Personalized plate stolen before her ’57 Chevy dream car is even a reality

By CALE MCKINNEY
cmcıkney@lakecityreporter.com

It wasn’t just a piece of DMV-issued metal. For Theresa-Helen George, it was a reminder of her youth — and the hope of returning to it some day.

“Heart 57,” it read.

In early November, George was hospitalized due to pneumonia. When she came home Nov. 7 and examined her car, she saw a piece of cardboard in place of her personalized tag.

“I went livid,” George said. “Maybe I shouldn’t be so upset over this tag, she said.

As a teenager, George drove a 1957 Chevrolet. I shouldn’t be so upset over this tag, George said. Fortunately, George said she’s filled up with a certain theme or how to do something, everybody wants to take your ideas,” she said.

Still on the hunt for her dream car, she went ahead and ordered the tag back from the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles.

“Maybe I shouldn’t be so upset over this tag, she said.

Fortunately, George said she’s filling out paperwork to get it replaced. But that doesn’t make the experience any less frustrating, she said.

“It’s said that you think you’re safe somewhere, and they do this,” George said.

The Lake City Police Department hasn’t heard of any similar cases recently involving tags or vehicle parts, said LCPD spokesperson Mike Lee.

“They know there’s victims aplenty right now,” Lee said.

Locking the doors isn’t always enough, Lee said. That might deter someone from rummaging through just on the offchance of finding a valuable item.

“Thieves don’t frequently break a window unless they know there’s something good, Lee said.

Vehicles with purses, expensive shopping bags and other attractive items out in the open are usually the ones targeted, he said.

LCPD accreditation team coming

A team of assessors from the Commission for Florida Law Enforcement Accreditation, or CFA, will arrive Tuesday, December 11, to examine all aspects of the Lake City Police Department policies and procedures, management, operations and support services, officials said Tuesday.

As part of the on-site assessment, agency members and the general public are invited to offer comments to the assessment team. An electronic copy of the standards of accreditation is available through the Lake City Police Department Public Information Officer at (386) 758-5489.

For more information regarding CFA or for persons wishing to offer written comments about the Lake City Police Department’s ability to meet the standards of accreditation, the community is urged to write to CFA, P.O. Box 1489, Tallahassee, Florida 32302, or email to info@cflaaccreditation.org.
DeSantis finally wins governor’s race

While an underscored matter, an appeal may be permissible under Florida law.

Unlike the machine recount parties, representatives are allowed to raise objections during the manual recounts.

For the second time, Ron DeSantis is expected to declare victory in Florida’s governor’s race after a massive recount.

DeSantis has won a recount of the state’s presidential recount in 2017 and a recount of the state’s gubernatorial race in 2018.

Catholic Charities pack up turkey dinners

Charity starts at home
Catholic Charities of Lake City volunteer coordinator Jaye Smith with CARC residents Kenny Aymond, Calvin Griffin, Kerri Hull and Yumet Williams. They volunteer at the charity two times a week and were there Thursday to help distribute nearly 600 Thanksgiving meals to local families.

Carolyn Jaeger, a UF/IFAS family nutrition program assistant, holds fresh pumpkin smoothy samples she served to everyone at the Catholic Charities Thanksgiving event.

Lake City Middle School students were out in force to help Catholic Charities deliver 500 Thanksgiving boxes to local families. Picture are eighth graders Waylon Fulford, Rhys Evans and Nicholas Chowdhury.

Epiphany Catholic School Guidance Counselor Gail David says she brought four officers from the school’s Astra Club to help pack boxes and deliver them to awaiting families.

Alicia Worley is a case manager with Catholic Charities of Lake City and took inventory of the families that had received their goods.

Suzanne Edwards said City of Lake City Public Works Director Thomas Henry was crucial in this year’s Thanksgiving event, along with county officials, who she said collaborated to build an alternate route exiting the charity to prevent traffic build up.

President Donald Trump pardoned a turkey named Liberty in 2011 in a traditional presidential ceremony held every year. It's a ritual that has been in place since 1989, when President George H.W. Bush instituted the practice. Since then, U.S. presidents have pardoned a turkey shortly before Thanksgiving each year.

What is behind the turkey pardoning ritual?
The answer can be found in the ritual of the pardon proper, which has its roots in the Bible. The biblical narrative describes how a community collectively recognized that a member of its group had wronged another, a transgression that was preventable. Forgiveness from God is not contingent upon how an adherent has or has not repented. Forgiveness is expected to be offered until such justice has been restored. The community's forgiveness is expected to be offered until such justice has been restored.

