

EIGHTH DAY.

Miss Hayward has had bad, bad news to-day. Mrs. Lindsey is much worse. Miss Gordon, who lives with them, writes, that the doctors have no hopes, and that every one thinks she will never get well.

I cannot write anything to-day in my journal; my heart feels quite sick with sorrow for poor Miss Hayward; and yet, if God really has written down in His book that Mrs. Lindsey is to die, perhaps he has written down too, to send some very kind friend, to take care of her poor little boys and girls; for He says, "Leave thy fatherless children, I will keep them alive."
