"The long march home"
The following was taken from a speech made by Senator Barack Obama's speech given at Fort Bragg, N.C., on how the United States is prepared to wind down its military presence in Iraq. "I'm glad it's over," he said. "…With this withdrawal, the war in Iraq will be over for us. Iraq's future will be in the hands of the Iraqi people..." Obama also said that the U.S. has paid a heavy price in terms of lives and resources. "We've paid a heavy price in terms of lives and resources," he said. "Our troops have served four tours of duty, with thousands of Americans killed or wounded. It's been a difficult and expensive war for our country and our people." Obama also said that the U.S. has learned important lessons from the war in Iraq. "We have learned a lot from the war in Iraq," he said. "We've learned how to build a new future in the Middle East and beyond. We've learned that if we build a better world, we can lead a better life." Obama's speech was well received by the audience at Fort Bragg. "I'm very glad it's over," he said. "…With this withdrawal, the war in Iraq will be over for us. Iraq's future will be in the hands of the Iraqi people."

Marmish named to state commission

United Way Worldwide in Alexandria, Va., has announced John Marmish as a new member of their nationwide Board of Directors.

Marmish, an executive in Citrus County, will serve on the board for three years.

The announcement was made on Monday, Dec. 5.

Marmish has been named to a regional task force to identify new opportunities for the district.

Viewfinder change coming in January

Citrus County Chronicle will change the weekly television section, viewfinder, into a monthly feature for subscribers who receive the section.

The reformed section will include expanded reporting and writing, as well as featuring interviews and more. The change is expected to give the section an increased number of non-paid subscribers and increase the visibility of the section.

On Jan. 8, and Jan. 15, all subscribers will receive a copy of the revamped section, and then the section will be distributed in continued delivery along with other content.

The 48 suspects are alleged to be part of a nationwide investigation.

The six-month investigation, working with the state of Florida, included Attorney General’s Office of the Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Bondi, Florida Attorney’s Office, Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Florida Highway Patrol, and Citrus County Crime Center.

The arrests were made in conjunction with the state’s work to combat child predators.

“Every year we are seeing a dramatic rise in the number of cases coming to our attention,” said Attorney General’s Office of the Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Bondi.

“TSA is committed to working with other law enforcement agencies to make this a team effort,” Attorney General’s Office of the Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Bondi.

The 48 suspects were arrested in the Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Bondi.

What to do about a shoplifting problem?

TO THE EDITOR—

While perusing the newspaper I came across a letter from someone who was appalled that people would shoplift.

I wrote to say that I was appalled too. We all know that people can be greedy and stupid, but I would not have thought that such behavior would be so widespread.

I would suggest that we all try to be more understanding of the people around us. We all have our problems and we all make mistakes. We should try to help each other when we can.

Who should pay for the new school?

TO THE EDITOR—

I was interested in the letter from a resident who was opposed to the new school.

I think that the new school is a good idea. It will provide a much-needed facility for our community.

I would suggest that we all try to get involved in the school planning. We should try to make sure that the school is built as we want it.

The federal regulators’ rejection of the merger comes at a time when Progress Energy has been working toward a plan to repair cracks in the retaining wall that has caused the nuclear reactor to be kept offline for more than two years.

“The mitigation proposal does not remedy the proposed transaction’s adverse effects on competition,” the FERC ruling said.

In August 2010, near the time the FERC action is likely, Progress added 6 cents to $54.49. Duke’s commitment to the merger was demanding too many sacrifices. It’s too early to say at this point what will happen, Fremont said.

The federal agency in September questioned the deal’s impact on customers in North and South Carolina. Regulators suggested that the companies consider a number of measures that would diminish their influence, such as selling power plants, building new transmission lines or giving up control of their transmission system to a regional operator. The companies responded last month with a plan to sell off too-costly or fixed-price wholesale buyers in their Carolinas territories.

The order will delay the deal by about three months, at least. It said the companies also may walk away from the deal at this point, deciding that the government is too demanding of too many sacrifices. It’s too early to say at this point what will happen, Fremont said.

In all our meetings with state regulators, who have told us about their commitment to Citrus County and to completing the repairs to the facility here,” Burton said. The FERC action is likely to delay the merger’s stated target for completion and could require changes the companies find small.

A Duke spokesman said the companies reviewed the order. It wouldn’t comment if it affected Duke’s commitment to the merger.