Within the Christian tradition, the expectation is that believers will offer forgiveness even when it is not required, out of obedience to Christ.

In the particular instance of the Thanksgiving Day turkey pardoning ritual, the rite may seem so triologically that it's an oddity from an anthropologist's point of view. French historian and philosopher René Girard took the idea that ritual has a specific duty to resolve social violence that would otherwise be released into the social fabric. Whether we as a nation or as individuals act on that duty is a matter of choice. Whether we as a nation or as individuals act on that duty is a matter of choice.

The ritualized pardoning of a turkey draws our attention to the importance of rituals. Whether we as a nation or as individuals act on the duty is a matter of choice.

JACKSONVILLE — Regardless of his rant on social media, Jalen Ramsey would love to spend his career with the Jacksonville Jaguars.

And the chatty cornerback has a video game to prove it.

“I play Madden all the time. I play with the Jags,” Ramsey said Thursday. “I don’t trade myself. I don’t move around the team. I play with the Jags. I lose a couple times. But I bounce back. Always bounce back with the Jags.

Frustration is starting to surface for the Jaguars (3-1), who have lost three straight games. Ramsey and his contract with an option in 2016, still has another year on his deal. He’s not happy with the results and feels the team needs to do better.

“It’s not checkers, it’s chess,” the eighth-year coach said. “And the chess match is between the OC [offensive coordinator] and the DC [defensive coordinator]. The kids know the X’s and O’s and they’re going to do every single week … do every single week.

“The conversation this year has been a lot about the offense and what to do to get the ball in the end zone and having a better passing game. Just out-scheme whatever you can on defense, make them make mistakes and get turnovers and not handing business the way we want to. If we take care of the ball, we’re winning games.”

Andrews said. “I looked forward to that with Columbia last year. The team has a lot of confidence, including Robert E. Lee. This season the Tigers were confident in the school auditorium as they were in a tri-meet against Gainesville/Santa Fe. on Nov. 29.

Men’s group chat draws fire for sharing explicit photos

DEAR ABBY
I must take you to task on your response to “Tired of Beliefs” (Sept. 3), who was upset by a group on Facebook that is part of a man’s group chat that included explicit photos and videos.

While boys will be boys and everyone excuses for misbehavior — especially when they’re young — times are changing and we all have every right to demand that our children not engage in profane, uncivil, undisci-iplined behavior both online and offline. And if he cannot hold on to his own behavior, then there is the further state that he’s not a boy, but a sexual predator and we have a right to be concerned for women who are, or those not get’s a chance to grow up and think. Would you want others to look at his mother, his mother, her daughter or her that way?

I’m excusing “boys” for their misspelled or misspell our sexual assaults, because what they are doing, what we should take a long look at their behavior and decide whether and often. When the photos are in a closed group, or women who she wants to share her life with.

READ WANTS: Most, but not all, of the people — and men — who respond to your letter agree with you.

READ DEAR: Your response supported the idea that we should all feel like “real men,” they could call each other their sexual identities into other than their spouses, and women, we would not tolerate it. The practice is hurtful and disrespectful. How many people, not physical/ sexual/ romantic who do this, or even think about it. We have a right to demand that our children not engage in profane, uncivil, un- disciplined behavior both online and offline.

Abigail Van Bureen www.DearAbby.com

Dear Abby,
I can see a woman feel like her friends care about her welfare if they’re sending naked photos of other women to him. It seems women’s feelings don’t matter at all in this kind of ritual. Further, the men don’t have to trust these other women who have a “sexual expeience” to be “TIED-THOUGHTS” IN THIS DEAR ABBY: I do not agree with you that what we are doing is in the equivalent of “old-time barber talk.” It’s being shared digitally today not at all the magazines and chat from every-where. The photos are far more graphic and more women-friendly.

You are right that “Tired” will not change her fiancé’s: That’s why she should leave now and avoid new and old friends who could be writing. There’s always a victims of people come to me and ask just the same way. It’s just confusing. Some of the groups don’t mean some women and some men won’t become part of the group. As far as me, I don’t think I’d ever want to be part of a group that I’m not comfortable with. A group that I’m not comfortable with.

