Sharon Skeele-Hogan recently started her job as director of special events with the city of Inverness.

Featured face for fun

ype a personality. Ball of energy. Hits the floor running. Full of ideas and can't wait to share them.

Meet Sharon Skeele-Hogan, the new director of special events for the city of Inverness. With a background in marketing and sales, she comes to Inverness after eight years as entertainment director for Citrus Hills. She believes life is good and coming to Inverness can only make it better. Here's what she says after her first week on the job.

Back story: I grew up in small communities where downtown was home. After graduating from Brockville High School, I moved to Newmarket, Ontario, to attend York University. After graduating, I worked for Warner Brothers Entertainment and Violator Bureau, where I was a television development marketing director for most of my career.

Why Inverness? It's that small-town feeling with the courthouse and the square and all the parks. It's a stark contrast to the fast pace of Citrus County. Plus, we've already got 315 events underway and the things I do (Inverness Tiffany Events Association) I'm really excited to be here. We have such great businesses here.

Valerie Thiel said I'm really excited about that. At Citrus Hills we do logistical and social events. But, you know, programs, speaking events, major charity events like with SART and the city, or main events like the Gator Bowl. Black Maryland black looking smaller places can get by, but here we have the Fred Dibnah, a black sports team and a black social group, and we're not!!

Now I'm in Inverness and I'm thinking about what's so much magic, it's very hard to say.

To what is "Rockstar?"

Sharon Skeele says, "probably to make sure to look good in your rockstar way."

Tips: "There were six months it'll be learning, how to learn how to learn, and how to learn to learn."

If you want to be a "newset at an balcony and breakfast buffet, an Italian street fair, and the expansion went around it in the different types of music and food..."

Judge rejects new trial in teen burning case

_Brian Jones avoids jail time_

Associated Press

ORLANDO — A judge on Friday denied a teenager's request for a new trial in his hazing death, saying no substantial misconduct occurred to warrant a new trial.

Pam Champion, the mother of Robert Champion, the 20-year-old drum major for Florida A&M University's Marching 100, said she was disappointed in the judge's decision to step up and take the initiative, which should be shared with me.

Champion, who said he was on the bus after being beaten by fellow band members during a hazing ritual aboard a bus parked outside an Orlando hotel, got a sentence of six years in prison Monday.

Brian Jones, 20, a freshman and a drum line member at FAMU, said in a recorded video statement that investigators had been on the bus but he didn't want to say what they were doing. Jones said he was on the bus.

The defendant's mother, Jacqueline Jones, told the court her son was an innocent person and that he shared with me he had been minor, saying: "You and me have shared with me what everyone does... is basically what we're looking for. The whole thing is people being accountable for what they have done."

Champion, who sought the top position in the famed marching band leading dozens who had already endured the hazing ritual. The Marching 100 has performed at Super Bowls and presidential inauguration parades, and some felt the leadership position had to be earned.

Several others who went through it said the punishment was arbitrary, but finally relented last week to allow the trial to proceed. But the whole thing is people being accountable for what they have done...

Champion, who was a vocal opponent of hazing and hoped the case would set a precedent, ordered the hazing ritual. The Marching 100 has performed at Super Bowls and presidential inauguration parades, and some felt the leadership position had to be earned. The whole thing is people being accountable for what they have done.

Election freezes stocks

NEW YORK — The stock market was waiting for the presidential election as much as anyone.

The Dow Jones Stock Market Index, which reached a new high earlier in the day, was volatile between small gains and losses, but by mid-afternoon it seemed they would finish modestly lower. Dow Jones industrial average ended the day down 60 cents to 13,494.

The Standard & Poor’s 500 Index was almost flat, dipping 0.21 point to 1,431.61. The Nasdaq composite index rose 1.70 points to 2,923.11.

The S&P 500 and Dow Jones industrial average averaged virtually flat. The Dow declined 1.02 percent. The Standard & Poor’s 500 Index remained 0.34 percent.

Despite the election, an election expert said Friday that there is a market in a misleading action. That’s when the government is supposed to have made a major move before the market.

Stocks dropped 60 cents to $13.53.

Florida GOP's poll-tax nostalgia

So the legislators simply ex-empted themselves from the law and armed themselves with the power to publish all 11 amend-ments on long lines on election day and possibly discourage some in-terest groups which many lawmakers have been quite vocal about. This is not to excuse lazy vot-ers. The Bureau of Labor Sta-tistics says that a voter spends an average of 45 minutes voting her ballot in the presidential election every four years. So Florida's state government seems intent on making the process even more complex.

Pierre Tristam is editor and publisher of FlaglerLive.com, a non-profit news site based in Palm Coast.

