

PARABOLIC.

N old man, bowed down with infirmity, became at last bedridden. His friends condoled with him: one sat by his bed-side and wept.

“Rejoice rather,” said the sick man; “while I was up, my eyes were bent to the earth: now I am down, they are turned upwards—to Heaven.”