Some people might be better designed to look at the future than others — prophets or wizards, for example. But we don’t know any of those.

Here instead, Florida Weekly offers the voices of officials, former officials and private citizens, of men and women who have been participants, activists or impassioned observers of growth and change in northern Collier County and the south Lee communities of Bonita Springs and Estero.

We asked our prognosticators this question: What will these communities look like in the year 2030? That point in time is arbitrary: far enough away to allow for some significant change in opportunities for residents, as well as in what they see and experience; far enough away by that time to expect a reasonable look at how the 21st century is really shaping up; and close enough to get to for many of us.

Demographers estimate the numbers will have changed, of course. Roughly 1 million people could inhabit Lee County as a whole, with another 430,000 in Collier — a total of almost 400,000 more residents than now live in the two counties. And that means more housing, more roads, more infrastructure of other types, more services in general and a greater need for water.

Here are a few of their comments, abridged for length.

■ Ben Nelson, a lifelong Bonita Springs resident who spent eight years on the city council and eight years as mayor:

Fifteen years ago, we had been a city for a year. So 2030, only 14 years

Americans and Floridians, Republicans and Democrats, cowboys and Indians all should now rethink the wealth problem our nation faces, a problem tantamount to dangerous black ice on a winter highway.

It’s lying out there mostly unseen right in the middle of our road, a deadly detri- ment to the healthy progress of society.

The problem is this: Less than 1 percent of Americans hold as much wealth as the bottom 90 percent, economists say.

If the rest of us can’t join the 1 percent in their clubhouse — if we peasants can’t also drink Armand de Brignac Brut Rose by the six pack like other people drink Budweiser, but at $10,000 a bottle — then maybe we can convince the rich guys to join us down here in the very pleasant Peasantville, instead.

They could come to our club, in other words, instead of us going to theirs. Compelling evidence suggests that such a trend has already begun. And we have Donald Trump to thank for it.

It started in January when Mr. Trump walked into the Red Arrow Diner in Man- chester, N.H., and ordered lunch. Born into extravagant wealth and accustomed to flying first-class style home to sleep in his own gold-and-marble bedroom after a hard day of campaigning, he had decided to spend the night near the diner.

And eat there.

The Red Arrow is a nice place if you’re a peasant. They serve three squares and dessert 24-7, starting with “a breakfast so big, it takes two plates,” according to the menu. But when a billionaire strolls in and slaps his fat rear end into a seat to order a hamburger and fries, anything can happen. And it did.

Maybe it was simply that “The Donald” didn’t just order the “Dinahmoe Burger” for $30.99, advertised as “Two of Our Free-Form, Fresh Ground Beef Burgers, Lettuce, Tomato, Bacon, Cheese and Thousand Island Dressing On a Triple Decker Roll, Served with Fries.”

Maybe it was the fact that he also threw a fit of anger, he confronted the Don. “Enjoy your burger, racist!” she shouted, referring to Trump’s proposed Mexican-border wall and Muslim-restric- tion policies.

Sometimes my fellow peasants embar- rass me. I think Jane (so reported by the Guardian as the enraged woman) was way too hard on Mr. Trump, even though she was unquestionably correct in her estima- tion of him.

Sure, Jane, he’s a “racist,” a poor humble patriot pontificator on the Hate Highway just trying to find a better American way.

To be one of us. To be anything other than the rich troglodyte he clearly is. So he knocked on our Peasantville door. He asked if there was one more burger at the inn. For him. Just one. With a mac-and- cheese ball and a diet Coke. And you treat him this way?

But that was then. The Donald survived and went on to some other diners. Miss Katie’s Diner in Milwaukee, for example, where his choices included meatloaf on the blue plate special, with mashed pota- toes, fresh vegetables and homemade gravy accompanied by soup or salad, or coleslaw and fresh Italian.

I’m telling you it’s nice in Peasantville. Others are finding out — the 1 percent.

Somewhere, we must be working our peasant magic on these rich guys. They keep trying to join our club.

This could save society.

Take Francis Rooney, a Neapolitan 1-per- center (that means he lives in Naples) with undergraduate and law degrees from Georgetown University who now aims to step into the rather large shoes of U.S. Rep. Curt Clawson, the District 19 Republican who likely would have been a shoe-in for another term until he announced he was through with Congress, and sticking with his father, who is elderly.

Mr. Rooney, says a friend of mine who never gets anything wrong, “has donated close to $10 million to presidential cam- paigns, been awarded an ambassador post to The Vatican, lives in a place in Port Royal that could pass as an art museum (never mind the property value), runs a company estimated in the billions of dollars, etc. etc. — and he just announced his first press event at MEL’S DINER!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Yep, Mel’s Diner on the southwest coast where you can order “Mel’s Meatloaf, baked fresh daily and served with natural beef gravy ... homemade soup and salad (and) your choice of Mel’s mashed pota- toes, Sun Coast rice pilaf, natural cut Idaho French fries, and seasonal vegetables,” all for $8.99.

Mr. Rooney will compete for the con- gressional seat with fellow Republican Chauncey Goss, son of former U.S. Rep. and CIA chief Porter Goss, perhaps a more moderate dîner-shiner who has Washing- ton experience as an administrator, and a reputation for trying to clean up water, like Rep. Clawson.

But apparently Mr. Rooney is one of us, the peasants.

“Francis Rooney is a businessman, not a politician,” a recent advertisement announces. “Rooney is from the construc- tion industry, where he’s created thousand of jobs.”

As a construction man, he probably knows how to swing a hammer. And eat meatloaf from the blue plate special. His ad says he will cut spending, repeal Okam- acare and protect life and our Second Amendment rights.

Could he mean the right to be bat-spit crazy, get an assault rifle and shoot up the place if the cooks start kissing or the meat- loaf is bad?

“Francis Rooney will fight the fights that must be won,” the ad concludes.

As opposed to the fights that are going to be lost. Like getting a bottle of Armand de Brignac Brut Rose to go with your mac- and-cheese ball.
Named One of the Top 50 Cardiovascular Hospitals in the Nation for 2014.
A school of thought of some 154 individuals and/or couples from 16 countries have made the pledge, representing net worth of more than $750 billion. Of this group, 124 are in U.S. households with a combined net worth of more than $502 billion.

Sixty-one of the families holding the bulk of the assets pledged are in just four states (California, New York, Washington and Nevada). Only six of Florida's super rich are signed up. Donald Trump, arguably one of Florida's most famous billionaires, is not among them.

Trump was asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" why he had not joined with fellow billionaires in signing the pledge. He replied he was "a little bit old-fashioned" and "... opposed to selling everything and giving it away.... I make lots of big contributions. I like that better.

Trump is consistent about doing what is good for Trump as a guiding principle. He exploits philanthropic opportunities using the same cynical calculus that is characteristic of his business deals. To wit, the objective of the wolf is to always eat its prey. But recently, Trump fell victim to his own conceit that if he says something, it therefore must be true — except when it is not, or the veracity of his claims is questionable.

When Trump was presidential, he polished up his philanthropic creds, claiming to have made $102 million in personal contributions over the past five years to various nonprofits. He headlined a media circus earlier this year when he opted to do a fundraiser for veterans groups instead of participating in a Republican primary debate. At the time, Trump announced, but never raised $6 million to contribute to vet groups, which included his own personal contribution of $1 million. As for the Washington Post reply, "Show me the money.

The paper launched an investigation to verify his public statements. It found none of the $502 million in contributions claimed by Trump were actually made. No canceled check verified the millions pledged by Trump to veterans. What's $1 million to a billionaire? Money for the weekend.

Overripe claims of generosity create an odor all their own. When evidenced in the late President's personal contributions, the call falling to pass the sniff test.

ROOTED IN NAPLES

A semi-welcome arrival chews her way into this Mom’s heart

Our new dog, a beautiful Springer spaniel pup named Jessie, has proven capable of many things since we brought her home last month, still developing paw-eye coordination notwithstanding. Being a licensed Cat Lady, I’d forgotten how much time, attention and house-hold items a puppy could cycle through in a day. Here’s a short list of things Jessie has destroyed in four weeks:

Things we used to love:
- My favorite high heels
- My second favorite pair of high heels
- A vial of zit paste
- 187 Legos of various shapes, sizes and characters
- Four toy soldiers
- Five rolls of toilet paper
- A piano leg
- A standard-issue, well-loved copy of Steinbeck’s “Of Mice and Men”

Things we used to need (or love):
- Zip-Loc bags
- Vegetable peeler (?)
- One earring
- Sunscreen stick
- A mystery metal bracket (over and over again)
- An expensive hairbrush that I NEED VERY MUCH
- Styrofoam from a pool noodle
- A dead lizard
- A phone charger
- A printer cord
- A pair of boys’ sneakers
- One girls’ sandal
- Contraband Tupperware from a lunchbox
- A living room carpet
- Ear buds
- A standard-issue, well-loved copy of Steinbeck’s “Of Mice and Men”

Now I feel totally justified for not wanting a dog in the first place, though she is slowly creeping up to the cats for a place in my heart. I resent it. Her soft mouth and liquid brown eyes, her sweet demeanor and persistent cat chasing are crystallizing into a personality I might love soon, if I didn’t have to constantly pull inedibles out of her mouth. Here is a list of items from this week that required me to dive in:

Undigestible items we need (or love):
- Zip-Loc bags
- Vegetable peeler (?)
- One earring
- Sunscreen stick
- An expensive hairbrush that I NEED VERY MUCH
- Styrofoam from a pool noodle
- A mystery metal bracket (over and over again)
- A dead lizard
- When my son and daughter each brought up how empty they felt inside without a slobbering pooch to call their own, I laughed. When my husband jumped on board, I was aghast. Do they realize how much time, attention and resources they require themselves? Why are they ganging up on me? A low-main-tenance personality is the low bar I set for personal relationships, and despite my best efforts, all three of the people I live with have a difficult time hitting the target. Adding a dog — no, a puppy — to the mix was an affront to my delicate sensibilities. Housebreaking and social-ization are skills I’m still working on with my kids almost a decade after they arrived, and now a puppy?

But I’m a sucker for an expert whine and a delicately timed baby photo, so when my husband sent me photo number one, above, I knew this dog was happening. We’ve been married long enough that I can spot a losing battle from quite a distance, so I relented.

With my kids almost a decade after they arrived, and now a puppy?

In the face of litter-box excavation and a solemn vow not to poop for Mom, this sweet, dumb animal is staying. She needs to be walked 27 times a day, chews on dead lizards and whines to be fed at 5 a.m., but no one is running scared anymore. Jessie has taught the kids to keep toys off the floor better than I ever did. And when she’s sleepy — which is often — she needs a snuggle. If I won’t sit with her on the couch, she’ll keep my feet warm at my desk. While our boy is content to wait until she’s calmer to pay attention to her (those chewy teeth pinch), our daughter is very serious about feeding Jessie and teaching her manners.

Granted, Julia derives more pleasure doling out treats than enforcing compli-ance, but she’s convinced that Jessie’s going to be a lady, just like her girl, if it kills us.

The Revs Institute, says about exposing the extraordinary engines. “It allows us to tap into some of the mystique and the interest people might have about these cars with the large hoods. You’ll get a chance to see some innovative designs that were built for road cars and also for racing cars.”

Off Horseshoe Drive near Naples Municipal Airport, the Revs Institute also features an archive and research library of books, periodicals, photos, ephemera, brochures, advertisements and multilingual technical publications. Its Collier Collection consists of 100 influential automobiles that meet rigid standards for rarity and technical, aesthetic, historical or social significance.

The vehicles are owned by Miles Collier, a retired business executive and grandson of Barron Gift Collier, for whom Collier County is named. The institute is a collaboration between Mr. Collier, the former managing partner of Collier Enterprises, and Stanford University’s Revs (Researching the Evolution of Vehicles in Society) Program.

Housed at the institute are cars built between 1896 and 1995 that represent groundbreaking technological, aesthetic and racing achievements. Included among them are a 1927 Bugatti Royale, Gary Cooper’s 1935 Duesenberg SSJ, Bobby Unser’s 1975 Indy 500-winning Jorgensen-Eagle and the 1967 Gurney Eagle F1 car that won the 1967 Belgian Grand Prix.

Among the cars that will have their hoods lifted or completely removed for the June 18-July 9 special exhibit are:

— 1938 Alfa Romeo 8C 2900B
— 1963 Corvette Grand Sport
— 1937 Delahay 135 Roadster
— 1962 Lutus Elite
— 1937 Delahay 135 Roadster
— 1962 Lutus Elite
— 1970 Porsche 917K Martin
— 1914 Rolls Royce

“We have power plants that range from two cylinders up thru V-12,” Mr. George says. “You get a chance to see the evolution of engine design that you wouldn’t see if the cars were sitting there in their normal state.”

The Revs Institute has proven to be a popular destination since its opening in 2014. Public visitation hours are limited to three days a week, with the remaining hours reserved for people conducting research. Sell-outs for tours guided by docents and volunteers are common during the tourist season, so the off-season was viewed as the ideal time to present a different view of the cars for locals and others who might not have been able to make reservations in the past.

“We want to let people know that it’s a great opportunity to see the cars in a different light and there are more opportunities (off-season) to book a reservation to come in and visit,” Mr. George says. The museum hasn’t exposed engines until now because most visitors are more interested in seeing the automobile exteriors.

“This transforms the gallery,” he says about showing the cars with hoods lifted and bonnets removed. “When we take lids off or open them, it changes the visual appeal of the gallery. My own staff and I know that opening the lids and showing the engines gives the gallery a different feel.”

Naples Orchid Society grants help fund orchid recovery efforts

The Naples Orchid Society has awarded intern scholarships to Jack Waggoner and Adam Herdman of Illinois College in Jacksonville, Ill. The two are working at Florida Panther National Wildlife Refuge this summer under the supervision of refuge supervisory wildlife biologist Mark Danaher and Lawrence Zettler, Ph.D., director of IC’s orchid recovery program.

