Playing to Win
Daris Howard

I am not a gamer, and I doubt I ever could be. I was a math and computer science major, and I have never been very interested in how programs worked and trying to outsmart a game, rather than actually playing it.

Now that there is one thing that I am, I’m competitive. Thus, even though I’ve never been into playing video games, when my wife, Donna, claims she can beat me at one, I take it very seriously.

One night when we were newly married. Donna challenged me to a game of Tombstone City. I told her I didn’t think I had time because I had a lot of homework to do. She just laughed, knowing none of my expertise. “That’s okay. It will probably take less than five minutes to show you how to beat the tumbleweeds to get you anyway.”

Tombstone City was a game on an old TI computer that someone had given us. The computer connected to the television, but it did not have any other use since it did not pick up a TV signal any more.

Tombstone City, tumbleweeds would come after the character on the screen of the person that was playing. If they hit him, he died, if he shot the tumbleweed before it got him, the tumbleweed turned into a tombstone. The tumblestones became permanent, and the tumbling was forced to go around them.

A person received points in different ways. First, 10 points came for each tumbleweed shot. Second, a person received one point for each minute their character survived the onslaught of the tumbleweeds. Surviving became harder and harder as the tumbleweeds came faster and faster.

I told Donna that I would take her challenge and told her to go first, while I continued to study. Donna has very good reflexes, and her hand was about ten minutes behind mine. She rambled about 700 points, knocking off a lot of tumbleweeds. When she finished, she grinned at me. “See if you can do that!”

She went over to check on dinner, and I sat down to play. I moved my character, the center of the screen, and waited for the tumbleweeds to come to me. As they did, I fired at them until I had created a circle of tumblestones around my player so that the tumbleweeds couldn’t get through to beat me. Then I went back to wait.

Donna came into the room and saw me studying again. She asked, “What’s going on?”

“You look,” I answered, “as if you got another two points.”

Tumblestones and two minutes have got to be a record low, even for you.”

She looked back at her. “You might want to note that the game is not over yet. I’m still playing.”

Donna asked me if you’re ready to go back.”

“Look at the screen,” I replied. “The score is not over and I had just gained my 63rd point for last minute or more. Knowing me, she went over and studied the screen carefully to figure out what I had done. When she finally realized what I had done, she enclosed herself in a small tombstone so that the tumblestones couldn’t get to me, she spoke with consternation. “What kind of a game is this?”

“You might be getting one point for every minute,” I told her. “It will only take me a little more than 11 hours to equal your score, and then you continue to surpass it if I can just let it run forever.”

“Do you mean?” she asked. “You’re back at your studies.”

“You don’t want to get beat,” I told her, “you should learn not to challenge the master.”

And that was when Donna, as master of the powd, grabbed the plug on the computer.

Ratification Day

Ratification Day on January 14 annually recognizes the act that officially ended the American Revolution. This day is in commemoration of the ratification of the Treaty of Paris, 1783, at the Maryland State House in Annapolis, Maryland by the Confederation Congress and established the United States as a nation. Ratification was issued by the Congress of April 14, 1783, “Declaring that the United States of Great Britain, Congress approved the preliminary articles of peace on April 15, 1783.”

The Treaty of Paris was ratified on January 1784, 1784. A ceremony takes place at Annapolis, Maryland, in the State House where the treaty was signed. The Old Senate Chamber has been renovated and preserved just as it was at the signing. Every January 14, a flag in the design that was displayed at the time of the signing of the Treaty of Paris flies over the State House; twelve stars form a circle with one star in the center. The following is an excerpt from the proclamation of ratification:

Whereas definitive articles of peace and friendship, between the United States of America and His Britannick Majesty, and signed at Paris, on the 3rd day of September 1783 … we have thought proper by these presents, to notify the premises to all the good citizens of these United States. Given under the seal of the United States, witnessed His Excellency Thomas Jefferson, our president, at Annapolis, this fourteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty four … “Definitive Articles of Peace.”

To put it around our necks so we can whistle if we get in trouble out on the water. You have to wear a life jacket that fits just right. You also have to have a buddy so that we can keep track of each other. Your need to carry a flashlight when you go in the water at night. He likes the Full moon Paddles that we in night.

We were taught all sorts of things about how to use the paddles and move through the water. Did you know that you choose a paddle that is the right size for you? You stand the paddle up and reach your hand to the top of the paddle. Your hand should just barely go over the top of the paddle.

Then you have the right size. A kayak paddle has paddles on both ends of the paddle and you can turn them and lock them in place to make it so that it is personalized just for you. You have to be able to dip the paddle on one side and then on the other side so the kayak kind of fits you and becomes a part of you. You glide through the water by pushing the paddles to move forward.

We learned how to turn and go forward and how to watch out for other ones.

It was so fun being in the kayak. Our scout leader has lots of different kayaks and canoes to choose from. I really liked being able to move around the island.

I’ve never been in a kayak before. It was great fun! Our scout leader taught me how to kayak. It was so fun gliding through the water! We went up by the island and then our scout leader took the scouts along the edge of the lake. He told us that when he was a scout, he had to swamp a canoe so he could earn the canoeing merit badge. I’m glad we didn’t have to swamp anything that day because it was quite cold out there on the lake!

