Hospital set to reduce billing pains

By KW Hillis

Life is about to become a little bit easier for residents who have to send paperwork to their insurance companies to get reimbursed for hospital services. The hospital plans to begin direct billing the first of February, according to Elaine McMahon, hospital administrator.

“This is a really good benefit for the community because [the hospital is] going to handle all the processing of their claims to the insurance company,” McMahon said. “We’ve wanted to do this for a very long time.”

Roi residents talk of travel

By Jim Bennett

Come to Kwajalein. We’ll take care of you.

That’s not an advertising mantra, but rather the message to Roi residents at Friday’s town hall meeting held in the Tradewinds Theater.

“We’re going to take care of our own,” said Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr., USAKA/KMR commander.

Wrenn’s comments followed discussion over Roi residents’ access to seats on aircraft traveling from Kwaj to Roi and to room reservations at the Kwaj Lodge.

Transportation highlighted an evening marked by frank talk between residents, the colonel and the various department heads from both USAKA/KMR and RSE.

Santa stars at Kwajalein parade

By Jim Bennett

The visit of St. Nick and his wife and the subsequent 33rd annual tree-lighting ceremony Saturday marked the traditional beginning of the holiday season on Kwajalein.

“In a way we have a transient community, but some traditions endure, and the tree-lighting ceremony is one of them,” said Simone Smead, Community Activities manager.

Hundreds gathered outside Bucholz Army Airfield, waiting for a USAKA 1900D airplane to deliver the two guests of honor. A cheer erupted as the two got off the plane and shook hands with Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr., USAKA/KMR commander.

The holiday couple shook hands with their young fans and climbed aboard the Santa Mobile, a large flatbed trailer decorated with seasonal items. Accompanied by elves and followed by children on bicycles, the mobile paraded along Ocean Road before turning and winding its way to the Yokwe Yuk Club and the block party outside.

“Perhaps, it’s a time of the year for children,” Wrenn said. “I hope everyone will reflect back to their childhood and enjoy the season. We do a lot of serious work out here, but this is a time of the year where we don’t have to take ourselves so seriously and to reflect back as to why we have a holiday season.”

The block party continued after the ceremony with food booths, music and games.

Sunday, the mini-mall held a holiday event of its own (see related story, page 8), and Monday, Santa received young visitors at Gilligan’s for photo opportunities and a chance to collect Christmas wishes. A buffet dinner was served.
Two-year anniversary inspires reflection

By Ed Harris
Guest Columnist

I just realized last week was my second anniversary living on Kwajalein! Seems like a time to reflect...

I’m definitely a little rounder. Scuba diving and beach bumming doesn’t burn the calories like I thought.

I’m more laid back... don’t get so wound up when things don’t go my way.

My tan has never been better.

The world seems smaller.

I have a greater understanding of what is really important. People kill themselves over things that aren’t.

I’m more generous to those less fortunate.

E-mail is my best friend.

Friends and family may love you, but not enough to jump on a plane and fly to the other side of Earth.

I’ll never think twice about driving a couple of hours to visit those same friends and family when I return home.

The ability to hug someone you care about is priceless.

I love my dog and won’t leave him behind again.

Coca-Cola is better in a two-liter bottle. Do they still have those over there?

Sometimes being alone is healthy.

Smiles are multi-lingual.

Paying taxes is a pain in the butt I can live without... and rent, phone, power, cable, garbage, car, gas, insurance, food... well, I don’t mind paying for food!

Having choices is what makes America great.

There’s no really good Chinese food in the South Pacific.

Home Depot, Domino’s, Taco Bell, Wal-Mart, Publics, El Toro, Chick-fil-A... mmmmmmm... Chick-fil-A, Perimeter Mall, The Pottery Barn, Shogun, Gibson’s Bar-B-Q. These places will have no idea what hit ‘em when I get back to town.

Finding a soulmate wasn’t as hard as I thought... just needed to open my eyes.

Not knowing how the Grinch stole Christmas, whether Ross was still dating Rachel, what is on Ed TV and how many times Bush beats Gore won’t kill me.

And the most important thing I’ve learned living on a coral reef no bigger than a parking lot is...

There’s no place like home!