In addition, Ernesto Mujica, Ph.D., a ghost orchid specialist from Cuba, has received his second grant from NOS enabling his return to the refuge to continue work on the ghost orchid survey that was started last summer.

This year’s work also will build on the research by past IC interns in the refuge and in the Fakahatchee Strand support by past NOS grants over the last six years. Students have discovered scale pests on native orchids and possible biological solutions to control them. They have found a virus in a leaf sample of the native Encyclia tampensis orchid, and found a virus in a leaf sample of the native orchid in Cuba. Hurricanes, pests and diseases, plus poaching and loss of habitat can all affect the numbers of ghost orchids remaining in the wild. This work is important to help conservationists understand orchid reproduction and the ability of these plants to survive in nature.

Last year, Mr. Mujica and students Justin Mably and Shannon Skarha established transects to identify known ghost orchid locations and locate new locations using GPS technology for monitoring.

Further research will help answer the questions of whether the virus infection and the scale pest are more widespread in the refuge and will hopefully lead to finding ways of dealing with both. Work on the mycorrhizal fungi will assist more successful propagation of native orchids. About half of native orchids in the United States are found in Southwest Florida and are threatened or endangered.

Mr. Mujica’s work involves establishing ways to do long-term monitoring of ghost orchid populations in the refuge so that this information can be compared to the populations of this orchid in Cuba. Hurricanes, pests and diseases, plus poaching and loss of habitat can all affect the numbers of ghost orchids remaining in the wild. This work is important to help conservationists understand orchid reproduction and the ability of these plants to survive in nature.

Last year, Mr. Mujica and students Justin Mably and Shannon Skarha established transects to identify known ghost orchid locations and locate new locations using GPS technology for monitoring.

Mr. Zettler, Mrs. Mujica and student interns will attend the July meeting of NOS, where Mr. Zettler will discuss the success of the work done by Hoang Nguyen, a University of Florida graduate student, on propagation of ghost orchids from a seed pod from Florida Panther National Wildlife Refuge several years ago. The research led to thousands of seedlings from that one pod. About 100 plants were given to Naples Botanical Garden, where many of them have flower spikes this year.

NOS members welcome guests to their meetings at no charge. The July meeting takes place Thursday, July 7, at Mootings Presbyterian Church. Society member Bill Overton will offer advice for those who bring in their ailing orchids (or photographs) starting at 6 p.m. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, call 775-5220 or visit naplesorchidsociety.org.

FWC to consider options on future bear hunts

After receiving input from the general public and stakeholders, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission has released four options that commissioners will consider regarding how to control the state’s growing black bear population.

The four options range from holding a bear hunt with the identical framework as the hunt held in 2015, but with updated hunt objectives.

Option two is a limited hunt option allowing FWC to hold a more conservative bear hunt in 2016 utilizing the data and information collected including the latest bear population science. This option also puts more restrictions on hunters who choose to participate.

Option three would be to postpone any bear hunt in 2016. The commission could consider a 2017 bear hunt at a later date.

Option four would be for the commission to repeal bear hunt rules and not allow bear hunting in Florida in future years.

NEW WORLD ORDER

As Libya's central bank struggles to stabilize a halting economy, it could surely use the estimated $184 million in gold and silver coins that Moammar Gadhafi minted but left buried in an underground vault in the coastal city of Brega, but the treasure is inaccessible because central bank officials don't know the lock's combination (as The Wall Street Journal reported in May).

The latest plan is to have a locksmith squeeze through a 16-by-16-inch hole in the outer vault’s concrete wall and once inside to try his hand. If unsuccessful, the government’s bureaucrats likely cannot get paid, but even if successful, various anti-government factions may go to extremes to snatch the coins.

CONTINUING CRISIS

As Beyda, but the treasure is inaccessible because central bank officials don’t know the lock’s combination (as The Wall Street Journal reported in May).

The latest plan is to have a locksmith squeeze through a 16-by-16-inch hole in the outer vault’s concrete wall and once inside to try his hand. If unsuccessful, the government’s bureaucrats likely cannot get paid, but even if successful, various anti-government factions may go to extremes to snatch the coins.

BRIGHT IDEAS

Argentina's TV channels have many of the same taboos as U.S. broadcasting, including restrictions on women's hands-on demonstration of how precisely to examine themselves for breast cancer. However, as AdWeek reported in March, the agency David Buenos Aires apparently solved the problem with an explicit TV public service announcement featuring a model (facing the camera, topless) showing exactly how such an exam should go, e.g., where to press down, where to squeeze. The secret? The model was an overweight man with generous-sized “manboobs.”

WAIT, WHAT?

Wait, What?

■ Video surfaced in May of students at Winston Churchill High School in San Antonio, Texas, actually playing jump rope with the intestines of cats that had been dissected in biology class. Obviously, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals was not pleased, but school district officials called the exercise a valid demonstration of the “tensile strength of the organ” and only reluctantly agreed to investigate further.

■ When Tristan Chase, 20, missed his court date.

■ As an alternative to the more costly in vitro fertilization, researchers at a Dresden, Germany, institute announced (in the recent Nano Letters journal) that they had developed a motorized device tiny enough to fit around a sperm’s tail and which could be commanded to propel it to “swim” faster toward the target egg, increasing the chances of fertilization. A prototype is still in the works.

■ The Internet pornography beheemoth PornHub recently added to the glut of physical fitness “apps” with one designed to help users tune up sexual muscles. The BangFit’s routines include the “squat and thrust,” the “missionary press,” and other ways to practice what the company describes as the “one activity people are always motivated to do and (for) which they are never too busy.”

SECOND CHANCE?

Among the critters for which life is most difficult are male nursery web spiders that (according to May research in Biology Letters journal) instinctively “court” females with food wrapped in silk — offerings that (a) increase the males' chances of securing and (b) decrease, by 84 percent, their chances that the female will spontaneously eat the male. The study also found that males sometimes try to mate using nonfood items wrapped in silk (with mixed results) and also that sometimes unscrupulous females accept food gifts but nevertheless immediately devour the male.

away, is not that far out. Knowing that the pace of government is incremental — that changes are incremental and the most positive change is usually slow to take place, we can’t get caught up in a 90-degree turn between now and 2030.

So pretty much what you’ll see between now and then is a stable period, a little more of the same. And all these voices that say: “You’ll become like the east coast.” Or “We’ll have a population explosion.” Well, no. There are so many things put in place, because there are so many great places to preserve, I think were in pretty good shape.

Fourteen years is too soon to see the great change that will ultimately come in mass transit, for example. A lot of us would like to see light rail implemented, but until the political leaders in a community are willing to raise revenue to do some of these good things, it’s not going to happen.

So you’ll see a little more traffic, and incremental changes on the road system.

You’ll see more social infrastructure — theater and cultural things happening — but I think there will be a period (about 30 years) down the line when you’ll see the major changes.

As far as water goes, drinking water is the simplest water problem we have. People say you’re going to run out of water, but I think there will be a period (about 30 years) down the line when you’ll see the major changes.

But no. You’re not. You’re going to run out of cheap water.

Mr. Weeks: From our perspective, most changes are going to be in those geographic areas, all located east of Collier Boulevard. West of Collier to the Gulf of Mexico, we don’t see significant changes. In those eastern areas, though, we’ll see the same type of development we have now: low-density residential/senior housing and support commercial. As far as major road improvements, one will be Veterans Memorial Boulevard about a mile south of the Lee-Collier county line, which presently only exists for a half mile. The plan is to extend the boulevard to U.S. 41. Mr. Va Lengen: In those newer areas east of Collier Boulevard, what we want to incentivize is a slightly different pattern than the traditional development pattern.

Mr. Van Lengen: We see a lot of growth in the future, in the rural fringe/rural lands areas, in Golden Gate and Immokalee.

never be developed, so that will help us. Mr. Weeks: One thing about the additional impact of south Lee County development on Collier is affordable working housing. Comparably, Lee is where more affordable housing exists.

Mr. Van Lengen: Our commissioners are starting to look very hard at creating affordable living opportunities in Collier, but were not there yet.

Mr. Weeks: Hopefully Collier will do a lot more in the past to provide market rate affordable housing — what the market will bear that happens to be affordable as opposed to regulatory. But it’s more of the regulatory that Collier might have to introduce.

Mr. Van Lengen: And then there are questions about sea level rise and the effects of climate change — an environ-mentald and coastal issue that affects everyone. I see down the road 15 years from now there will be some design solutions — and we may not know what they are yet. I don’t see sea walls as being effective because our geology doesn’t support that, but building standards, elevation, changes to the whole infrastructure...

As far as what couldn’t we do in 2030 that residents in Lee and Collier can do now?

My imagination is not big enough to imagine anything we can do now that we couldn’t do then.

Deborah Maclean, a long-time Bonita Springs resident and community activist who publishes The Banana Peel, a free by invitation e-zine dedicated to local affairs, with a muckraking flair: Bonita Springs never had a clear identity. It has struggled with hunting, cattle, citrus, mullet. The sleepy fishing village image in local lore is recent. But today Bonita Springs is evolving: it’s a sophisticated little burg of wealthy retirees who are uniquely Republican conservationists, people who don’t want growth to ruin their quality of life in the forms of over-passes, eight-lane roads, over-development and the water woes that accompany these things.

Concentrating instead on redevelopment of its important roads — Bonita Beach Road, our gateway to the gulf; the Old 41 Road corridor in both Lee and Collier counties; and the Tamiami Trail. The intersection of Bonita Beach Road and Old 41 Road will become the calling card of the city of Bonita Springs.

While other communities follow old excessive sprawling growth patterns, (by 2030) Bonita will emerge a leader in water and land conservation, with limited growth and ant-sprawl.

Estero, meanwhile, inherited huge shopping centers and growth problems. An infant in cityhood, it’s struggling to take a firm hand with developers. Estero has the benefit of being new, with new infrastructure and new construction, having inherited few older buildings. She has a “busy” future in sight of her highways that are four lanes or more. I do not consider “busy” in the form of overdevelopment a good thing. Where’s the water to support this? And what happens to the quality of water affected by roads, runoff and people?

Charlie Whitehead, a long-time reporter and community activist: I think Estero will see at least some development out east on Corkscrew Road. The key will be to protect habitat and cluster the building and all the other things that real planning calls for. FGCU will continue to draw development, for good or ill — likely both.

I remember several years ago when the Census definition of “urban” finally con-ected everything all the way from North Fort Myers to Naples. (The last stretch) to fill in were north of Bonita and north of Estero. Some of the key issues will be whether Collier County can push State Road 951/ Collier Boulevard through east of Bonita and what happens to the Edison Farms property.

I freely admit I would love it if the Beach Area Civic Association can duplicate the work and the results the people of Estero did through the Community Planning Panel and its various committees and spinoffs.

One of the things I told the folks in Estero when they were pushing for incorporation is to take care what they wished for. They were hugely successful with their volunteer committees and a friendly county commission. When a core group of active civic volunteers exists, and a community creates a real live government, the core loses its ability to determine who runs things. Note the funny things. The folks of Estero are educated and intelligent, but they do not all have the same picture in their heads of Estero’s future.

Debbie Whitehead, wife of Mr. Whitehead (above):

Rob Moher, the CEO of the Conservancy of Southwest Florida, said that State Road 29 megagrowth project will change the urban growth boundary, and it borders the Big Cypress. I find that so depressing. It’s devastating to think about. I went out to Ave Maria recently (in eastern Collier County) and was stunned. There's this huge boulevard, a freeway, and I'm like, 'Are you kidding me? This is urbanized.' You see the Arthritis facility — where does this fall into place with preservation?

Now, they're going to plan all this land around it, the eastern urban conservation area, 2000 acres and they'll allow hunting and sports camps on it. Similar things are occurring in Lee.

As far as Bonita, so they've preserved their DRGR and kept out high-density developments. But this notion of environmental development. You take a development in a place zoned for 10 acres per unit and you change it and do one unit for one acre on one part of it, and compress the footprint to concentrate development and allow the balance for conservation, and maybe that's good, although that doesn't alleviate the trafﬁc impacts.

So there's a lot of pressure being put on Estero and on Lee County to widen Corkscrew Road to four lanes, like in Immokalee. I don't see that as the proper future for Corkscrew.

They think you can have a four- or six-lane road and overpasses, and put everything into the mix, and it will all work out. I'm not sure of that at all.

Responsible growth management means having self-sustaining communities that integrate with agriculture out there.

So that said, what will south Lee will look like in 2030? That depends on the next couple of years at the state and local political level, on the county commission level. Things could be redirected and focused on making more sustainable development. Or redevelopment — we have this incredible railroad corridor terminating in North Naples and going up to Arcadia, and it's not being used. What a gem! But it's sitting there with no use.

• Wayne Daltry, former Smart Growth director and retired planner in Lee County.

In 1980 or thereabouts, an assessment was made for what build-out would be need-ed for relatively functional transportation (given 1980 technologies): It was 22 lanes for all roads.

There is even more development being planned now than what was forecasted then... So it's hard to say things will be better, or that we're going to break even in quality of life, in 2030.

If you keep providing more sprawl, as we're doing, you will end up with a more expensive transportation infrastructure. And with the shrinking of financially capable working families, their ability to pay more taxes has shrunk. Last year for the first time, Lee County used property taxes for road construction, but it wasn't enough because roads were more expensive.

And when you create sprawl you end up having to drain land. And when you have 4.5 feet of rainfall for every square foot of land in Southwest Florida, drainage gets to be important — you're trying to keep a lot of septic tanks dry, for one thing — so you take water level well below ground level, and when the water's gone, vegetation starts to brown and wither and you end up with more fire.