Florida's poll tax is a system of indirect taxation that was used in the United States to tax citizens for the purpose of collecting revenue for the state government. The tax was imposed on all male citizens over the age of 21 who were not exempt from paying it. It was first implemented in Florida in 1895, and it was not repealed until 1966, after the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that it violated the Constitution. The poll tax was used as a means of disenfranchising African-Americans and other minority groups, and it was one of the many discriminatory practices used to keep these groups from voting. The Florida GOP's poll-tax nostalgia is a throwback to these days, when the party used this tactic to try to keep its opponents from voting. The party's current efforts to suppress voting are similar to those in the past, and they are designed to make it more difficult for certain groups of people to vote.

Great service

I am writing to commend Jack Knox for the many years of good service he has given our community over the past 17 years. However, I also am thankful that after announcing his retirement from the board of offices, he would continue to be working through a very significant transition which truly needs his experience and proven leadership. The safety and security of our citizens knows no part affiliation and it is in our best interest to move forward under the guidance and direction of Sheriff Denny.

Where is the love?

I am a senior who has health issues and cannot cut my grass. My neighbors complain about the high grass, but no one has offered any assistance. I also live in a Social Security check and cannot afford to pay anyone to cut it. The saddest part of this situation is that I have a son that won’t cut it unless he gets paid and he refuses to do it at all of the above. My son considers himself a Christian, as do most of my neighbors. I am not sure how I say again, where is the love we are looking for the many years that he has maintained art, music, vocational and high school levels.

What is the record of the Citrus County schools?

This district has received an “A” rating for the past seven years, decreased the dropout rate to 1 percent, increased high school graduation rate to over 80 percent, a 30 percent increase in Advanced Placement courses taken, maintained art, music, vocational/technical educational programs; been chosen one of the 67 districts in Florida to participate in the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation on college readiness, implemented International Baccalaureate Diploma Program for operations is needed now when we go along without it previously. To begin with, the Florida Education Finance Program for operations is down approximately $15 million over the last three years, meaning the county is getting less money from capital outlay while the proposed millage is for operating expenses.

So why is more operating money needed now when we got along without it previously? To begin with, the Florida Education Finance Program for operations is down approximately $15 million over the last three years, meaning the county is getting less money from capital outlay while the proposed millage is for operating expenses.

Verdict sparks outrage in scientific community worldwide

The Italian government has convicted 15 seismologists of negligence and fraud over the 1980 earthquake that levelled the Italian city of L’Aquila, killing nearly 3,000 people. The verdict sparked outrage in the scientific community worldwide.

L’AQUILA, Italy — In a verdict that sent shockwaves through the scientific community, 15 seismologists were convicted of negligence and fraud over the 1980 earthquake that levelled L’Aquila, killing nearly 3,000 people. The verdict sparked outrage in the scientific community worldwide.

The verdict of a state court in L’Aquila on Friday found the seismologists guilty of negligence and fraud for failing to adequately warn the public about the earthquake.

The seventeenth century earthquake was Italy’s worst on record, and scientists had long been divided on whether it could have been predicted.

Scientists have warned that the verdict could have a chilling effect on the study of earthquakes.

The verdict is expected to be appealed, and the convicted seismologists have said they will appeal the decision.

Jojo Grimm has opened a $20,000 auction to help pay his medical bills after a但他 was auctioning off one of his baseball cards for a good cause.

Grimm, a former baseball player, has been diagnosed with testicular cancer. He is hoping to raise enough money to cover his medical expenses.

The auction, which runs from Oct. 13 to 18, features a 1999 Donruss Barry Sanders card. Sanders was a running back for the Detroit Lions and is considered one of the greatest running backs in NFL history.

Grimm said he chose to auction the Sanders card because it’s one of his favorites and because Sanders is known for his charitable work.

The auction is open to the public and proceeds will go directly to Grimm’s medical bills.

Grimm, a 30-year-old from Citrus County, said he feels hopeful about his recovery and is grateful for the support he’s received from friends, family, and strangers.

“I’m trying to stay positive and focus on getting better,” Grimm said. “I know there’s a lot of people who love me and are praying for me. I’m just trying to keep going.”

The enlarged prostate

The prostate is a walnut-sized gland that surrounds the urethra (the passageway through which the urine empties from the bladder) and is just below the bladder. The prostate produces 30 percent of the fluid that mixes with sperm in semen. In men, the prostate can become enlarged, which can cause problems with urination. BPH is found in about 30 percent of men older than 60.

The symptoms of BPH are:

- frequency of urination
- difficulty in starting urination
- difficulties in emptying the bladder
- weak stream
- increased nighttime urination
- urgency to urinate
- straining to urinate
- a need to urinate at night, even after voiding

Dr. Udaya Kumar, department of urology.

