Orlando artist creates children’s comic book based in Crystal River

CRISTAL RIVER — At 12 years old, Mandi (no last name) is a student at Crystal River Middle School.

With green, scaled skin, blue hair and pointy ears, she has both a typical middle school student and mythical Nereid, according to her creator Shawn Surface, a former Good Shepherd Lutheran Church food pantry volunteer.

“Kids don’t read books much these days, but they do read comic books,” Surface said in telephone interview.

It was Surface who came up with the idea for the comic book, which was inspired by the "Little Mermaid" and the movie "Lady in the Water" that M Night Shyamalan did years ago.

With Surface’s encouragement, Kohm, 67, will embark on a bicycle trek from Key West to Fort Kent, Maine, this summer.

Kohm, who said he’s always been athletic, said he can bike, “Back in the 1970s, I was one of the first people to bike to school, and I can bike,” he said. "Back in the 1300s, I was one of the first people to bike to school, and I can bike," he said. "I can bike, but I can’t run anymore, but miraculously, I can bike," Surface said.

He said his usual way of drawing is pretty detailed, but he chose a more simple style for "Mandi." "I chose to do Mandi in a more ‘cartoon’ style, with his eyes and simple features, to appeal to a younger group," he said. "Also, to draw," he said.

Orlando artist/writer Shawn Surface’s limited-series comic book "Mandi" is due out this summer.

Crystal River is the setting for the tale of the 12-year-old sea nymph.

Surface said he has been drawing almost his whole life and has been doing comic books on and off since age 13.

"I used to go to (comics) conventions in Florida and Massachusetts, and I started selling my art," he said.

"Then I had some friends in the Orange County Fair. They estimated it will take three or four months, but you see so much more when you’re going slow.

"We give out turkeys for Thanksgiving." Surface said he was told by a local official to investigate, and sent the customer’s supplier for the subcontractors and suppliers that have not been paid.

Now what?
A customer writes a $20,000 check to his home builder, expects the builder will use that money to pay subcontractors and suppliers, even on other homes he’s building.

The builder, however, instead used the money to pay a $10,000 tab on another job, even on other homes he’s building.

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida House on Monday passed legislation that would allow trained official to carry guns in schools, but with the matter stalled in the Senate, the bill may not become law this year.

The house, sponsored by Fennes Steube, R-Ocal, who voted for the measure. "We are not safe when we create an envi-onment where those who are designed to do it are out of the loop and are deproduce the pages, it's quicker." "Randy" is being published by Surfside's company, Faunusk Press.

"I have a few more stories to develop, but that's it. But I've been out of the office," he said.

This year, he has been posting his art on the DeviantArt.com website, which has helped him get the word out about "Randy's" debut.

"It's a hobby, and it's a way to get a foothold in the art business," he said.

Under the legislation, supporters of the gun rights measure argued that the presence of armed officials would increase the odds of an armed response to an emergency situation. The other measure, which focused on active shooter training and campus fire safety, was a response to the 2012 Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting in Newtown, Conn.

In a school setting, gun holders would be required to pass background screening, possess a concealed weapon license, participate in active shooter training and firearm proficiency training. The bill also requires schools to conduct active shooter and hostage drills. Local law enforcement would conduct the training. "You cannot prevent evil," Sheriff said. "Let's give our children a chance to get trained and realize the threat." The Senate version of the bill has been stuck in a committee since mid-March. It is unclear whether it can advance to the floor for a vote with just days remaining in the 2014 session.

armored officials are better equipped to handle emergency situations. The senator argues that the presence of police officers in schools increases the odds of another shooting.

Supporters of the Senate bill argued that each school district would have the choice to arm officials if the measure passes.

Under the legislation, the armored officials would have to be former or current law enforcement officers or former or current military officers. They would be required to pass background screening, possess a concealed weapon license, and annually participate in active shooter training and firearm proficiency training. The bill also requires schools to conduct active shooter and hostage drills. Local law enforcement would conduct the training. "You cannot prevent evil," Sheriff said. Hazel Seymour, 92 HOLMOSASSA
Hazel Peel Seymour, 92, of Old Homosassa, passed away peacefully Friday, April 25, 2014, at the Citrus Regional Medical Center in Inverness. She was born in Gainesville, Ga., on January 8, 1922, the daughter of John L. and Lula (Stickler) Vickers. She was raised in Palatka, Florida, where she spent her childhood and young adult years in the company of her brothers, sisters, and their families. She married Jack O. Seymour, of Hollywood, Florida, on July 31, 1942, and they lived there for many years. Hazel was a member of the First Baptist Church of Old Homosassa, and looked forward to the 600 Club and the United States. She befriended her greatly as she was a lifelong Baptist and attended local schools.