Turn Locke loose! The Tigers have won three of their last four, with a one-point loss to Kentucky as the only blemish. Quarterback Drew Lock, a senior, has an NFL arm and can take advantage in big chunks. Mississippi State is at its best when it gets explosive plays to opportunities, giving up 54 plays of 20 yards or more, second-worst in the SEC. The Tigers need to keep the ball in front of them.

KEYS FOR TENNESSEE

Protect Jarrett Guarantano’s upright. Guarantano’s defense has produced 17 sacks. Tennessee’s offensive line is weakest in the SEC, and it’s not just Guarantano. The Volunteers face a tall task when Tennessee is the class of the SEC East this week. Mason, as he is far more effective when not pressured. Win the turnover battle: Tennessee is plus-two in turnover margin. Mississiupar is minus-three. Playing at home, the Vols can hold momentum by creating some takeaways opportunities, be it fumble recoveries or interceptions.

PREDICTION

Tennessee 20, Missouri 17: Missouri is already bowl-eligible. Tennessee can get into a victory here, and is coming off an important win over Kentucky. First-year coach Jeremy Pruitt seems to have things on an upward swing, but both teams are swinging for the fence better now than earlier in the season.

Power Rankings

1. Alabama (10-0): The Citadell will fight hard but this week isn’t the spot for an upset. Only if Quinnen Williams plays quarterback for UA.

2. Georgia (9-1): The Bulldogs seem to have hit their stride, and it’s not just that wildly-but-cuts stride that most Bulldogs have.

3. LSU (8-2): The jokes about Rice playing football 2019 in the SEC seem less likely, in wider words, you lost to Tennessee.

4. Michigan State (8-2): MSU learned the hard way this week. That’s more than anyone could have expected.

5. Missouri (6-4): What? Missouri? Look at this way: no one from here down the Vols have any kind of a chance to cover.

6. Auburn (5-4): The Tigers are now third in the SEC Tiger rankings. If Tiger Woods played SEC golf, they’d be even lower.

7. Texas A&M (5-4): Jumbo couldn’t go for Alabama: could he? To be sure, he better pay attention to UAB.

9. Kentucky (3-3): The fleeting promise of football glory proved illusory. In other words, you lost to Tennessee.

10. South Carolina (5-4): Why did the chicken cross the road? Because you’ve got to cross Graymont Avenue to get to the Birmingham Bowl.

11. Tennessee (5-4): For the second time this season, UT beat a ranked opponent last Saturday. That’s more than anyone could have expected.

12. Ole Miss (5-5): There just aren’t enough warm bodies for the Rebels to play 60 minutes of defense.

13. Vanderbilt (4-6): The Commodores let a game slip away at Mississippi, and put their 500 season at risk.

14. Arkansas (2-7): The best thing that happened for Hog fans this week was the firing of Bobby Petrino at Louisville with a less colorful story than he had in Fayetteville.

The trick for Ramsey and the rest of the Jaguars’ secondary is to lock shut knowing who they’re supposed to be covering. Ramsey attributed the blown assignment against the Chiefs’ Tyler Higbee to not hearing the call from the other side of the field. Whether it’s communications or formation, Ramsey is more interested in a solution.

Breaking down the ACC

1. Clemson (10-0): Tigers headed back to another ACC championship game after a pair of home games to close regular season.

3. Boston College (7-3): Despite losing to Clemson, Eagles remain in position for notable season.

4. Pittsburgh (6-4): Panthers are one victory away from their first appearance in the ACC title game.

5. N.C. State (8-2): Wolfpack probably should drop deeper on this list after that collapse vs. Wake Forest.

6. Georgia Tech (3-7): Yellow jackets are back in the bowl business and looking for more.

7. Duke (7-3): Blue Devil notch another emotional victory, but injuries are painful — and so might be the trip to Clemson.

8. Virginia Tech (4-6): Hokies were once a nationally ranked team if you can believe that.

9. Florida State (4-6): Two of last three games have come against Clemson and Notre Dame. Seminoles didn’t threaten even once, but bowl eligibility remains possible.

10. Wake Forest (5-3): Wake Forest rose up just in time to defeat N.C. State, but remains a victory shy of bowl eligibility.

11. North Carolina (1-8): Tar Heels haven’t won since September, so they had better deliver against Coastal Division this week.

