It's Your Right to Know

The Weight Loss Center
Daris Howard

Sam was tired of working his boring job and wanted to strike out on his own. He had always dreamed of becoming an entrepreneur. He had saved up some money and decided to take the plunge. He was going to start a business and work with people on losing weight. His goal was to become a fitness coach. It was the perfect business for him. But the first thing he had to find was a place that was big enough to house his business. He also felt that the businesses that were in the upper two floors of the building would draw people in.

Sam continued working his job, but the minute he got off work each day, he was working on his rented hall. He was cleaning, painting, and making it look inviting. He ordered his supplies, bought some exercise bikes, treadmills, and weight machines. He hoped to add more later, but he felt it gave him a good start. He took out a small loan to pay the wages of the employees and other expenses for the first six months.

It seemed like forever to Sam before his business was ready, but finally, the grand opening day arrived. He opened the doors, and the mayor even did a ribbon cutting. Sam offered a first month free or six months at half price. His business was located right inside, so there was no need to worry about finding clients. He was doing well, but there was something that really troubled him. His customers didn’t seem to be losing hardly any weight at all. In fact, some of them seemed to gain weight.

Sam consulted all of his books from his training. Everything he was doing was done correctly. And none of his customers complained too much about the lack of weight loss, but he was sure that his business couldn’t sustain itself with the numbers he was seeing. He tried everything he could think of and decided he needed to seek some outside help.

Sam went to one of his professors who had trained him as a fitness coach. Sam explained his dilemma and asked his professor if he would come meeting and spending an hour or so watching Sam work with his customers. The professor happily agreed and even offered to even at the appointed hour.

The professor seemed pleased with the work Sam had put into his business. He looked around and commented that he felt the environment was sufficient for the job. But with the customers, the professor seemed occupied with other things. He kept walking around the gym as if searching for something. He had not found what he was looking for. He then excused himself to go to the exit and watch people who were leaving.

It was somewhat amusing, and the professor wasn’t watching the workouts Sam was having people do. But Sam didn’t dare question his professor. After about a half hour of watching people leave, the professor returned to Sam.

“Do you really know what your problem is, Sam,” the professor said.

“Professor?” Sam asked.

The professor led Sam to a vent near the ceiling. “Sam, what is that vent?” Sam thought about it, considering the layout of the businesses on the next floor. “That would be Antonio’s Pizza Parlor,” Sam replied, “as far as I know.” The professor said, “This place smells of stale beer and garlic. How can anyone concentrate on working out in a place like the pizza center of Harlem?”

The minute your customers leave, they head right upstairs to the pizza place, the professor explained. “You need to get more customers.” Sam took offense at the professor’s tone. He felt that his customers were leaving because he did not have the entire “college experience,” housing, food, and even books included. The professor seemed pleased with the work Sam had put into his business. He asked Sam what was wrong with the numbers he was seeing.

Imagine traveling up the Amazon River on a dhow through jungle roads Imagine driving across a broken bridge with 2x2 planks pushing you Imagine hearing the sounds of waking animals as dawn comes to the jungle. Victor and Janice Nickerson did all of these things.

Imagine being in a region where no one has heard the gospel and you are bringing God’s word to those people. That is what Victor and Janice Nickerson did when they spent the first five years of their journey through Brazil. When they began their journey through Brazil, there were four Baptist churches and one mission in that church—four churches that had established a limited understanding of Brazil. Then, in the 1980s, numerous young Brazilians became pastors and missionaries who will continue to carry the gospel throughout Brazil. Their adventures will be continued.

Victor and Janice Nickerson grew up in Pomona Park, California. Victor graduated from Crescent City High School and the St. John’s Community College before earning a degree in education at the University of Florida. He met and married Janice in Pomona Park. The couple earned a degree in English at Wake Forest, North Carolina in 1978. He and Janice entered the Baptist Children’s Home and heard the call to missions. They joined the Baptist Children’s Home at a special Thanksgiving dinner at the Pomona Park Community Center. Call Yvonne Hunter at 386-583-8780 or Yvonne brings at 386-802-2261 to reserve your table. Enjoy Thanksgiving dinner at Musselwhite’s.

Happy Holidays
Thanksgiving—In the time of giving—many will be gathering with friends and loved ones to feast on both food and loving memories. To those who have a special Park Pride Friends have invited them to join them at a special Thanksgiving dinner at the Pomona Park Community Center at 1110 Virginia Avenue, Crescent City. Hi everyone! This is Alan reporting on stuff that happens in Puck and Troop 957.

