

her very much, but only the day after the mice had nibbled her to pieces something happened which quite took my thoughts away from the loss which my little domestic establishment had sustained. I will tell you about it in the next chapter.