I'm not an optimist. We keep going south on a north-pointing compass... In towns near where fracking takes place, water sup-pplies become unusable — and that's not for a year or two, that's forever.

You can never build a quality community on the cheap. But you can use your money wisely. As long as you have sprawl, you will increase your taxes and your need for money.

• Don Edick, a retired economist and long-time resident of Estero who has been instrumental in shaping both the com-mercial and residential characters of his community.

Things have been changing considerably in the last few years. You have to go from what you perceive to what's likely to happen.

One important factor is the influence of Florida Gulf Coast University as it continues to grow — it's now at 13,000 to 15,000 students and it will go to about 25,000. It's already having an influence on the area, in the sense of more young people and recent graduates who are locating here. That's help-ful.

Until now, we've predominantly been a retirement area. We grew so fast in the early 2000s, from 2000 to about 2007, in Estero alone we added 14,000 housing units. All those folks are getting elderly, which is one of the reasons we've seen last couple years a tremendous amount of new senior housing — that's true in Bonita as well as Estero. The other piece that's important is we saw a tremendous growth in regional retailing. A lot of it was centered in Estero and Bonita, with Gulf Coast Town Center a little north of us, but coming down Ben Hill Griffin you have very large shopping and retail centers. So retail is pretty saturated now, and not likely to grow much more in the future. The future growth is probably more in housing, that room we have for it.

They're talking about another 400,000 people between now and 2030. A lot of development for that population will take place in Lehigh and Cape Coral, but the demands of 400,000 additional people will put a lot of pressure on both the water sup-ply and on the transportation capacity and roads.

I think it's problematic as to whether or not we're doing enough today to plan for those kinds of changes and beyond.

The long-term forecast is that the popula-tion will be 1 million or more, completely built out, 50 years away or more. But if we don't do more to try to insure that the DRGR (Density Reduction Groundwater Reten-tion) has the capability to recharge our aqui-fers, cleaning water going into Estero Bay and beyond — all that could be a problem down the road.

Right now, no level of government is doing an adequate job of raising money for transportation. There's no question about that. Public transport, smaller autos, more roundabouts — all the things being dis-cussed today — the impact of those on the continuing growth of traffic will be very interesting.

So, thinking about 2030, I'm neither an optimist nor a pessimist. I like to be a realist.

Long term, we have to make some chang-es to maintain what we've got today, particu-larly in transportation and water.

Health care is coming along pretty well and housing is coming along well.
Where are you going for summer vacation?

Demand for travel to Europe remains strong, and AAA summer travel bookings show that Rome and London are at the top of many itineraries this summer. Americans are also flocking to warm-weather destinations in the U.S., Mexico and Caribbean, and are increasingly traveling to Canada to take advantage of favorable exchange rates.

The Top 10 international summer destinations, based on AAA bookings for travel June 1-Aug. 15, are:
- Rome
- London
- Cancun, Mexico
- Vancouver, British Columbia
- Paris
- Dublin
- Punta Cana, Dominican Republic
- Montego Bay, Jamaica
- Calgary, Alberta
- Amsterdam

“Europe remains very popular with American travelers despite recent terrorism concerns. In fact, some of the most popular European destinations moved higher on the list this year,” says Joseph Richardson Jr., president and CEO of AAA-The Auto Club Group. Increased security, a strong dollar and discounted pricing are motivating millions of Americans to venture across the pond for their summer vacations, he adds.

Domestically, the great American road trip is back, with nearly 56 percent of Americans planning a drive vacation this summer, according to a recent AAA survey. The lowest summertime gas prices in 11 years are prompting Americans to drive in record numbers. More than half of U.S. adults say low gas prices are prompting them to hit the roads this year.

AAA’s top domestic summer travel destinations include:
- Orlando
- Seattle
- Los Angeles/Anaheim
- Honolulu
- Las Vegas
- Anchorage
- New York City
- Maui
- San Francisco
- Denver

What’s your Why?

Each year, thousands of donors step forward to support Lee Memorial Health System.

The Shipley Cardiotoracic Center, under development on Lee Memorial Health System’s HealthPark Medical Center Campus, offers a revolutionary approach to surgical treatment of the heart and lung. Drawing upon Lee Memorial’s 100 years of exemplary patient care – including 40-plus years of cardiothoracic surgery excellence – the new Center will bring together in one location all the medical and research services vital to the health and well-being of cardiothoracic patients. Generous donor support, including that provided by Richard C. Shipley, will help the Center grow into a nationally and internationally recognized center of excellence.

What’s Your Why?

We welcome the opportunity to help you explore your very own “Why?” and how it can help thousands of patients right here in Southwest Florida. To learn more, please call Lee Memorial Health System Foundation at 239.343.6053 or email Foundation@LeeMemorial.org.

For Richard C. Shipley, namesake and major benefactor of the Shipley Cardiothoracic Center at Lee Memorial Health System, it was simple...

"I think when you have an entity this strong, in this region, that we may need one day, it’s important to support it ... I found a great center of excellence within the hospital and so frankly it was a very easy decision."
BEHIND THE WHEEL

Ram Rebel in search of a revolution

“Join the Dodge rebellion!” It’s a battle cry that served the company well a half century ago, and now they are fulfilling that promise. Well, almost...

The mega pickup seen here is not a Dodge. It is the Ram 1500 Rebel. Dodge salespeople sell these at Dodge dealers, but Ram Trucks quietly became its own independent brand a few years ago. Now comes the first pickup that really recognizes their uprising, literally.

Standard on the Rebel trim is an air ride suspension. It has four settings so the pickup can be lowered on-demand below other Ram 1500’s heights for easy entrance. Then, with the touch of a button, the Rebel can be raised until it becomes the company’s tallest pickup.

This is part of a full off-road package that’s designed to be Ram’s answer to the Ford F-150 Raptor. Just like that extreme dirt-loving pickup, the Rebel trim is out to be the aggressor. It takes the standard 1500 truck and gives it a new attitude. Gone is the crossover grille. It has been replaced with “RAM” in big block letters as if it was a warning to what the front end is going to do to traffic. Also, there are large hood scoops to give this sheep its horns. In the rear, the Ram name is once again spelled below other Ram 1500’s heights for easy entrance. Then, with the touch of a button, the Rebel can be raised until it becomes the company’s tallest pickup.

But unlike the Ford Raptor, the Ram Rebel has a bit more potential for everyday use. The suspension can be adjusted to more normal levels, and many of the base components are shared with the Ram 1500 (including the comfortable coil rear suspension.) So the ride is a bit more bouncy than a commuter-grade pickup, but it also doesn’t feel like a bucking bronco on the interstate.

Another advantage of this package is the price. The base Rebel comes loaded with all the appearance features and the 395 horsepower 5.7-liter Hemi V8. It is a 4x2 model that starts at $44,465. For those actually using this truck for its off-road ability, the 4x4 starts at $46,395. But that pickup is downgraded to a V6 and a higher rear axle to compensate. To get a 4x4 with the big V8, that will cost $47,545.

If all of that seems a bit confusing, just know this is still about $3,000 less than the new 2017 Ford F-150 Raptor that will be out later this year. Plus, the pricing does not include Dodge/Ram’s history of deep discounts.

The Raptor isn’t overpriced compared to the Rebel. Ford offers a whole host of components that make it the kind of machine that can run the Baja 1000 right out of the box, and the Ram doesn’t compete on that level. Instead, the Rebel offers the same gritty appearance as a full off-road machine, and just the basic amount of components to give it true substance. But isn’t that really where the heart of the market is? After all, many of us want to look like rebels, but few of us are willing to give up all the comforts of conformity.

Diet may improve function, reverse brain damage

A t e m p t i n g challenging puzzles, reading up on the theory of relativity aren’t the only ways to keep your brain at its finest. The right diet can also be wonders, improving the brain’s function and even helping to reverse brain damage. Meanwhile, the opposite also is true. Poor diet choices not only hurt the waistline, but have a negative effect on the brain.

When it comes to the brain, sugar is public enemy No. 1, says Daniel Amen, M.D., a clinical neuroscientist and brain imaging expert who also is the founder of Amen Clinics, which treat patients at six locations around the country.

Sugar is pro-inflammatory, increases erratic brain-cell firings and is addictive, says Dr. Amen, author of The New York Times bestseller “Change Your Brain, Change Your Life.” He doesn’t hold back his disdain.

“Sugar is insidious, sort of like heroin,” he says. “It will make you want it over and over again. It’s like dating the bad boys. You fall in love with something that beats you up.”

Sugar has company on Dr. Amen’s list of unfriendly brain foods, including a few surprises, such as corn, which has one of the worst fatty-acid profiles of any vegetable. Others on the avoid-at-all-costs list include artificial dyes, especially red dye; foods with trans fats, such as cookies and cake; and low-fiber foods, which include many fast-food choices.

Fortunately, there are also great food options that can heal the brain and even help reverse brain damage, Dr. Amen says. Those include:

• Fruits and vegetables. “Surprisingly, fat is not the enemy. That’s because there are ‘good fats’ and ‘bad fats.’ Some examples of good fats are olives, sunflower seeds and flaxseed. Dr. Amen also points out that 60 percent of the solid weight of the brain is fat. ‘So if someone calls you a fatty, you should thank them,’” he says.

• Fish. Salmon, halibut, sardines, mackerel and other fish are loaded with healthy oils and healthy fat. “People who eat grilled or baked fish once a week have more gray matter in their brain,” Dr. Amen says. “You want to eat fish because it’s not gray in your brain is awesome.”

• Avocados. This nutrient-dense fruit is loaded with healthy omega-3 fatty acids, which build brain-cell membranes, reduce brain inflammation and promote new brain-cell formation. “Raw nuts. Go easy on the amount because they pack a lot of calories, but raw nuts are very healthy for the brain.”

• Chocolate. Here’s another surprise. Chocolate also has been shown to decrease cravings and increase blood flow to the brain. “It’s what usually is added to candy — sugar and dairy products — that makes it bad.”

• Colorful vegetables. Green is great, but with vegetables you can branch out into such choices as yellow squash, purple carrots and red and orange bell peppers.

“Want things that are high in fiber, that are colorful, that are really medicine for your brain,” Dr. Amen says.

Anytime you prepare to eat something, don’t just think about the pounds you might put on,” Dr. Amen says. “Ask yourself: Is this good for my brain or is it bad for my brain?”

— Daniel Amen is a clinical neuroscientist and brain imaging expert who heads Amen Clinics, which have offices in Washington, D.C., and the Seattle area.

He has written numerous books, including “The Amen Solution: The Secret to Being Thinner, Smarter, Happier” and “Change Your Brain, Change Your Life.”

Coast Medical Center, where specialists appropriate patients may be transferred to a symptom. “Approach to four-and-half hours of the onset of treatment. The intravenous injection of tissue plasminogen activator, which can include the use of an ability to walk. The primary stroke center closest to your detect stroke, and you will be taken to the hospital or the doctor’s office. Call 911. The EMTs are trained to assess and know of calling 911 as soon as you or someone you are with experiences any of these signs or symptoms. “Do not drive to the hospital or the doctor’s office. Call 911. The EMTs are trained to assess and detect stroke, and you will be taken to the primary stroke center closest to your home.” Once at the hospital, the neurologist will determine the best plan for treatment, which can include the use of an intravenous injection of tissue plasminogen activator, or a clot-busting medication. “TPA must be given within three to four-and-half hours of the onset of symptoms,” Dr. Driscoll said. “Appropriate patients may be transferred to a comprehensive stroke center, like Gulf Coast Medical Center, where specialists attempt to snare and remove clots. Other treatment can include the use of aspirin and blood thinners. Patients are usually hospitalized two to four days, while they are medically and neurologically stabilized. Then, depending on their capabilities and rehabilitation needs, they are discharged home or to a skilled nursing facility.” The American Stroke Association employs the acronym F.A.S.T. to remind people of the sudden signs of stroke. Remember:

F — Face drooping — Does one side of the face droop or is it numb? Ask the person to smile. Is the person’s smile uneven?
A — Arm weakness — Is one arm weak or numb? Ask the person to raise both arms. Does one arm drift downward?
S — Speech difficulty — Is speech slurred? Is the person unable to speak or hard to understand? Ask the person to repeat a simple sentence, like “The sky is blue.” Is the sentence repeated correctly?
T — Time to call 911 — If someone shows any of these symptoms, even if the symptoms go away, call 911 and get the person to the hospital immediately. Check the time you know when the first symptoms appeared. Dr. Driscoll urges everyone to remember to think F.A.S.T. when it comes to stroke, because time lost is brain lost.

The fifth leading cause of death in the U.S., stroke requires immediate treatment. Understanding the risk factors and knowing the signs and symptoms are crucial to being able to recognize and react if you or someone you are with is having a stroke.

“There are a number of factors that increase your risk of stroke,” said neurologist Paul Driscoll. “Some examples of risk factors include advancing/older age, high blood pressure, diabetes, tobacco use, high cholesterol and heavy alcohol consumption. Men also have a higher risk of stroke than women. It is important to maintain appointments with your physician or health care provider to ensure that you are aggressively treating any conditions that increase your risk.

Warning signs and symptoms include:

- Facial weakness.
- Slurred speech.
- Weakness of one side of the body.
- Numbness in one side of the body.
- A abrupt change in balance or the ability to walk.
- Loss of vision in one or both eyes.
- Sudden onset of headache.

Dr. Driscoll stresses the importance of calling 911 as soon as you or someone you are with experiences any of these signs or symptoms. “Do not drive to the hospital or the doctor’s office. Call 911. The EMTs are trained to assess and detect stroke, and you will be taken to the primary stroke center closest to your home.”

Keeping kittens and cats busy with toys will help them learn not to play rough with family members.

Inside every cat is a lion. Or a tiger. Or a lynx. Or, really, all of these great hunters. And in your cat’s mind, he’s a wild predator, too.