We had a great fall Ice Cream Social! It was so much fun!

We had lots of people come. We ate ice cream with all sorts of toppings and goodies. We had caramel and hot fudge and nuts and strawberry toppings, and fun and root beer floats! There were plates of cookies and rice crispy treats and brownies and it was all yummy! And you can’t eat ice cream and goodies! The person that moves the party? I hope we do that again real soon.

Then we played games called Win in a Minute. Like one of the games was that you had to put a straw on an M&M and suck really hard and blow it from one bowl to another! The person that moves the most in one minute wins!

It was hilarious to watch and fun to try to do it.

Another game was to use a plastic spoon and paper towels to make the candles from one hand to the other. You should have seen how funny it was to see our Cub Master and Den Leader do that and then they had to put the plastic spoon in their mouth and then separate the M&M’s by color and put them in separate cups. They had their hands in water, though he wasn’t there. They did pretty well but one of the cups had no M&M’s in it. They beat them. We had parents, family members, scouts, leaders and youth participating. It was great!

One of my favorite things to do was when we sang Happy Birthday to our scout master, who was out of town on his birthday. We sent it to him because we realized it was because he was out of town on his birthday. He said it made him feel so good to know people sang to him. We also had birthday cake too, even though he wasn’t there. It was really good.

Troop 567 and Puck 957 are sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and we meet on Wednesday nights. If you want more information, please call 407-413-7723.

Create a Wildlife Habitat in Your Own Backyard

Special to the

Your backyard can be a gathering place for birds, butterflies, frogs, flying squirrels and more. Attract native species by offering food, water, cover and space for them to raise their young, and your yard will be transformed into a welcoming habitat for wildlife.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission’s （FWC） is introducing Backyards Beyond, a campaign challenging Floridians to make a difference and have fun by creating refuges for wildlife in their own backyard.

“Imagining your backyard as a place where butterflies are attracted by flowers, shrubs andplants, girdling up seeds and nectar, and bugs, beetles, butterflies, birds, snakes, mosquitoes and other insects,” said Jeremy Lamiey, FWC’s director of Public Information Services. “Your efforts to create wildlife habitat at home will have a positive impact because animals need places to live beyond our wildlife management areas. Backyard Beyond is also a great opportunity for you and your family to spend time together and enjoy easy ways to be involved by bringing attractive plant life to shared spaces in your own backyard. This illustrated publication created by the FWC and Fish & Wildlife Foundation of Florida can be ordered online at WildlifeFlorida.com. Go beyond your backyards to form clubs and friends to explore Florida backyards as a wildlife management area, local parks and state parks, state and national forests, and natural wildlife refugia. Use Florida Nature Trackers to document the wildlife you observe in your backyard. Create a butterfly garden, build a nest box or add a bird feeder for small animals or a window feeder for birds, and have a look at this illustrated publication!”

The Florida Nature Trackers project, and the FWC have a special project to help you record your observations of wildlife in your backyard. They also provide you with valuable information. FWC biologists will be able to see the wildlife photos submitted to Florida Nature Trackers and use the data to help direct their efforts to conserve and manage native species and habitat. Remember, wild animals do not need supplemental feeding from human hands. Naturally-occurring insects and native plants provide nourishment for native species (but butter- flies, birds and small animals). Pet food, corn and other supplemental food can encourage unwanted visitors.

For more information or to participate, go to FloridaNatureTrackers.com/backyards/

Florida has seen many changes over the past forty-seven years, 1970 to 2010. There’s an arbitrary year to choose to start from the past, but it has been selected because it was when David Bowie published his famous 1971 song Changes. Changes is now and has been described as a generation-defining song. Part of the lyrics from the chorus goes like this: “Turn and face the strange, Ch-ch-ch-changes.”

However, in older infants and children, at high risk of becoming precancerous or cancerous.

While moles appear during childhood or adulthood, they may undergo include surgery, cryosurgery, laser therapy, and surgical excision.

Part of the lyrics from the chorus goes like this: “Turn and face the strange, Ch-ch-ch-changes.”

Some of the creams that claim to remove moles are marketed as containing ingredients such as pineapple juice, aloe vera, and lavender oil. While these ingredients may help with the appearance of moles, they do not remove moles.

Part of the lyrics from the chorus goes like this: “Turn and face the strange, Ch-ch-ch-changes.”

As for pineapples, they are known to contain an enzyme called bromelain, which may help to break down the tissue surrounding the mole. However, this enzyme is destroyed when the pineapple is cooked or exposed to heat, so it is not effective for removing moles.
