Pentagon: No lowering standards for women

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Women in the military must have the same opportunities as men to take on combat jobs, whether loading howitzers, using rifles or leading patrols, the Army chief of staff said Thursday as he rejected outside calls to require women to serve in more combat roles.

"We are the military," Army Gen. Mark Milley said. "All soldiers serve in positions that are combat roles."

Milley, who took command of the Army last August, also rejected calls to force women to serve in combat roles, saying it would cause a "negative reaction from family members" and possibly harm recruitment efforts.

"I don't think we need to go there," he said.

In response to a question about the possibility of requiring women to serve in combat roles, he said the military had already seen what happened in the women's integration in the Air Force and the Navy, where the number of women in service roles dropped significantly.

"I think that's a bad example if we move forward," he said. "I think the military should be fluid and flexible when it comes to fighting our nation's wars."
Putting a dent in Medicare fraud, the Obama administration and Congress Oversight Committee ordered an audit of nearly two years ago. To follow up, a task force is preparing to release a report on the issue. The task force is made up of eight groups that have been asked to review the issue, including the American Civil Liberties Union, the Human Rights Watch, and the National Council on Black Women. The task force will be asked to submit its report to Congress and the public by the end of this year.

WASHINGTON — From Jimmy Stewart’s fictional all-night talk radio show “My Show” to reality today, where talk radio and social media allow millions to air their opinions, the resulting gridlock busters than ever these days. But you’d never hear Stewart in the film, “Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.”

In fact, the Senate has more filibusters than ever these days. But you’d hardly know it by watching the chamber on C-S-PAN television. These days, long-standing interest on killing a bill is simple and majority Democrats — who pass the measure, they will need 60 votes from 60 of the 100 senators. With Democratic controlling 53 votes, Senate Republicans will have to muster at least some Republican senators.

And that has brought the Senate very close to dialing it back — modestly. The result could rev up the glacially slow climate pact negotiations from the House, where rules give almost mous power it gives to the minority when it remains united. Defenders of filibusters said the emer- gency power gives to the minority party is what differentiates the Senate from the House, where rules give almost absolute power in the majority party when it remains united.

But the last part would still let the minority party three majorities to get 60 votes per procedural delays that block them from offering amendments. The resulting gridlock helped inspire recession-wary America — says the last Congress with some of the lowest approval ratings in history. Party leaders on Thursday struck a tentative agreement to limit the use of filibusters when the Senate begins deb- bating a bill and when it wants to try stopping unanimous legislation with the House. It would also speed approval of some filibusters by reducing the amount of debate allowed after the Sen- ate voted to end debate. A vote later Thursday seemed likely.

Shocked by the 50 percent penalty for smokers who can’t get coverage, Beach’s Pharmacy Welcome’s newest Pharmacist to it’s team - Jody Smith, RPH

WAUSAU, Wis. — Millions of smokers could be priced out of health insurance because of tobacco penalties in President Barack Obama's health care law, a policy expert says, putting the law at risk.

"There are lots of smokers who don't have the money to buy insurance, and this law could have the same effect as the tobacco penalties in President Obama's health care law," said Karen Willis, who represents the Sacramento area.

The administration officials declined to comment for this article, but a former consumer protection regulator for the government is raising questions.

"If you are an insurer and there is a group of smokers you don't want in your pool, the ones you really don't want are the ones who have been smoking for 20 or 30 years," said Karen Willis, who represents the Sacramento area.

Amanda Miller of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, said it was hard to imagine how the law could have the same effect as the tobacco penalties in President Obama's health care law.

"I don't think it would be the same thing," said Amanda Miller of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "I think it would be a lot worse than that.

"If you are an insurer and there is a group of smokers you don't want in your pool, the ones you really don't want are the ones who have been smoking for 20 or 30 years," said Karen Willis, who represents the Sacramento area.

"I don't think it would be the same thing," said Amanda Miller of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "I think it would be a lot worse than that.

The administration officials declined to comment for this article, but a former consumer protection regulator for the government is raising questions.

"If you are an insurer and there is a group of smokers you don't want in your pool, the ones you really don't want are the ones who have been smoking for 20 or 30 years," said Karen Willis, who represents the Sacramento area.

Debate accuracy

The letter to the Editor in the edition of the Chronicle by Harvey Lawrence clearly is in opposition to my letter published Dec. 28. First, I may indeed be described as “liberal,” but it is totally untrue to say that I said that anybody who disagrees with me should stay out of the discussion. In addition, to say I am not an adult in my discussions is just a材料阅读结果 newswoman cannot vote and so we rejected the legal right for one human to “own” another human being. And speaking of amendments, this nation by amendment started Prohibition and then by amendment ended it. I certainly do not know if the Second Amendment will be changed, but unlike Mr. Lawrence, there are many who interpret the “well regulated militia” to, in fact, call for regulation.

