doesn't measure up to his promises, UKIP could be Britain's party of the future, as might other conservative parties in France and throughout most of Europe.

Nadal wins for 61st time in Paris

PARIS — Shortly after winning for the 61st time in his No. 1 match on the red clay at Roland Garros, Rafael Nadal took a moment to look at the future of tennis.

And the top-seeded Spaniard doesn’t see himself in the picture.

Or Roger Federer. Or Novak Djokovic. Or Andy Murray.

True, Nadal advanced to the third round of the French Open on Thursday, beating a 20-year-old Austrian in straight sets. But it’s that same 20-year-old Austrian, Dominic Thiem, who is one of the men who could start winning the major titles that have been so elusive to almost everyone outside that famous quartet.

Together, they have won 34 of the last 36 Grand Slam titles.

But, to drive home his point, Nadal notes it’s already three Slam titles.

He still leads the pack.

Gators chew up Bears in WCWS opener

First baseman pinch hitter Chelsea Herndon capped a six-run fifth inning with a grand slam to invoke the mercy rule for Florida’s fifth run-rule win of the season.

Earlier in the game, former South Sumter High School standout Kirsti Merritt had the first hit of the WCWS.

SEC coaches turn to network, schedules for help

DIESTEN — New Auburn coach Bruce Pearl has some idea about raising the profile of men’s basketball in the Southeastern Conference.

Most of them involve the SEC Network.

How will they be able to see a game simultaneously?

“By the SEC Network,” Pearl said. “I don’t see a problem.”

Heat, Pacers ready for Game 6 of East finals

MIAMI — By now, Lance Stephenson’s list of egregious acts from Game 5 of the Eastern Conference finals are well-known. He blew air into LeBron James’ ear, interrupted a Miami Heat huddle and got caught flopping for the second time.

And on Thursday, the Heat tried to get their fro- cass back on themselves.

Heat coach Erik Spoelstra never folded a practice the day after a road game, especially when the team plane lands around 3:30 a.m. as was the case in the hours Thursdays. But Spoelstra deviated from the norm on the day before Game 6 of this East title se- ries, not for any one on- count issue but rather so the team defending NBA champions could relieve some frustration.

“Great heads and a way to build a bond between the team and the community. Many fans have come to con- sider it the unofficial start to the Lightning season.”

Dempsey ready to go as Team USA breaks camp

BERNIE JARVIS

STANFORD, Calif. — U.S. captain Clint Dempsey’s left groin has improved, and coach Jurgen Klinsmann has decided to start him in the Americans’ second World Cup warmup this weekend against Turkey.

The 23 players geared up for their final work-out at Stanford on Thursday, a quick session in the pool, before leaving the Bay Area to fly to London. Klinsmann said Dempsey was still slightly limited in his movements by design during Wednesday’s training in avoiding any sideways cuts or runs to avoid aggravating the groin. But the coach said Dempsey “definitely will” start Sunday at Red Bull Arena, “A lot of work yesterday. We kind of made sure he’s not going side-ways, he’s kind of avoiding him and worry- ing a little bit,” Klinsmann said. “He’s all good. Beats buy joins tech, fashion

NEW YORK — Beats Electronics’ colorful, oversized headphones serve as a fashion accessory to cool kids riding the New York City subway, but as tech companies such as Apple, Samsung and others are discovering, wearable gadgets like smartwatches and Google Glass still have a long way to go to become trendy, much more likely to be seen, or Prada.”

“I look to any company as a model, it’s Apple. They’re a brilliant design company working to create a lifestyle, and that’s the way I see us.”

Executive who helped mold Burberry into the popular luxury brand it is today. In recent weeks, Google hired fashion and marketing executive Ivy Ross, who worked for Calvin Klein, the Gap and Coach, to head its Google Glass unit.

“We help Apple incorporate technology be something that’s the way I see us.”

“Can it help us look up and out at the world around us, and the people who share it with us?” wrote Ross on a Google Plus post.

“For Ahrendts, Apple is a model, it’s Apple. They’re a brilliant design company working to create a lifestyle, and that’s the way I see us.”

Economy set for rebound after Q1 contraction

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy took a beating from an especially harsh winter during the January-March quarter, skidding into reverse for the first time in three years. But spring has arrived and with it, signs that the chill was a temporary setback in the long road to recovery.

