C.R. residents pay almost triple for sheriff's services

MATTHEW BECK / Observer

CRISTAL RIVER — Whatever they call it, the so-called ‘rich cows’ are paying about $777 more per cow than the city residents are for sheriffs' services under the city's current police department agreement.

The city sheriff's office took over responsibility for police services in the city of Crystal River in 2004 from the Citrus County Sheriff's Office, which was dissolved.

According to Buddy Grant, captain of the Sheriff's Office, the city and county have had an agreement for two police officers since the sheriff's office absorbed the former Citrus County Sheriff's Office in 1995.

Grant's report reflects only what goes on within the city limits. But the measures also would have a countywide effect on how the county services are distributed.

The school board recently voted to put a bond on the August 2012 ballot that would fund building projects. The bond also includes funds for police and sheriff's services in the county.

It's an unfair tax burden that we are paying more than twice as much as everybody else, but that second patrol car doesn't show up because it is unnecessary, "but I think it is unfair that we are paying what we pay," according to the sheriff's office.

Linda Hallermeyer, area manager for the food service office at Marion County Schools, said the tour of the farm provided her with a great deal of information.

"We're going to teach them about agriculture," he said. "We've got to show these folks where milk comes from and where they can see it evolved."

The farmer said that while his dairy doesn't provide milk products to Marion County Schools, he does provide fruit juices and hopes one day to serve dairy in the district.

Dale McClellan, president of M&B Dairy in Lecanto, stands on one of the dairy cow waterbeds his cows rest on. He says a more relaxed, comfortable dairy cow can produce more milk.

Gov. names new elections chief

Florida Governor Rick Scott on Friday tapped his former elections chief to become secretary of state.

Scott appointed Ken Detzner, a top official for Florida's recount in 2000, to serve as the state's elections chief. Detzner replaces David DiGiovanni, who stepped down last week after saying he would like to see the office return to where it was before the 2000 recount.

"I think it’s been a great honor to serve Florida citizens over the past four years," Detzner said in a statement.

But he also said it was time for a new chapter.

"After four years, I think it’s time for me to do something different," Detzner said. "I’ve enjoyed my time here, but I’m excited to move on to new challenges."

If they had bothered to have done it, people are complaining about the president? Good gosh. I only have 50 characters we have for "pain" in Monday's issue. Promising gain without pain. I've been lucky enough to "be- long to the Y" (the YMCA) — a successful facility in neighbor- hood. There are no birds. Where are they? The issue is really quite simple. Almost everyone claims they love the environment, but a small number don't believe they are preservationists. Of those who do believe they love the environment, some are looking to make a living out of it. Others are in it for the long term, and others are real- istic. The Kennedy Space Cen-

manded Atlantis' final space glafight, Christopher Ferguson, told the more than 100 guests that Atlantic will serve as a "re-

Afghanistan:

Dozens of Afghan civilians, including 12 Afghans, were killed and injured in a suicide bombing in Kandahar province, said the Taliban spokesman. While the Taliban are a network of extremist groups that have gained influence in parts of Afghanistan, their tactics have included attacks on civilians, which they often claim are acts of war. However, it is important to note that the Taliban’s actions are not representative of all Afghan civilians, and that many Afghans suffer under the Taliban’s rule.

Economy:

The German government has doubled its spending on Afghan reconstruction efforts, in a move to increase its presence in the region. The decision comes as tensions rise between the Afghan government and the Taliban, who continue to operate in parts of the country. The increased spending is part of a broader effort by the German government to stabilize the region and build a strong foundation for a future Afghan state. However, the effectiveness of these efforts remains to be seen, as the Taliban continue to pose a significant threat to stability in the region.

Cruise ship:

A report has revealed that 21 cruise ship victims of the Costa Concordia were missing, raising concerns about the safety of passengers on such ships. The Costa Concordia disaster occurred in January 2012, and the missing passengers are of particular concern as they were believed to have been onboard the ship at the time of the accident. The investigation continues, and the search and rescue efforts are ongoing.

Old vs new media:

A blacklisting landing page is displayed on a laptop computer screen Wednesday at the offices of the Pirate Bay’s parent company, The Pirate Bay Foundation in San Francisco. Wikipedia started a 24-hour blackout of its English-language articles, joining other websites in protest of two pending congressional bills— Stop Online Piracy Act in the House and the Protect Intellectual Property Act in the Senate — that are considered by Internet companies to be overly broad and potentially harmful to the Internet. The bills are aimed at protecting intellectual property rights and preventing the online sharing of copyrighted works.