St. Johns River Blue Crab Trap Closure

Recreational and commercial blue crab traps in all waters of the St. Johns River system must be removed from the water before January 1, the first day of a 10-day trap closure. This closure is one of three regional, 10-day blue crab trap closures in 2018 on the Atlantic coast of Florida. These closures are designed to protect non-target species such as dip nets and fold-up traps. Blue crab harvesters may also use standard blue crab traps during the closure if the traps are attached to a dock or other private property.

Lost and abandoned blue crab traps are a problem in the blue crab fishery because they can continue to trap crabs and fish when left in the water. This can also be unsightly in the marine environment and cause navigational hazards to boaters if it is on the water. The closure is one of three regional, 10-day blue crab trap closures in 2018 on the Atlantic coast of Florida. More information regarding the FWC’s trap-retrieval program, blue crab trap closure dates, and regulations and clean-up events, go online to MyFWC.com/Fishing.

Common Tax Mistakes to Avoid in 2018

One of the most common mistakes taxpayers make is selecting the wrong filing status. A taxpayer’s filing status will affect the number of tax credits and deductions they’re eligible for, the value of their standard deduction, and their tax bracket. One situation is that of a family with a disabled child. If one family unit status seems fit for the family, for example, a family with a child under the age of 18, they may not be sure if married filing jointly or married filing separately is more beneficial to them.

Most taxpayers file their taxes using the standard deduction, but you may not be eligible for all taxes credits or deductions that could potentially help you more. Also, you may be eligible for the ‘above-the-line’ deductions and tax credits, some of which require you to itemize. And it’s important to note that the newly passed tax reform generally does not impact these credits or deductions until 2018. The FWC recommends that taxpayers keep all records of income and expenses for the year, as well as any documents supporting their claims.

The closure will give the region will take less time to remove. Until the trap season reopens, blue crabs may be harvested with other gear, such as dip nets and fold-up traps. Blue crab harvesters may also use standard blue crab traps during the closure if the traps are attached to a dock or other private property. Lost and abandoned blue crab traps are a problem in the blue crab fishery because they can continue to trap crabs and fish when left in the water. This can also be unsightly in the marine environment and cause navigational hazards to boaters if it is on the water.

On average, the IRS processes returns that approximately $1 billion goes unclaimed in federal tax refunds. Taxpayers can claim a refund for up to three years after the filing deadline. So, in addition to filing your 2017 return, keep in mind that you can file 2015 returns by April 17, 2018. If you don’t, you will lose your 2015 refund. There is no late-filing penalty if a taxpayer is due a refund. Also, even if you are not required to file a return, you may be entitled to a refund.

Aromatherapy Basics:

Aromatherapy is the use of essential oils, which are also known as volatile oils, to promote health and well-being. Aromatherapy practices are based on the belief that the essence of plants can be extracted and used to improve physical and emotional health. The use of essential oils in aromatherapy can aid in relaxation, promote healing, enhance mood, and support overall well-being.

The Basics of Aromatherapy

Aromatherapy involves the use of essential oils for various purposes. Essential oils are liquids that are distilled from the flowers, leaves, bark, or roots of plants. They are used in aromatherapy to create a therapeutic environment that can enhance physical and emotional well-being.

Choosing High-Quality Oils:

Choosing high-quality essential oils is crucial for effective aromatherapy. Look for oils that are pure, therapeutic grade, and free from additives or diluents. Be sure to research the reputation of the brand and read reviews from other users before purchasing.

Common Uses of Essential Oils:

- Scent: Essential oils can be used to create a pleasant aroma in the home or for personal use.
- Aromatherapy: Essential oils can be inhaled or applied to the skin to promote relaxation, reduce stress, and improve mood.
- Topical Use: Essential oils can be applied to the skin to support physical health and well-being.
- Internal Use: Essential oils can be ingested to support overall health and well-being.

Common Essential Oils and Their Uses:

- Lavender: Soothing, calming, and relaxing. Can be used for sleep, stress, and anxiety.
- Peppermint: Refreshing, cooling, and invigorating. Can be used for headaches, nausea, and respiratory support.
- Eucalyptus: Antibacterial and anti-inflammatory. Can be used for respiratory support and skin infections.
- Tea Tree: Antimicrobial and antiviral. Can be used for skin infections and wounds.

Aromatherapy Techniques:

- Diffusing: Essential oils can be diffused in a variety of ways, including electric diffusers, candles, or towels.
- Topical Application: Essential oils can be applied to the skin in a carrier oil, such as jojoba or sweet almond oil.
- Internal Use: Essential oils can be ingested in a small amount of water or oil.

Aromatherapy Safety:

It is important to use essential oils safely and responsibly. Always be aware of potential side effects and be cautious when using essential oils around children or pregnant women. Consult with a healthcare provider before using essential oils for medical purposes.

Conclusion:

Aromatherapy is a natural and holistic approach to health and wellness. By using essential oils in various ways, you can enhance your physical and emotional well-being and promote a sense of peace and relaxation.