The prostate gland has not emptied after voiding. There is no evidence BPH causes prostate cancer, though both conditions occur more commonly with increasing age and race.

The condition is diagnosed by a combination of careful history taking, examination including a digital rectal examination, and a bladder scan to evaluate the amount of urine retained in the bladder.

The enlarged prostate costs

Health care costs

The United States of America has the most expensive health care system in the world, but some costs are in excess of $2 trillion annually, and it accounts for more than 10 percent of the gross domestic product.

This averages out to about $10,500 per person. This is nearly double the closest nation, which happens to be Switzerland.

Most Americans agree that we have the world’s best health care system, but there are some problems, as with any system. Statistics show that, for example, cancer survival in the United States, including breast and prostate beat out even Western European countries.

There are good appraisals of both sides of the health care spending issue, but what both agree is that increased population will mean increased health care costs, and this is a serious concern that we need to pay attention to.

It seems that high health care costs in the United States have multiple causes. We spend a lot of money for medications compared to other countries, and we use a lot more drugs than other countries. In some instances, Americans have become accustomed to “a pill for every ache and pain.”

A pill less toxic than placebo

M r. Smith is an 85-year-old gentleman who was diagnosed with prostate carcinoma almost 15 years ago. He initially was treated with surgery. His prostate was removed, and he did well for 11 years. His cancer returned and spread to the bones and he was started on hormonally active chemotherapy. Though the exact causes of BPH are unknown, it is known that male sex hormones cause the prostate to grow.

The condition is diagnosed by a combination of careful history taking, examination including a digital rectal examination, and a bladder scan to evaluate the amount of urine retained in the bladder.

Food thickeners carries warning for infants

Richard Hoffmann, pharmacist

Food thickeners carry a warning for infants of any age may face an increased risk of developing a life-threatening condition if fed SimplyThick. Since May 2011, the FDA has identified 22 infants who developed necrotizing enterocolitis (NEC), a condition in which tissue in the intestines becomes inflamed and dies, after being fed SimplyThick. Seven of these infants died.

Further study is needed to determine if there is an adult link between consumption of SimplyThick and the development of NEC. But the FDA wants everyone involved in the care of a baby to be aware of the potential risk before recommending whether to feed SimplyThick to a baby.

Symptoms to watch for:
- Bloodied stools
- Greenish-yellow vomits
- Bloody stools

Contact your health care professional if you believe your baby has any of the symptoms listed above or if you have concerns related to using SimplyThick.

You or your health care professional may report side effects related to using SimplyThick to FDA’s MedWatch by:
- Completing and submitting the report online at www.fda.gov/medwatch/report or by calling 1-800-FDA-0178.
- Downloading the prescription patient’s guide to FDA Form 35006 (or calling 1-800-332-1088 to request the form). Complete the form and mail to:
  FDA Form 35006 (MedWatch Patient Safety Reports)
  5600 Fishers Lane
  Rockville, MD 20857

If you are a health professional, you may report side effects to MedWatch by:
- Faxing it to 800-FDA-0178.
- Calling 1-800-FDA-0178.
- Sending it to medwatch@fda.hhs.gov.

The FDA will use this information to help improve food safety and protect the health of infants.

cause of cancer death in males. Prostate cancer is the most common cancer in men, accounting for over 10% of all cancers in men in the United States. Almost a quarter million people in the United States are currently receiving treatment for prostate cancer.

Fortunately, it is usually treatable, and so it is a highly curable cancer. If detected in a timely manner, it can be cured, and if not, it can be managed.

The treatment for prostate cancer can vary greatly depending on the stage and grade of the cancer.

Radiation therapy is one of the most common treatments for prostate cancer. It involves using powerful beams of radiation to destroy cancer cells and prevent them from growing.

Surgery is another option for treating prostate cancer. It involves removing the prostate gland and surrounding tissue to remove the cancerous cells.

Medical therapy, also known as hormone therapy, involves blocking the production of hormones that can stimulate the growth of prostate cancer cells.

Conclusion:

Prostate cancer is a common and treatable cancer. However, it is important to have regular screenings and be aware of the symptoms to detect it early. People should discuss their treatment options with their healthcare provider to find the best course of action for them.

vancements in technology have made the system more efficient and less expensive to run. We have a new president, and a new and improved version of the system is being installed next month. The new system will be available for use by the public starting in January 2013.

Within the next few years, the system will be upgraded to include a new touch screen interface. This will make it easier for people to use the system and get the information they need.

In conclusion, the new system is a significant improvement over the old system and will provide better service to the public.
Youth’s use of chewing tobacco a concern

I was visiting my nephew over the weekend at college. I happened to notice he had some chocolate back pocket and quickly look it over at my sister and I walked around him. He handed it to one of his friends to hold. I never even noticed it. I was never given an update.