Utilities & Co. analyst Paul Fremont said the companies’ next move will be to try to close the agreement to sell their power plants and decide what models can be sold. Any proposed sale must be reviewed by state regulators, who would need to guarantee that it wouldn’t affect pre-merger rate levels for utility customers.

Fla. Supreme Court seat seeks 7 more judgeships

Funding may be tough

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court asked Wednesday for $75 million to fund 10 new judgeships, most of which would come from remittances to the state coffers. He also mainly

The court's $75 million request is well within its $90 million budget, but it's not possible to fund the seats through other means.

While some caseloads have increased, the directors of the state's county judicial councils and the state's 20 judges have agreed to support the budget shortfall in hopes of increasing the number of judges in the future.

Lawmakers aren't yet anticipating another budget increase to fund the judgeships, but there is a possibility that the state could increase the number of judges in the future.

The court also had a budget that exceeded the state's budget because of a history of financial difficulties, according to the court.

Cubano-Americans eye travel limit budget amendment

MIAMI — Luis Diaz claims there is no U.S. immigration policy that will ever work, and he believes the Cuban government's policies have been the cause of the problem.

But still, he can't understand why the Obama administration is limiting the ability of Cuban-Americans to travel to Cuba or to send money to family there.

Diaz, a Cuban-American who owns a Miami-based company, said he has been traveling to Cuba for nearly a decade and sends at least $2,000 per month to his family in Cuba.

Since taking office, President Obama has eased some travel restrictions, but Diaz said the ability of Cuban-Americans to travel to Cuba and send money to family there is still limited.

Lawmakers are again weighing a budget increase to fund the judgeships, and Diaz said he believes the state could increase the number of judges in the future.

Although there are debates on the budget and the need for a new budget, it is important to note that the Alabama Supreme Court has been working on the issue of the state's budget for several years, according to the court.

Detroit — It’s the end of an era for the small pickup in the United States. Ford announced the end of Ranger production at its Texas plant, making the Ranger the last of the four domestic truck manufacturers to stop making small pickups.

Small pickups have their problem. The Ranger started to lose its fuel economy edge as autos manufacturers replaced it with more powerful V6 engines. The Ranger, which offers a four-cylinder engine, can get up to 25 miles per gallon on the highway. But an F-150 with a more powerful V8 can get 22 miles per gallon. The end of Ranger production means the closure of the St. Paul, Minn. plant where it’s made.

The plant has produced more than 8 million Ranger pickups since 1982 when it was introduced. The Ranger was the first American-made midsize pickup truck, and it started a virtual trend for small pickups. In the early 1990s, sales of the Ranger increased dramatically, and by 1995, the Ranger had become the top-selling pickup in the United States. However, sales of the Ranger have been sliding ever since. Today, the Ranger has a market share of 2 percent of the market.

Ford recently announced that it would end production of the small pickup to focus on more profitable vehicles. It decided to make the Ranger for one more model year so that customers can continue to purchase the vehicle. The last Ranger pickup is scheduled to roll off the assembly line on Thursday, July 28, 2011.

New YorK — Investors shifted their attention from Europe to the U.S. on Thursday, pushing stocks higher on jobless claims and manufacturing reports. The weekly U.S. jobless claims average rose 45.33 points, or 11.7% from the previous week. Dow had lost 380 points over the past three days, but today's reports that Europe's latest plans to keep its country out of trouble could not completely quell the fears (from Europe), but today's reports that Europe's latest plans to keep its country out of trouble could not completely quell the fears.

Before the market, the Federal Reserve reported that the number of foreclosures and unemployment benefits dropped sharply to 16 million, below the trend level since May 2007. That's a sign that if banks are easing, a first step toward reducing the unemployment rate, which increased 0.9% last month.

Investors were also watching the Federal Reserve of New York, which was forecasting regional manufacturing company sales to remain at record levels. That was far more bullish than was being expected. A similar report, the Philadelphia branch of the Fed also anticipated.

Job market improves

WASHINGTON — The outlook for the job market looks brighter. Far fewer people are seeking unemployment benefits than just a few months ago — a sign that layoffs are falling sharply. The number of people applying for benefits fell last week to the lowest level in more than four years. The Labor Department said Thursday that 384,000 people applied for unemployment benefits last week. That's down 5,000 from the previous week and 27,000 from the same week a year ago. It's the lowest level since May 2007. The Labor Department also said the number of people applying for unemployment benefits for at least a second week fell last week to 2.8 million, the lowest level since December 2007. Europe's troubled banks face squeeze

Paris — Europe's banks are being squeezed from all sides, with funding costs rising and the government debt on the radar. They're paying higher interest rates on their bonds, and many investors want them to build big enough safety cushions against future potential losses. The banks share the blame or Europe's debt crisis. They enabled governments to pile up massive debt in the years dating to the 1950s. They provided the needed to keep the world's economy afloat. Without them, there can be no recovery. For Europe's banks, the crisis is far from over. They are in a race to the bottom to find new ways to survive the crisis. Many are already too risky for investors to buy. Some analysts believe the European banks will change their strategy and focus on making more loans to companies and households. The credit ratings of five major European banks were downgraded this week.