In fact, all cats are. They love to lurk and pounce and chase and pounce. An indoor cat doesn’t have the opportunity to go after real prey (unless you have mice in your home), but he still has strong hunting instincts. This genetic coding doesn’t disappear just because he lives a royal lifestyle in your home and has his meals delivered inside a track let him paw for “prey,” just as if he were exploring a mouse hole. The fast, erratic motion of laser pointers and flashlight create a cat’s ability to think and move quickly. Direct the beam up and down the stairs to give him a real workout. And don’t forget the classic catnip-filled mice for rolling and rabbit-kicking under the influence.

To keep your cat interested in his toys, change them out every few days. If he sees the same ones over and over again, he’ll get bored and look for something new to play with. Cats being who they are, it will probably be something expensive or fragile that he doesn’t want him to treat as a toy. Those laser pointers, flashlights and wand toys have especially high value to cats because they are just so darn much fun. Bring them out less often than other toys, and limit the amount of time your cat is allowed to play with them. For some cats these toys are addictive, and they will stand in front of the closet where the laser or wand is stored and yowl plaintively until they are brought out.

Remember, if you give in even once, you have just taught your cat exactly how to manipulate you. To help soften your cat’s disappointment when these favorite toys go up, reward him with a treat afterward or go up to the closet where the laser or wand is stored and yowl plaintively until they are brought out.

Pets of the Week

>> Freddy is a handsome, 2-year-old Chihuahua/shorthair who weighs about 10 pounds. A gentle soul who loves to cuddle, he lost his home through no fault of his own and is a little shy to be in a shelter.

>> Lexi is a friendly, 2-year-old domestic short-hair who loves to play. The adoption fee for her and all cats at Domestic Animal Services through June has been reduced from $60 to $10.

>> Mario is an affectionate, 6-month-old domestic shorthair who loves to be held and petted. See Lexi above, about his adoption fee.

>> Rosie is a 2-year-old pointer/German shepherd mix who weighs about 34 pounds. She has medium energy and ready for training. She’s already good on her leash, and she likes splash and play in a wading pool.

To adopt or foster a pet this week’s pets are from Collier County Domestic Animal Services. Adoption fees for cats are $60 (reduced to $10 during kitten season through June) and dogs are $85 and include sterilization surgery, vaccinations, pet license, ID microchip and a bag of food. Visit DAS at 7610 Davis Blvd. from 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Saturday. Adoptable dogs and cats from DAS are also at For Footed Friends in Marquesa Plaza on Livingston Road from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. the first Saturday of every month. THE DIVA DIARIES

Vacation planning gives a whole new meaning to ‘cruise control’

A few weeks ago when my husband and I were enjoying a short Miami Beach getaway, we drove past the Port of Miami and marveled at all the festive-looking cruise ships. “We really should go on a cruise,” urged Todd (again).

He’s been trying to get me on a cruise for years, but I’ve resisted. The idea of being stuck on a giant, floating city with lots of work you have to do on your own. Reading online reviews was an obsession as I went through the ump-day tour of the Western Caribbe-an (weather permitting), after sipping a care in the world. But we had to navigate some choppy seas leading up to an (weather permitting), after sipping the planning part.

Most of the time when Todd and I travel, it’s road trips with lots of little stops along the way to visit family and friends. While that’s nice and all, a cruise would mean we’d only have to unpack once, we would have no real shore excursions and, mostly, the relaxation factor. “You’re going to love it!” they promised.

The actual planning of our cruise, however, took my stress to a whole new level. Hopefully, as you read this, my husband and I will have just returned from our Norwegian Cruise Line sev-en-day tour of the Western Caribbe-an (weather permitting), after sipping drinks with umbrellas in them without a care in the world. But we had to navigate some choppy seas leading up to the trip.

Although we booked our cruise through a wonderful agent, there’s still lots of work you have to do on your own. Reading online reviews was an obsession as I went through the ump-teen message boards on cruising websites. Passenger “Cruisy Lucy” says our ship “is the best!!!! So much FUN!!” But then “Ship-Faced Fred” (who was on the same cruise) says, “Worst experience EVER. Pool was too small!” Not only was reading all these reviews confusing, it was exhausting.

Next up, I had to go onto the ship’s website and make choices for dinner reservations, show tickets, shore excursions and more. I’m not good at making decisions, period — but, when it comes to making choices about something I’ve never experienced, I’m literally at sea.

For instance, we made reservations at a Japanese steak house for Friday dinner, never experienced, I’m literally at sea.

“I built this like I built my business. It’s no different. You start with nothing and you build it.”

— Sandra Kauanui, founder of the FGCU Institute for Entrepreneurship

Sandra Kauanui was thrilled to hear the news last week that Florida Gulf Coast University’s governing board plans to make entrepreneurship arguably its top academic priority, one of the signature courses of study that the university will be most known for in the future. With Professor Kauanui, that is already on the way to happening.

A whirlwind of energy with a teal jacket and bright pink fingernails, she is a networking extraordinaire, chair of the Management Department in the Lutgert College of Business — and founded the FGCU Institute for Entrepreneurship. The institute aims to promote the course of study to students throughout the university and make it a hub for entrepreneurial activity in the region.

“I built this like I built my business. It’s no different,” she said. “You start with nothing and you build it.”

than 20 years before selling it so she could make the shift to academia. Professor Kauanui has been working to build up FGCU's program since moving here from California State Polytechnic University in 2007.

Starting in the fall of 2014, that has included opening courses as well as the option to pursue a minor in entrepreneur-ship, led by Rodriguez. As director of the College of Business. That first semester, 200 students enrolled in entrepreneur-ship courses, a number that has grown to 800 students from across the univer-sity. In coming years, the school will offer undergraduate students an entrepreneur-ship major as well.

The institute, which partners the Col-lege of Business with the U.A. Whitaker College of Engineering, is also making inroads as a community partner. It is leading a state program to boost start-ups and businesses owned by veterans, has enlisted retired executives to mentor stu-dents, made connections with local ven-ture capital forums, and created entrepre-neurial programs for high school students and teachers.

This year, the institute worked with the Southwest Florida Community Founda-tion to host The Frank Stern Compassion-ate Foundation for Veterans. FGCU fac-ul-ity, staff and mentors helped 45 veterans hone their start-up plans or to help grow their business. Then they had a chance to pitch their ideas to local investors. They awarded the top prize of $10,000 to Cape Coral resident Stephen Berge, who served as an engineer in the Marine Corps from 2000 to 2008, for his construction supply company.

The money came from a Community Foundation endowment from Frank Stern, a successful local real estate developer in the mid 1990s. Mr. Stern was an Air Force pilot during World War II who died at age 95 in 2014.

Promoting local small businesses strengthens the social and economic fab-ric of the region, said Sarah Owen, the foundation’s president and CEO.

“One whole culture ofentrepreneur-ship in a region is really vital,” she said. “So to have an institution where citizens can go who are interested in pursuing entrepreneurial ventures will be right in our backyard. They won’t have to go out of our area to get this type of training or this type of education or resources.”

John Gamba, a foundation board mem-ber and president of Naples-based Mas-iveU, an education technology company, agreed.

“I think developing an entrepreneurial mindset for all of our young students is critically important to developing 21st

From Green Mountain in 2014. “I wanted to do something to give back and help out what I saw was an incredible young university in a fabulous commu-nity down here,” Mr. Ely said. He has an ambitious vision for the uni-verse’s dedication to start-up business. “Most Millennials have in mind a pur-pose for their life and what they want their careers to be to,” he said, “and with this incredible entrepreneurship program they can figure out how to create busi-nesses that can solve the world’s prob-lems.”

Dixebeth Villarraga, who graduated this year, was a special education major and entrepreneurship minor.

“It totally changed my world,” said Ms. Villarraga, who is 25. “It completely changed the way I think and the way I look at things. I learned that entrepre-neurship (is) across all disciplines.”

“To me entrepreneurship is all about adding value to a society that needs it. To create a positive change in something you believe in and something you’re passion-ate about. It’s a way to make a living by doing what you love.”

Ms. Villarraga decided to enroll in the courses after watching her mom struggle with her own small business that helps people with developmental disabilities. When she took the Venture Lab class, her team developed an award-winning research report that ensures people who interact with hospital patients have clean hands, potentially keeping patients healthier and for hospitals reducing fines, “a win-win.”

A red light goes off if anyone enters the patient's room and doesn't wash their hands. When they wash up the light turns green. Her group found that hospital visi-tors are the most common dirty-handed perpetrators, although medical profes-sionals occasionally forget, too. Initially the course “was like a whirl-wind for me,” Ms. Villarraga said. “So many concepts being thrown at you and you're kind of unsure of where to go. That's entrepreneurship, that's what it's all about.”

She's been able to offer her mom some business advice as well.

“Work should not be a job,” she said. “It’s FREE!”

“We to entrepreneurship is all about adding value to a society that needs it. To create a positive change in something you believe in and something you’re passionate about. It’s a way to make a living by doing what you love.”

Not since the days of Ross and Rachel has the world been so preoccupied with whether a couple will stay together or go their separate ways. Of course, I am talking about Brexit and the historical vote that takes place on June 23. So what is Brexit and why should you care about it?

In 1992, 12 European nations signed the Maastricht treaty which effectively formed the economic and political union we know as the European Union. The United Kingdom was one of these 12 countries but it always seemed to be the odd man out. For one thing, the UK did not adopt the Euro but held on to its own currency, the pound. In addition, the country geographically is separate from the rest of Europe and politically London seems to have the most difficulties taking “orders” from Brussels.

Despite these differences, the strong economic growth of the 1990s and early 2000s convinced most British citizens that the EU was good for their country. However, with the financial crisis in 2008 and resulting recession, as well as the persistent immigration problems during the last several years, many politicians in the UK have become more vocal in their opposition to the EU. Many blame the EU for allowing too many immigrants to enter the UK and for poor economic growth in general.

The visit to public sentiment, Prime Minister Cameron in 2013 announced that if his conservative party won the 2015 election, he would hold referendum that in the aftermath. Despite all of this, however, the uncertainty around this vote already has had an effect on financial markets, as the UK stock market will also be susceptible to a collapse of the British pound and the dollar. If Britain does ultimately leave the EU, many analysts believe that both these currencies can fall much further, maybe 20 percent or more. The UK exchange rate is crucial to for sure.

Time on your hands? Consider becoming a SCORE volunteer

Volunteering at SCORE is a way for retired executives and entrepreneurs to pass on their valuable business knowledge and expertise to the next generation.

SCORE volunteers provide confidential mentoring, both in person and online, and lead workshops to help small business owners meet their goals and achieve success. Counselors also provide subject matter expertise based on their industry and professional skills. Of particular need are individuals with expertise in information technology and accounting.

The SCORE business office is at 900 Goodlette-Frank Road in the Fifth Third Bank building. Counseling can be done there or at a local public location of your choosing. Counselors and clients set their own appointments to suit their schedules.

The Naples chapter of SCORE has been helping local small businesses succeed for the past 30 years. Typically, SCORE averages about 30 new clients a month; this past April, however, brought 40 new clients, and in May the number jumped to 61.

A majority of SCORE clients are start-ups. Many stay with their clients as long as the client sees the benefit. Most months the organization serves 100 or so individuals, all for a charge.

For more information about becoming involved, call 433-0081 or visit naples.score.org.
Biotechnology is risky business for those not well versed in it. If you’re intrigued by its potential, consider investing in a biotech fund — or a well-diversified giant in the industry such as Amgen (NASDAQ:AMGN). Amgen’s areas of focus include oncology, neurosciences, nephrology, inflammation, and respiratory. It has recently entered a new one, with its cardiovascular drugs Corlanor and Repatha. Its product pipeline is entries to develop new drugs that can generate more than $1 billion in sales per quarter — Neulasta, which boosts a patient’s white blood cell count, and Enbrel, which treats rheumatoid arthritis.

Its multiple myeloma drug Kypros received a label expansion from the Food and Drug Administration in 2015, making it available to more patients. Many have high hopes for Amgen’s Pegasys inhibitor, Rebinz, designed to dramatically reduce LDL-cholesterol levels (the bad kind).

Meanwhile, Amgen’s pipeline of drugs in development is broad, with more than 30 clinical-stage products. A broad pipeline means plenty of potential growth catalysts.

Amgen’s business is also attractive because it’s “defensive,” meaning that no matter how healthy the economy is, people will keep taking their medicines. It offers patient believers a dividend that recently yielded 2.3 percent. It has been lacking its payout aggressively in recent years. Its profit margins are growing, and its stock is attractively priced with its price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio below its five-year average.

Last week’s trivia answer

I trace my roots back to a store selling herbal remedies in Nottingham, England, in 1894 and a pharmacist buying a drugstore in Chicago in 1901. Today I’m the world’s largest retail pharmacy in the USA and Europe, and one of the world’s largest purchasers of prescription drugs. My brands include stores bearing my name, as well as Duane Read, No, Botanics, and — yes, and Solaray. You can find my businesses and ones in which I’ve invested, I have more than 13,000 stores and operations in more than 25 countries, employing more than 370,000 people. Who am I?

To buy stock in a company, do I have to work there?

— C.S., Watertown, Wisconsin

If the company’s stock is publicly traded, just about anyone can invest in it. (That said, some companies do offer employees stock options, stock grants, or the ability to buy shares of company stock at a discount.) All you generally need is a brokerage account. Most discount brokerages offer accounts for small companies, and many smaller ones, are publicly traded. Examples include Costco, Facebook, Hasbro, IMAX, iRobot, Kroger, Pepsico, Sherwin-Williams, Staples, Starbucks, Verizon, Visa and Walt Disney. Learn how to pick a good brokerage at fool.com.

■ Alex Romeyn has been named relocation manager at Premier Sotheby’s International Realty. After receiving a bachelor’s degree in business management and human resources from the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth, Ms. Romeyn spent 10 years in the beauty and fashion industry. She joined Premier Sotheby’s in 2015 as executive assistant to President and CEO Judy Green.