“With your help, I look forward to answering the seemingly simple, but truly audacious questions Glass poses: Can technology be something that frees us up and keeps us in the moment, rather than taking us out of it? Can it help us look up and out at the world around us, and the people who share it with us?” wrote Ross in a Google Plus post.

Drones hit home as real estate agents use sky-high technology to market properties

BALTIMORE — Real estate agents have long boasted of the lengths they’ll go to market properties. Now, for some, the sky’s the limit.

As unmanned aircraft become more widely available, some have started to use drones to sell listings, inviting prospective buyers on aerial tours of country estates, waterfront acreage — and even standard, suburban developments.

“A buyer today wants to see a stunning Hol-lywood trailer experi-ence,” said Robert McArtor, an agent with Re/Max Components in Fullston, who uses a Go-Pro camera mounted on the belly of a quadcopt-er to take aerial video of his listings. “We have created the wow factor.”

McArtor is one of the few agents in the Bal-timore region talking about his activities — at least in part because using a drone for a com-mercial purpose is of-fficially outlawed by the Federal Aviation Adminis-tration, which is au-thorized to regulate un-manned aircraft and has been working on rules to govern systems weigh-ing less than 55 pounds since 2008. (Hobbyists are allowed to fly drones up to 400 feet in the air.)

“The National Associa-tion of Realtors has ad-vised its members not to write the rules, the group signed on to a letter sent to the FAA in April, urg-ing officials to come out with the new rules soon-er rather than later. “The concern here is that this industry is start-ing to form itself, and the longer the FAA waits to

The FAA estimates that 7,500 unmanned commercial aircraft will be licensed to fly by 2018, but a market study by Gielow’s group predicted sales of 150,000 units per year by 2020. Agriculture is expected to represent 80 percent of the sales, with real estate marketing to repre-sent 10 percent “other category.” The National Associa-tion of Realtors has ad-vised its members not to write the rules, the group signed on to a letter sent to the FAA in April, urg-ing officials to come out with the new rules soon-er rather than later. “The concern here is that this industry is start-ing to form itself, and the longer the FAA waits to

The technology is uncertain about the rules is holding back wider use, Gielow said. “Until the FAA comes out with the rules and finalizes them, the in-dustry will be ground-ed,” he said.

In the Mid-Atlantic region, the number of drones used in real es-tate is small but grow-ing. A March survey by the MRIS multiple listing service of 1,300 real es-tate professionals found that 1 percent had used drones to market listings and that 52 percent did not plan to do so in the next 12 months. About 13 percent said they expect to do so in the next 12 months, while 35 percent were unsure of their plans. Andrew Stathis, MBRS vice president of prod-uct innovation and mar-ke ting, said he is not personally familiar with agents using drones but has seen them em-ployed for listings on the West Coast. He said it could make buying and selling more efficient.

“We’re visual people. The more you enable an understanding of what the house experience is like, the more time both the listing agent and the seller will save, because they’ll only be show-ing the listing to people who are truly interest-ed,” he said. “It’s defini-tely a hot topic.”

The technology is most useful when mar-ke ting large estates, which benefit from the context of a bird’s-eye view of the grounds, said Ron Howard & Associates Fell Point office of Re/Max Prefer-red and sought out the drone photography firm Elevated Element when he was marketing a Baltimore County home in 2012. It was a cheaper alter-na-tive to plane and al-lowed closer shots, he said. For city listings, which make up most of his business, images found on Google suffice. “I don’t think you’re going to see a lot of city agents using drones,” he said. “If we were out in the country with mul-tiple-acre estates we would be using them all the time.”

Elevated Element of-fers real estate pho-to packages starting at $195. Howard & Associates currently offers a co-pack-ages for $295 that the company ex-pects contracts from real estate agents as well as the number of commer-cial developers interest-ed in tracking a project over time, to grow as the rules become clear.

“We expect agents to take this on themselves, and we also see a grow-ing third-party industry,” he said, adding that for some, being part of a firm with experience will trump learning to fly the drones themselves.

McArtor said he also thinks agents will want training and is working to create a safety course he hopes to sell to other agents. In the meantime, he says, he hopes drone use “will spread beyond the luxury mar-ket, and he’s not con-cerned about the FAA because the drone shots are part of a free mar-keting package.”

“I wanted this for all properties,” he said. “I have no worries.”