L.A. baby among world’s smallest

In a stunning medical milestone, Melinda Star Guido, born to Melissa and Austin Guido, lived to her original Thursday in late August and is believed to be the second-smallest baby to survive, but doctors are preparing to send her home by New Year’s.

Melinda was born prematurely at 24 weeks in late August and is believed to be the second-smallest baby to survive in the U.S. and the third smallest in the world. She spent the early months confined in an incubator in the neonatal intensive care unit at Loma Linda University Medical Center in San Bernardino, Calif.

Chimp research soon to be limited
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government on Thursday said it would restrict new uses on chimpanzees in medical research, after a prestigious scientific group recommended that experiments with chimpanzees come to a close as soon as possible.

A top federal health agency agreed that science has advanced enough that the chimpanzees would no longer be needed to help develop new treatments.

The Department of Health and Human Services said in a statement that it would “be permit-free to conduct new funding for research involving chimpanzees.” It said the review panel will still review about 37 ongoing projects in which chimpanzees may be used.

“Chimps’ similarity to humans in brain development and function make them uniquely important to medical research,” said Collins. “But they are also a special species, and we have a responsibility to protect them.”

These apes’ genetic closeness to humans has long caused a “vaccine for hepatitis B, for example, to be developed and tested for safety and efficacy in chimpanzees,” said Collins in a statement.

By contrast, human volunteers would have been needed in a trial to test whether a hepatitis B vaccine works. The chimpanzees have been indispensable to that research.

The government said it was taking the action immediately so that more than 150 research projects involving chimpanzees, currently in progress, could be completed. The government estimated that the activity accounts for about 1,000 chimpanzees, with about 550 in federal institutions and the rest owned by universities or private research institutions.

“This action will further protect the world’s remaining chimpanzees while allowing for the continuation of important research,” said Collins.

The government’s decision was in response to a recommendation by the Institute of Medicine, a prestigious scientific group. The institute reviewed the government chimpanzee research and made the recommendation.

The institute said that chimpanzees’ genetic closeness to humans made them uniquely valuable to medicine, but that there were more effective alternatives for testing potential treatments.

“The chimpanzees are no longer needed for these experiments,” said Collins, who also heads the National Institutes of Health.

The government said it was also giving the National Institutes of Health, which oversees the research, 24 months to complete the transition to other animals.

The government said existing projects will be allowed to continue for 24 months, and the government will also conduct an analysis of chimpanzee research and make plans for the future.

The administration, which has been criticized for its treatment of chimpanzees, also announced that it would “fully and honestly disclose to the public the number of chimpanzees used in research.”

The government has been criticized for its treatment of chimpanzees, which were used in painful experiments for decades before the 1970s.

Howard doesn’t back off trade demand to Magic

Associated Press

Orlando Magic center Dwight Howard has reportedly told a business associate that he’s still intent on being traded by the team. The move was being prevented by the team because it wanted to convince Howard to stay with the franchise, sources said.

“I don’t think anybody can keep from looking at trade options,” said one source close to Howard. “It’s not a matter of if, it’s a matter of when.”

Howard has requested a trade from the Magic in recent months. The team has been reluctant to deal with him, but sources said Thursday that the team has made it clear that he will be traded if he continues to demand a move.

Howard has been a free agent since he left college, and he has been looking for a new team to play for. He has been linked to several teams, including the Los Angeles Lakers and the Miami Heat.

The move to trade Howard has been met with mixed reactions from fans and the media. Some have praised the team for standing firm, while others believe the team should trade Howard to get a better player.

The move could have a big impact on the NBA landscape, as it would free up a lot of salary cap space for the Magic. It could also lead to other trades being made, as teams look to acquire the assets that would be available.

However, it’s unclear what the Magic will get in return for Howard. Sources said the team is looking for a young player with star potential, but it’s unclear if any teams are willing to part with that kind of talent.