■ Lutgert Construction has announced the sale of its Azalea model, the final developer villa available in Estuary at Grey Oaks, a 350-acre golf course community with 175 homesites. At more than 90 percent built out, limited opportunities remain to purchase in the enclave. Members have access to three private golf courses, two clubhouses and professional tennis and fitness facilities. For more information, call 261-348, go to estuaryatgreyoaks.com or stop by the sales center at 1220 Gordon River Trail from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday or noon to 5 p.m. Sundays.

The outdoor space at the Anguilla by London Bay Homes has a seating area around the linear fire pit, a sectional and a covered sofa at the raised deck by the pool and spa.

■ London Bay Homes’ newest model in the Park Shore neighborhood near downtown Naples sold just 11 days after it opened for viewing. The Anguilla, at 541 Neapolitan Lane, achieved the highest price per square foot in the Park Shore submarket in recent history, nearly eclipsing the $1,000 per square foot threshold.

“I expected this home would sell quickly because it’s close to the beach and downtown, an area where there is limited availability,” says Toby Cloutier, who represents the builder’s Naples portfolio.

House Hunting:

16626 Cortona Lane, Mediterra

A sophisticated blend of modern comfort and Tuscan architecture defines this lakeside villa with three bedrooms, a study and 3½ baths. A 2013 renovation introduced hand-scraped hardwood floors, Carrera marble counters and Italian pendant light fixtures. The new kitchen has a Wolf gas cook-top, butler’s pantry and coffee bar, while a 300-plus bottle Subzero wine refrigerator is perfectly sited near the garden courtyard. Adjoining the kitchen through a wide arched gallery, the formal dining area opens to the great room that has a linear gas fireplace. One of the guest suites is accommodated in a casita with its own entrance. Other amenities include a summer kitchen, surround sound and a two-car garage with air-conditioned storage.

Some cities more promising for young, first-time buyers

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS

A flurry of financial obstacles and life-style choices are stalling the journey to homeownership for many young adults, but becoming a homeowner is currently more feasible in some less expensive metro areas that have steady job growth and lower qualifying incomes needed to buy, according to new research by the National Association of Realtors.

NAR analyzed employment gains, population trends, income levels and housing conditions in the largest 100 metropolitan statistical areas across the country to identify the best purchase markets for millennial homebuyers.

Lawrence Yun, NAR chief economist, says although millennials have made up the largest share of buyers for three consecutive years, sales to first-time buyers and the homeownership rate for young adults are poised to lead the way in helping millennials realize they’re earning enough to purchase their first home.

“An overwhelming majority of young renters recently said they eventually want to buy a home,” Mr. Yun says. “As long as new and existing-home supply keeps up to meet demand and holds prices from rising too quickly, these identified areas will likely pave the way in helping millennials realize their American Dream of becoming homeowners.”

During the early stages of the economic recovery, some of the largest metro areas, such as New York and parts of California, were attractive to millennials for their strong job markets, but their higher costs of living made it difficult to buy. Naples Art Association’s national photography contest celebrates its sixth year

The photographs grab your eye and make you stop and look. And if they succeed, they’ll make you look at the world around you differently. The striking images in the Naples Art Association’s 2016 Camera USA exhibit vary by theme, subject matter, approach.

Some are photojournalistic, such as Art David’s “Who You Lookin’ At?,” a black and white image of a homeless man pushing a shopping cart. As he’s pushing his cart off the sidewalk, he’s turned over his left shoulder to look at an image of a nude woman in a window, who is also looking over her shoulder.

Echoes of WWII resound in Naples author’s new contemporary crime thriller

Set in 2000, Howard Giordano’s new mystery thriller features Luke Rizzo, a New York Police Department retiree working as a private investigator hired to find a crazed serial killer, Werner Schmitt, who is out for twisted revenge.

The woman who hired Rizzo, the beautiful Amy Chatsworth, is married to a British House of Lords member. She’s also the daughter of a man Schmitt feels compelled to assassinate. Amy has been trying to find her long lost father, and the connection makes her an additional target for Schmitt. But when Schmitt has his chance, his pistol shot misses its mark.

What’s Werner Schmitt’s problem? Well, it goes back a generation. His father, Walter, was one of eight Germans who made up a band of saboteurs working against the United States. When the FBI captured them in 1942, two of the group of eight cooperated and brought evidence against the other six. The “turncoats” were put in witness protection. The other six, including Walter Schmitt, were executed. One of the two betrayers was Amy’s grandfather.

Werner, a former East Germany Stasi agent, also knows that the sabotage project involved a huge cash backing, some $2.5 million that the Nazis committed to it. It’s been missing all these decades, and he’d like to get his hands on it.

The action begins in London and take us to parts of Pennsylvania and New York. Rizzo’s job is to help find Amy’s grandfather and the other man who had been placed in witness protection.

Soon enough, it is clear that while her grandfather is no longer alive, her father is — or might be. This part of the narrative is a bit obscure, but in any case, Rizzo needs to protect Amy and thwart Werner’s plans. Unfortunately, anyone getting in Werner’s way will also become a target.

Pursuing an investigation with Amy leads Rizzo to a hot romance (with her) and to confrontations with FBI agents and local police in the various places his investigation leads him. Amy is an able partner in more than one way.

Werner Schmitt is a shrewd adversary. Knowing that Rizzo and Amy are likely doing his work for him (finding the individuals he wishes to assassinate, only in order to protect them), he simply tracks the sleuthing lovers. He’s good at it. Will they catch on?

The author creates additional interest by examining the interaction among the various FBI agents and the local police. Presented mainly through dialogue, this material reveals personalities, investigative techniques and, most colorfully, the rivalries between these turf-bumping professionals. Rizzo has to find his way through a maze of petty politics. Who is in whose way?

The various locals are handled quite well. Neighborhoods, buildings (especially the converted school that is the home of one of the “good” Germans being hunted down) and other environmental features are clear and vivid without being overdone. Sections of New York City and rural New York State ring true as well, as do other locations.

Mr. Giordano knows how to build suspense, relax it and then build it even higher. And he knows how to introduce surprises that, while at first disorienting, soon seem plausible. I’m hoping he has plans for Luke Rizzo’s future.

About the author

Howard P. Giordano is the author of the award-winning “Tracking Terror,” also a thriller. Before being infected with the writing itch, he had a Madison Avenue advertising career and worked for the New York Racing Association (which oversees Aqueduct, Belmont and Saratoga) as executive director of marketing and TV. His last position before retirement to Naples was as president of the New York City Off-Track Betting Corporation.

New performing arts center opening June 25 in Bonita

After years of planning and construction by Off the Hook Comedy Club owner Brien Spina, the Southwest Florida Performing Arts Center, a 27,000-square-foot venue in Bonita Springs, opens to the public Saturday evening, June 25. The grand opening celebration will include a cocktail party, performances by comedy, dance and vocal artists and a finale by MJ The Legend Live, a Michael Jackson tribute concert currently performing at the Stratosphere Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas.

“Developing a multi-faceted performing arts center has been a bucket list project for me,” says Mr. Spina, a former charter-boat fleet captain who stumbled into the comedy club business in 2005 when he added live entertainment to his Marco Island seafood restaurant.

At 11515 Bonita Beach Road, the Southwest Florida Performing Arts Center will be a life enrichment center as well as a dining and entertainment destination drawing nationally known comedians, bands, musicals, dancers and other acts. Mr. Spina has brought many top names in comedy to Southwest Florida, including Kevin Hart and, most recently, “Saturday Night Live” alumni Chris Kattan.

Also opening for business Saturday, June 25, is the center’s Teatro Restaurant featuring Michelin Star Chef Michael Psilakis’ first-generation Mediterranean and Italian cuisine. The center will also have an 8,500-square-foot test kitchen to support local chef talent and a budding culinary training industry. Sections of the test kitchen will be available for rent to chefs or farmers market entrepreneurs. Mr. Spina says he will support scholarship programs through the American Culinary Federation.

The center will also be a venue for weddings, parties, and corporate or fundraising events as well as for adult and youth classes in art, technology and music.

The Best Events Are on the Water
Shot in downtown Miami in early morning, “The moment was not staged; it is the immediacy of ‘street photography’ that I like the most of all,” the Naples photographer writes in his artist’s statement. “For me, it’s like catching a bird or animal in an unusual or striking pose and knowing that the image will never be replicated.”

Or, there’s the futuristic-looking “Red Escalator” by Suzanne Schwartzman of Boca Raton. At the foot of the image is a silhouette of a man on an escalator, dwarfed by diagonals of two other escalators and the red-hued space. The photograph looks as if were shot in a city of the future, but Ms. Schwartzman took it in the parking garage at the Fort Lauderdale Airport.

Then there’s Todd Bradley’s “Pods of Life,” a trio of stephanotis, iris and California sycamore seedpods. The pods vary in shape, size and texture, making an intriguing still life.

The San Diego photographer writes in his artist’s statement that, “The decaying shells form beautiful abstract forms, sometimes showcasing the seeds like a peacock displaying its plumes. Before the seeds are released the pods hold them tight, protecting them from the elements of wind, rain, the heat of the sun until the perfect moment to release its precious cargo.”

These are just three of the 51 images that make up Camera USA 2016, the national photography contest and exhibit sponsored by the Naples Art Association and exhibited at The von Liebig Art Center.

Jurors selected the images from among 154 submissions from photographers in 17 states. (Works by 28 Florida photographers were chosen.)

The winner, who receives a $5,000 award, will be announced at the preview reception from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Friday, June 17 at the art center. Three judges juried the exhibit: Zora Carrier, executive director for the Florida Museum of Photographic Arts; Britt Sal-

Ms. Carrier, one of the jurors, says that while she considered the technical and artistic merits of the images, she also considered risk, asking, “How much of a risk did a photographer take and how successful were the results?” The highest marks, she writes, “Went to the images that not only sparked my visual interest but also showed daring and enticed me to look for deeper meanings or intentions. I encourage all of the participants to doggedly hone their craft while being open to experimentation and taking risks,” she writes in her juror's statement. “It is only through such discipline and courage that they will develop their own, unique aesthetic voice.”

The exhibit includes landscapes, such as BD Richardson’s “The Church By the Road,” which shows an abandoned wooden church in a stark, desolate area with ominous, low-hanging clouds. And Tony Hertz's “Layers of Waves,” an image of mist, breaking waves and cliffs at sunset on a windy day in Shell Beach, Calif.

The exhibit offers plenty of wildlife images, too. Especially outstanding is Mike Matthews’ “A Perfect Pair,” showing two great blue herons huddled together, facing each other. The Estero photographer's macro photography images have been published in magazines including Birds and Blooms, Spotlight of Southwest Florida, Bass Masters and Kentucky Homes and Gardens.

And, of course, there are portraits. Shelley Lake's “Daniel” gives us a close-up of a man looking straight at us. And Robert Schwartzman's “Man at Ferry Building” is a study in light and shadows, as he shows us minimal parts of a man's face seen from one-quarter view, with only certain elements of his features lit. The image is difficult to interpret at first; the majority of the photograph is black, with some seemingly random pieces of white.

There's art. And then there's gimmickry. It's pretty easy to tell the two apart while watching “America's Got Talent” on NBC or its original show, “Britain's Got Talent” on YouTube.

Some might say the entire show is one big gimmick itself. And they do have a point. But yet, there are moments of sheer artistry that surpass the schlockiness and scripted moments of “reality” TV, moments when the artistry cannot be denied.

I started thinking about this when watching “Britain's Got Talent” on YouTube. One of the contestants was Flying Bebop, a dance act that incorporates drones. In the auditions, the act consisted of two breakdancers, a young woman and a young man from London, and dozens of drones. I wasn't overwhelmed, although the act did have potential.

When Flying Bebop came back to perform in the semi-finals, though, the woman was gone (with no explanation), and the act consisted of just the man, dressed in white, like an astronaut. He took off his helmet, did some tumbles and spins and ducked the buzzing drones while Coldplay’s “A Sky Full of Stars” played.

I was underwhelmed. The performance seemed less about the dancing and more about the drones. Look at the drones! It seemed to be saying. Look how they can all move together in formation!

I wasn't impressed. The entire performance was unimaginative.

I don’t hate technology, but I have to admit, I hate drones. Or maybe I should say that I'm just grumpy about them, at least when it comes to everyday life. I foresee a future where the air is cluttered with them. (I hope I'm wrong.)

To me, they seem unsafe, unregulated and an incredible invasion of privacy. (The current May/June issue of “Consumers Digest” has a cover story about drones: “Recreational Drones Out of Control: New Safety & Privacy Laws Are on the Horizon.”)

And from the ads I've seen promoting them as Father’s Day gifts, it appears that anyone can buy and operate a drone. Early this April, an out-of-control drone with a video camera crashed into an upper-level condo on Marco Island. (Some reports say it was the 12th floor, others say it was the 20th.) The Ohio man controlling the drone was not charged. But drones as part of a dance act? I was willing to be impressed. The problem with the Flying Bebop performance was that it wasn't very good art. It seemed to be more about the technology and the novelty of using drones with dance.

It reminded me of how some science-fiction movies can be so bad, with poor dialogue, shaky plot and lack of character development, because the people involved are too in love with special effects and computer-generated images and don't realize that a good movie needs more than that. (And I love science-fiction movies.)

Then, recently, on the second episode of “America’s Got Talent,” there was another dance act with drones: Elevenplay, from Japan. I was knocked out by the sheer artistry and creativity of the group. Like Flying Bebop, they incorporated dance with music and drones. But it was a completely different experience. It was magical, mystical, and in-atypical ways. It’s about making art that's bigger than the piece itself, that brings viewers or readers or listeners to another, deeper place.