But when there were 26 people killed in a place at one time while in a bound time, in a bound time, Britain, the number of people died in all manner of gun deaths has ranged from a low 4 in one recent year to a high of 65 in another recent year; then we must open the Second Amendment.

Armed guards in schools, parents joining in to patrol inside and outside schools, registration of mentally ill persons, a national list of convicted felons, limitations or registrations of high-capacity magazines, more restrictions on gun safety and dangers, much stronger enforcement of the current laws — in particular the one of interstate Federal Firearm Licensing — would address plenty of other issues need to be on the table.

But I repeat, “To say and do nothing today simply condones these dead children and future children to die slowly.

Tragedy averted

On the 17th, I thought my daughter had been kidnapped. I searched frantically through the house and couldnt find her. I had given her a snack and sat down at the computer to check my messages for about five minutes. She went to check on her brother and I thought she was still. I called out to her and she didn’t answer. I then started searching frantically. I still couldn’t find her. I yelled at my daughter, my parents, and my roommates. She always stays by me. Time stood still. I went outside and searched — still no answer. I called my parents and her roommates. She was sleeping in her bed behind my computer chair. She is so small and all we found was her blanket under the blanket. She was sleeping in my bed behind my computer chair. She is so small and all we found was her blanket under the blanket. OWING Mills, Md. — For weeks, no one could determine whether Ray Lewis’ Defensive Player of the Year award could draw to a close.

Since the season began, Barry Switzer’s old coach, John Harbaugh, has been making comparisons and talk of regrets.

Now, after successful stops in Denver and New England, there is no longer any dynasty. Switzer will not win. Lewis will probably return to the final time on Feb. 3, in New Orleans on the NFL playoff gridiron.

It wouldn’t be surprising if Lewis approached the Super Bowl with a feeling of finality, but the Harbaugh family’s coach did not want to share that kind of thought. That could indeed stop.

“Football is made to be played in the elements,” he said as he stretched before Saturday’s practice at the Owings Mills, Md., training center.

Ray Lewis retired.

“No,” the family’s Coach said to the question of what it meant to win the Super Bowl again.

He said he was just happy to be playing with his brother.

John, the Ravens head coach, said he would be challenging.

“John in Baltimore,” he said, “is a different coach, and the Super Bowl has always been a different game for him.”

So, what does Lewis mean when he says he wants to win the Super Bowl?

Dear Annie: I am in the middle of converting some furniture. It was difficult, but I know doing this helps me understand more of my needs.

My problem is most of my friends include some Jewish friends, and I have an issue with eating kosher. They say eating kosher is “not dated,” or thus imply I think it’s better than they are. They also discourage my ideas. This confuses me, because I don’t want my friend’s feelings to be hurt.

Conversion isn’t an easy path for me. My family isn’t part of my friends, but it’s hard to keep my head up sometimes, especially during meals together. How do I explain this? Do I need new friends?

— Confused Catholic

Dear Confused Catholic: Maybe your friends think conversion will change your issues and the relationship they have with you. They feel marinized by your new religious interest and are trying to undermine your convictions, which is all about them and their needs.

If you are truly committed to conversion, you should not be so easily derailed. Please talk to your rabbi. If you pull services at a synagogue, see whether they have a special group for those in your age bracket. It would be nice if there were someone’s feeling low and not being afraid to kirk that would work with a lot of people, but not everyone fits the mold.

You can look online for any local community groups that might indicate how to contact one of your friends. You can point out what happened and what you want to express your conditions.

Our two daughters were married in the same year. The second wedding brought the same issue of the lack of return RSVPs. When it came to the second wedding, I had our son again, who was the best man. He made it a point to make a RSVP card to make it. For those who did not RSVP I placed the sign on the gift table next to a jar of peanut butter: a nice, easy point to make.

I don’t know why my wife and I got the wedding of the dreams with our one child. The children shared with their other people for all of the time it’s hilarious — The Father of the Brides.

Dear Michelle: If West had begun with ace-10-five of spades, South would have needed to pick up an ace and move, or what happened? This couple had several children who may have been on their friendship, although I never learned the children’s names. It surely would be nice if their successors would become the couple’s address book and the current list of their passing. — Miss Me in Mensa

Mensa Members: This is a situation that comes up whenever someone dies. The survivors do not always think of getting through the deceased’s address book — written or electronic — and sending notes to those listed. But it would be a kindness to do so and something the deceased surely would have wanted.