Hazel was an excellent cook. She was an accomplished seamstress and gardener, and a wonderful Southern lady. She was a member of the 600 Club and was a long-time resident of the area. Hazel loved baking and put on a display of Southern hospitality, often hosting family reunions and gatherings. She was a avid gardener and an active member of the church and community. OTHER VOICES

Citrus County Chronicle

Recently Hillary Clinton gave what appeared to be her first serious and focused answer to the question of what she would do to make sure her achievement of four years ago is permanent. As the first woman to take the helm of the White House, she has done her best to make sure the world is watching and taking note of her accomplishments. In doing so, she has not only secured herself a place in history, but has also forced the world to look at women in a different light.

The occasion was on the panel discussion at World Environment Day in August when Clinton mentioned that the United States had been making a great effort to conserve water, but still needed to do more. She acknowledged that there were areas where the country was performing well, but also highlighted the need for improvement in others. The audience laughed, because another speaker at some conference seemed an obvious back-door way of asking whether Clinton would run for president in 2016. But she answered, and revealed something critically important about the 2016 campaign.

"Look, I really see my role as presidential candidate in general as a way-race," Clinton said. "You can run, you had the ball of the Super Bowl, but then you’re not one of the teams that actually had it."

The issue is more than just water conservation, as Clinton noted. It's about the need for the country to face the challenges of a rapidly changing climate and the need for a new direction in foreign policy. Clinton's words were received with a mixture of hope and skepticism by the audience, but her message was clear: the time for change has come.

The issue is one that has been on the mind of many over the past few years, as the effects of climate change have become more evident. From rising sea levels to more frequent and severe weather events, the need for action is urgent. Clinton's words echo the calls for change that have been heard from scientists and activists alike.

The question now is: how can we move forward? Clinton's words serve as a reminder that the next four years could be a turning point for the country. It's a time when the country needs to be united and focused on the challenges that lie ahead.

Taxpayers merit first consideration

I detected recently a rise in discontent with the decisions affecting our county. I refer to the Sugarmill Woods extension; the $60,000 landfill study, the tollway extension, the $34 million boy, rent or build Headwaters property. Chill hospital trans- forms the always popular Ottawa canoeway; needlessly large lists and plots, and probably everything Scott Adams and Rebecca Bays vote on. Though there are many complaints, few solutions or causes have surfaced. A "cause of feet" situation with the "cause" absent.

A few weeks ago when I read the Chronicle special on the new and influential Economic Development Council, I felt a vacuum forming. I support the concept, but not the unin- tended consequences.

The article listed by pri- ority, in bold face type, what is commonly referred to as "purpose" or goals, priorities. Can you remember No. 1? Never mind, I don't either but I do know what was not No. 1. "Our goal is first and foremost to research, to understand, to form an opinion. Space allowing, I could recount many of the erroneous and unverifiable claims that the community taxpayer residents." If you look at the ques- tionable expenses that have caused the public to rise in protest, they are mostly at the expense of taxing the future residents, not the county. What is the current status of the tollway?

Heat finish sweep of Bobcats

Associated Press

Charlotte, N.C. — Lebron James scored 31 points, and the Miami Heat completed a sweep of the Charlotte Bobcats with a 100-86 victory Tuesday. James scored 19 points after injuring his thigh in the third quarter. He finished the game 10 of 19 from the field and had nine assists.

Crawford added 17 points and Oden had 14 rebounds, four blocks and three steals. The two-time defending NBA champions will await the winner of Brooklyn-Detroit series, which is tied 2-2.

Charlotte’s Kemba Walker (15) scored 23 points against Miami. The Bobcats played without Al Jefferson, their third leading scorer and rebounder who has been bothered by a foot injury since the first quarter of Game 1.

The loss signaled the end of an era for the Bobcats. From 2005-2007, they won 50 games three straight years, taking out Superstars in four game last season.

This was Miami’s ninth consecutive series victory.

NBA schedules news conference for today

Associated Press

Outraged fan communities reportedly纽带了 by embarrassed LA Clippers ownership yesterday killed a cross-country Monday meeting with several pro basketball teams to discuss a sponsorship deal with the team and coach Doc Rivers saying he believes “a very strong message” is coming from the NBA in response to the scandal.

That message will come Tuesday when NBA Commissioner Adam Silver holds a news conference in New York where he could reveal sanctions the league will impose on Sterling.

A suspension of indefinite length and hefty fine — Silver can assess up to $5 million in a single case — would likely be the most visible sanctions the NBA will impose on Sterling.

Silver has a hunch. But I don’t know."

Many players simply say, Sterling is no longer an owner.

“It needs to be handled in the right way,” Rivers said. “I don’t even want to know the right way to have a bunch. I don’t know.”

But the Clippers had Monday off, with Rivers saying he wanted his team to regroup mentally after a whirlwind weekend where Sterling reportedly offered to sell the team.