I want to try to do something to help him stop, as I know this can be a cause for real cancer. What can you tell about oral and chewing tobacco, and do you have any suggestions on how to help him stop?

Thanks for your help with this in advance.

Q: First, kudos to you! I like the help you’re providing, maybe more likely to respond to your help than mine. I am new to you know how that one goes?

A: Second, chewing tobacco and all of its related products can certainly cause oral and cancer. They can also cause esophageal cancer and pancreatic cancer as well as kidney cancer. They can cause heart disease, gum disease and change to the oral tissues that can lead to oral cancer. It is a drug.

I have had many patients I have identified as using smokeless tobacco products (the catchall phrase for all these products). As a dentist, it is easy to identify exactly where the product is used, as it changes the color and texture of the tissues it lays against. Once shown to the lay person, they can see the difference between the healthy areas and the affected areas.

Please keep that this young man is likely addicted to the nicotine — specifically the nicotine in the tobacco. Know that it will not be easy for him to stop.

However, if he identifies the need to stop, there are many ways to help.

The National Institute of Dental and Craniofacial Research has a great website for quitting. You can get the publication by searching “Quitting Tobacco.” A guide to quitting.

This is only one resource, but there are many available.

There are many oral cancer survivors who have posted their story on YouTube in order to get others to stop before it is too late. Just do a search and you will find them.

Just be aware that some of these may be overly graphic and may be disturbing, to watch, so use your discretion.

Just letting your nephew know you care and are there for him will mean the world to him. You never know, he may be looking for a way out and you might be the spark that gets things started. Be sure to be supportive, let him know that others have been successful and that you are there for him. Thank you for contacting me regarding this. I hope this has helped you in your support. Good luck.

sioning symptoms-sensing drugs that relax the smooth muscles in the bladder neck and the prostate. These drugs are only for people who have mild or moderate symptoms.

There are two groups of drugs to choose from. alpha blockers, such as tamsulosin (Flomax), terazosin (Bystolic), or alfuzosin (Proscar), and 5-alpha-reductase inhibitors, such as finasteride (Proscar) or dutasteride (Avodart). Alpha blockers can be used on their own, while 5-alpha-reductase inhibitors are used in combination with an alpha blocker in order to minimize the risk of side effects. However, these drugs are not suitable for everyone, so always consult with your doctor before starting any medication.

If your symptoms are severe or if you have not responded to less invasive treatments, your doctor may suggest the treatment of choice for severe symptoms is surgery. Surgery for BPH includes transurethral resection of the prostate (TURP), in which the prostate is removed through a small incision in the bladder neck. In some cases, TURP may be combined with other treatments, such as transcatheter prostate brachytherapy (TPB), which involves the insertion of radioactive seeds into the prostate gland. This procedure is usually performed on an outpatient basis and involves no major surgery. However, it is important to note that TURP is not without its complications and may require a longer hospital stay compared to other treatments.

If you have severe symptoms, you should speak with your doctor about the available options for treatment. Your doctor will be able to recommend the best course of action for you based on your individual needs and circumstances.

Dear Annie,

I recently married Kevin, who has been divorced for four years. He desired to live in his house. I knew we had adjustment issues, but, even so, things didn't seem to be working out.

The house is in terrible shape, although I am trying to keep it up. Kevin likes the place to be "messy," which doesn't mean cleaning. It means throwing stuff into a cupboard or under the bed. Also, all of the furniture is from his first marriage. I want to update a few things, and he won't let me. He says his stuff is good shape.

Everything reminds me of my ex and his previous life. I told Kevin I'd like to have a few things that we selected ourselves. He told me the divorce drained him, and he really has to pay the house off before buying anything new. So I offered to purchase things with my own money. He said no.

When I moved in, we had to buy almost everything we needed. I have drawers of junk from 10 years ago. After five months of living here, I have drawers of junk from 10 years ago. Kevin says we have everything we need. I always say: "My Cupboard." But some of my possessions are in better shape than his and I'd at least like the option of going through them with him and seeing what is worth keeping.

I am just as spousal, and I'm wondering whether this marriage is a mistake. Any advice?

Dear Frustrated,

Kevin doesn't seem to want to work on their relationship or full partnership. The two of you should be able to discuss all issues instead of one of you making unilateral decisions. Kevin is creating an unstable situation, and ask him to come up with some short-term counseling to work on their lives in a more positive way.

Dear Annie: I am tired of vulgar language, especially at work. Wherever my department head becomes frustrated, he thinks it's all right to use whatever words he wants. So if he's upset, he thinks it's fine to spout obscenities by using offensive language. He keeps it up and has not to tone it down. But not much has changed. I'm a quiet guy and keep to myself. I don't like the language. I have to put up with it.