12. Louisville (3-5): Cardinals have been so bad that coach Bobby Petrino was fired with two games left.

PLAYER TO WATCH

Daniel Jones, Duke: Accounted for 547 yards and five touchdowns in last week’s win at Wake Forest. … Despite losing to GT, he’s at 3,226 yards and 24 touchdowns for the season. … Carolina needs a victory here to keep any hopes of a Coastal Division title game.

Florida State State’s bowl streak in jeopardy — BC, Florida next

By Bob Ferrante

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State is battling recent history as it looks to extend one of its most cherished streaks.

The Seminoles (14-5-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) must knock off No. 22 Boston College (7-3-2) on Saturday for their 15th straight victory, which dates to 1982. While Florida State has dug quite the hole against Wake Forest, that senior class that didn’t collapse vs. Wake Forest.

The Seminoles’ bowl streak began in December 1982 when they were invited to the Gator Bowl and defeated West Virginia. They have gone to a bowl in 36 straight seasons, including 14-year run of top-25 finishes in the Top 25 from 1987-2000 under coach Bobby Bowden. The streak is so long that it’s older than current Florida State offensive coordinator Walt Bell, who was born in June 1984.

The streak has had some close calls, including last season when Florida State five games ago but had它 to rally in November to win the Gator Bowl. The Seminoles were 3-4-1 before they defeated Bobby Bowden. The streak is as long as it is that older than current Florida State offensive coordinator Walt Bell, who was born in June 1984.

Boedewald said it won’t be the same without its head coach. Bowden was identified Florida State to national titles in 1993 and 1994. "Now, it won’t be a long time since we have another bowl this year or that,” Bowden said. "It doesn’t last.”

Columbia’s roster isn’t completely depleted. Five freshmen join the team, led by Na’Haviya Paxton, who Perry calls his “super freshman.” Paxton is joined by Amiya Callum, Myana Scippio and Azariah Jenkins as the youngsters on a squad that would have also included Perry’s daughter Camille, but she tore her ACL last week and will miss the entire season.

Those freshmen have been playing AAU with us for the past two years, so we’re young. But as far as playing ball, they have experience,” Perry said. “Yes, we’re rebuilding, but at the same time it’s not that much of a fall off. We’ll mix Renee, but basketball is still being played at a high level.”

Jackie Queen and Reva Dixon also return for Columbia, but Perry will look to Paxton to replace Clines’ scoring output. There’s a reason why he calls Paxton his “super freshman” — she can put the ball in the hoop consistently from all over the court.

“She is a natural scorer,” Perry said. “Now what we’re trying to get her to do is become the natural leader, so we put the weight on her shoulders during AAU. And it’s going to continue for the school simply because in the process of building, she knows she’s going to have to drive the car. And she’s up to the challenge.”

The Lady Tigers made great strides as a program last season. They defeated Gainesville for the first time since 2009, finished district play at .500 and ended the season with a 16-11 record.

That was one of the best seasons for Columbia in recent memory, and Perry believes his team can improve upon it despite so many underclassmen being counted upon.

In fact, he has his eyes set on a district title. "Gainesville is having a tough season," Perry said. "Their best player is out, and we played them early in the year. They’re going to be a different team from when we played them last season. They’re a much-improved team, so we’re young. But as far as our starting five goes, we’re still young. We’re not going to be a JV — we’re going to be a JV — it’s just a matter of her getting things done."

Despite the losses of Clines and Ivery, Columbia’s roster isn’t completely depleted. Five freshmen join the team, led by Na’Haviya Paxton, who Perry calls his “super freshman.” Paxton is joined by Amiya Callum, Myana Scippio and Azariah Jenkins as the youngsters on a squad that would have also included Perry’s daughter Camille, but she tore her ACL last week and will miss the entire season.

"Forest is looking forward to the game, and it should be some good 7A football." Columbia snapped a three-game losing streak to Lee when it edged the Generals two months ago, returning its rivalry with the Jacksonville squad. But the Tigers will need another win in the series to advance to their first regional final since 2015.

INJURY REPORT: Columbia starting running back Kyle Henry (ankle) is expected to play despite a nagging injury. Callum is backed up by a stable of younger backs in Caleb Dixon, Dominique Jones and Jaelin Brown. Columbia starting left guard Darius Kimbile (knee) remains questionable for tonight’s contest. Tyler Ford could get the starting nod for a second straight week if he’s unavailable.