Word of the trade request has spread quickly around the league, and it’s led to speculation about where Howard might end up. Some have suggested that the Lakers could be a good fit, while others believe the Miami Heat could use a veteran center.

The move could also have implications for other free agents, as they consider their options. Some have said they would consider playing for the Lakers, while others believe the Heat could be a better spot.

However, it’s unclear if any free agents will be willing to play for Howard, as he has been known to be difficult to play with. It’s unclear if the Magic will be able to find a trade partner who is willing to deal with him.

What started as a simple idea from a former Citrus High School student is now an annual event that helps raise money for a specific type of cancer.

The fourth annual Breast Cancer Awareness Game between the Citrus River and Citrus girls soccer teams was held at the Citrus High School softball field on Thursday, Oct. 13.

The game was played to raise money for the Breast Cancer Research Foundation, and it was a huge success.

The event was started by former Citrus High School student Candace Reyes, who was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2010.

She wanted to do something to help raise money for the cause, and she came up with the idea of having a breast cancer awareness game.

The Citrus County YMCA is now taking registrations for its Youth Basketball and Cheer League, which is open to children ages 3 to 16. This will be the second year the league games will be hosted at the Key Training Center in the Chet Cole Life Enrichment Center gymnasium.

Because of the popularity of last year’s league, the YMCA has increased the season to 10 weeks this year. The Y has also added additional age divisions that will cover ages 3 through 16, so youths of all ages will be able to enjoy participating this season.

Leagues for six-week age divisions, including both basketball and cheerleading, will be sent to parents the first week in January. Practices for a few of the age divisions will take place at CRST School on Educational Path in Largo, and others will be at the Key Training Center.

The Citrus County YMCA is also looking to expand offerings due to demand. Practices for a few of the age divisions will be at the Key Training Center.

Club's to have Christmas camps
Boys & Girls Clubs of Citrus County Christmas Camps will be Dec. 19, 20, 21, 22, 27 and 28, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. All games will be on Saturday at the Key Training Center Gym. Registration for boys is open now through Jan. 6. The league cost is $50 per child for both basketball and cheerleading. There are three holiday games for each week that players will purchase a uniform with the Citrus County YMCA. Scholarships are available through the YMCA’s Open Sports Financial Assistance Program. To apply for financial assistance, please contact the YMCA office.

Volunteer coaches are needed. Background screening is required and provided by the Citrus County YMCA. Sponsors are also needed, and sponsor names will be printed on team shirts.

For questions, stop by the YMCA office in the YMCA Office in the YMCA Building at 100 W. Main St. in Crystal River. The cost is $50 per child.

The game is now going strong and has spawned breast cancer awareness games for volleyball and softball among Citrus County's schools.

"We have some great groups of athletes who have been affected by breast cancer," Ekeli said. "We're playing for them as well."

Ekeli said both players have been driven by the loss of a loved one to breast cancer. Ekeli has lost a aunt and a friend to breast cancer. She has also been given the opportunity to be part of an important cause.

"We want to give back and make a difference," Ekeli said. "It's a way to give back to the community and the school."

Ekeli said the team has been able to make a difference in the community.

"It's exciting that my dad was given the opportunity to see us play in this tournament," Ekeli said. "He deserves to be able to see us compete at a higher level, and the CF team is working hard to prepare for this event."

Two of Fagan's high school players, Cayden Underwood and Gillion Morgenstern, both of whom were on the national team, will be attending the game.

Dance school to perform ‘Coppelia’ this weekend

For the 21st year, Victoria’s School of Dance will hold its annual recital. In years past, dancers have presented fall recitals and a performance of ‘Nutcracker,’ but this year, the dance school’s director, Shalyn Barker, co-owner of Victoria’s School of Dance, said ‘Everyone does something like the ‘Nutcracker,’ so we wanted to do something a bit different.’

This 19th-century story originally had four toys in the story, however, Barker and her students performed a ‘bit different’ version of ‘Coppelia.’ ‘Coppelia’ has a cast of 40 roles. ‘I incorporated more toys into the toy store for a different feel,’ Barker said. ‘We are aiming at a Christmas feel, and so the three acts are to the point and only 20 minutes long.’

The performance is going to be a comedy, as the villains go into the toy store to play a prank.

Several of Barker’s students hail from Dunnellon or Citrus County. She said her studio is partnering with Valdosta School of Dance for this recital.

For more information, call 572-489-6756.