Post office needs help through holiday season

By Barbara Johnson
Feature Writer

Packages are flying in to Kwaj by the paletteful, and the post office is extra busy. That’s why Sgt. 1st Class Maurice Robinson, postmaster, is asking for volunteer help during December and January.

Although the post office is authorized to have 14 full-time positions, currently, because of staff PCSing, it only has nine people working full-time, Robinson said.

Volunteers needed

“Even though we have a shortage of personnel, there’s no backlog of mail,” he said, “and [the post office staff] are working harder, coming in extra hours, volunteering extra time. But we still need volunteers.”

Three to four hours at a time is ideal for volunteering, Robinson said, but any number of hours is appreciated.

“Some may be able to give more, some less,” he said. “We just want to get the job done.”

Potential Santa’s helpers should come to the post office and fill out a volunteer form, after which they will receive an orientation. Volunteers must be at least 16 years old and U.S. citizens.

Their job will include assisting in off-loading arriving mail, sorting it and putting it in the mailboxes.

“We can use a lot of help doing bulk mail,” Robinson said. The number of magazines and catalogs is almost double the normal amount this time of year.

The busiest days at the post office are Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, when mail shipments come in, according to Robinson. Usually mail arrives at the post office about 11 to 11:30 a.m., and the staff sorts and delivers as much as possible on plane day.

There’s no limit to the number of volunteers the post office can use, but they will be broken up into groups to be spread out over the week.

Volunteers will be needed through the end of January, Robinson said. The mail load doesn’t lighten up until then.

Mailing tips

The post office staff requests that customers have their customs forms filled out for packages before they reach the window. Some residents even take forms home to fill out, but tables are provided in the post office as well for that purpose.

And, as a reminder, there’s a limit of four packages at a time. If you have more than four packages, you should set up an appointment to come in before business hours. Give the post office a call to schedule a special time.

First Marshallese employee

In other postal news, this week, Windy Luis, a junior at Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School, will begin working at the post office under the federal Student Temporary Employment Program.

She’s the first person of Marshallese descent to work at the Kwajalein Post Office, Robinson said.

Persons 16 years of age or older who are at least half-time students are entitled to work under the STEP program. It gives students the opportunity to earn money, and offers the student and employer flexibility because the work doesn’t have to be related to the student’s academic or career goals.

Chemical weapons destruction complete on Johnston Atoll

By Public Affairs
Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense

Today, the U.S. Army took a major step in safely eliminating the U.S. chemical weapons stockpile by demilitarizing the last of the chemical munitions stockpiled on Johnston Atoll in the Pacific.

The operators of the Johnston Atoll Chemical Agent Disposal System (JACADS) completed destruction on Nov. 29 of more than 13,000 land mines that were filled with nerve agent VX. These land mines were the last of the chemical munitions stored on Johnston Atoll to be destroyed.

The facility, located 825 miles southwest of Hawaii, is the nation’s first fully integrated facility designed specifically for the disposal of chemical weapons.

“The soldiers and contractors who have safely destroyed the chemical weapons on Johnson Island should be extremely proud of their accomplishment,” said Army Lt. Gen. Paul Kern, military deputy to the assistant secretary of the Army for Acquisition, Logistics and Technology. “This is an historical event which will improve the security of the United States and provide hope for the rest of the world that the 21st century will be safer for our children and grandchildren.”

During the JACADS disposal campaigns, the Army tracked the process to continuously improve and enhance safety for workers, the community and the environment. This knowledge and experience is being applied to the Army’s other disposal facilities to ensure that safe destruction of chemical weapons continues. The Army also will share information with other countries that are researching technologies to destroy their chemical weapons stockpiles.

Washington Demilitarization Co., formerly the Raytheon Demilitarization Co., has been involved in JACADS since its inception, and has provided the design support, equipment procurement and installation, acceptance testing, and operations and maintenance of the facility.

VX land mines were manufactured in the late 1950’s and early 1960’s and were designed to disperse lethal agents upon detonation. They are filled with VX nerve agent, a clear, odorless and tasteless liquid that affects the nervous system. More than 100,000 VX landmines were manufactured in the U.S.

Since 1971, the commander U.S. Army, Pacific (USARPAC) has been charged with the mission of safely storing these munitions. For almost 30 years, USARPAC provided soldiers who spent yearlong tours on this small island, away from their families, to ensure that the weapons were safely stored until they were destroyed.
Roi hosts town hall meeting ...

colonel’s honesty and forthright-ness,” said Roi resident Craig Sears.