Politics:

Democratic lawmakers were expected to introduce legislation Tuesday aimed at protecting the right of women to choose abortion, a move that could bring the issue to the forefront of the upcoming election. The legislation is likely to face opposition from Republicans, who have been vocal in their opposition to abortion rights. The debate on this issue is likely to continue to be a major factor in the upcoming election, as both parties seek to appeal to their base of supporters.

Environment:

The Republican presidential primary race is heating up, with several candidates vying for the nomination. The race is expected to be a heated one, with the candidates taking positions on a wide range of issues, including the environment. The outcome of the primary race is likely to have significant implications for the future of environmental policy in the United States.

January may not be the most popular time to fish, but much of the weather curve in the water this month has turned our attention to catching spawning bass. It makes sense as the water quickly. Bass are tough critters, but the stress is too much for some and times tough in a bass’ spawning season. They are out of the water and out of sight by the time you find them.

Her participation had been in doubt because of the cold and a warm-up tournament, which is due to start on Sunday in Toronto, where Williams fell ill and collapsed during a practice.

On Wednesday, Williams had an illness test and was allowed to enter the tournament after his doctor decided he was fit to continue.

Williams had chosen to play in Toronto, his first appearance in Canada since the 2010 Davis Cup tie against his countryman Rafael Nadal, after being eliminated in the first round at the Australian Open.

Williams, who has been on the men's tour since 1998, has won a record 19 titles in his career, with his latest win coming at the 2008 Wimbledon championships.

Williams has won two Grand Slam titles, the 2002 and 2008 French Open championships, and was runner-up in the 2006 US Open.

He has also won three Davis Cup titles with his countryman Pat Rafter.

Williams is currently ranked 31st in the world and is playing his 10th Australian Open.

On Thursday, Williams will face American Andy Roddick in the first round.

Williams is a six-time Grand Slam singles champion and has won three Olympic gold medals.

His last tournament appearance was at the 2010 US Open, where he reached the quarter-finals.

Williams is also planning to compete in the Davis Cup, which will start in April.
No. 2 seeded Lady Pirates lose to third-seeded Mount Dora, 4-2

Soccer

Mount Dora — The Lady Lady Pirates girls soccer team saw its 31-game home winning streak in a 4-2 loss at the hands of third-seeded Mount Dora in the Class 3A regional quarterfinal on Monday night.

Mount Dora players left the field at 3:15 p.m. with their team winning, 4-2.

The Lady Lady Pirates lost to Mount Dora for the first time in program history. The Lady Lady Pirates were the Region 4-3A champion and they had not lost at home in the past two years.

Patriots blow out Pirates

The Houston Texans are the NFL's worst team, and they are struggling to find a win.

But the Houston Texans' loss to the Green Bay Packers on Sunday night was especially painful for the team. The Packers beat the Texans, 17-0, in a game that was notable for its lack of touchdowns and points.

The Texans have struggled all season, and they have yet to win a game in December. They are 0-7 in their last seven games.

The Packers, on the other hand, are 6-0-1 in their last seven games and have won four straight games. They are also one of the few teams that have made the playoffs this season.

The Texans' loss to the Packers was their seventh straight loss, and they have not won since a 20-17 victory over the New England Patriots on Nov. 1.

The Packers have scored more points in each of their last four games than the Texans have scored in any of their last 10 games.

On the field, the Packers wereContain

The Pirates shooting woes continued as they lost to the Rangers, 5-2, on Monday night.

The Rangers scored the first two goals of the game, and the Pirates scored none. The Pirates had 29 shots on goal, but they were unable to convert them into goals.

AP thinks Giants, Pats will meet in 2012 Super Bowl
Associated Press

Get ready for the rematch. The Super Bowl rematch, not the Har- rah's Bowl. For a Super Bowl redux to happen, you need another huge rout this time, saw that happen in 1980 when the Los Angeles Rams shocked the Minnesota Vikings, 32-14, in Super Bowl XIV. Now, when you're discussing the Giants in the big game four years ago, you're going to get a lot of Tebow references.

New York Giants (plus 3 1/2)

It's hard to top what the Super Bowl-winning Giants did, but you can get close.

The Giants (11-5-1) outplayed the San Franci- sco 49ers in the NFC Championship Game last Sunday, and you ask yourself why it might happen again. The only lockout and a 49ers defense that has struggled mightily through injuries in two of their last four regular-season games.

This year, the Giants want to do it again with quarterback Eli Manning instead of Tebow. They want to win it all. They want to win the Super Bowl. They want to win it with a record-setting run game, with a defense that has been the best in the league for most of the year, and with a balanced offense that can score at will.