Santa Claus arrives at the state park on their-will-don pink pewter boot. The annual event, hosted by the Friends of the Rainbow Springs State Park, continues Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Gates open at 6 p.m. and the event wraps up at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $5 for those 5 and older.

KAREN KENNEDY, Special to the Chronicle
If you assume playing and enjoying big band and ‘40s is just for the old, think again. The Ealing Swing Band of Inverness is made up of members ranging in age from 16 to 86 and will pack the house at 6 p.m. Friday at Calvary Chapel on U.S. 41 for its 11th annual ‘Swing into Holidays’ dance and concert with dancing.

The band’s three tunes are Glenn Miller’s ‘In the Mood’ and the Andrews Sisters’ ‘World War II hit, ‘Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy.’

In addition to the horns, including saxophones, drums, guitar, vocals and piano are featured. ‘Actually a Swing Band will play the music that you want to hear,’ founder and director Ricky Olpinski said. ‘We cover a lot of different music, and we have different arrangements, including a variety of swing tunes. We do it for fun.’

This year’s attendees include lots of songs of the Big Band, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Rosemary Clooney and Nat King Cole, she said. Holiday music includes such tunes as ‘Have a Cool Yule,’ a medley of ‘Santa Claus is Coming to Town’ and Bing Crosby’s ‘White Christmas.’

If you assume playing along with ‘Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas,’ said来宾, who ‘occasionally sits in on trumpet or trombone.’

The band is comprised of Inverness residents and a handful of the music-making Attabox Band of Inverness.

The band also performed at Calvary Chapel on U.S. 41 and the Lake City Senior Center.

Once again, Rainbow Springs State Park will host its annual Santa Over the Rainbow. For the 21st year, Victoria’s School of Dance will perform ‘Coppelia’ at 2 p.m. Saturday at Citrus. Tickets are $12 per person, $6 per child. Lecanto. Tickets are $12 per person, $6 per child. Lecanto.

Music group Sue Ann Reichelt, Herb Reichelt, Greg Thomas and Tom Lotch perform at annual Santa Over the Rainbow.

Dear Annie,

I've written to you before, but this time I want to send the word out to three grandbabies. One is historically related, and the other two are my daughter's stepchildren from two previous relationships. The oldest child currently lives with his father. The middle child lives with his father until this weekend, and then the dad is supposed to re-enter his life and split his attention.

Lest we forget, they have lots of money and want to make up for lost time, so they shower this child with gifts, toys, clothes and special trips. We are showering Christmas.

The older boy will get lots of stuff from his paternal family, and the middle boy will get a huge windfall, but the youngest child will get only the small amount we can afford. I will spend the same amount of money on all the children because I trust my granddaughters to do the same.

The problem is, the two older boys look down on the presents from us because they aren't as good as what their paternal grandparents purchase. And this makes the youngest boy feel slighted.

Isn't there a way we can compete with the other grandparents, so please stop beating yourself up because the boys' envy? I've written to you before, and I once again step up to the plate to help get it. What are they afraid of? — Trying for Lost Time

Dear Friend: There is no way you can compete with the other grandparents, so please stop being competitive for your children. Envy swells with their return. As his entry is also not well publicized, they will need to make sure his children feel fine about the visit. And I get along fine with them.

Dear Spokesman:

They may be amicable with our neighbor, but I must be reminded that their ages, bodies will feel inadequate and unsuitable. They may contract an STD, or you will lose interest once they have slept with them. We suspect the neighbors may be infecting them with their responses. They may not be well-off, but often reject from the idea of sex. They enjoy the curtailing and partial, but it is not a right.

Dear Spokesman: As I feel this way, we will send a message that will make them feel good, by all means.

Dear Spokesman: “Rabbed,” we also had an issue with our neighbor when we installed the first fence. The neighbor came out with a ruler and was flipping it end over end to prove our survey was incorrect.

We can laugh about this now, but at the time, it was ugly. “Tell ‘Rabbed’ once you fence is established, the neighbor will get used to it and perhaps, like our neighbor, will actually compliment them on how nice the yard looks. We can learn to see the old saying, “Good fences make good neighbors.” — B.T.

Dear Spokesman:

I wonder if you are really feeling on top of the world, but you may do a better job of what you are doing. I still love the ladies. They outnumber us by a factor of ten to one.

I always behave like a gentle lady when I go out with a lady, and I always get along with them until the subject of sex comes up. I can later make up for lost time, but I've been at our age for the last 20 years. I have never heard it. Don't you feel it. What are you afraid of? — Loyalty in Spokesman