After all, all writers have the same 26 letters in the English alphabet to work with, it's how you put them together and what you do with them that counts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding is easily cleared up. Then go ahead and enjoy some fun and games this week. A Libra might have ideas that merit serious consideration for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel as if you’re in an emotional pressure cooker, but the situation is about to change in your favor. Take time out for some well-earned fun.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in your workplace responsibilities creates resentment among some co-workers. Deal with it before it becomes a threat to your success on the job.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful: What appears to be a solid financial opportunity might have some hidden risks attached. A hazy personal matter needs to be cleared up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It’s a good time to strengthen ties with family and friends. You might feel unsure about a recent workplace decision, but time will prove you did the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Just when you thought your relationship was comfortable and even predictable, your partner or spouse could spring a potentially life-changing surprise on you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usually generous self is overshadowed by your equally strong suspicious nature. You might be judging things too harshly. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love and romance dominate the week. Married Aquarians enjoy domestic harmony, while singles could soon be welcoming overtures from loving Leos.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An old health problem recurs, but it is soon dealt with, leaving you eager to get back into the swing of things. A favorable travel period starts this week.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel ready to face up to a major change, although it might involve some risks. A once-dubious family member comes around and offers support and encouragement.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an independent spirit that resists being told what to do. But you’re also wise enough to appreciate good advice.

If the only way to defeat a contract depends upon your partner having a certain card, and if your partner's holding that card is consistent with the bidding, then you should proceed on the assumption that he has that card. To play otherwise would essentially be self-defeating.

For example, consider this deal where South is in four spades and West leads the queen of hearts. Declarer wins with the king and draws three rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. The three of clubs is then led to the jack, losing to West's queen. What should West play next?

Actually, there is only one card he can return to defeat the contract: the jack of diamonds. If he leads that card, South goes down; if he leads any other card, South makes four spades.

The jack is the killing play because declarer cannot then avoid the loss of three diamond tricks regardless of what he does. But if West leads the ace of diamonds or a low diamond, South can hold himself to two diamond losers with proper play.

How can West know that the jack of diamonds — and only the jack of diamonds — is the right play? West sees that declarer has five trump tricks, the A-K of hearts and the ace of clubs. It is also fairly obvious that South took a club finesse at trick five with a holding that included the K-J. This brings declarer to nine sure tricks.

If West also credits South with the king of diamonds, he might as well give up and go home. Instead, he must assume that East has the king and that declarer has three diamonds. To do otherwise, as we said earlier, is a form of self-destruction.

‘Now You See Me 2’

Morgan Freeman is in “Now You See Me 2,” and because everyone loves his voice, the film opens and closes with him narrating the same phrase: “Seeing is believing, but is it truth? Depends on your perspective.”

The quote taps into the challenging and pleasurable movies (such as this one) that are based on deception: The viewer knows he can’t trust what he’s seeing, and that there’s an ulterior motive, secret deal and/or hidden motivation behind everything that appears on screen. Part of the fun is the guessing game of figuring out what they’re scheming; the other part comes from the ingenuity and “wow” factor with what they pull off.

Set 18 months after the first movie “Now You See Me” (2013), this sequel starts with Four Horsemen magicians Merritt (Woody Harrelson), Daniel (Jesse Eisenberg) and Jack (Dave Franco) laying low and taking orders from their leader, FBI Agent Dylan Rhodes (Mark Ruffalo). They’re soon joined by the perky and energetic Lula (Lizzy Caplan, a newcomer to the series).

Their big comeback doesn’t go as planned, however, and they wake up in Macau, China. Their kidnapper, the presumed dead Walter (Daniel Radcliffe), forces them to steal a powerful computer chip that will enable him to tap into any electronic device in the world.

Nothing more needs to be revealed about the plot; let it suffice to say that Mr. Freeman, Michael Caine, Mr. Harrelson doing a Matthew McConaughey impression and the entire city of London play major roles.

Director Jon Chu’s (“G.I. Joe: Retaliation”) challenge is in executing the trickery in a fun way that keeps us engaged and doesn’t seem completely ridiculous when explained at film’s end. In this he has succeeded.

What’s interesting is that the “heist” elements — stealing an object, breaking into a building, impersonating others — are more engaging than the “magic” bits, and here’s why: We understand the heists and how they’re done, and we can reasonably fantasize about pulling off something similar ourselves. The magic, however, isn’t always explained — How does Daniel disappear into a sidewalk? And how does Lula make a bird fly out of a guy’s pants? — so sometimes we’re forced to suspend disbelief when the curious among us (like me) would really like to know how they do that.

As a whole, though, “Now You See Me 2” is clever and enjoyable, with the fact that it’s largely far-fetched and unrealistic a large part of its charm. Do yourself a favor and don’t even bother trying to figure it out. Just smile and go along for the ride.

For years, “Finding Dory” was a sequel that wasn’t going to happen. Then inspiration struck director Andrew Stanton, and the result is a movie that maybe shouldn’t have happened after all. This is a sweet, occasionally funny, and sometimes tedious sequel to Pixar Animation’s 2003 breakout hit “Finding Nemo”; you will enter with great excitement and exit with mild disappointment.

Everyone’s favorite blue tang fish, Dory (Ellen DeGeneres), misses her parents. The film opens with young Dory (Sloane Murray) and her loving parents (Eugene Levy and Diane Keaton) patiently trying to teach her how to always make it back home to their reef. Being the forgetful fish that she is, she loses them anyway.

Nowadays Dory lives a cozy life with Marlin (Albert Brooks) and Nemo (Hayden Rolence), but can’t shake the desire to find her long-lost parents. This takes her, Marlin and Nemo on an adventure to the Marine Life Institute where she thinks she last saw her folks. Numerous newfound friends assist in her quest, including an octopus named Hank (Ed O’Neill), a whale shark named Destiny (Kaitlin Olson), a beluga whale named Bailey (Ty Burrell) and two sea lions named Fluke (Idris Elba) and Rudder (Dominic West).

Mr. Stanton’s screenplay is episodic; it sends Dory on a seemingly endless journey that she sometimes forgets why she’s on — meaning we can’t trust what she thinks or says. Therefore, as Dory, Marlin and Nemo go from one detour to the next, it never feels like they’re moving forward or getting any closer to Dory’s parents. Every obstacle they’ve ever worked on, and given the numerous changes he makes to blend in, and the way he moves, it’s easy to see why.

"Finding Dory" is far from a total bust, and clearly — this isn’t just a selfish cash grab like many bust, and clearly — this is a sweet, occasionally funny, and sometimes tedious sequel to Pixar Animation’s 2003 breakout hit “Finding Nemo”; you will enter with great excitement and exit with mild disappointment.

Maggie's Plan ★★★
(Greta Gerwig, Ethan Hawke, Julianne Moore) Maggie (Ms. Gerwig) falls in love with and marries John (Mr. Hawke), only to realize she made a horrible mistake and needs to reunite him with his ex-wife (Ms. Moore). It's a clever premise with enough laughs and brutal honesty to make it solid entertainment. Rated R.

Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping ★★★
(Andy Samberg, Sarah Silverman, Imogen Poots) Pop star Conner4Real (Mr. Samberg) strikes out with his second solo album, sending his life and career into a tailspin. It's a laugh riot from start to finish that dares to satirize pop culture and the idol worship of celebrities. Rated R.

X-Men: Apocalypse ★★
(James McAvoy, Jennifer Lawrence, Oscar Isaac) Prof. X (Mr. McAvoy) and Mystique (Ms. Lawrence) lead the X-Men against the world's first and most powerful mutant, Apocalypse (Mr. Isaac). The villain is boring, and the ample visual effects don't make up for the flawed story. Rated PG-13.

Alice Through The Looking Glass ★★
(Mia Wasikowska, Sacha Baron Cohen, Johnny Depp) Alice (Ms. Wasikowska) returns to Wonderland and travels back in time to save the Mad Hatter's (Mr. Depp) family. The visuals are impressive, but the performances and story feel overdone. Rated PG.

(Seth Rogen, Rose Byrne, Zac Efron) After living next to Teddy's (Mr. Efron) fraternity in "Neighbors" (2014), Mac (Mr. Rogen) and Kelly (Ms. Byrne) now must deal with a sorority (led by Chloe Grace Moretz's Shelby) moving in next door. It's not as funny as the original, and its strong feminist message doesn't quite fit with the absurd comedy. Still, it's humorous enough to warrant a moderate recommendation. Rated R.

The Nice Guys ★★★
(Russell Crowe, Ryan Gosling, Margaret Qualley) A private eye (Mr. Gosling) and muscle man (Mr. Crowe) team up to find a missing girl (Ms. Qualley) in 1977 Los Angeles. The chemistry between Mr. Crowe and Mr. Gosling is tremendous, and there are enough creative laughs to make it satisfactorily entertaining. Rated R.

The Man Who Knew Infinity ★★
(Dev Patel, Jeremy Irons, Toby Jones) An Indian mathematics prodigy (Mr. Patel) challenges the establishment at Cambridge University during World War I. Mr. Irons is solid as the mentor, but as a whole the film doesn't add up to being more than a standard drama. Rated PG-13.

Captain America: Civil War ★★★
(Chris Evans, Robert Downey Jr., Scarlett Johansson) Threatened with government supervision, the Avengers split allegiances between Team Captain America (Mr. Evans) and Team Iron Man (Mr. Downey Jr.). It's a legitimate dilemma the heroes face, the action is inspired and the Marvel Cinematic Universe continues to expand in logical, smart ways. Rated PG-13.

COLLECTOR’S CORNER

It’s easy to keep silver shining; just don’t overclean it

I love collecting old flatware because you never know what you will find. Victorians had especially interesting pieces — apic servers, pickle forks, sardine servers and such — so it’s easy to build a cool collection.

So here’s a tip: Dig through those bins. Don’t worry that something is covered in tarnish — some dealers tell me that’s how you know there’s still plenty of silver on a piece because only the silver turns black with tarnish. Wash for pitting, where the silver has worn away to expose the base metal. You can do as my mom did, and watch the piece clean itself with use over time.

Or you can clean gently with silver paste or cream — even toothpaste works in a pinch. Don’t use any of those dip cleaners — they’re too harsh and will strip away the patina.

But whatever you do, enjoy!

LOOK WHAT I FOUND

This 1847 Rogers Bros. fork, in the Vintage pattern, first was made in 1904.

THE FIND: 1847 Rogers Bros. Vintage pattern forks

Found: Antiques and Memories, 1788 Fowler St., Fort Myers; 226-1992 or antiquesandmemories.net.

Cost: $3.

The Skinny: The fork I’m holding first was made in 1904, and the pattern probably wasn’t made long after World War I ended in 1918, as styles became more streamlined.

But what a glorious pattern it is, with its vines of vines and bunches of grapes surrounding the edges of the handles. This box of silver plate flatware had lots of interesting pieces in it. Unfortunately, the pieces had been cleaned a bit too well — notice there’s no patina, or tarnish, between the designs, which were designed to hold the tarnish.

So it’s easy to keep silver shining; just don’t overclean it.

But whatever you do, enjoy!

Chinese fish vases believed to bring good luck, strength and longevity to a home

BY TERRY KOVEL AND KIM KOVEL

Part of the fun of collecting is learning something extra about the history of the piece.

When it was sold at a Cowan auction in December 2015, this 16-inch vase was described as “a hand-painted porcelain Chinese Export vase in the shape of a fish in water amid lotus blossoms.” The condition description mentions some minor paint loss and damage to the fins. Fish have special meaning to the Chinese, so a search for the story led to an extra explanation of the vase. The color of the vase is a combination of blue and green, which is often used to represent good fortune.

A: The vase is a Chinese koi vase, which sold for $861. It seems people want what their grandparents had, not what they grew up with. The Declaration line of Drexel was designed by Kipp Stewart and Stamp McDougall, popular California designers. Drexel Furniture Co. was founded in Drexel, N.C., in 1903. Drexel is now part of the Heritage Home Group in High Point, N.C., and the brand is called Drexel Heritage. The numbers indicate your walnut table with rosewood inlay was made in March 1961. Some dealers in Mid-century modern pieces price this table at over $1,000, but one sold at auction a few years ago for $275 and it’s been offered online for less.

Q: I have an E.T. doll made by Kamar International Inc. The tag says it’s made of acrylic fiber and crushed walnut shells. The skin is peeling a little. How can I preserve it? I keep it covered with tissue paper and plastic.

A: Proper storage is imperative. Acids in tissue paper and gases given off by plastic will cause the material to deteriorate. Don’t use ordinary tissue paper or plastic to store your doll. Wrap the doll in acid-free tissue paper, unbleached muslin or a 100 percent cotton white sheet or pillowcase that has not been washed. Store it in an airtight container, and keep it in a dark place not subject to temperature extremes or excess humidity.

Q: I bought some stainless steel flatware at a house sale and would like to know more about it. It has a flat finish and horizontal grooved lines on the handles. There is black inside the grooves, but it’s worn off on most pieces. The pieces are marked “Dansk Designs Germany” around an emblem that has four swimming ducks on it. When were these made?

A: Dansk is an American company started by Ted and Martha Nierenberg in 1954. The couple asked Danish designer Jens Quistgaard to design a line of flatware they could sell in the U.S. Your flatware is Variation VI, which was first made in 1957 and was made in Germany, Denmark and Finland. Quistgaard designed other flatware patterns as well, serving pieces and other items for Dansk. After several changes in ownership, Dansk became part of Lenox in 2009.

Theater is all about taking risks. And Michael Donald Edwards, producing artistic director of the Asolo Repertory Theatre in Sarasota, is taking a big one presenting the American premiere of “Hetty Feather,” a show from London’s West End based on a children’s book of the same name. The story, though well known in the UK, isn’t a familiar one on this side of the pond.