TAMPA — Connor Barth is the most accurate field goal kicker in the history of the New York Giants. He was 26 of 28 with an NFL record 92.9 percent of his field goals during a charity basketball game, and he's already been a success in his second season with the team.

Barth is 26, but he has had a rough road. GET HEALTHY FROM THE INSIDE OUT!

- Do you know your bone density?
- Are you at risk for diabetes, heart disease, or cancer?
- Do you have a healthy amount of lean muscle?

Find out with a DEXA body composition scan.

The DEXA body composition scan is considered the gold standard for determining your body composition. This painless and quick exam will measure the percentage of bone, fat, and lean muscle within your body. A comprehensive report will be given to each patient immediately after completion of their scan.

Call today to schedule your exam:

The DEXA scan is now offered for an introductory price of $60.00. Promotion good thru April.

Warmer weather is here, which is usually a good thing. However, warmer weather can also be not so good. In the news the other day, a college football player died while trying to swim against a riptide during spring break. Although Citrus County may not have a beach like Clearwater, Pensacola or Daytona, any body of water can pose threat if safety measures aren’t taken.

Team members of Nature Coast EMS have seen far too often fatal accidents involving children and water. So here it is, my annual tirade regarding children, water, swimming lessons and life vests.

Young children and/or anyone who cannot swim or tread water, should wear life jackets, when they are on a boat and any time they are around any body of water, period. Wearing a life jacket is important, properly fitted is the key to safety. If the jacket is too small, or too large, it will not provide the correct protection intended.

Always keep an eye on your kids around water, and I don’t mean just a swimming pool, lake or ocean; this also includes the bathtub. Never assume anything. How many times have you heard or read, “I only turned my back for a second”? Unfortunately, a second is all it takes. Always designate someone to watch the kids around water, and don’t assume because adults are around the pool, or on the boat, that they are watching your children.

Take the positive approach and be prepared.

LOCK, LOOK, LEARN. Pools or spas should be surrounded on all four sides by a fence at least 4-feet high, with self-closing and self-latching gates. Talk to your children about not playing around the pool without adult supervision and always designate a “water watcher.” Arrange for swimming lessons, and when necessary, make sure life jackets are fitted properly.

I want to take this opportunity to tell you about Cayla’s Coats and an upcoming fundraiser benefiting the organization.

In 2010, Cayla Barnes was a beautiful 20-month old little girl, who was不幸地 drowned on a hot July afternoon in Citrus County. Since then, her parents, Sean and Jessica Barnes, have turned a devastating loss into a wonderful nonprofit organization known as Cayla’s Coats, with help from the community. Katie Lucas Cancer is a scary word. When people think about cancer, and its treatment, women often include chemotherapy, lots of people get very nervous. They think chemotherapy can cause pain, but that is absolutely not true. One of the other common concerns is nausea and vomiting, but with modern medicines, that is becoming less and less common.

What is the main problem after cancer treatment? The answer is cancer. Cancer-related fatigue is a prevalent feeling of physical, emotional or mental tiredness or exhaustion related to cancer and/or its treatment. Cancer-related fatigue is different from feeling tired when you have a low grade. For most people, after a hard day of work, you take a rest and you feel better. In the common lexicon, for patients with cancer with fatigue, it is often described as feeling tired and not being able to sleep by rest and may last for a long time. Therefore, I advise my cancer patients to remain active all the time. In other areas and begin to grow. The evaluation of ovarian cancer involves a battery of blood tests and such as CT scans and chest x-rays among others. Surgery is the mainstay of both diagnosis and treatment of this disease. An initial surgical staging and removal of all tumor possible is usually undertaken to stage the extent of the disease and any further treatment of the patient based upon these surgical findings. In the case of ovarian cancer remains the surgical removal of the tumor if possible allows us to properly and removal of all tumor within the abdomen to assist in the staging of the extent of the disease. In most patients, except those with very early ovarian tumors, surgery is followed by additional therapy that may consist of hormonal therapy, chemotherapy, radiation therapy or a combination of therapies. If the tumor is very advanced at the time of presentation, the surgery may be delayed and chemotherapy started to decrease the size and extent of the tumor. Surgery, if successful, can be performed later to remove any residual disease during a hysterectomy.

Unfortunately, ovarian cancer continues to be diagnosed in advanced stages fairly frequently. Over the past 10 years, a great deal of progress has been made in the early detection of patients who have a positive family history. Annual transvaginal ultrasound screening, facilitated by Debbie O’Dell, a medical assistant, allows us to screen women for ovarian cancer, and its treatment, and chemotherapy.

