

R: No, you plant them in the daytime, you know. That's when the moon is dark night, they call it. That's the old saying that we used to say way back yonder farming, years ago, daddy would say, Well, we've got to plant peanuts, these dark nights in April

P: Uh huh.

R: Dark night in April. Used to plant _____ That was what we was all taught through _____ and we've had little things turn up here. Me and the boys get plowing in the field or planting, he'd come in and say, Daddy, let's plant so and so, we got _____ We ain't going to have any _____ the field, watered the plants and seeds up there. Well, you go plant a few around, four rows, so he _____ planted them four rows and the next week I went to all the trouble to have _____ went to all the trouble to reset them back up and he just made all _____ about his field was so pretty when he come up a growing. _____ hard and knotty and come up there _____ and fertilizer and so pretty quick I went down there and fertilized it. Well, I got _____ vines of squash as big as mine. Heh! He couldn't believe me _____ we never picked the first pea out of his patch _____ you could just pick them right _____

P: Uh huh. Gee, that's something.

R: There's a lot of business planting _____ toward the last of the full moon. I always _____ the moon.

P: Is the full moon itself a good time to plant anything?

R: Ma'am?

P: Is the full moon itself a good time to plant anything?

R: No. Don't I, I never did like to plant nothing on the changing moon.

P: Uh huh.

R: When the moon change, don't plant nothing.

N: _____

R: _____ now corn does all right planting of the full moon.