“It’s difficult to describe an equivalent,” Mr. Edwards says about the book, although he says author Dame Jacqueline Wilson is beloved throughout the country. “She’s sold more than 38 million books there and was named a Waterstones Children’s Laureate winner in 2001.”

Adding to the risk, Mr. Edwards had not seen the entire show, only bits and pieces of it in rehearsal. But knowledge of the show, and its recommendation, had come to him through trusted friends and colleagues.

“I thought, this is a really cool thing to take a risk on,” he says. “We’ve been talking for a couple of years about a family initiative... Rather than snowbirds, how do we reach younger people with kids?”

Producing “Hetty Feather” is the beginning of examining whether the Asolo has a family audience for shows at the same level of talent and production of everything else the company does, he adds.

Described as a combination of Dickens, Orphan Annie and the circus, it tells the story of Hetty Feather, a red-haired girl in the 19th century who was sold more than 38 million books there and was named a Waterstones Children’s Laureate winner in 2001.

Dancing brothers bound for the Barbara B. Mann

BY ALAN SCULLEY
Flavor Weekly Correspondent

“Dancing With The Stars” performers Maskim and Valentin Chmerkovskiy and their “Maks & Val On Tour: Our Way” production hit the road ion June 15 for a 46-show trek that includes a stop at the Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall on Saturday, June 18. The brothers had just 2½ weeks to take the show from the drawing board to the stage.

The tour comes right on the heels of wrapping production on the next season of “Dancing With The Stars.” Maks, after spending 14 seasons as a contestant on the show, now serves as a guest judge. Val, meanwhile, returned for his 10th season on the show.

Both brothers have also been part of past touring productions of “Dancing With The Stars.”

Their involvement with that show is a main reason full production rehearsals couldn’t commence until right before the first date of the tour. Beyond the dancing, the “Our Way” show gives the brothers a chance to tell their life story.

It’s quite a tale — a true modern-day example of the United States living up to its reputation as the land of opportunity. The brothers came to Brooklyn from the Ukraine in 1994 with their parents when they were kids and have gone on to become stars in the dance world and co-owners of Dance With Me Dance Studios.

Maks was the first to get into dancing, starting back in the Ukraine at his Dance Studios.

Today, both brothers credit “Dancing With The Stars” for being a career-making, life-changing opportunity — one that put them in position for their current tour.

NOTCHES IN YOUR TEETH

If you’ve noticed notches in the enamel of your teeth at the point along which the gums meet the tooth (known as the “gingival margin”), you likely have a form of tooth loss known as “abfraction.” This loss of tooth structure is not caused by decay. Instead, it can be traced to forces exerted on the teeth associated with tooth grinding (known as “bruxism”). While there is some disagreement as to how abfraction occurs, it is readily accepted that people who grind their teeth subject them to imminently high forces that cause enamel to be shed. Treatment is two-fold. First, bruxism must be addressed with a custom nighttime mouth guard. Then, the damaged teeth must be filled with bonding agent.

‘Outlander’ will return for third and fourth seasons

BY CINDY ELAVSKY

Q: I am really enjoying this season of “Outlander.” Can you tell me if it will be back for another season?

A: Starz has just announced that Jamie (Sam Heughan), Clare (Caitriona Balfe) and the rest of the crew have been granted at least two more seasons to tell Diana Gabaldon’s eight-book (soon to be nine) series. Each season covers the events of one book. “Dragonfly in Amber” concludes July 9. Season three will adapt “Voyager,” and season four will tell the story of “Drums of Autumn.”

Q: Reading your interview about Rebecca Wisocky’s experience on “The X-Files” made me wonder if it will be back for another season. Has it been renewed?

A: Everyone — David Duchovny, Gillian Anderson and Chris Carter — is on board for another season. Right now, they are in negotiations with Fox to return for the 2017-18 season. Hey, we waited 10 years for the reboot, so what’s two more for another season, right?

And that reminds me: It’s time for another round of “Canceled or Renewed.” Here are some Fox shows that won’t live to see another season: “American Idol,” “Bordertown,” “Cooper Barrett’s Guide to Surviving Life,” “Famous,” “Grandfathered,” “The Grinder” (it pains me to write that this brilliant comedy is no more), “Knock Knock Live,” “Minority Report” and “Second Chance.”

It’s contest time. My favorite paranormal author, Victoria Laurie, has a book coming out July 26. “A Grave Prediction” is the 14th installment in the Psychic Eye Mysteries. This go-round, Abby Cooper has a vision of four buried bodies and is in a race to prevent the murders of these people — but she has no idea who they are or when it will happen.

To celebrate the book’s release, I’m giving away four autographed copies. Here’s how you can enter: Write me at King Features Weekly Service, 628 Virginia Drive, Orlando, FL 32803; email letters@cindyelavsky.com; follow and tweet me at twitter.com/celebirty_extra; and like and comment on my Facebook page fb.me/celebrityextra. The Dish: Tuesday Fish Tacos

The Price: $15.99

The Place: Captain & Krewe Seafood Market and Raw Bar
629 Eighth St. S.
263-1976; cknaples.com

The Hours: 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday-Saturday. Closed Sunday.

The Details: A $9 dish called Eighth Street Fish Tacos is a staple on the printed menu at Captain & Krewe. Only on Tuesdays does the specials chalkboard proclaim: Tuesday Fish Tacos: $15.99. My savvy dining companion knew this, and that’s why she insisted on C&K when we made a recent lunch date. It was a good thing I hadn't eaten much breakfast, because lunch consisted of not one but two oversized, soft flour tortillas loaded with perfectly blackened chunks of fresh grouper on top of shredded romaine, cabbage and cheese and pico de gallo (chunks of tomato, little bits of jalapeño and onion and a hint of fresh lime).

The salsa served in a little plastic container on the side was simply the best I’d ever had — and different from any I’d ever had. When our server asked the Oaxacan chef to come out and tell us about it, we learned the complex sauce is her own creation of dried arbol chiles toasted in hot oil and combined with tomato, onion, garlic, cilantro and salt, all pureed in a blender. I asked for a second serving as I tucked into my second taco.

One More Thing: Instead of the regular black beans and rice, my friend asked for a side of seaweed salad to accompany her Tuesday Fish Tacos. She was gracious enough to offer me a bite, and as much as I enjoyed my beans and rice, I might be tempted to request the substitution next time — and there will be a next time, Soon.

Here are some capsule summaries of previous restaurant reviews:

Coastal Peruvian Seafood & Grill, 5477 Airport-Pulling Road N., Naples; 631-6943
This lovely restaurant provides a refreshing space in which to dine on exceptionally good food. Owners Chris and Fabiola Santos are hospitable and helpful as they introduce guests to their menu. Of the various ceviche variations, we enjoyed the Ceviche 200 Miles, a sprightly blend of shrimp, squid, mussels, fish, red onions, sweet potato and corn that had a bite but wasn’t fiery hot. Marina sliders held fried red snapper fillets topped with aioli amarillo-pineapple chichurri on firm, yeasty mini buns. The Poseidon Fest was a montage of courses needed polish. Beer and wine served.

Fernandez the Bull-Midtown, 3375 Pine Ridge Road, Naples; 653-9097
Local lovers of Cuban food have a full bar and a terrific staff. Start with marinated skirt steak and sweet plantains. For dessert, the cheesecake, a pie with an Oreos crust, middle of caramel-flavored lucuma and a drizzle of chocolate sauce. Beer and wine served.

Fernandez the Bull to patronize. For now that there’s a second location in various locations. Now a chic-looking sibling is operating on Pine Ridge Road with indoor and outdoor seating, a full bar and a terrific staff. Start with a well-chilled and minty guava mojito. Savor some beef empanadas (one dish of eight serves two or more) or crisp fried calamari and then move on to an entrée like the chicken with mojo and garlic sauce or shrimp and mussels in white wine and tomato sauce. Sides of moros (rice and black beans), fried yuca or fried plantains are all great choices. And don’t skip dessert. We loved the guava mango mousse cheesecake. Full bar.

Whether it’s breakfast, lunch or dinner you fancy, La Bazenne is prepared to serve it to you with proper French style and flair. A cozy little spot on Fifth next to Osteria Tulia, it’s operated by Martine and Bernard Giacometti. His parents have operated the original La Bazenne in France for 40 years. Whether it’s crepe, salads or burgers early in the day or the more complex and interesting dinner lineup, the fare is tres magnifique. The octopus salad is outstanding (rendered tender via sous vide preparation) and served with broccoli rabe, cherry tomatoes and lemon verbenas pesto. A chevre starter with cherry tomatoes, dried cranberries, pumpkin seeds and mixed greens was also excellent. Entrees of diver scallops with English peas, scallops and pommes fondants were elegant and perfect, as was the crisp lavender duck with Florida orange glaze, kohlrabi and pommes almon. A cheese plate and aphrodisiaque crepe provided a wondrous ending to a flawless meal. Beer and wine served.

Poached (formerly Toast of Bonita), 24600 S. Tamiami Trail, Bonita Springs; 221-8256
With its sweet homemade banana bread, creative French bread stuffings and flights of food fancy (see the “I Don’t Want Salad!” Salad topped with a burger and fries), Poached torches some of the predictability of going out for breakfast or lunch. If you’re bananas about fruit for the morning meal, tuck into the banana-bread French toast topped with bananas. Can’t decide between a BLT and an egg salad sandwich? Poached puts both together in one buttery croissant. From the four eggs Benedict variations offered, which include a vegetarian one for those more health-conscious than I, the Country Benedict was a filling combination of fluffy eggs (swapped for the usual toasted English muffins), peppery pork sausage patties instead of Canadian bacon, sautéed mushrooms and onions. The eggs were perfectly poached, with silken whites and sunny, creamy yolks. Even Ho-hum chicken salad gets a tasty makeover stuffed into a pineapple with dried cherries and other goodies. Beer and wine served.

Trattoria Abruzzo, Pavilion Shopping Center, 835 Vanderbilt Beach Road, Naples; 596-8010
The Lacetti family has developed a loyal following even though this popular dining spot sits well back from the street on the Vanderbilt Beach Road side of the Pavilion Shopping Center. You’ll find some surprises on the menu, like the calamari Adriatico (squid sautéed with artichoke hearts, kalamata olives and cherry tomatoes), and house-made agnolotti nonno Paolo (large, tender half-moons of ravioli stuffed with Parmigiano and fontina cheese topped with porcini mushrooms and a hint of truffle oil). Snapper Livornese consisted of a good-sized fillet topped with kalamatas, capers and anchovies in a light marinara sauce, and the pollo ortolona was an impressive plate of boneless chicken breast with shitake mushrooms, herbs, garlic and demi-glace with grand-reserve balsamic and a load of fresh arugula. We finished with a lovely lemon tart just as a singer began serenading the crowd with Italian classics. Service was friendly but the timing of courses needed polish. Beer and wine served.

Yabba Island Grill shifts focus to sink stake in steak business

So if a restaurant claims to open at 5:30 p.m. and has accepted your reservation for 5:30 p.m., what time would you expect to be seated?

If you thought the answer would be 5:30 p.m. as we did, then you would have been as surprised as we and about 20 other early-bird diners were on a recent Saturday evening when we all found ourselves standing around in the hot sun outside of Yabba Island Grill waiting for it to open at 5:30. And 5:35. And 5:40. The crowd grew larger and more restive.

Although this long-established restaurant has recently changed concepts from Caribbean to steak, it apparently still runs on island time. It was closer to 5:45 p.m. before the first group of now thoroughly disgruntled diners was seated. To make matters worse, almost all the parties were clustered in a small front dining area that instantly grew noisy and close.

Patrons were handed the early dining menu, good from 5:30-6 p.m. It offers 10 entreés plus several grilled fish options for two for $16.20 per person, including a bottle of wine.

When a couple of people inquired about a larger selection, their servers replied, “Oh, I can bring you the real menu if you’d like.” The real menu? How about a larger selection, their servers answered.

When the couple of people inquired about a larger selection, their servers replied, “Oh, I can bring you the real menu if you’d like.” The real menu? How about a larger selection, their servers would have realized.

In higher检查s (and tips) had the staff not assumed we were all there for a cheap date.

I might brush off this sort of bush league behavior from some new kid on the block, but Yabba has been around for a long, long time. Part of the Culinary Concepts group that includes Chops City Grill in Naples and Bonita, Pazzo in Naples and Blue Water Bistro in Coconut Point, Yabba is run by surly restaurateurs who know better than this.

Mercifully, once everyone was seated and given the menus they desired, things improved immeasurably. Habanero cornbread (the habanero was quite mild) and garlic cheddar biscuits with three butters made a good start.

And the dining room’s remake is a welcome departure from the relentless

Jumbo crab cakes are served with citrus-mustard sauce.

The Vinny is Yabba’s take on lava cake.

New billing itself as a steak house, Yabba offers wet aged steaks cooked properly like this 8-ounce filet.

Mahi in citrus-butter sauce comes with shrimp, mussels, artichokes, and sun-dried tomatoes.

Chicken and lemongrass wontons come with Shanghai sauce and toasted sesame seeds ($8.90) were beautifully presented on a long dish, with the four wontons lined up in a spicy-sweet sauce dusted with sesame seeds and garnished with julienne carrots. The wontons were firm and nicely seasoned.

Jumbo crab cakes ($15.90) were also lovely, not quite jumbo but relatively good sized, and bathed in a tangy citrus-mustard sauce that complemented them well. The crab was evident and not dumbed down by a plethora of breadcrumbs.

An entree of citrus mahi ($29.50) was puzzling, however, as we could detect no citrus in the citrus-butter sauce that had to compete with the shrimp, mussels, sun-dried tomatoes, artichoke hearts, rice and fresh veggies (zucchini, summer squash, etc.) that shared the plate. The fish was somewhat dry, a sign it spent a bit too much time in the sauté pan, but the vegetables were perfectly tender-crisp.