Getting here, staying here

Roi residents now have greater access to air travel than in the recent past, despite smaller planes.

According to Lott Lawson, airfield manager, residents need only call for reservations at 56FLY, or 56359. “Hardseated” priority will be given to residents traveling for emergencies, official range business and medical and dental appointments.

“We have a smaller airplane, but we’re going to do our best. We will do our utmost to take care of you guys. The main thing is we have to talk to each other,” Lawson said, repeating the phone number.

And at least one resident, Carol Sword, has a greater reason to visit. She applauded the move by Sodexho Marriott to return to fine dining at Yokwe Yuk Club, saying she would travel to Kwaj to eat at the restaurant.

To allow Roi residents to stay the night on Kwaj, Wrenn said work is underway to improve the reservation system.

“Kwaj Lodge is the only place in the military where you can’t go online and make a reservation,” Wrenn said. USAKA is buying software modeled after the reservation system used at Hickam Air Force Base.

“I’d like to think it’s simple to order the software and get someone trained, but I’m learning that at Kwaj it takes a little longer,” Wrenn said.

In the meantime, Wrenn suggested residents use e-mail to make reservations. Asking about computer access on the island, Wrenn seemed surprised to learn that besides business and personal computers, Roi residents shared only two public access computers in the library.

“Hey Dave [Lt. Col. Stoddard, deputy commander],” the colonel said. “Tell Don Hornbrook [assistant chief of staff, Information Management] we’re going to get some computers up here. We’re excessing computers now. We could put two up here in strategic locations. Shouldn’t be too much of a problem.”

Projected projects

On movies, Lloyd Jordan, Residential Services manager, reported that efforts are underway to improve the sound system at all three theaters on Roi and Kwaj. Jordan estimated the cost at around $10,000.

Residents said they weren’t interested in G-rated movies such as “Babes in Toyland,” which showed this weekend.

Community Activities Manager Simone Smead said movie tastes vary, and her office will work with residents on ordering and scheduling movies. She suggested those with input should call Entertainment Services Superintendent Steve Snider.

Moviegoers might share the theater with residents who plan to use it as a chapel on Sundays. Funds to build a new chapel are not available.

Food on the go

In other business, residents commented on fresh milk and produce, asking why some shipments arrived spoiled. Transportation officials said the food does not sit any length of time on the tarmac, but Wrenn ordered a process management review, where officials will log transportation times for the next 30 days.

“We can say we have process management, but there’s those times when somebody’s sick or gone or something else happens,” Wrenn said. “So, let’s take a look at it.”

Downsizing

The Roi population will continue to shrink.

“As we bring [Kwajalein Modernization and Remoting] to fruition, we’re trying to decrease the Roi population,” Wrenn said.

KMAR work is set for completion in the first quarter of 2003, but residents should see major movement by September 2002. Some will move sooner. As construction at the Kwajalein Mission Control Center is completed, 20-30 people will be relocated to Kwajalein.

The Roi population will drop more when the new Roi Power Plant comes on line in May. Construction workers will then remove the old plant, but should leave the island by October.

Dropping fees

Golf is free on Roi, and prices for other recreational activities may be falling, too.

Wrenn said the command is committed to increasing the recreation fund.

“In a perfect world, we would eliminate all recreational fees,” Wrenn said. “As we move to greater solvency, we’re going to see more of that, and we’re going to be reducing the fees up here on Roi first.”
Direct billing scheduled for February ...

Kwajalein Hospital business operation supervisor, said they received the direct billing software two weeks ago. Some of the delay was due to the phone system.

“The telephone lines were a problem because [the claims] go out over the telephone lines,” McMahon said. “If we don’t have a good line, we don’t have a good transmission.”

Although patients won’t have to file their own insurance, they will need to bring their insurance cards when they come for treatment.

“Of paramount importance is that we have up-to-date information on every single patient we have in the hospital,” Barrs said.

“Who their insurance carrier is, how many dependents they have and who has the insurance — whether it’s the husband or the wife ... We don’t have access to that information,” Barrs added, explaining that all the required information is on each person’s insurance card. “People are going to have to put [their insurance card] with their K-badge.”