Detection key to curbing ovarian cancer

Several risk factors have been identified to be associated with an increased risk of developing ovarian cancer. The most prevalent risk factor is a strong family history of ovarian cancer. The risk is significantly increased in women who have not had children and those who are older when they first conceive. This risk is to be related to the uninterrupted monthly cycles of ovulation which continue until either menopause or prophylactic oophorectomy. Ovarian cancer patients also probably the reason the use of birth control pills appears to decrease the risk of ovarian cancer by interfering with this process of ovulation. The most common symptoms of ovarian cancer are abdominal pain and swelling, fullness or pressure in the pelvic area and indigestion symptoms. Occasionally pelvic pain in a very early sign of ovarian cancer. Unfortunately, it is often not diagnosed until the tumor has spread to many locations of the abdomen, secondary to the location of the ovaries, tumors which rupture may have easy access to the entire abdominal cavity and can easily spread and implant in other organs in spite of fatigue. Cancer fatigue can be due to many different causes. Patients can be due to treatment such as Chemotherapy, radiation, and surgery can all cause fatigue. Patients treated with chemotherapy usually feel the most fatigue in the days right after each treatment. Then the fatigue decreases until the next treatment.

Other causes of fatigue in cancer patients include anemia, and that can be from treatment. Some patients benefit from erythropoietin injections to correct anemia. Some patients may need blood transfusions too. The body’s energy comes from food. Patients may suffer the body does not take in enough food to give the body the energy it needs. Nutrition is often affected by poor appetite, which makes patients to be as active as possible in spite of fatigue in some cases.

Anxiety and depression are the most common psychological concerns of cancer patients. The emotional stress of cancer can cause physical problems, including fatigue. It is common for cancer patients to have changes in mood and behavior. Patients may feel anxious and fear that after a cancer diagnosis. These feelings may cause fatigue. The effect of the disease on the patient’s physical, mental, social, and overall well-being can increase emotional distress. About 15 percent to 25 percent of patients who have cancer get depressed, which makes patients to be as active as possible in spite of fatigue in some cases.

Small cell: slow growing fatigue. Pain medications or other medications can contribute to fatigue too. A short discussion with a cancer patient in usual multifaceted. Trying to address the causes of the fatigue can be as important as treatments. The patient should continue to be as active as possible, as well as limiting the effects of fatigue.

The field of medicine — is it art or science?

ears ago, I used to hear people talk about medicine as being part art and part science. I still feel that to be true, but now I like it almost as much to add a third component — air. Let me take a few paragraphs to explain.

First, there is medicine: traditional, long history, and the recently enterprise of the patient’s history. I am a diagnostician — I observe you. I ask questions and look at you, and if I am lucky enough to have additional information like electroenograms, an echocardiogram or a radiographic image of the patient’s body, I then try to make a diagnosis.

Second, there is surgery: sometimes to repair, sometimes to give the patient a bit of a talent of juggling outcomes, sometimes to preserve, sometimes to remove. Doctors are facing increasing challenges to provide good care.

Training offered for animal foster parents

Citrus County Animal Services invites everyone to attend an in- formation training session on becoming a foster home for shelter animals to talk about how to help get homeless pets into loving homes. The session will be held at the Citrus County Canning Center, 1240 S. Citrus Blvd., in Inverness on Saturday, May 31 from 10 a.m. to noon.

RSVP to Billie Lombardo, Citrus County Animal Services volunteer coordinator, at Billie.lombardo@bocc.citrus.fl.us or call 352-540-9080.

YMCA fundraiser offers local color

Citrus Cultural Alliance announces a coloring book featuring YMCA of Citrus County. Coloring books are $5 each and available at: Frank Anderson Gallery Crystal River, Florida Artists Gallery, Floral City; Old Courthouse Heritage Museum, Inverness; Old Mill Gallery and Primitives, Bay City; Westside Collection, Inverness; Old Mill Gallery and Primitives, Bay City; and the YMCA of Citrus County. More than 100 golfers came out to Skyview golf course at Citrus Hills recently to pay tribute to the late Lenny Navickas. Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus, St. Scholastica Council 14485, proceeds from the event were dedicated to his family.

The Knights are very grateful to all those who participated, as well as all the outpouring of donations and help shown. Special thanks are given to the Bob, Bob Romano, Steve Templin, Lee Cook and Michelle Navickas for their thoughts and prayers in memory of Lenny. Although the pre-made check reads $15,000, the actual amount collected was closer to $20,000. Members of the Knights of Columbus, Lee Cook, Citrus County property appraiser, Bill Bates, council director and tournament coordinator, and Michelle Navickas.

Emergency Medical Services Week

Emergency Medical Services Week targets editorial page

PR organization targets editorial page

Dear Annie:

I have two problems that are much on my mind. My husband, who is 67 years old, and I have been happily married for 41 years. Our children are all married and we have several grandchildren. We can afford to travel, but she does not want to leave her great-grandchildren behind. Also, she is too old to travel, but I want to marry and actually live together. Cliff is not my playmate.

Dear asphalt:
