

P: Uh huh.

R: Watermelons, _____ you want a lot of vines, _____

P: Like squash and....

R: Anything you want a good big bunch or _____ or anything, you know, that'll make a big vine, _____ the moon, _____ go under the moon on the _____

P: Uh huh.

R: _____ better if it's got a big vine to support them, you know.

P: Uh huh.

R: But something like peas, you don't want, you need the peas not the vine.

P: Vine.

R: Yeah.

P: Exactly.

R: If you was going to plant them for hay that'd be a different thing, if you going to farm, cut the hay and bale it _____

P: Well, when you were young, did your daddy also go by the signs or did he just go by the moon?

R: For the moon, mostly the moon, you know.

P: But a little bit by they signs.

R: A little by the signs was, of course the moon and signs, they work pretty well together, they well together in the same order, but _____ sometime maybe this year, the signs won't be in the same place when the moon's full or new moon or what not, they'll be in a different.... They don't vary too much, but a lot of, most every year, they'll be in a different place.

P: So when you were little, what kind of crops did your daddy raise?

R: Corn and peanuts and cotton, rice, had that old rice, _____ beans, people keep _____ rice, you know, harvest that rice, _____ make a barrel of rice or two, put it away.

P: Rice flour or....