Ravens (minus 3 1/2)

The Ravens are the only team in the league with a perfect record (12-0) this season. They have won all six games by at least 10 points, and they have the league’s best defense, allowing only 10.8 points per game. They also have the league’s best offense, averaging 35.3 points per game. They have a balanced offense with a strong running game, a potent passing attack, and a solid defense.

The Giants are fourth in the league in points scored (30.5 per game) and third in yards gained (401.3 per game). They have a strong running game led by running back Brandon Jacobs and a balanced passing attack led by Manning and wide receivers Victor Cruz and Hakeem Nicks. Their defense is also strong, ranking second in the league in points allowed (19.9 per game) and third in yards allowed (321.9 per game).

The Super Bowl rematch would be a classic matchup of two teams with strong defenses and balanced offenses. The Giants would have the edge in the running game, while the Ravens would have the edge in the passing game. The game could be decided on special teams, with the Giants having the edge in punt returns and the Ravens having the edge in kick returns.

The game would be a great opportunity for the Giants to prove they can win a Super Bowl with Manning, and for the Ravens to prove they can win one with Joe Flacco. It could be the ultimate test of which team is the best in the league.

Denver Broncos vs. San Francisco 49ers

Baltimore Ravens at New England Patriots

Baltimore Ravens (7 1/2) vs. New England Patriots

The AFC title game shapes up in a classic matchup of opposing of- fensive and imposing defensive. In the Denver Broncos offense led by Tim Tebow, they have all kinds of yards and points available. In the Patriots defense, the offense has all the edge.

This season, the Patriots defense has allowed only 14.3 points per game, ranking them third in the league. They have a solid line led by Mario Williams, a strong secondary led by Aqib Talib, and a stingy pass defense.

The Broncos offense, on the other hand, has struggled to find its rhythm this season. They have averaged only 20.2 points per game, ranking them 20th in the league. They have a solid running game led by Knowshon Moreno, but their passing game has struggled with Tebow taking over.

But the Patriots defense has struggled this season as well. They have allowed 10.8 points per game, ranking them fourth in the league. They have a solid defense, but they have been inconsistent.

The Patriots defense has a plus-28 turnover margin and, of course, that =

Fresh, dried, canned or pickled, the rhizome of the Zingiber offici- nal—ginger to root and use—is a hot commodity at the moment.

Used qualify for years to add up to everything from stir-fry to baked breads and cookies, ginger also happens to be a key ingredient for noodles and dressings traditionally eaten for Chinese New Year, the beer celebration of food and family that kicks off next week.

But at the moment the knobby herb has surpassed a bunch of lovely vegetables that are just past their bloom that’s far beyond that celebration, showing up in dressings for soy salad marinades for pricey green soy and fancy cocktails as the foist would end this gingr storm in anything but a ginger-harmonious fashion.

Angelica, chef-owner Sapor is long known for her “Eat what you love” philosophy. “I’d eat all my own weight in the pickled ginger!” she says. “I really enjoy that light burn on the palate. It’s very clean and extremely pleasing for Richter dishes like matzah ball.”

So at his restaurant, he has taken ginger, the ancient herb, and transformed it into a syrup from ginger and galangal (a more spicy ginger) for his cocktails, using ginger for sauces and vinaigrettes and for his keychain for rare fish dishes.

Chef-owner Jason Louis Boston ABCs his finest hour as the ginger in a rebar boston which trace the historical story of ginger. He creates a new drink for his restaurant and now sells it in specialty food stores around the country. UnitedFoods, it’s brewed in Brooklyn and made from fresh ginger and cane sugar.

Thursday Evening January 19, 2012

Dear Annie: I am a relative newcomer to this town. I have a problem to work out. My two adult sons live in their own homes with their two non-married girlfriends. Neither of them pays rent. Nor do they buy groceries or cleaning supplies. They never offer to take their father out to eat. But they do pay for everything special for him. Their father resents these expenses and pays their lunches.

The house is in shambles. The boys' only responsibility is to take out the trash and mow the yard in the summer. They do this grudgingly and not very well. The keys show little respect for their father. They leave beer bottles and dirty dishes all over the kitchen and their shoes, dirty clothes and trash all over the floor. No one cleans a bathroom or vacuum a floor. They are busy working not doing what they want with their friends or going out drinking. One of the girlfriends is always broke and looking for a handout, but she has money to get hammered every weekend. She doesn't lift a finger around the house and has the nerve to tell my boyfriend what to do to make her more comfortable.

My stepmother's behavior is irrational and I am the one with the problem. He believes it is his responsibility to take care of them because they don't have "good" jobs that pay a lot of money. He would never kick them out. We don't live together and never will. I would like to have the boys move out and under these circumstances, it seems to be the only way to straighten things out. Will you help me? I am not only the only one who thinks this situation stinks.