Up until the direct billing system is launched, patients will have to continue filing their insurance claims. Currently, the patient is expected to pay for services at the time of treatment. Anything over $50 can be billed through Finance, though the patient is responsible for filing with the insurance company for reimbursement.

With the current system, if the insurance company has a question, it’s up to the patient to do the legwork to resolve it, McMahon said. The patient has to gather the information from Finance and the hospital and then send the information to the insurance company.

All that will change with the new system when responsibility shifts to the hospital.

“We will keep [responsibility of the claim] in the hospital until it is done,” McMahon said.

If the insurance company has a question about the claim, the hospital will handle it, but patients are always ultimately responsible financially for their medical services.

McMahon said the portion of the cost that the patient has to pay will be according to each patient’s insurance plan.

Direct billing does not include dental services, McMahon said, adding that additional details about the system will be released before direct billing starts.

“The bottom line is customer service,” Barrs said. “It’s pretty much industry standard that doctors’ offices do this for their patients.”

Allowing patients to use a credit card to pay their part of the bill is also being considered, McMahon said. “[The new system] brings us into the 21st century.”

Landgraff named to scholarship competition

From Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School

Susan Landgraff, a senior at Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School, has been nominated to compete in the National Principal’s Leadership Award scholarship program.

“Susan exemplifies the type of person we want representing Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School,” said principal Stephen Howell.

Sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and funded by Herrf Jones Inc., 150 national winners will be chosen this spring to receive $1,000 college scholarships.

Nominees are based on leadership skills, participation in service, achievement in academics and employment experience.

Nominees are required to write an essay. This year’s essay topic was how to best use technology to educate our youth.

Kwajalein’s Sarah Corbin won the scholarship in the 1998-99 school year.

Book Blurb

from Grace Sherwood Library

Kwajalein in fiction and nonfiction at Grace Sherwood Library:

The Last Night on Bikini by Patricia MacInnes - Depicted as a “boozy island base,” Kwajalein is the setting for this fictitious narrative about the victims and survivors in America’s race for supremacy. Written by a former Kwaj resident, the plot unfolds as an Army “brat,” known as Lucky, witnesses coverups after the Bravo tests and has to deal with her own family’s self-destruction as well. (fiction)

Fish Heads by Leonard Schonberg - Manlike fish creatures swim with the dolphins. Could they be a genetic aberration caused by the Bravo test? This recently published book has detailed descriptions of Kwajalein and centers around the budding romance of a female physician ministering to the needs of outer island residents and a government official visiting the Marshall Islands on a research project. They are joined by visitors bent on a devious cover-up with life-threatening consequences. (fiction)

The Island of the Color-Blind by Oliver Sachs - Neurologist Oliver Sachs, author of “Awakenings,” is on his way to research causes of inherited color blindness on the island of Pingelap. A nurse from Kwajalein Hospital sitting next to him describes the light and noise of missiles and antimissiles streaking across Kwajalein’s night sky and crashing into the lagoon as “like the night sky in Baghdad.” Sachs’ description of “slavering” police dogs and searches at the airport are less than flattering. (non-fiction)

Sub Zero by John Campbell - Intrigue on Kwaj and Roi centers around mission-related activities, intercept decoys and an invasion by an armed assault team from a North Korean submarine. (fiction)

Mini-mall sparkles with Sunday shopping

By Jim Bennett

Retail outlets closed off the mini-mall to bike traffic and opened for business Sunday night.

“It was really fun,” said Kathy Valencia, Retail Merchandising manager. “We just wanted a nice evening where people could enjoy the music and feeling of the season.”

Residents also enjoyed the shopping, buying up as much in two hours as they might in a normal six-hour day.

Macy’s and Macy’s West appeared packed like Santa’s sleigh, with items on sale and shoppers grabbing them up.

Outside, the mall glowed with lights hung by volunteers. Various organizations, such as the Shriners, Scuba Club and Sport Fishing Club, set up tables, offering their wares. Carolers sang, including the Cub Scouts. Members of the Jine Tip Tip Club danced and both the Kwajalein Pipes and Drums Corps and Pure Aloha performed.

The mall retailers are planning another special shopping night Dec. 20.