The best dish was the 8-ounce filet ($30), which was tender, cooked to a perfect medium rare, served with properly cooked vegetables and crisp, hot steak fries. I ordered the Yabba Island steak sauce ($2) with it, which our server described as “similar to A1 sauce.” Again, it’s all about phrasing. How about, “It’s a tangy blend of seasonings that work well with steak?”

And then there was dessert. We settled on The Vinny, described on the menu as “a melting chocolate cake with Anglaise and raspberry sauce. It looked resembling thick fudge sitting in a pool of temperature, round cake with an interior gelato that night — clearly, there had been no freshly made gelato that night — clearly, there had been a rush start that day — so vanilla ice cream would do. But we were expecting a warm cake with a lava-like middle. What arrived instead was a cooler-than-room-temperature, round cake with an interior resembling thick fudge sitting in a pool of Angelaise and raspberry sauce. It looked lovely and, served warm, this might have been fine. Served cold, it was just so-so.

There is much to like about Yabba. The change in décor is a much-needed upgrade. The dining room looks great and, if the staff would spread the dinners out rather than clump them into one small section, customers could fully appreciate those changes.

The menu has a lot of appealing dishes, whether you want a few small plates or crave a good-sized steak at a not-so-hefty price.

But there is a lack of attention to detail here that I’ve not experienced when dining at Chops and that does not fit the Culinary Concepts model. There are plenty of other places to dine along Fifth Avenue South, especially during the slow summer months. Yabba needs to up its game to ensure that potential customers don’t find a more hospitable spot a few doors down.

A s part of its substantial member-approved and financed club renovation initiative that is now underway, Quail West Golf & Country Club is investing approximately $12 million to enhance the playability of its two award-winning championship golf courses that were originally designed by heralded golf course architect Arthur Hills more than two decades ago. The golf course renovation is one component of a member approved and financed initiative budgeted at approximately $80 million that reflects the community’s mission to be the premier private residential country club in Southwest Florida. Designed to meet the needs of Quail West’s growing membership and the changing lifestyle characteristics of the community’s members, the improvements will provide the latest in physical facilities and state of the art technology while further solidifying Quail West’s position as Southwest Florida’s leading luxury golf course community.

Quail West has long been acknowledged for providing one of Southwest Florida’s finest golf experiences. The club’s amenity enhancement initiative will further that legacy. While the original design and character of the community’s Preserve and Lakes courses will remain essentially intact, the renovation initiative is focused on improving the playability of both courses for golfers of all skill levels. The renovations will address enhancements to the irrigation systems, green complexes, the adjacent bunker, fringe, and grass areas, and the fairways. New irrigation technologies will be introduced to embrace best water conservation practices and to reduce overall operating costs.

The golf course enhancements will be overseen by J. Drew Rogers, a member of the American Society of Golf Course Architects who is highly regarded for his ability to undertake golf course renovation projects. Rogers is intimately familiar with Quail West’s golf courses, having worked directly with Arthur Hills to design two nine-hole layouts that would eventually comprise the Lakes Course.

Improvements to the Preserve Course are underway and the course will remain closed as the renovations proceed. The Preserve Course is expected to re-open by January, 2017. A similar schedule will be implemented for the Lakes Course with work beginning in spring, 2017 and the course re-opening by January, 2018.

Rogers regards Quail West’s signature golf course as a layout with great natural beauty. The Preserve Course is encircled by a large nature preserve and enhanced by a lush landscape and strategically placed water hazards to create a challenging but fair test of golf for all players at various levels of skill. The Preserve Course plays to 7,041 yards from the back tees and takes the golfer on a meandering journey through verdant woodland areas. It is easy to get distracted by the stunning beauty of this course, particularly on the signature par three second hole where a beautifully manicured and expansive bed of flowers provides a striking display of color.

A wide array of wildlife is often seen on the Preserve Course and in the surrounding forest that includes cypress trees 300 to 400 years old. Tight, tree-lined and undulating fairways, strategically placed bunkers, mature areas, numerous water hazards and large, challenging greens with numerous tiers and slopes immediately bring golfers down to earth. As the case on any well designed course, precision and good shot making are rewarded. While the course can be intimidating to the eye, depth is often deceiving. Learning what the course is willing to give is, as always, the key to success. The flags are equipped for laser link distance measurement.

Renée Gaddis Interiors creating model at Seaglass at Bonita Bay

The tower residence 306, one of three models that will be presented at Seaglass at Bonita Bay, a 26-floor, 120-unit high-rise tower now under construction by The Ronto Group within Bonita Bay. Designs for the two additional models are being created by Robb & Stucky International and Cinnabar Design.

The models will include finishes on display at the Seaglass Design Studio within the Seaglass Sales Center at 26951 Country Club Drive in Bonita Bay. Ronto’s Finishing Touches Program allows future residents to visit the Design Studio and select finishes for their home’s flooring, cabinetry, countertops, door hardware, plumbing fixtures, and paint colors. To ensure each residence is ideally suited to its owner’s lifestyle, future residents may also specify finishes from other sources. With construction now underway, opportunities to specify preferred finishes for new residences will become progressively limited.

Seaglass will feature fully-completed, ready for occupancy residences with premium finishes, including flooring, paint, and trim. Each residence will come with two protected access under-building parking spaces. Private enclosed two-car garages will be available. Three luxurious tower residence great room floor plans at Seaglass range from 2,880 to 3,421 square feet under air and are priced from just over $1 million. One remaining penthouse residence at Seaglass is priced from $2.9 million and offers approximately 4,600 square feet under air.

The tower residence 306 floor plan offers 3,421 square feet under air and 25 square feet of covered terrace space. The great room plan includes three bedrooms plus a den or fourth bedroom, three-and-a-half baths, an island kitchen and dining area, and a private elevator lobby. The design includes an optional fireplace and a dry bar with wine storage.

Gaddis’s design will showcase classic style with a contemporary edge for a clean-lined look. She will incorporate a variety of wood tones, mixing light and dark for eclectically modern charm. The color palette will be based on cool matte blue grays. The flooring will be a warm wood tone with ceiling details throughout.

A private elevator lobby will provide a grand welcome. Adorned with fluted wall paneling and a diamond-shaped flooring detail of inlaid white and blue Lagos marble, the space will accommodate a smart console with a mirror above and a round tufted ottoman. Decorative crown molding and pendant lighting will add to the sense of arrival.

The lobby’s flooring inset will be repeated in the foyer. Applied moldings and crown molding will add architectural texture, some painted to match the cool gray walls, some in clean contrast- ing white. The foyer will open into the kitchen, dining room, and great room.

The walls in the open concept living areas will be clean gray. A ceiling detail in the dining area and kitchen will incorporate a double-step detail with drywall beams. The dining area between the foyer and the great room will feature a rectangular table that will seat eight. The kitchen will present a fresh clean aura with light counter surfaces.

The great room will feature another ceiling detail in a checkboard style and multiple seating areas. A fireplace clad in marble will provide the focus for the television viewing area. Here, a sofa and two armchairs will be grouped with a cocktail table and end tables. A console table with decorative lamps will provide space for two ottomans tucked under-neath. A discreet dry bar will create an oasis for wine tasting with a small table and chairs. A built-in banquette with a diamond tufted back and two chairs will be grouped around a square table ideal for playing cards. The furnishings will be classic in style with fabrics and finishes that lean toward the transitional.

From the great room, pocketing sliders will open to a terrace where the owners will enjoy the views and an al fresco Florida lifestyle. This generous space will accommodate a grill zone off to one side as well as a lounge area with an L-shaped sectional sofa and a round cocktail table. The home’s neutral color palette will continue in the owner’s suite where Gaddis will introduce an applied molding detail on the headboard wall featuring an artful arrangement of rectangles. The incredibly-designed residences at Kalea Bay, combined with spectacular views of the Gulf of Mexico, the Coconutsatchee River and a pristine nature preserve, have propelled the community to become one of the hottest-selling properties this year.

The 22-story tower will have 20 floors of residences over two floors of parking. At the current time, construction crews are working on the tower’s 7th floor, which is helping buyers see the value of purchasing now.

Introducing Corsica, new luxury coach homes, by FrontDoor Communities at Talis Park

FrontDoor Communities cordially invites you to their VIP Showcase Model Preview at Corsica, in Talis Park. The unveiling of the Sienna Model, decorated by award-winning interior designer Lita Dirks, is a great introduction to the beautiful architectural detailing and building integrity that FrontDoor is consistently recognized for across the region.

Comprised of only 64 residences, Corsica at Talis Park is inspired by Santa Barbara architectural style with south-facing two-story buildings, each housing four residences. FrontDoor Communities is the exclusive builder for Corsica, which is set on gently curving streetscapes that display Talis Park’s prized landscaping.

“Home buyers have the opportunity to enjoy resort-style luxury, without traveling to the Mediterranean,” said Mike Taylor, vice president of FrontDoor Communities’ South Florida division. “Residents will love coming home to winding streets, calming palm trees and serene landscapes.”

This stunning community, priced from the $700,000s, is a unique opportunity to enjoy resort-style luxury and a fun-filled Florida lifestyle with thoughtfully designed floor plans, park-and-waterway access that FrontDoor is consistently recognized for at every amenity offered at Talis Park, including the Talis Park Sports Complex.

The Sports Complex offers six lighted Har-Tru tennis courts, pavilions for resting between matches, a tennis pro shop and clubhouse with restrooms and a beverage center, four bocce ball courts, a 50-foot two-lane lap pool and a green space close by. The clubhouse is a short walk from The Coach Homes at Corsica or an even shorter golf cart ride.

Residents have the opportunity to enjoy Talis Park’s legendary golf course, one of only two in the world created by the distinguished Greg Norman/Pete Dye partnership. Ranked by Golf Digest as one of Florida’s top 20 courses and praised for its meticulously tended fairways and greens, Talis Park is universally regarded as one of the nation’s premier golf experiences.

The coach home residences are designed by award-winning architect’s BSB Design. BSB Design has earned a reputation for designing lifestyle-oriented homes that reflect the preferences of their owners while at the same time being recognized for their architectural merit—a delicate balance that team masters well. The newly decorated Sienna model home is designed by another award-winning team—Lita Dirks of Lita Dirks and Co., Lita Dirks, CEO and owner of Lita Dirks and Co., is known in the interior designing community as one of the most successful interior merchandisers in the country. The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Denver recently dubbed her a “legend” and in 1993, Dirks received the Bill Molster Award from the NSMC.

The Sienna floor plan features three bedrooms, three-and-a-half baths and private garage on 3,382 square feet. This light-filled, open concept floor plan also features spacious living areas, a private courtyard entry, covered outdoor living area, private elevator, study or loft space, great room, dining area and gourmet kitchen island.

Combining an understanding of what an owner values most in a home with a proven track record of delivering quality projects that exceed expectations, FrontDoor Communities is driven to excellent execution of every project. Founded by long-term building industry veterans Terry Russell, CEO, and Mike Langella, President, FrontDoor Communities is a full-service real estate firm with extensive experience developing communities and building homes for more than three decades.

FrontDoor’s market reach extends to every corner of Florida and throughout the North Carolina and Georgia markets.

The FrontDoor team has earned many design and quality awards, including the industry’s most coveted “America’s Best Builder” designation and the National Housing Quality Awards. Before forming FrontDoor, Russell and Langella led the Southeast’s largest privately held home builder, Russell as CEO and Langella as president.

“When you build with FrontDoor Communities, you can rest assured that we are dedicated to you and your desires every step of the way,” said Russell. “We are experts at building high-quality homes that blend well with the surroundings while remaining distinctive to the area.”

Each FrontDoor home is built with a thoughtful approach to design and construction to match the lifestyle the homeowners will live, with luxury features and finishes that will stand the test of time. Homes are designed with open layouts to match the way today’s families live, and special attention is given to the areas that many overlook.

Buyers have the opportunity to work with FrontDoor’s designers to make design decisions that reflect their family’s style, creating a home that is uniquely theirs.

The perfect sunset is one of life’s simple pleasures; all that is required are two basic elements: the sun, and a vantage point from where to admire it. At ALLURE, the new, luxury condominium to rise 32-stories over the glistening Caloosahatchee River in historic downtown Fort Myers, perfect sunsets are standard.

When complete, the “Amazing” residence layout of this architecturally-stunning building will have a northwest exposure, with unobstructed views of the tranquil sinking sun. In addition, this floorplan is designed as a pass-through home that also offers southeast views, which means residents can see both sunsets and sunrises from the comfort of their home.

More than breathtaking views, each of these residences offers an incredible amount of living space. The “Amazing” layout features three bedrooms and three baths, and measures a generous 2,322 square feet in total interior space, with an additional spacious, 524-square foot terrace.

“The width of these units are extraordinary,” explains ALLURE Sales and Marketing Director Barbara Bengochea-Perez. “Measuring anywhere from 41 to 80 feet wide, these residences are much wider than the ordinary units in the market, which average anywhere from 27 to 37 feet in width.”

Enviable residence features at ALLURE include porcelain flooring, natural gas ranges, double oven, and quartz countertops in chef-inspired kitchens. All residences feature private entrance elevators, and these two floorplans also include two assigned spaces in a covered garage with 24-hour controlled access.

ALLURE also boasts an array of resort-style building amenities: a peaceful, landscaped riverfront promenade; private screening room with theater-style seating and cutting-edge audio visual equipment; state-of-the-art gym; pool deck with heated cascading infinity-edge pool overlooking the water; “Allure Yours Senses” rooftop gardens; social gathering rooms with fireplace, billiards, game tables; Bocce Ball and barbecue grills on the rooftop, Pickleball by the pool, and many other luxury features.

To learn more about ALLURE, call (239) 500-JAXI (5294) or visit the sales gallery at 1300 Hendry Street in Historic Downtown Fort Myers. Online at www.allureluxurycondominiums.com.
